SUSPENSION OF POLITICS

At St. Paul Headquarters For Memorial Day.

Collins and Dunn Spend Day With Veterans.

St. Paul, May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the first time since the Republican gubernatorial fight started, the headquarters of the two principal candidates for governor are closed on a week day. Both Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, and Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud, announced Saturday that their offices, in which on the average week day half a dozen stenographers are at work writing letters and a dozen or more men are lined about the reception room talking politics, would be closed in observance of Memorial day.

The average resident of the Twin Cities has forgotten today that there is a contest for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Joel P. Heatwole, one of R. C. Dunn's leading campaign managers, has gone fishing and will probably not be in St. Paul for two or three days. James A. Martin, Judge Collins' manager, is taking a temporary "lay off," and Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins are spending the day in the manner in which they think they will best commemorate the services of the veterans of the civil war.

An ample opportunity for the Minnesota editors to compare notes on the gubernatorial situation will be furnished by the excursion to the St. Louis World's fair, final arrangements for which were made by the executive committee at the Windsor hotel yesterday. The executive committee consists of C. C. Whitney, of Marshall; H. P. Hall, of St. Paul, and F. J. Meist, of Minneapolis.

A feature of the visit at the World's fair will be the dedication of the Minnesota building, which will be under the auspices of the association. C. F. Macdonald, of St. Cloud, president of the association will preside at the dedicatory exercises, which will be held at 10 o'clock on the morning of June 7. After a brief address by Mr. Macdonald, President Francis, of the exposition, will make an address of welcome. Conde Hamlin, president of the Minnesota commission, will respond and will present the building to Governor S. R. an Sant, who will make the principal address of the meeting. Commissioners J. M. Underwood, of Lake City, and Theodore Hays, of Minneapolis, will speak, and Col. C. W. Stanton, of St. Paul, will make an address in behalf of the editorial association.

The party wil rendezvous at the Windsor hotel next Saturday and after a dinner at 5 o'clock in the evening will leave for St. Louis at 6:30 o'clock on the Minneapolis & St. Louis in nine coaches, accommodating 320 people, twice as many as ever went before on an excursion of the association. The party will stop at the Inside Inn on the exposition grounds and while in St. Louis will take a trolley ride about the city and a steamer excursion on the river. The editors will return to St. Paul June 13.

"The recent convention in North Dakota shows beyond a doubt that E. Y. Sarles, of Hillsboro, will be the next governor of that state," said a leading Republican of North Dakota, who is at the Merchants' hotel. "Although the purpose of the convention was merely to elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago, it was evident that the Sarles men were in control and that they will win out at the state convention for nominating state officers hands down.

"I don't think that anything can prevent Sarles' nomination. He will have seven-eighths of the delegates, and I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he should be nominated by acclamation. He stands well with all classes of people in North Dakota. One of his strong points is the fact that he refused to be a candidate for governor two years ago, when many people wanted him to, and instead of getting in the race worked hard for the other man. For this reason the people feel like working for him to the finish."

Among the politicians at the hotel are United States Marshal John Haggert, of Fargo, and Mayor Joseph A. Roach, of Minot.

THE TRIBUTE OF A NATION.

THE BLUE AND GRAY—MEMORIAL DAY.

WHERE cedars flanked the village church
Like sentries dark and tall,
Two soldiers slumbered side by side
Beneath a grassy pall.
One from his mossy stone proclaimed
That he had fought with Lee,
And one had marched the weary road
With Sherman.

THERE came a band of veterans
Upon Memorial Day
And planted roses on the blue,
But left unmarked the gray.
But when returning to the spot
Another year, behold!
Their comrade of the battle-field
Rebuked them from the mould.

THE roses rooted in his dust
Reached out their tender sprays
Through starry nights, and dewy dawns,
And sunny golden days.
They showered with petals and perfume
That green and silent place,
And folded both the sleepers there
Within their sweet embrace.

EACH grizzled hero bared his head,
And every furrowed cheek
Was brightened by a tear that told
The thoughts that none could speak;
And so upon Memorial Day,
In sunshine or in showers,
Since then they deck alike the graves
Of blue and gray with flowers.

THE PRESIDENT AND PARTY VISIT HISTORIC BATTLEFIELD

They Reach Gettysburg Early In the Forenoon and After Brief Rest, Start on a Drive Over the Famous Ground.

Gettysburg, May 30.—President Roosevelt and party reached this historic battleground at 8:30 o'clock today. Leaving Washington at 10:30 last night a leisurely run was made by the Baltimore & Ohio road special train to Penmar. There in a delightful park in the mountains the train was sidetracked at 2 a. m., remaining until 7:30 this morning. A crowd began to assemble at the park as early as 5:30 and before the train left for Gettysburg several hundred people had gathered. Before leaving Penmar, the president appeared on the rear platform of his private car and was given an enthusiastic reception. He spoke briefly as follows:

"It is a great pleasure to greet you this morning and I am so glad that we have such beautiful weather on the occasion of my visiting this great historic battlefield of the war on Decoratipon day. I will not attempt to speak now as I am to speak later in the day. I shall merely repeat how glad I am to see all of you, especially those who wear the button that shows you have a right, greater than any of the rest of us, to be here and to rejoice in all that this Memorial day means."

The train was stopped in Gettysburg at Reynolds avenue, the road which traverses the position of the Confederate forces on the first day of the battle. There the president and party entered carriages and started on a drive over the battlefield.

TWO BRIDGES AT TOPEKA ARE KNOCKED OUT BY HIGH WATER

Topeka, Kas., May 30.—The Kaw river is 18 feet above low water mark at this point today and apparently at a standstill. The run of driftwood has been very heavy and the rock Island railroad people were busy the greater part of the night dislodging the accumulation at their bridge with dynamite. Nothwithstanding these efforts the greater portion of the falls work of this bridge, which is being reconstructed, went out making the bridge unsafe for traffic. The street railroad bridge also was knocked out of alignment making the passage of cars impossible.

The waters extend far up into the city park and out on the north side to some of the dwellings but no serious damage further than the washing away of chicken coops and sidewalks is reported.

In "Little Russia," a number of the families are moving out as the waters are backing up to their dooryards. Many North Topeka citizens came across the bridge to Topeka proper. At Abilene and Manhattan, the Smoky Hill and Kaw rivers are falling.

Emporia, Kas., May 30.—The Cottonwood and Neoshon rivers here are out of their banks and the entire bottoms are inundated. The damage, however, is not so great as it was in the great flood a year ago, as the rise was more gradual and people had ample time to save their stock of household goods. The crops are not so far advanced as last year, so that the damage in that line will not be so great. The rivers are stationary.

BARGE MATE MAY HAVE PERISHED

New York, May 30.—One death may have resulted from the fire that started last evening on the Starin barge, Allen C. Churchill, and swept over seven of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company's freight and coal piers. The police were informed today that the mate of the Churchill could not be found and that it was feared he might have perished. The police estimate the loss by the fire at $1,000,000. This, however, they say is a conservative estimate and it may be found that the loss is several hundred thousand dollars higher. The officials of the railroad company are unwilling as yet to give out any definite figures on the loss, as it has so far been impossible to learn just how much freight was destroyed.

Three engines were still pouring streams of water on the smoldering ruins today.

GRAND DUKE DEAD.

Frederick Wilhelm of Meklenburg-Strelitz Passes Away.

Berlin, May 30.—The death is announced of Grand Duke Fredrich Wilhelm of Meklenburg-Strelitz. The grand duke was born Oct. 17, 1819.

Grand Duke Friedrich Wilhelm had been confined to his bed for many months, suffering from an internal complication. He sudenly became worse yesterday afternoon, soon lost consciousness and died a half hour after midnight.

The ceremony of taking the oath of allegiance to the new grand duke by the troops took place at 11 o'clock this morning.

MONEY POURS IN

For Eastern Concern Whose Mail Is Held Up.

New York, May 30.—Money orders from all over the country, aggregating thus far $30,000, are pouring into the general postoffice for a concern known as the "Eastern Trade company.' Mail thus addressed was ordered held up a month ago by the postal authorities, because, it is alleged, of a circular which fell into the hands of a mail clerk informing him that he had won a prize of some sort for which, to his knowledge, he had never competed. One clerk is being kept busy remailing the letters at the rate of 1000 a day

ONE THOUSAND MEN

Search Woods For Dr. Hudson In Vain.

Negaunee, Mich., May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Over a thousand men searched the woods in the vicinity of Escanaba river yesterday for mayor J. H. Hudson, who has been missing since Wednesday, without success. Some papers belonging to him were found but footsteps in the vicinity could not be followed. Mrs. Hudson offers $1000 reward for body dead or alive, and city of Negaunee an additional $500. The miners at the Oliver company's mines receive full pay while searching. T. F. Cole is here.

HER EXCUSE.

Calve, on the day she sailed for home, praised American servants.

"A French writer," she said, "has been declaring that every kind of service in America is execrable. But that is not true. American service is in many respects the best in the world.

"French servants," said Calve, "incline to be impertinent. I remember a parlor maid I once engaged. This maid neglected her duty shamefully.

"'Yolande,' I said to her one morning, there is a month's dust on this piano.'

"'Madame cannot blame me for that,' Yolande retorted. 'I have only been living with madame two weeks.'"

TWENTY THOUSAND ATTEND RARE MEMORIAL EXERCISES

New York, May 330.—A memorial high mass, celebrated according to the military ritual of the middle ages, has been said before 20,000 persons on the campus of the marine barracks in the New York navy yard in memory of those who died in the civil and Spanish wars. It was the second ceremony of the kind held since the close of the civil war.

The service was under the direction of the Gloucester command, Spanish war veterans. When the soldiers and sailors, numbering 3000 men, marched off the field the entire gathering joined in singing the national anthem.

Washington, May 30.—With a dawn overshadowed with threatening clouds, Washington's patriotic citizens turned out today to participate in Memorial day exercises in the various national cemeteries.

Of chief interest were the exercises at Arlington cemetery. While the Fifteenth United States cavalry band played a dirge, the graves were decorated. The exercises were participated in by patriotic societies, a parade was had to the cemetery and back to the amphitheater, where the band, vocalists and orators completed the program. The oration of the day was delivered by Hon. John C. Black, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army.

BRITONS WAGE PRICE WAR ON OIL

New York, May 30.—A price war is being waged between the oil interests in the English market, according to a Herald dispatch from London.

Within the last ten days the price of petroleum has fallen in the case of the London retailer from 3⅝d a gallon to prices varying from 2½ to 2⅞d a gallon. The retailer has conceded nothing to the general public up to the present. The latest and most drastic cut in price has been made by the company controlled by American capitalists. It meets one made by the Shell company, which seeks to maintain British interests.

The two companies are old rivals for the oil trade of Europe and, both having a substantial capital in reserve, a vigorous contest is expected, involving several other companies eventually.

PRISONERS' LIVES ARE IN DANGER

Tangier, Morocco, May 30.—The United States cruiser Brooklyn, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Chadwick, has arrived here. Other vessels of the United States fleet are following.

The authorities here consider that the position of the American, Perdicaris, and his stepson, Cromwell Varley, a British subject, who were kidnapped by bandits headed by Raisuli, is now more serious than before.

Washington, May 30.—Mr. Gummere, the United States consul at Tangier in a cablegram received at the state department over night, says that threats against the lives of Raisuks captives, Perdicaris and Varley, have been made unless the bandits' demands are granted. A dispatch from Admiral Jewell, commanding the European squadron, announces the departure for Tangier of the cruisers Olympia, Baltimore and Cleveland.

BRILLIANT LEVEE

Held By King Edward Which Americans Attended.

London, May 30.—King Edward held a brilliant levee this morning. Five Americans, including George W. Vanderbilt and William Barclay Parsons, United States canal commissioner, were presented.

After the levee the king received in audience the Alak of Abekota (Upper Guinea), a picturesque West African potentate, who has left his country for the first time in his life.

The British government has agreed to buy all the Alake's iagos cotton for three years. The potentate wore a striking robe of canary-colored silk, over which was flung a mantle of canary plush, a pale blue cap, decorated with lizards and high yellow boots.

DETACHMENT OF JAPS ATTACKED COSSACKS AND DEFEATED THEM

Engagement Lasted Four Hours, Japanese Lost But Four Killed.

Private Letters Tell of Loss of More Russian War Vessels.

Tokio, May 30.—A detachment of Japanese troops attacked and defeated 2000 Cossacks at Ai-Yang-Pien-Men, northeast of Feng Wang Cheng, Saturday. The engagement began at 7:30 and ended at 11:30 a. m. The Japanese lost four men killed and twenty-eight wounded. The Russian casualties are not known.

St. Petersburg, May 30.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Kuropatkin, under today's date:

"I this morning received a report stating that the Japanese advance on Kwan Tien has begun from Saimatsza. The numbers of the enemy are not known."

Washington, May 30.—Advices received here report the departure from Japan of another army division. While its destination is not stated, it is conjectured that the troops are about to close in the Russians rear in Northeast Korea, cutting off the raiding parties which have threatened Gen. Kuroki's communications.

PRIVATE LETTERS

Tell of the Loss of More Russian Vessels.

Tokio, May 30.—Certain Russian correspondence, which has been intercepted by the Japanese at the blockade of Port Arthur, gives the information that some Russian torpedo boat destroyers have been sunk by mines outside of Port Arthur. The Sixth Japanese squadron, which was blockading Port Arthur, overhauled and searched a junk and seized a number of letters written by Russian officers. One letter said that a torpedo boat destroyer had successfully placed a series of mines during the night which preceded the loss of the Hatsuse, and, continuing, tells of the loss of some Russian torpedo boat destroyers. How many is not mentioned, but it is indicated that there were at least two. The heavy loss of life which accompanied the sinking of the Japanese cruiser Yoshino, as a result of colliding with the Japanese cruisers Kasuga, on May 15, was due to the smashing of five of her boats by falling masts. When the ships came together collision mats were used, and a taurpalin was placed over the hole, but it was impossible to stop the inrush of water. The ship settled quickly, listing to the starboard. Capt. Gin Sayeki ordered the crew to the upper deck, where they manned the boats. Five boats were lowered on the starboard side and one at the port side, but before they were cleared the ship lurched to the starboard and commenced to sink. The masts and davits smashed all five of the boats on the starboard side. Capt. Sayeki remained on the bridge, and cried "Banzai" to the sailors as they were entering the boats. When last seen he was shaking hands with Commander Hirowatari and bidding him farewell.

The fog was so dense that the searchlights of the Kasuga, though not within 600 meters distant, was only faintly discernible. The Kasuga struck the Yoshino on the port side, near the engines, and the force of the blow was so great that the dynamos of her lighting plant were disabled, leaving the ship in darkness. The portrait of the emperor aboard the Yoshino was rescued and carried to the Kasuga.

Commander Honda, who commanded the fireship Totomi in the sealing of Port Arthur, arrived here yesterday. Honda and the entire crew of the Totmi were deafened by their terrible experience. The explosions and awful cannonade ruptured the tympanums of their ears. Commander Honda may recover the hearing of one ear, but he will be permanently deaf in the other. Honda and his comrades did not discover their unfortunate condition until they were leaving the ship. He shouted his orders to his men, they failed to hear him, and he failed to hear his own orders. By signs he indicated his orders.

MERELY A FEINT.

The Advance of Kuroki Near Feng Wang Cheng.

St. Petersburg, May 30.—According to information received by the Associated Press from a high source important news regarding the Japanese plan of campaign which has reached the Russian authorities since the battle of Kin Chou compels the conviction that the advance of General Kuroki and the activity of his scouts northwest and southwest of Feng Wang Cheng are parts of a well executed feint to prevent Gen. Kuropatkin from detaching a strong force to hamper Gen. Oku's operations on the Liao Tung peninsula. Under cover of Gen. Kuroki's screens, it is added, part of the Japanese army landed at Taku Shan will be moved soutward into the peninsula while Kuroki attempts to make Kuropatkin believe that he intends to force a decisive engagement with him. This information would tend to prove that the primary object of the Japanese campaign all along has been Port Arthur, and that once that fortress is in their hands, unless an exceedingly favorable opportunity offers to attack Kuropatkin, the Japanese plan is simply to make their tenure secure and force the Russian commander to assume the offensive. Moreover, there is information to the effect that the Japanese propose to storm Port Arthur with the briefest possible delay after having first closed the harbor to render the egress of the Russian ships impossible at the last moment, thus forcing the Russians to destroy them without subjecting the Japanese to the inevitable losses which must occur if the Russian squadron gets out for a last fight before going to the bottom. The previous repeated efforts of the Japanese to "cork" the harbor have been as much with the view to this ultimate situation as for protecting landings.

Nothing is known here of the Che Foo reports of fighting at In-Chen-Tse, fourteen miles from Port Arthur, but the general staff hardly believes the enemy could have advanced so rapidly.

The admiralty denies the reports of the loss of two Russian torpedo boat destroyers while laying mines which destroyed the Japanese battleship Hatsuse. The officials say Port Arthur has been heard from since the Hatsuse was blown up and if the report of the loss of the torpedo boat destroyers was true they would have known it.

No surprise is expressed at the admiralty at the Tokio report of the evidence contained in intercepted Russian dispatches that the Hatsuse was blown up by Russian stationary mines. The officials decline, however, to comment on the subject, except to reiterate their denial of the charge that the Russians used floating or "driving' mines which the officials have insisted on from the outset.

A prominent diplomat said:

"The Russians are justified in using mines to repel the enemy's invasion of their coasts. There is no law to prevent that country from doing anything it pleases to keep off the enemy from its shores. If Great Britain was at war and she chose to fill the channel of floating mines for the defense of her coast, no power could raise any objection."

Owing to it being a holiday, it is impossible to obtain official opinion regarding the announcement made today by the Tien Tsin correspondent of the Daily Express of London, that the Russian minister at Pekin, M. Lessar had informed the Chinese government that Russia will finally evacuate Newchwang, provided China grants a concession for a railroad across Chinese Mongolia and that Russia will evacuate Manchuria outright if China leases the Ili, or Kooldja territory to Russia. But in diplomatic circles the report is regarded as absurd.

It is impossible to suppose that Russia, while the war is progressing, is making offers to exchange Manchuria for this region.

MOVE TO PORT ARTHUR.

Dalny Has Been Practically Evacuated By Russians.

Che Foo, May 30.—Dalny has been practically evacuated according to the statements of Sikh and Russian refugees arriving here by junk. All valuables, ammunition and most of the troops have been taken to Port Arthur. The only civilians remaining are the electrical engineers in charge of the mines laid in the harbor, and also those set to destroy docks and piers. One large Russian warship, probably the armored cruiser Bayan, and three torpedo boats, reached Talien Wan bay on Tuesday last, the 24th inst., from Port Arthur, and it was doubtless this vessel which attacked the Japanese left wing during the battle at Kin Chou on the 25th inst. The junks just arrived here, on their way down, passed 14 Japanese war vessels nine miles outside of Dalny, so that the Bayan will likely be captured.

The United States gunboat Frolic, now here, will go to Newchwang in case that town is evacuated by the Russians.

THE BALTIC FLEET

Will Leave For East In Two Detachments.

Paris, May 30.—The Echo de Paris' St. Petersburg correspondent learns that the Baltic fleet will leave in two detachments. The first, consisting of four battleships, is due to start June 24. The battleship Orel has been refloated. The dynamos, the only part of the machinery seriously damaged, will be changed.

The Journal's Mukden correspondent wires: "Gen. Kuropatkin arrived here on May 27, on a special train and immediately proceeded to Viceroy Alexieff's quarters. He remained in conference with him four hours and again left the city. What passed between them is kept secret."

A St. Petersburg telegram to the Journal says that Kuropatkin has begun an offensive movement southward. The Russian advance guard is supposed to have reached a point 377 miles north of Kin Chou.

ABANDONED BY RUSSIANS.

Tokio, May 30.—Gen. Oku, in command of the Japanese forces operating against

MOTHER AND BABE.

All Wish Them Well.

THE trying ordeals of maternity are usually compensated for by the beautiful little cherub that comes to make home bright and happy. The first years of life are the period of greatest sickness and the highest death rate. The death rate between birth and one year in the cities in summer is often as high as eighty per cent. It is due to causes that could be avoided. Most young mothers find themselves with their first baby in their arms with little knowledge of how it ought to be cared for. Fortunate is the babe born to a healthy, happy, sensible mother, who welcomes its arrival and gives up her life and her all for the time being to motherhood. As a mother, her duty and her instinct should teach her to take great care of herself previous to baby's coming. The state of her health and all her habits of life, eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, should be her constant care, as well as impulses and emotions of fear, anger, jealousy, etc., should be carefully guarded against. The mother, young or old, should make the best of her lot. If she can be in the country, close to nature, where she can see the beautiful fields and trees, it would be ideal for her repose of mind. No prospective mother should be without some good doctor book, such as the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," edited and published by R. V. Pierce, M. D., that any one can obtain by sending thirty-one one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound edition, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This gives good advice for women, young or old, and for every one in all conditions of life. In this book Dr. Pierce advises that care should be taken to keep the liver active, and eat only the kind of food that you have a desire for. He also advises a mid-day nap and gentle exercise. If the mother wants to be strong and prepared for that most tryiug ordeal, she should take a womanly tonic which Dr. Pierce has prescribed for women in such condition, called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The reason why so many women sink under the strain of motherhood is because they are unprepared. Is preparation then required for motherhood? asks the young woman. And every experienced mother answers—"Yes." "I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. Stephens. The reason for this advice is that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best preparative for the maternal function. No matter how healthy and strong a woman may be, she cannot use "Favorite Prescription" as a preparative for maternity without gain of health and comfort. But it is the women who are not strong who best appreciate the great benefits received from the use of "Favorite Prescription." For one thing its use makes the baby's advent pactically painless. It has in many cases reduced days of suffering to a few brief hours. It has changed the period of anxiety and struggle into a time of ease and comfort.

The benefits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription do not begin with the baby's coming, nor do they end there. It cures or prevents the nausea from which so many expectant mothers suffer. It nourishes the nerves and strengthens them, promotes a healthy appetite, and keeps the mother physically strong and mentally cheerful. After the baby's coming the use of "Favorite Prescription" will contribute to a quick convalescence. It is the best of tonics and nervines, giving real strength which no mere stimulant can give. The mistake of using alcoholic beverages to build up the mother's strength and to increase the baby's nutrition is constantly being pointed out by physicians. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contains no alcohol and is free from all narcotics. It gives strength to the mother and increases the flow of the nutritive secretions on which the baby is fed, and on the healthfulness of which his growth depends.

"I take pleasure in informing you of the birth of a boy in perfect health, on May 18th, 1899," writes Mrs. L. E. Corti, of Waltonville, Penna., Box 25. "I cannot find words sufficiently strong to express to you my thanks, for baby's coming was almost without pain, and when my husband arrived with the doctor the child was already born. The neighbors who were with me and my husband and the doctor could not believe their eyes. Having suffered so much before I never believed myself able to bear a living child. I shall never be without your medicines henceforth, and shall never fail in recommending your 'Favorite Prescription.' I have used the medicines which you prescribed with the best results."

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Sioux Falls—Authorities of the state reform school at Plankinton had an interesting time recapturing two girls, aged 16 and 17, who made their escape. This is said to be the first time in the history of the institution that any of the girl inmates attempted to get away. The girls were recaptured after being at liberty less than twenty-four hours. They made their way unnoticed to the basement of the building about midnight and crawled to the outside through one of the windows.

Volga—While men were engaged in grading a road eight miles south they uncovered the skeleton of a man. One arm was missing. The grave was on a hill about eighty rods from where the old Indian trail crossed this part of the country. The oldest inhabitants have no knowledge of anyone being buried here. Three years ago a rude headstone was brought to the surface on the farm of Isaac Twedt. It bore this inscription: "Thom. Brown, 49th Men.," and is now in possession of the South Dakota Historical society. This was about three miles from where the skeleton was found.

C. E. Smith has the first automobile brought to Volga.

Volga schools will close next Friday, when a class of seven will be graduated.

Chamberlain—Special Agent Hunt is in the city arranging the details for the opening of the Rosebud lands. He has secured the court house as the registration place for the general public, the Congregational church for ladies, while the old soldiers will record their names at the United States land office.

Five fast steamers will ply between Chamberlain and the lands to be opened, so that all may have a convenient means of examining the land.

Rapid City—The "Council of Nations" to be held at Rapid City on the Fourth of July will be attended by many Sioux, Cheyenne and Crow Indians. The event promises to be of unusual interest as some of the most noted orators of the different tribes will have an opportunity to match their eloquence against pale face speakers of national fame who have been invited.

Watertown—A divorce case before Judge Julian Bennett has excited much interest in various parts of the state. The plaintiff is James Franklin Moyer and the defendant Martha Wenger Boyer. The circumstances are similar to hundreds of other cases, but the interest attaches from the fact that James Boyer is Professor James Baldwin, a musician.

Professor Baldwin or James Boyer was formerly one of the instructors at the Conn conservatory of music at Elkhart, Ind., leaving that position to go to New York to escape, as he says, the inhuman and cruel treatment of his wife. She followed him to that city and he came to South Dakota. He explains that he has been using the name of Baldwin because it is the nom-de-plume that he employs in singing his musical compositions.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to extend to the many friends my heartfelt appreciation for their kindness shown to my wife during her illness and death. I wish especially to thank the Fairmont Alumnie and Rathbone Sisters for their beautiful floral offerings.

Death Comes to Joseph A. Mannheim After Hard Struggle.

After a lingering illness of several weeks, Joseph A. Mannheim passed away at 6:45 o'clock yesterday morning. The cause of his death was Bright's disease and weakness caused by the loss of blod from nasal hemorrhages. His heart was also affected.

Mr. Mannheim had been suffering from Bright's disease for several weeks previous to his death, but his illness did not become acute until two weeks ago, when the hemorrhages commenced. Since that time his condition has been very critical, and the doctors realized that death was only a question of time. Intervals of increased strength were followed by sinking spells.

He was conscious during the greater part of Saturday night, trying to converse with the members of his family, but about 4 o'clock he was seen to be sinking rapidly. At 5 o'clock he fell into a stupor, and while he rallied slightly from time to time, and motioned some one of the family to come to his bedside he did not regain power of speech, and about 6:45 o'clock he passed away without any signs of pain.

JOSEPH A. MANNHEIM.

Mr. Mannheim was one of the oldest settlers at the head of the lakes, and probably had as wide a circle of friends and acquaintances as any man in Duluth. He was 45 years of age at the time of his death, having been born in Faribault in 1859. He came to Duluth with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mannheim, in 1868, when about 10 years of age. Duluth was but a settlement of cabins at that time. Mr. Mannheim engaged in a general retail business in a store situated a short distance east from the site of the Masonic Temple. The son attended the public schools in Duluth, and was at one time a pupil of Leonidas Merritt, who afterward became widely known as an iron explorer and developer of the north country.

After completing the course at the public school, the young man learned the baker's trade, and at different times during his life he has been engaged in that business. He was the manager of the Universal bakery at the time of his death.

He was at one time agent for the Burlington road in Duluth, and has also been engaged in the real estate and mining business here. He was one of the first to participate in the rush to the Klondike, and was also interested in gold mines in Nova Scotia. At one time he was reputed to have been wealthy, but at the time of his death was in moderate circumstances.

About 25 years ago he married Miss Elizabeth McKinnon of Duluth. Five children resulted from the marriage. Edward, he oldest of the children, is 23 years of age. He is employed by the water and light department. The youngest is a child of seven years. Mrs. Mannheim also survives him, but both of his parents are dead. Three sisters, two of whom live in Duluth, are also living. They are Mrs. Herman Oppel and Mrs. Frank Oppel of this city, and Mrs. Victor Theimer of Merriam Park, Minn.

Throughout his lifetime Mr. Mannheim took great interest in political matters. During the early part of his career he was a Republican but in recent years he has been a prominent Democrat and a leader of the Democratic forces of this city.

He served three different terms in the city council, being elected for the first time in 1890 to succeed M. J. Davis, when the latter was elected mayor as an independent candidate against Charles d'Autremont, Democrat, and Charles Long, Republican. Mr. d'Autremont was the successful candidate. His second term in the council came in 1900, when he was elected from the Third ward. He was re-elected in 1902 and last winter was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor against M. B. Culum.

Mr. Mannheim also acted as register of deeds in 1885 and an unsuccessful candidate for the state senate against F. B. Dougherty in 1892. He was chairman of the Democratic congressional committee for the Eighth district in 1902 and managed the campaign of Marcus L. Fay. At the time of his death he was president of the Hearst and Bryan and Towne Democratic clubs.

The work of the fire department was always a hobby with Mr. Mannheim. He organized the first volunteer department in Duluth and was its first chief, and during the time he was in the council he was a member of the committee on the fire department.

He was a member of three secret socities, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Independent Order of Foresters and the Catholic Order of Foresters, and carried in all $3000 insurance in these societies. He was president of the local order of Eagles at the time of his death.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart. The members of the lodge of Eagles will escort the body of their dead president from the house to the cathedral and from the cathedral to the grave at Calvary cemetery. Flaaten's full band will be in attendance. The pall bearers will be chosen from the lodge of Foresters.

Mr. Mannheim's death, while not unexpected, was a shock to his many friends in Duluth. His genial and kindly character had made him innumerable friends during his long residence in the city, and many a heart is today filled with sincere regret and sorrow for his death.

BASS FISHING SEASON OPEN

From Now Until Next March They May Be Caught.

This is the first day of the open season for bass in Minnesota. From now until March 1, 1905, it will be lawful to catch any variety of food fish in the inland lakes and streams of the state. The bass season is the last to open. Ever since May 1 a person could angle for all varieties except bass without fear of getting into trouble with the gam wardens.

There are so many lakes and rivers in Northern Minnesota in which to fish, that there is little danger of any of them, unless they are very close to town, becoming overcrowded with people from the city for some time to come. Every angler has his favorite ground for trying his luck with hook and line. Those after trout go from Duluth as far east as Isle Royale, a good many in fact, while others go west and northwest, hunting out the smaller lakes in the great forests to the north and west, which, being little frequented by the city sportsmen, offer some of the finest fishing on the American continent. There are dozens of such lakes all through Northern Minnesota, fairly teeming with bass, pike, pickerel and muscallonge, which are not fished at all, except by the Indian and claim-holder. They are so far from civilization as far as railroads are concerned, that they are seldom reached by Duluth anglers, unless it be in the fall of the year, when the sportsmen are after deer and moose, with no time to turn their attention to fishing. There are so many good fishing places within easy reach of the railroads that enthusiasts do not find it necessary to go to those farthest in the heart of the big forests for excellent sport.

It is merely a matter of choice with the angler whether he takes the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Iron Range roads or goes to Brainerd and then up the Minnesota & International, for on any of these lines he may find, within easy reach, a body of water such as he is seeking.

The fisherman may catch all the bass and trout he wants for the use of himself and friends, but the law prohibits his selling any of them. This does not bother the true sportsman any, however, for no one but one of those despised beings branded as a "game hog," or "fish hog" would ever think of accepting money for the fruits of his day's pleasure. The true sportsman cannot measure the value of his day's catch by money alone; it would be impossible, for there are too many things to be taken into the seckoning.

We will buy you a bottle of Liquozone, if you are sick—we'll pay your druggist ourselves for it and show you how to get well.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone. And we have spent $500,000 in the past four months to buy a million bottles and give them to a million sick ones. Don't you realize that this product must be of wonderful worth to humanity? Won't you see what it means to you?

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process which requires immense apparatus and 14 days' time. Each cubic inch of Liquozone represents the virtues of 1250 cubic inches of the gas. The process by which these virtues are concentrated into liquid, stable form, has been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research for more than 20 years.

The result is a product which does what oxygen does. Oxygen is the nerve food, the blood food, the scavenger of the blood,. It is the very source of vitality, the most essential element of life. But oxygen is a gas, and unstable; while Liquozone is fixed and concentrated. It gets an excess of oxygen virtues into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. The result is a vitalizing tonic with which no other known product can compare.

Kills Inside Germs.

But the great value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. There is nothing else known which will do that. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. For that reason, medicine is practically helpless in any germ disease.

Liquozone is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and an excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetal matter. Liquozone is certain destruction to germs, yet to the human body it is the most helpful thing in the world. There is no other way to end the cause of any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

WEST DULUTH

The fact that members of the Longshoremen's union have had more work than they could do the past week in the line of loading boats with lumber at the West Duluth docks has caused nearly 200 men to apply for membership in the union. The membership of the union is limited, however, and only a certain number of new members will be admitted.

At the meeting of the organization Saturday evening, at their hall in West Duluth, the applications were considered and twenty men were initiated. Other applicants will be considered at the next meeting. About 150 would-be members were grouped in front of the hall while the meeting was in progress, each man hoping that his name would be the next called. Members of this union are well paid, receiving, while working, 50 cents an hour.

GET BAD BEATING.

The West Duluth ball team met with a surprise at Hibbing yesterday afternoon, where they were defeated in a game with the range players by a score of 11 to 3. The local were weak in batting, securing only three hits while their opponents piled up twelve hits. The contest was pulled off on the new grounds at Hibbing and drew a crowd of 60 people.

Freeman, in the box for Hibbing, struck out six men, and Larson, of the defeated team, succeeded in fanning three. Freeman and Meisner, of Hibbing, each made a two-base hit. Aside from their weak batting, the West Duluthians put up a good game. Three errors were chalked against them, while their opponents made four. T. Robinson caught for the locals, and Larson pitched throughout the game. Freeman and Kleffman made up the Hibbing battery. Another game will be played at Hibbing this afternoon, when Sauler will pitch for Hibbing, and Young for West Duluth.

KEEP QUIET ABOUT IT.

Julius Lindgren and Archie Boyd, while starting out on a fishing trip last Saturday morning, met with an adventure that dampened their ardor, likewise their clothes, to such an extent that they decided to go home at once, leaving the fish to get along as best they could without the morning breakfast they, the young men, had inended to provide.

The two climbed out of bed and into their clothes at daylight, which at this time of the year happens along perilously near 4 o'clock. They prepared the'r own breakfast and left their homes. That was the last seen of them for about two hours, when they reappeared, dripping wet from head to heel, according to an eye witness. Thus far they keep very quiet regarding what happened to spoil their day's pleasure.

DARING FEATS.

Those Accomplished by Acrobats Are Hair-Raising.

That the limits of human daring in athletics have been vastly increased in the past quarter of a century is the firm opinion of an old showman who has just retired from the business, and who is now in Washington, where he intends to reside for the rest of his life, says the Washington Times.

Men who enter the dens of wild beasts, Daniel fashion; women who swing on the daring trapeze, and pretty girls who stand up as targets for marksmen are commonplace incidents of show life nowadays, says the old showman.

The appetite of the public for perilous deeds has greatly increased within the past decade. Many men of middle age can remember "Lulu," the man who permitted himself to be hurled from a catapult for a fancy salary. But even fame palls upon an athlete in time, and "Lulu" is now an eminent physician in a Western city mending broken bones other than his own.

After "Lulu" the jaded public was startled by "Zazel," who served as an attractive bundle of ammunition for a real cannon, being fired through space for a great distance, landing eventually in a net.

After the appearance and disappearance of these aerial artists there was a monotonous sameness in athletic acts for many years. The tumblers tumbled in the same old way. The trapeze artists swung and bowed and kissed their hands to the public as their predecessors had done.

In fact, there was little variation until the recent introduction of the bicycle into athletics. Then the public se med to wake up. There came trick riders who rode backward or forward indifferently, who ambled along on the rear wheel of their machines, or stood on their heads and propelled themselves with their hands.

Eventually there came a man here who rode a bicycle down the steep flights of steps at the Capitol. He did this not for grim, but for glory, and men marveled that he lived to tell the tale. He afterward rode from the top of Madison Square garden, New York, down a steep flight of steps to the arena below for the mere gratification to be found in salary and applause.

This was the beginning of yet more desperate deeds. A crowning sensation developed in "looping the loop" on a wheel. It did not seem to matter that a few persons were killed in the achievement. Men can always be found who will gladly risk their lives for gold.

For two years this man looped the loop daily, and remained the reigning sensation in athletics. But other hair-brained men were planing and practicing, and eventually the "one-wheel man" was developed, as was also the man who rode down a ladder standing on the one-wheel man's shoulders. This feat of Solo and Chico makes "looping the loop" seem tame by comparison.

In fact, there are at present no less than four "deeds of desperate daring" which outpass any previous feats ever before performed by athletes.

Young Florenz is 17 years old, but has the manners and appearance of a child of 14.

He is small and slender as to limb, large as to head and aerial intelligence. He is apparently as much at home in the air as a tumbler pigeo nor a gyrfalcon.

He laughs as he rises in his perilous flight. You can see his teeth gleam in a smile as he twists sidewise on his third somersault. As he alights on the shoulders of his companions he straightens up with a boyish giggle, as though he liked the task.

And yet little Alfred's feat is one of the most perilous known to the circus ring. Many acrobats have broken their necks attempting it, and so far as known only one man has ever succeeded in accomplishing it before.

This was John Worland, an old circus tumbler who on one occasion some years ago threw a triple somersault from a springboard. He accomplished it only once, and could never be persauded to attempt it again.

But the Florenz boy accomplishes it twice daily, rising from the hands of two of his fellow performers. The feat is remarkable not only from a spectacular standpoint, but from the ease and celerity with which it is performed. In short, Florenze is a wonder.

Two of the troupe, standing face to face, clasp hands in a sort of "saddle," or standing platform, upon which Alfred climbs and stands erect.

Over this formidable obstacle more than fifteen feet in height Alfred must fly, alighting on the shoulders of a fourth member of the troupe behind Mrs. Florenz.

There is no halt or hesitancy about it. The boy flexes his knees slightly, stares straight ahead with a half smile on his face and gives the word.

Up he goes, as lightly as a bird, and apparently as much at home as a seal in the water. So rapidly that the eye can scarcely follow his movements he makes two round tumbles straight over.

Then for a moment he seems to straighten out in a sort of horizontal projectile. As he passes the top of the pyramid he gives a sort of queer twist, which turns him sidewise and then doubles up into another tumble.

Another extraordinary method of tempting death is that shown by Ancilotti, the man who "loops the gap." Ancilotti is an Italian, now performing for the first time in this country.

The "gap" in this instance is the top side of the ordinary loop which has been cut out for a distance of 12 or 15 feet. Across the aerial space the daring cyclist must fly, wheels up and head downward.

He starts from the top of an inclined plane, and when he strikes the loop he is traveling at a speed which almost baffles the eye to follow.

There is no artificial method of holding his equilibrium or sustaining his wheel in the air save the centrifugal force which carries him upward and onward.

As he reaches the "gap," by a nice calculation in mechanics he is hung suspended for a lightning's flash as he crosses the vacant space, but his wheel strikes truly on the opposite side. The feat is very nearly the culminating point of difficulty and danger, and must remain so for many years, without a doubt.

ODD FLYING MACHINE.

When Austin Wheel invented an airship he took a bird into partnership with him, and in order that there might be no doubt about its flying, says the New York World, Thomas Bird has a restaurant in One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, and he and Mr. Wheel rented a vacant lot opposite and built a nest there in which the only sure-enough flying machine might be properly fledged.

The chicken is fast growing and will soon spread its wings over Harlem. Mr. Bird and Mr. Wheel are so enthusiastic about their invention that they are making the eyes of their Harlem friends bulge like lobsters by telling them how they will take them to St. Louis for the fair, preliminary flight obtut the city are planned for about three weeks from now.

Austin Wheel is an inventor by trade, and he draws royalties on several patents already. Mr. Bird formed the airship syndicate. He is enthusiastic about the flying machine.

"Success!" he said yesterday. "We have succeeded already. This will eclipse anything of the kind yet seen."

The airship is to be propelled by wings, four in number, triangular in shape and 15 feet long, made of canvas stretched over frames of steel tubing. Electric storage batteries will furnish the power, and the inventor says will carry the machine to St. Louis and back without recharging. He also claims a speed of forty miles an hour.

Mr. Bird says the airship will move forward or backward, up or down, with the grace and agility of a hawk. It has powerful steering apparatus and brakes. Three men will be needed to operate it, and it will carry fifteen passengers. Where they will sleep and eat has not yet been figured out.

Harlem is craning its neck and standing on tiptoe in a fever of expectancy to see Mr. Bird's chicken flap its wings over One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, soar into the air and fly away to St. Louis.

FATHER OF A FAD.

Samuel Hill, of Seattle, the son-in-law of James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company, commended to certain fashionable persons in Washington several weeks ago two Japanese wrestlers, whom he had brought here from the Pacific coast, according to the New York Sun's Washington correspondent. These men were experts in the ancient science of jiu jutsu, and he told them that they ought to establish a profitable business here by giving lessons in their art.

Mr. Hill gave an entertainment at his hotel, consisting of a lecture on jiu jutsu, and an exhibition of this form of wrestling by his Japanese proteges. Jiu jutsu made a great hit. President Roosevelt gave it his distinguished approval by employing the Japanese professors, as they are called, to give him lessons at the White House.

In the same way that horseback riding increased in popularity soon after Mr. Roosevelt became president, so jiu jutsu, under the influence of his example, has become a popular fad in Washington. A number of women in society are taking lessons in the art. Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth devotes many hours to it and recommends it to the younger women of the smart set.

Jiu jutsu is not entirely new to President Roosevelt, but it is one form of strenuous exercise to which he had given little attention prior to the advent of Mr. Hill's Japanese instructors. Secretary Loeb has also been taking lessons, and frequently indulges in this exercise with the president, who finds it a very acceptable form of exercise on days when the weather is too stormy for outdoor recreation, or when he is too busy to take more than a few minutes for physical culture.

Winnipeg, May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The White Sox made it three straight from Winnipeg Saturday afternoon and slaughtered Ned Egan's "Champs" in a manner that turned the fans green with envy. The visitors hammered Dahlquist and Converse all over the lot and piled up a total of sixteen runs, while the home team was shut out until the ninth inning, when one lonely runner crossed the plate. It was the worst defeat ever administered to the Winnipeg team.

The batting of the Duluth men was terrific. They hammered out doubles, triples and home runs with fascinating ease, and singles were mere child's play for them. Lagger had a triple and a home run to his credit, while Corrigan and Randall each had three hits.

For four innings Dahlquist, backed up by the sharpest kind of fielding and good luck, kept the visitors from scoring. His curves were a mystery, however, and it was easily seen that the visitors were preparing to land on him.

In the fifth the slaughter commenced. Three singles in quick succession and an error by Annis resulted in two runs. The fielders again came to Dahlquist's rescue and with some sensational work succeeded in retiring the visitors.

In the sixth the Duluth bunch of sluggers landed on Mr. Dahlquist in proper style. Hit followed hit, with now and then a double or a triple mixed in. The little sphere was slammed to all parts of the grounds and before the inning closed five men had scored.

In the seventh the game was turned into a rout for the locals. The visitors had no mercy on Dahlquist and everything he sent over was put to the fence. After four runs had been scored, Converse was put in to finish the hopeless fight. He met with but little better success, and eight runs in all were tallied before the inning closed.

The home team was totally demoralized and played like a lot of school boys. Converse made a game fight in the remaining two innings and succeeded in keeping the heavy hitting visitors from getting more than one run.

Gehring was in magnificent form and he would have shut the peggers out had it not been for an error by Quillan in the ninth inning, which let in the only run scored. Only five hits were made off his delivery, and they were so well scattered that the home players were never within hailing distance of the plate at any stage of the game until the ninth.

It was rubbing it into last year's champions pretty hard to take three straight and end up with such a slaughter as that. After the game President Lamb of the Winnipeg club admitted that Van Fraagn had the best aggregation in the Northern league and one that was probably the equal of any of the American association clubs. He stated that he would immediately take steps to strengthen the Champs.

SUNDAY GAME AT FARGO.

Superior Wins Contest That Counts In Standing.

Fargo, N. D., May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo dropped a league game Sunday afternoon to Superior in a pretty contest. Managers Werden and Cameron agreed to make the contest a league affair for the one that was scheduled for Aug. 4, as this gives the teams two open dates at that time.

A large crowd witnessed the contest, which was well played. Kilroy had a little the best of the pitching, while his teammates did more opportune stick work.

Manager Werden blocked a throw to second when he was at bat in the eighth and was put out of the game for some hot stuff he shot into his umps, when called out for the interference. The score:

LOSES IN TENTH.

Superior Drops Finely Played Game to Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo won out by batting rallies in the last three innings of Sunday's game. Doll kept the hits well scattered till the last part of the contest. Fargo had from one to three men on bases every inning but couldn't score till the seventh because of the failure to hit opportunely. The locals tied the score in the ninth. In the tenth with one out Mankie put one in the corner for three bags and scored on the out of Foulks' long fly to right.

The game was fast and interesting and a large crowd enjoyed the contest. The game was Foulks' third victory. The score:

TOO MANY ERRORS.

Loose Playing By Tigers Give Crookston Game.

Grand Forks, May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The third game with Crookston was played here Saturday. The weather was beautiful for ball playing.

Martin was on the stab for the visitors. He allowed eight hits, and issued one pass. The team behind him gave him good support. Two errors are all that are charged against them. Newmeyer was on the firing line for the Tigers. He went Martin one better and allowed but seven hits. The support he got was not the best, in fact it was very poor. Hutchison took three errors, and Dunn and Brown the other two.

The visitors made their first score in the third inning, when they piled up their runs. It happened something like this: Witt was the first man to bat. He was given a life on Hutchison's error. Martin went on a fielder's choice. Breyette sacrificed. Witt went to second on another error by Hutchison. Schils took a hit, and cleared the sacks. Carlisle was thrown out on first, and while the ball was being held there by Newmeyer Schils scored. Novacek landed on the little sphere for a two-bagger, and Lally pounded ont a hit which scored Novacek. Lally was caught stealing second. The inning was a heart-breaker and the fans watched with silent amazement the Tigers fall over themselves. The next score was made by the visitors in the fifth inning. Novacek again landed on the little sphere for atwo-bagger, a single by Hoffman advanced him to third and an error by Hanrahan sent him across the plate.

The Tigers got their first score in the fifth inning. Nagel, fearing to be left on a base, tried hard for a home run. It was the only chance to avoid a shut-out. He nearly succeeded and he safely landed on the third corner, then an error, made by a poor throw on the part of the shortstop to the catcher, let him home.

The next score made by the locals was in the seventh inning. Hanrahan, the first man to bat, singled. The next two men were thrown out on first. Then Nagel rapped out another hit and sent Hutchison home.

Dan Lally made his first appearance. He was lately released from the Minneapolis enthusiasts, and there is every reason to believe that he will make good in the Northern league. He played a great game at first and got his share of the hits. The score:

PLAYED SUNDAY GAME.

Test to Be Made In Brooklyn Courts.

Brooklyn, May 30.—Acting under instructions from Deputy Police Commissioner Farrell, there was no police interference with the National league championship baseball, which was played between the New York and Brooklyn teams. About 12,000 persons witnessed the game. The game proceeded without the slightest sign of disorder.

Generous cheers greeted some of the good plays, while there was a notable absence of evidence of dissatisfaction from the onlookers. The grounds were thoroughly policed by uniformed officers as well as detectives, some of whom took the names of all the players who took part in the game, as well as the managers and representatives of the competing clubs. There were several representatives of law and order societies among the spectators and they were there for the purpose of securing evidence. Their reports will be turned over to the proper authorities on Tuesday so that a thorough test can be made to establish whether the playing of professional baseball in this city is legal or illegal.

There was no charge for admission to the grounds yesterday, but each person bought a score card, these cards being of different colors. The color indicated the place of vantage the holders were entitled to witness the game from.

Four white men are in the federal jail at Muskogee, I. T., charged with the murder of Robert Sudderth, a negro freedman, near Broken Arrow, by the use of an infernal machine. The prisoners are Laken McQuerry and Seymour, Ed. and A. J. Luster. Sudderth was disliked because he owned a farm in the center of a white settlement. He was blown to pieces while plowing in a field. Detectives found evidence that a contrivance to explode dynamite had been placed in the ground so that it must be exploded by Sudderth's plow.

Fire destroyed the plant and warehouse of the Alabama Cordage company at Montgomery, Ala., entailing a loss estimated at $80,000, which is practically covered by insurance. The plant is located in a suburb of Montgomery and about a mile from the nearest fire tation.

Cloquet Defeats Mork Team—Northern Pacifics Victorious.

The Duluth Fashions won a hard fought contest with the Two Harbors nine yesterday afternoon in the little north shore city, by a score of 12 to 11.

The game was a slugging match from the start and a high wind and a rough field combined to make the fielding rather ragged, but there was no lack of excitement. The game was won by the Fashions in the ninth inning, when they overcame a lead of one run and took the game by a fierce battling rally.

Lowe was in the box for the Fashions. He was hit freely and given poor support for the first three innings, but took a brace and pitched winning ball in the remaining six. Church pitched for the home team.

The high school seniors defeated the faculty in a well-played game at the league park Saturday afternoon by the score of 14 to 7.

Scoble was in the box for the seniors and pitched good ball. He fanned six of the faculty and issued free transportation to five others.

Church and Towne pitched for the instructors, and while they were not hit very freely, poor support in the field enabled the seniors to score in five of the seven innings played.

The feature of the game was the three-base hit made by Capt. Foster of the faculty in the fifth inning, with three men on bases.

BEMIDJI WINS.

Defeats Fast Northern Pacifics of St. Paul.

Bemidji, Minn., May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Bemidji baseball team played the Northern Pacific team, of St. Paul, one of the fastest semi-professional baseball organizations in the Twin Cities, in this city yesterday afternoon. The score was 9 to 8 in favor of Bemidji, the winning run being made in the ninth inning with no one out. The battery for Bemidji was Skooksberg, of Bemidji, and Ludwig, of Cass Lake, while De Pattie, who pitched for Winnipeg in the Northern league two years ago, and Conrad were in the points for the Northern Pacifics. Skooksberg twirled a fine game, and Ludwig's catching was one of the features. De Patti pitched a steady game, but was touched up for consecutive hits when hits meant runs. There was a large crowd in attendance and the enthusiasm was great. Conners, a traveling man, started in to umpire, but some of his decisions gave such dissatisfaction to the crowd that a small-sized riot was imminent. Rutledge, of Cass Lake, was called for and finished the game without incident. The same teams will play this afternoon.

WINNIPEG WAILS

Fans Disconsolate Over Terrible Drubbing Given By Duluth.

Say White Sox Are Too Swift For Northern League.

A sound of weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth is heard in at least one city in the Northern league. From Winnipeg there comes the cry of the disconsolate fan. Three straight defeats by overwhelming scores does not suit the Canadians, who are used to championship ball, and the following clipping from the Manitoba Free Press shows what they think of it:

"It was no idle boast that Van Praagh made when he said he was going to get the pennant no matter what the cost. His team is without question the strongest ever seen in this league, in fact, it is said to be on a par with anything in the American association. By the looks of things the White Sox are too strong for the other teams in the Northern.

"Not a little talk is heard of Winnipeg's cheap team. Such is all rot. The Free Press has authoritative information that this year's team is costing individually and collectively more than it did a year ago. But without doubt the management has been gold-bricked on some of the players, who have failed to come near the expectations, or to bear out recommendations."

"There is no concealing the fact that the work of the team has been disappointing in the home series. With a record of eight games played they have made an even break, but at the same time they have suffered in comparison with the visiting aggregations, and notably from Duluth. The latter is truly an all-star bunch and from present appearances they should make a runaway race for the pennant."

That admission came after the second game with Winnipeg. What must the poor disconsolate "cuss" thought of the Winnipeg bunch after Saturday's drubbing?

Something of the same nature may be cropping out in the Grand Forks papers before the White Sox shake the dust of th Dakota town off their feet and hit the ties for home. The bunch is certainly the best yet. Two out of three from Fargo, two out of three from Crookston and three straight from the "champs" is not a bad touring record and the Tigers will have to go some to keep from being the fourth set of victims. The Forks men will have to take three straight in order to send Duluth home in anything but first place.

Manager Van Fraagh joined the team today in Grand Forks and he will remain there for the three games. It is Shaw's turn to pitch today and he will probability be in the box.

Grand Forks is looked upon by many of the fans as Duluth's most dangerous rival. On paper the team looks good, and it has been playing fast ball. The present series will, therefore, be closely watched by the faithful.

POISONOUS SNAKE.

How An Axe Handle Was Poisoned By Venom.

"Speakin' about snakes," said Capt. Nat to Outing, "that last tree I cut down reminds me of an experience I once had the last of my goin' to sea.

"I was in '78. I'd sold my vessil and decided to make one voyage with Capt. Putnam to the West Indies in the old North Star, of which I was part owner with him. We weren't more'n two day from port, we figured, if the wind held, when there come up one of those long gales you're so apt to run into when in those seas, and for three days we lay hove to and let her drift. When we took an observation on the fourth day we found we'd drifted out of our course considerable and warn't many miles from a small island that Capt. Putnam had stepped at once before, so we concluded we'd run in close under the land and get some wood, as we had to have some to keep the galley stove goin'. Cap'n Putnam and I and a couple of Portuguese sailors started for shore in the small whale boat. We had a couple of axes with us to cut wood and we landed on the beach all right, as the wind being off shore the water was smooth. Cap'n Putnam had his gun, and he and I kinder locked around to see if there warn't some birds to take a shot at while the sailors were at work cutting the wood. We had walked away from the Portuguese probably not more'n forty rods when one of 'em let out a yell, and when we looked round they was both runnin' for the boat and hollerin' like hellyens. We rushed up and one on 'em told us in his broken English that he had got a tree about half chopped down when a snake dropped from one of the limbs and bit him square on the leg. We pulled off his long leather boots but couldn't find no mark on him, but on the side of his boot leg we found two little marks showin' where the snake had struck, but his fangs hadn't gone clean through, and he was more scared than hurt. We finally got them to work again, but they made slow progress on account of bein' so frightened, so cap and I finally toop a hand. I was cuttin' away at the undergrowth when I saw, not four feet frm me, a big snake all coiled up, apparently asleep. He was the biggest one I ever saw or hearn tell on. He measured a foot thick, I should think, in the middle, and I wouldn't be surprised if he was fifty feet long. Wa'al, if ever a man's hair riz on his head, mine did. It riz so that my hat fell off, and that's proof anyway. I didn't dare move for fear of wakin' him up and havin' him swaller me at one mouthful, and I didn't dare holler for help neither, so I concluded my only salvation was to throw my ax quick as lightnin' right into him and make for the boat.

"Slowly," continued Capt. Nat. "I lifted that ax up without makin' the least sound and threw it right into the middle of that big coil. It hadn't no more'n struck 'fore I was runnin' for dear life. The rest saw me and follered like a blue streak. We all got in the boat and pushed off for a few rods, and when I told 'em what I had done we expected to see the snake comb out of the underbrush every minute ready to eat us all up. Nothin' happened, however, and finally Cap'n Putnam and I decided I must have killed him, so took his gun and started in to where I had been workin'. We went up mighty careful, I tell you, and the cap'n had his gun cocked and had a couple of shells in loaded with thrible B shot, ready to shoot if the snake showed fight.

"I don't ever expect to see a sight like the one I did there. When we got to the snake he was stone dead, and the ax was right up to the eyes in the middle of his body; and, boys, if you'll believe me," every eye was fixed on the captain, "that snake was so poisonous that, by gosh, that ax handle had swelled up as big as my leg."

"Say, cap, honest, is snakes that poisonous in them foreign countries? Is that story true?"

"True as preachin'," said Capt. Nat, his eyes twinkling, "and now, boys, it's 1 o'clock and we must turn to."

VOODOOISM.

Voodooism in Greater New York in the twentieth century is an anahronism so gross that it is almost beyond belief, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Nevertheless, the black art of voodooism is practiced today in Brooklyn and Manhattan in precisely the same form and manner as in New Orleans, Port au Prince and Senegambia, and the incantations and ceremonies performed for ages on the banks of the Congo and Niger are reproduced at least once a year in New York. The voodoo cult is as widespread as Freemasonry, and as dreaded as the Mafia.

A case in point is a recent attempt to hoodoo the home of W. Newton Bennington, of Twenty-first and Cropsey avenues, Bensonhurst. A valuable dog belonging to Mrs. Bennington was run over and killed by a Brooklyn Rapid Transit train. Believing that the colored coachman, who disliked dogs, was in a measure to blame, Mr. Bennington discharged him. A few days afterward Mrs. Bennington discovered a hoodoo bag lying on the sill of the kitchen window. Being a Southern woman, her home having been in New Orleans for many years, she is quite familiar with the esoteric pretensions of the sons of Ham, and recognized the purport of the bag at once.

Lydia, the colored cook, was panic-stricken at the sight of the ill omened bag. Her ebony face faded to a pearl gray hue, and she very nearly had a fit of hysterics. Mrs. Bennington's proposition to throw the dangerous article in the fire filled her with horror. The only safe way to dispose of it, Lydia declared, was to build a big bonfire in the back yard, convey the bag to it with a pair of tongs, and cremate it at midnight

TORRENS LAW

Increase In Number Taking Advantage of Its Benefits.

Other Counties Report It Growing In Favor With Owners.

The Torrens system of land transfer is receiving a great deal of attention, this year in counties in the state other than St. Louis, and the reports from the various registrars of titles indicate that applications for Torrens titles have increased very largely since the first of the year. There has also been a more systematic effort on the part of those well informed in the workings of the Torrens' law to explain it to others who do not understand fully the advantages offered.

It is figured that while the Torrens business in this country has not yet reached the figure that it should, considering the advantages of the system, the increase in applications during the past two months has been very noticeable.

A large number of pieces of real estate have been and are now going under the Torrens registration, while an immense tract of land within the city limits will go under Torrens title within the next few weeks.

The Herald has already devoted space to a careful and comprehensive explanation of the Torrens law by Deputy Register of Titles Thomas Clark, of this county, but inquiries are coming to the registrar's office day relative to points which the intending applicant may not understand.

The apprehension on the part of some that the next legislature may take a notion to raise the fees above what they are now, has influenced many people to hurry in their applications.

Two of the chief questions that are always being asked the registrar of titles relative to the Torrens system of land registration are: "What are the principal advantages claimed for the new over the old system of land registration?" and again, "In what essential particulars do the two systems differ?"

Without going too far into a repetition of the discussion already given by Mr. Clark, it may be said, on the authority of those who are familiar with the system, that under the system of land transfer hitherto exclusively in operation in Minnesota, land titles passed and liens were created by execution, delivery and recording in the office of the register of deeds of the legal instruments needful for such purposes. A sale or incumbrance of land is purely a personal transaction, concerning only the parties immediately engaged in it. Their rights alone are affected. The record made by recording the instruments relates only to their relative rights. Titles pass at the risk of the purchaser and subject to any interest or lien which the existing record shows. If there is a mistake in the abstract of the title, or negligence or error on the part of the purchaser or his agent, to properly record the instrument, or to properly examine the records before the transaction is closed, the purchaser has only his remedy against the seller. The seller may be irresponsible and the purchaser may find, as has often been the case, that he has bought not the fee simple in real estate, as he designed buying, but a law-suit, which is usually an asset not speedily or easily realized on.

All that may be said as to the insecurity of the purchaser under the cumbersome and expensive system still in general operation, applies with equal force. It is said, to the situation of those who have money on real estate security. It is argued that no opinion upon a title represents more than the ability, knowledge, skill and care of the attorney who examines it and not always even that much.

The intervention of clerks and officials, the infirmities of human judgment, the business distractions that come to nearly everybody, often cause carelessness, while the natural indifference to others' rights and the dishonesty that presents itself to view in many business transactions all operate to minimize the already slender security furnished through the prevailing system of land transfer.

Again, it is claimed that expense and delay are the very essence of the old land registration system. If the man wishes to borrow or to loan money on a piece of property he must have an abstract of title. This must be examined at an expense of time ranging from two weeks to two or three months. If the seller or mortgagor is in urgent need of the money he is required to wait, with the contingency always in sight that the others' attorney may think his title defective, or insist on precautionary steps that are simply impossible to him.

No such contingencies, it is claimed, can arise under the Torrens system. It is said to have all the advantages of simplicity, security, dispatch and economy. In its essence a registered title is a decree of the court of competent jurisdiction, in favor of the plaintiff entered in an action to quiet title, not against the specific defendants, but against all the world. The state, according to this reasoning, in effect, accepts the decree of its courts that the title of the owner plaintiff is perfect and it undertakes to save harmless all who acquire an interest in real property affected by such decree.

To accomplish this an indemnity fund is called into existence by the law from which all be paid any money damages which the courts may award to any persons who may afterwards be shown to have been deprived of a substantial right or interest in the property whose title the state has assured.

"In other words," says a title attorney, "possession under Torrens title is presumptive of an indefensible ownership."

Under the old plan, it is argued, the title must, in each transfer or loan be examined back to the ownership by the government. There can be no more, and there may be far less security for a purchaser, after a title has been examined a hundred times than after it has been examined for the tenth time. It is claimed that the security steadily lessens with the increase of the records affecting the property.

On the other hand, it is claimed that in case of a Torrens title, "each transfer results in the title being quieted and guaranteed by the state to be indefeasible in the purchaser."

"It is hardly necessary to consider the relative advantages of the two systems from the standpoint of a sound public policy," says a prominent writer on the Torrens system, in a recent publication.

Were there no other public advantage to acrue from the general adoption of the Torrens system than the lessening of records of land transfer, that advantage alone would suffice. But when the vast amounts of money which are paid out day after day for the needless and often worthless examinations of title, which are made necessary under the old system, and the endless delays incident to it, are considered, the public utility of the Torrens system becomes apparent. If there is any intelligent reason why the ownership of a piece of real property should not be as easily, as speedily and as securely transferred from one man to another, as can the ownership of a piece of personal property, it is not apparent to the ordinary mind. In every city of the United States, at the present moment, there can be found blocks of valuable property taken out of the market through some irremediable defect existing in the titles. No flaw or uncertainty can attach to a Torrens title. It is as open as the day, as secure as the state itself, puts an end to the form of public and private robbery represented by the tax title shark, by compelling all holders of tax certificates to present the same within a given period, and brings to an end a system of procedure which, more than all other influences combined, has operated, in the United States at least, to keep the mass of the common people from the enjoyment of the ownership of the soil on which they live.

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

The thing to do is to help the system discharge the humors, and strengthen it against their return.

Hood's Sarsaparilla permanently cured J. G. Hines, Franks, Ill., of eczema, from which he had suffered for some time; and Miss Alvina Wolter, Box 212, Algona, Wis., of pimples on her face and back and chafed skin on her body, by which she had been greatly troubled. There are more testimonials in favor of this great medicine than can be published.

ADVENTURES OF A VESSEL

Voyage From Antwerp to Los Angeles Took One Year.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 30.—After having been buffeted and tossed by scores of gales, twice dismasted and once reported lost, the British bark Thirlmier dropped anchor off Port Angeles just one year after she had sailed from Antwerp for that port.

The voyage is a record for length, for many sailing vessels have circled the globe in less time. The average period for sailing craft to make such a trip is 130 to 140 days, and it has been made in 115.

The Thirlmier is laden with a general cargo, consisting mostly of cement, railroad iron and other heavy material consigned to local importers. When she sailed she carried a crew of 30 men. Several of them are seriously ill.

After leaving Antwerp March 12, 1903, the Thirlmeir reached the east coast of South America without incident, but in attempting to round the Horn she encountered a series of gales which left her dismasted and practically a helpless hulk. Under jury rig she put back to the Falkland Islands and in the harbor at Stanley was refitted. It was necessary to send to Montevideo for timbers for some of the work. Again the vessel left port and again she was wrecked. A second time she put back and was again fitted with masts.

All this took time, and the vessel was long ago put on the overdue list. Later she was given up as lost. Months ago she spoke another vessel bound for this coast, and by that vessel was reported. The third attempt to round Cape Horn was successful, and then followed a long, tedious voyage up the west coast.

WIFE FOUND LOVE LETTERS

In Husband's Pocket and Then Sued a Wealthy Widow.

Baltimore, May 30.—Love letters found by a wife in her husband's clothing and evidence of lovemaking between a widow and a Sunday school superintendent are features of the trial of a suit brought in the court of common pleas against Mrs. Annie Radcliffe by Mrs. Sallie C. Eareckson, in which the plaintiff demands $40,000 damages for the alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, Thomas B. Eareckson.

The parties to the suit are prominent residents of Kent and Dorchester counties. The husband of the defendant was prior to his death a director of the Cambridge National bank of Cambridge, Md., and was reported to have been the wealthiest man in Dorchester county.

Thomas B. Eareckson is a prominent farmer of Kent Island. He lived in Baltimore for many years and was superintendent of the Sunday school of Bethany Methodist Episcopal church, the Rev. Harry D. Mitchell, was present in the court as a witness.

This is a letter found by Mrs. Eareckson in her husband's waistcoat, and supposed to have been written by Mrs. Radcliffe:

My Own Darling: No need to tell you how glad I am to get your last letter. Write to me oftener. Tom, dear, don't work so hard. I want you to take care of your precious health for Nancy's sake. You know how dear you are to her. Don't let your thoughts stray; think of me, how I love you, and I know you are never happy without Nancy, and Nancy is never happy without you. O! my darling, it would kill me to be seperated from you long. I couldn't stand it, I couldn't live without you. I love you so, Tom, darling, please write often to me; you need not write in the house where she can see you.

Write anywhere with a pencil, only write. You told me, darling, that you'd be up next week to see me and I am living on that promise. Won't we be happy, darling? Ah! come to your Nancy, my darling, my Tom, my boy; give business, anything as an excuse, only come. You belong to me. If she don't like it, it cannot be helped. I am your wife in the sight of God, for my love makes it so. I love the very hairs of your dear head. You are my precious. Won't we be happy.

NANCY.

Another letter reads:

Come and let me rest my aching heart and head in your arms. You have to make your choice soon between your Nancy and all the rest or lay your Nancy in the grave. Perhaps that would be better. I cannot pray or read my Bible. There is no comfort or happiness for Nancy in this world without you.

She don't want you, give her the farm, all you have. I have enough for two, and we will go in the country somewhere and live. I have done nothing today but cry. My darling, my Tom, my precious Tom, my idol. NANCY.

In a third letter the writer says to "Tom" that he must be careful and not get wet, because of he should die she believes she would die also.

"Be careful, dear," the letter reads, "and don't let her get her hands on my letters. Don't do anything rash, but when you can't stand it any longer come to me and we will be happy. Don't give her the farm unless she gives you up your freedom."

Mrs. Eareckson said: "One morning we went to church, where my husband was superintendent of the Sunday school, and when we came back my husband went to the front door and banged it as we were going through, as much as to say, 'I guess you won't see anything this time.'

"One night after Christian prayers and grace we went to church, and coming home Mrs. Radcliffe was along. He was going with her home. I said I was willing to go home alone. Then Mrs. Radcliffe said to him, sternly, 'Take your wife home, and he took me. I was so excited that when I reached home I fainted."

YEARNS TO BE FREE

Has Served Four Years Out of Term of Thirteen.

New York, May 30.—Confident in the belief that his influential friends may be able to secure a commutation of his sentence, Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., the absconding note teller of the First National bank of this city, who is now serving a 13-year sentence in Sing Sing, hopes soon to be able to enjoy the use of his stealings in a return to his palatial home in Mount Vernon.

Of the $650,000 stolen by Alvord restitution was made of less than $100,000. His wife's diamonds were turned over to the bank, it is said, but the beautiful home on Summit avenue, Chester Hill, Mount Vernon, still remains in the name of Alvord's wife, who, after an absence of several years, has just returned to it in anticipation of being rejoined by her husband.

Alvord hinted at foolish speculation in Wall street as partial explanation of his great stealings, but he resolutely refused to mention the names of the brokers with whom he did business. Some of the horses and carriages were turned into cash in the half-hearted pretense at restitution, but the splendid furnishings of the home were retained, including the magnificent works of art which Alvord, as a connoisseur, had collected and presented to his wife.

Although Alvord, on the modest salary of a note teller, lived in Mount Vernon at the rate of $30,000 a year for several years before his disappearance from the bank, in October, 1900, it is generally believed he had salted away much of the $650,000 of stealings.

On Alvord's desk in the bank after his disappearance was found a copy of the Omar Khayyam "Rubaiyat" opened at this verse:

"Some for the glories of This World; and some Sigh for the Prophet's Paradise to come;
Ah, take the Cash and let the Credit go,

That was a favorite quotation of the middle-aged man who determined to take the cash and let the credit go, and who to all intents and purposes held on to the former with a grip that defied the law.

Alvord has spent less than four years in prison, and already is looking forward to a commutation of the six years more that should be the minimum of his term under the sentence. His time in the prison has been lightened by privileges denied to less fortunate ones and probably never before equalled by other inmates.

For the first few months of his incarceration in the prison he was in the mat shop, but soon was transferred to the central office, which is under the direction of Captain P. Powers, the superintendent of industries of the prison. There he was made bookkeeper and from that time his discipline as a prisoner largely decreased. He is no longer compelled to march in lockstep to and from meals, but cooks his own breakfast and dinner in a little kitchen just behind the office of James Collins, a brother of the state superintendent of prisons, who is superintendent of the cabinet industry at Sing Sing.

When the day's work is over Alvord does not march to his cell, but slips into it after the other prisoners have been locked up, and here finds a supper cooking over an oil stove—that work being done by another prisoner who is said to receive $3 per week.

Although the prison rules allow an inmate to receive provisions but once in two months from the outside, Alvord, the wealthy defaulter, enjoys his steaks and chops as every evening, although they are not on the menu of the prison.

Prisoners are allowed to see relatives only once in two months. But Mrs. Alvord is not only a visitor to see him every week, but is not embarrassed by the presence of the guards, who are supposed to be present at all interviews. For these visits the private office of Warden Johnson is given over to the use of this privileged prisoner. The visits are sometimes on Sundays, when the prison, under the rule, is closed to all.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

LOCKOUT SEEMS CERTAIN.

Mills In Fox River Valley Will Close.

Appleton, Wis., May 30.—A lockout next Saturday night of the employes in all the print paper mills in the Fox River valley now is practically certain, the action taken yesterday by the Brotherhood of Paper Makers making this result almost inevitable. After a two-hours' session the brotherhood, numbering 300 men, decided to submit a communication to the manufacturers on the recognition of the union. This action was brought about by that of the manufacturers last week communicating directly with individuals and ignoring the brotherhood.

The communication to be submitted by the men in substance will be to the effect that the employes will make no reply concerning their position in regard to the resumption of the long schedule until the employers make their request of the union instead of dealing with individuals. The Kaukauna and Neenah brotherhoods took similar action, and all lodges will work in unison.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

THE NOTED SIEGES

Port Arthur's Condition Much Like That at Santiago.

Washington, May 30.—The siege at Port Arthur by the Japanese troops, now in progress, promises to be one of the most notable occurrences of the kind in modern military history. If reports are true that the Russian garrison is provisioned for a year the place will not be easily taken, for its defenses are well-nigh impregnable to assault.

In shortness and decisiveness it will be difficult to beat the record of Alexandria, every gun of which was effectually silenced within ten hours by the British fleet under Admiral Seymour. But these few hours witnessed such a destructive deluge of shot and shell as might well have laid a big city in ruins. No fewer than 10,000 projectiles were hurled against the forts of Alexandria, many of them monsters of 1700 pounds weight, fired from 81-ton guns. Singularly enough, this murderous hail of iron did little damage to the fortifications, the majority of the shells burying themselves harmlessly in the parapets of sand which had been raised to protect the batteries.

But so terrible was the havoc and slaughter wrought among the adherents of Arabi Pasha by the flying fragments of the shells which exploded that the forts were quickly evacuated, while some of the shells started a fire which destroyed almost the whole of the town.

Sebastopol, with its grim, massive forts, defended by 700 guns, many of them of heavy caliber, held out against the combined armies of France and England for 327 days. When, however, the place was evacuated it was found that the town was in ruins, and to complete the work of destruction, such docks and forts as still remained standing were blown up by the engineers of the allied forces.

It took 132 days for the Germans to bring Paris to her knees a generation ago. During January, 1871, no fewer than 10,000 shells were rained onto the doomed town every day, and of these 500 fell into the city proper. During a single day, Jan. 3, the Prussians hurled 25,000 projectiles at Paris at a cost of $300,000. The havoc they wrought was fearful, and the resultant fires threatened to destroy whole districts. During the siege no fewer than 40,000 of the inhabitants succumbed to disease and hunger.

For ninety-four days Plevna defied the pick of the Russian army, although its defenders were hopelessly outnumbered, and on Dec. 10, 1877, after the last grain of rye had been eaten, the indomitable Turks sallied forth and tried to hew their way through the Russian legions. Osman Pasha commanded his gallant remnant in person; three lines of trenches were pierced, but the odds against them were too great.

Surrounded by almost countless hordes of the enemy, his men mown down by sweeping torrents of bullets and shells, the brave leader at last yielded to fate and allowed the white flag to flutter from the roof of the hut near which he was lying mutilated and in agony.

Khartoum withstood the mahdi and his hosts for 341 days under the brave direction of Gordon, and in Kars, Gen. Williams, with 15,000 men with provisions for three months and ammunition for three days, kept an investing army of 50,000 at bay from June to November.

"Gen. Williams," wrote Mouravieff, the Russian general to his gallant foe, "you have made yourself a name in history and posterity will stand amazed at the endurance, the courage and the discipline which this siege has called forth in the remains of an army. Let us arrange a capitulation which will satisfy the demands of war without disgracing humanity."

Gibraltar, as all the world knows, stood impregnable against all the assaults of Spain and France for 874 days, although week after week 6000 shells were hurled at it every day, and in spite of the combined attack of 46 sail of the line, a countless fleet of gun and mortar boats and floating batteries which had cost 500,000 pounds to construct.

Richmond, Va., was defended by Gen. Lee through a year of terrible fighting until the seizure of his lines of supply compelled him to evacuate it on April 2, 1865; Lucknow held out for 86 days, when Gen. Havelock went to its relief, and Strasburg, with all its strength, defended by a garrison of 17,000 men, had to surrender to the Germans after a siege of 40 days. Among other notable sieges Mafeking survived seven months, Kimberly 123 days, Ladysmith 118, Potchestroom 94, Metz 72, Gaeta 77, and Chitral fort 46 days.

A much closer parallel to the siege of Port Arthur can be found in the bombardment of Santiago during the recent war between America and Spain. The United States warship Texas, Indiana and Brooklyn opened fire on the town at a range of six miles and for three hours poured shells into it with such deadly effect that, although the gunners could not even see their target, 57 buildings were wrecked and set on fire and it was said that a few hours' more firing would have laid the whole place in ruins. Even more effective was the demoralization caused by the bombardment, which directly led to the surrender of the town.

LOST LIFE IN BURNING BARN

Daniel Donahue of Hinckley Dies Trying to Save Horses.

Hinckley, Minn., May 30.—While his neighbors used every endeavor to gain entrance to the burning building, but were forced to give up the attempt to rescue him, Daniel Donahue, a liveryman of this place, was burned to death in his barn yesterday afternoon.

He was attempting to rescue his horses from the fire, which started about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and was overcome by smoke, being unable to again make his way to the open air. He called for aid and a number of neighbors attempted his rescue.

At the moment Donahue's voice was heard, calling for water the structure seemed a mass of flames and his rescuers were unable even to enter the doorway. While they could hear Donahue's agonized calls for assistance the men made several efforts to gain admission to the barn but were obliged to give up the attempt and forced to stand by while he perished.

It is believed that the blaze may have been of incendiary origin and a coroner's jury is now investigating the case. The general opinion is that Donahue, when he first discovered the fire made an attempt to rescue a valuable team and was overcome by the heat and smoke.

After the flames had burned out Donahue's charred remains were found in the ruins, near the bodies of the horses which he attempted to rescue.

Donahue's first wife and three of his five children perished in the great Hinckley fire, in which so many lives were lost several years ago and the fact that he met with a similar death in the same town, is considered a sorrowful coincidence. His second wife and five children survive him.

The property loss is estimated at $2000, which includes the estimated value of the horses and some carriages that were also destroyed. It is believed that Donahue carried some insurance on his property.

HAPPINESS OR MISERY

Which?

It depends upon the nerves.

If they be sound and strong, you are healthy and vigorous. Your mind is clear, and you are happy.

But if they be weak, you are nervous and miserable. Your mind is uneasy, and you suffer all the tortures of a doomed, nerve-starved man.

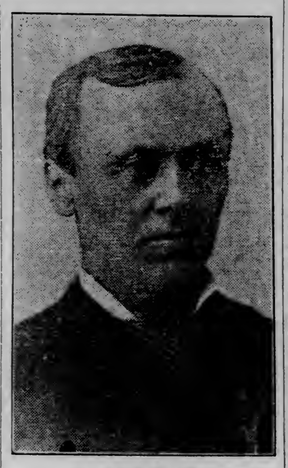
MEMORIAL DAY SENTIMENTS AND WAR TIME REMINISCENCES BY DULUTH VETERANS.

BY S. F. WHITE.



S. F. WHITE.

I believe there no ties outside of blood so near as those that unite the enlisted men and their captains in the war of the rebellion, especially those of us who were brought up in the country. We all knew one another by our first names and the "boys" were and still are, Bill, Tom, John, Frank, Mike, Orson and all the other Christian names of the men better remembered by the captain than those called by the orderly each day, and to all the captain was and still is when they meet, "Cap." One old gray haired little Irishman named Michael Farley, has two sons in the western part of this state and whenever he goes to visit them he stops to see me and presumably the others at the restaurant, where we go to dinner together, laugh at and wonder to see two small gray-haired men talking and laughing over old matters, calling each other from time to time "Cap" and "Mike." Others do not undertsand it, but the veterans, especially the captains and their "boys" do. So when you asked me to write something about my recollections of the war I thought of one afternoon when my company was sent out on the skirmish line which was close to that of the enemy and the firing was pretty brisk, each side trying to "pick off" all who exposed themselves on the other side. A single piece of artillery with a white horse was annoying our main force and the skirmishers were trying to pick off the gunners. Suddenly a big, awkward fellow by the name of Henry Beardsly, was seen to throw down his gun, jump up and down and cry out: "I've killed the son of a gun," repeating the exclamation several times. The white horse and, of course, its rider had fallen, hence Henry's joy and he was always certain his shot had done the deed.

Soon after a slow moving heavy fellow named Frank McCormick fell evidently struck by a bullet. The boys gathered around to pick him up and it was plain a bullet had struck him at the point of the breat bone, when upon opening his clothes the bullet fell to the ground. Frank opened his eyes, rubbed himself, got up and said: "Golly, boys, that hurt," and went back to his place paying no further attention to the matter. The bullet was spent when it got through the little shelter he was behind, had temporarily knocked his breath out and, as he said, "hurt," but did no other damage.

A little later in the day a corporal in the company weighing about 225 pounds, nearly twice my weight then, and I were behind a very large pine tree about the middle of the skirmish line, when, the firing being continuous, our ammunition was getting low and a new supply being brought, I divided it and said to the corporal, Orson, his first name: "You take this half and distribute it down the left and I will go to the right, which I want to see about." As the corporal started out, a humorous thought of his size seemed to come to him and he remarked "Cap, you've forgotten all about my size." Not an instant's hesitation, probable not a thought of the same, but the grim humor of that 225 pounds of manhood going out from a fine shelter through that storm of bullets. Fortunately for both of us no harm came to us from the trips we took, but certainly his danger was twice what mine was.

Possibly it may be frivolous to remember these little things of the war, but ninety-nine times out of a hundred it is these little incidents the veterans talk over when they get together.

One more incident of that afternoon and that is all. A man by the name of Edward, about 45 years old, who had been in his youth in the British army, was near me when he staggered, and as he fell I caught him in my arms and he had but time to say "captain, my poor wife," and was unable, with his stiffening fingers, to complete the sign of the cross attempted by this pious Catholic at the last. It is little wonder that the cry against the danger to American institutions from foreigners and Catholics has always seemed to me alike wicked and foolish.

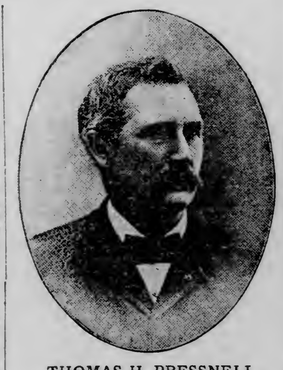
Alongside the railroad between Chattanooga and Atlanta is a single soldier's grave where lies a Union soldier who was killed during the hundred days' struggle for Atlanta by General Sherman, with the armies of the Cumberland, the Ohio and Tennessee. This grave has been kept by southern soldiers and southern women ever since the war with scrupulous care, green and beautiful as if it had been one of a southern soldier, and each Memorial day since, southern hands have scattered flowers on the grave. In the national cemeteries south are buried many thousand Union soldiers, whose graves will on Memorial day be decorated with flowers furnished and strewn by southern hands, emblematical of the loyalty of southern hearts, and their recognition of the sacredness of Memorial day. Let us also remember, decorate and care for the graves of our Confederate dead. It is a beautiful thing if the school children would bring their bouquets of flowers on Memorial day for decorating the graves of our dead heroes and to be present at the decorating of the graves. It gladdens the heart of every old soldier. What shall be done with Memorial day services after the old soldiers have all passed off the stage of action? Have you ever paused to think how soon that will be? Very few of the old veterans are now under sixty years of age, fifteen years at farthest is all we can hope for, for activity enough to maintain even the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic, and every old soldier is thinking who will then carry on the beautiful service of Memorial day, and the decoration of the soldiers' graves in our beautiful cemeteries. For the interest being taken by the citizens this year we are grateful, and we trust it may be that every year will show an added interest in this sacred Memorial day. Let every flag be thrown to the breeze on Memorial day, and every heart in unison with the spirit of the day.

"Beautiful is the death sleep
Of those who bravely fight
In their country's holy quarrel,
And perish for the right."

"Not there but risen redeemed they go
Where all the paths are sweeen with flowers;
They fought to give us peace, and lo!
They gained a better peace than ours."

BY THOMAS H. PRESNELL.



THOMAS H. PRESSNELL.

In decorating the graves on Memorial day of old soldiers who died in battle, the average person little thinks what a small circumstance might have kept among the living the man to whom he is doing honor. A movement of the head, stooping over to adjust a belt or shoe, turning to glance at a comrade, or a step to the side—any of these slight incidents might have kept the man from the bullet's path and preserved his life.

Never was this fact more forcibly impressed upon my mind than at the battle of Petersburgh, Virginia, on June 18, 1864. Perhaps one reason why I remember the event so clearly is because it happened on the 18th, for the number 18 in dates has played an odd part in my life. April 18, 1861, I enlisted in the First Minnesota, at the age of 18 years. I came to Minnesota on April 18, 1855, and went to St. Paul on April 18, 1859, so that three quite important events in my life have occurred on April 18.

One of the most promising young men of our regiment, and one to whom I had taken a liking, was Charles R Clarke, of Lake City, Minn. He was a brave young fellow, and had faithfully served his country from the beginning of the war. He fought at the first battle of Bull Run, and was wounded there. Before entering the battle of Petersburg I assigned Clarke to detail duty, which would keep him pretty much to the rear, and in a position much less dangerous than in the front ranks of fighting men. His term of enlistment expired on June 22, only four more days, so that, in view of his past service, he was certainly entitled to some consideration.

Clarke asked if it was his turn to go on detail. It was not, and I told him so, adding that it was the expressed desire of the man whose turn it was that his place should be taken by Clarke. But Clarke would not hear of this arrangement. He said he would not go on detail until his turn, even though his term expired the next day. And he didn't. He was in the thickest of the fight, brave and daring as ever. He was shot, and died of the wound the following October. A bullet struck him fairly in the center of the forehead. If he had gone on detail he would probably have been among the living today. Any one of a score of things might have caused him to jerk his head from in front of that little chunk of lead. And Charlie was one of the most pronounced atheists I ever met.

As I remember it, the same battle was the only one I ever entered entertaining the slightest fear that I would not come out safe and sound. I had an intuition, one which I could not in any manner shake off, that I would be either badly wounded or killed in the fight. I will say, for the benefit of the superstitious, that my intuition counted for naught. I got through the scrimmage, a pretty tough one, without a scratch.

Military glory is a fine thing, but under certain unpleasant conditions there are sometimes things which appear to be even more desirable to the loyal soldier boy.

I will tell you how some of us felt at one time on the proposition of military glory at 2 o'clock in the morning. We had been skirmishing with the enemy since sundown, under the most trying and dismal of weather conditions, and at about 9 o'clock in the evening, while breaking ice in fording a creek, we came in touch with them. To feel of their position we had, at near midnight, to wade a swamp, black mud and water, up to our waists, and of the temperature of ice at that. One who has never been in such a position and experienced the feelings attendant upon the situation cannot imagine our sensations. It was so dark that we could barely see the men on either side of us. To add to our discomfort, a Confederate battery was dropping Whitworth shells into the swamp in an attempt to dislodge us.

We crept forward and up a little hill to find the enemy withdrawn. For two hours we pressed forward, at times under fire and at times sitting on the ground, our clothes freezing on us.

Again we moved forward, all commands going in whispers, and every man holding his cup and equipments to prevent a single sound of our advance reaching the ears of the enemy.

At this juncture, while creeping cautiously along through the pitchy blackness of the night, tired, cold and freezing wet, the word was passed down the line that to us had been assigned the honor and glory of assaulting a battery, situated only a few hundred yards to the right! Before the order came the battery limbered up and withdrew.

Had this not occurred I doubt not that every man would have rushed forward to the assault without a moment's hesitation, but—well, never before did military honor and glory look so much like a thing that we didn't actually need. At 2 a. m. it did appear to us boys, wet and exhausted and almost discouraged as we were, a paltry thing. It was a true thought, though it lasted but a few moments. We joked about the honor we were to have had, but had the order come, we would have died to win.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

The Women's Council of the city is this year bending its efforts to secure the closing of the department stores for Saturday afternoons during the summer. This question has been talked of in a small way other years but this year it is to be taken up with more system. With the coming of the hot weather the work of the stores is arduous and trying and the women of the city hope to secure this reform.

One of the other reforms suggested by a member of the committee some weeks ago is the sending in of the orders early on Saturday morning in order that the late deliveries at night might be made unnecessary. Following the suggestion a marked improvement has been noted as so many of the inconveniences caused the tradespeople are from lack of thought and when the way is pointed out almost everybody is willing to help. The committee of the council expects to call the attention of the ministers of the city to the Saturday half holiday, which they desire to institute and have them speak in behalf of the scheme. With an exceptionally warm summer prophesied the clerks of the stores at least hope that the council may be successful as the warmest weather and the hardest work seems to come on Saturday.

AMUSING INCIDENT.

How Sewing Machine Was Stolen From a Church.

An amusing experience has befallen a Duluth woman—at least most everybody that knows about it thinks it is amusing. Judge for yourself. A woman, a member of one of the church aid societies desired this spring like many others of the feminine persuasion to have some sewing done. She had no machine and as the one belonging to her aid society was not in use made arrangements to borrow it for a time. The arrangements were carefully made and the woman who borrowed the machine arranged with a dray man to call at the church and deliver it to her home.

"You know where the church is, do you?" she asked. He guesed he did; lived here all his life; ought to if he didn't." The woman was out on the afternoon the machine was to be delivered but when she got home it was standing in the hall with the possibilities stored away in it of tucked dimities and ruffled batistes and shirred vollies. The sewing was begun and continued and continued and several weeks flew by and the machine still remained in the home of the member of the aid society.

In the course of time a meeting was held at the church and the woman attended. During the conversation one of the members said:

"You didn't borow our machine, did you, Mrs. Blank?"

"I, oh, yes indeed, I did and got such a nice lot of sewing done."

"But the machine is here?"

And then followed the discussion in that way when each is determined to remain ladylike and each perfectly sure. At last they went to the sewing room and there stood the machine.

But where did the machine at her home come from? Now there is on the same corner another church, and it publishes a little paper, edited by a pastor that knows how to express his thoughts and who also has the ideas on the manners of a sinner, who would steal a machine from a church. His ideas were set forth in a couple of issues of the aforesaid publication with all the vigor he knew how to give them.

The machine was very quickly back in its proper place.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE TEST OF STEEL

A Decoration Day Story.

By Graham Welch.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The young girl stood leaning on the gate, her brown hair swept by the breeze and illumined by the golden sunshine, her dark eyes flashing, her brown cheeks pink with excitement—her whole attitude that of absorbed interest.

From the distance came the boom-boom of cannon, the rattle of musketry, the roll of the drum. Naught could she see but the peaceful hills and valleys, tree and sky, which she had ever seen from the old gate with the broken hinge. But over yonder behind the trees a great smoke curled skyward and the fragrant summer air held a strange odor—that of burning powder.

It was in the borderland between the contending sections, that sad strip where allegiance was divided and families were disrupted, brother against brother, father against son; that terrible acre crossed and recrossed by friend and foe until the land was fairly drenched with fraternal blood and desolated by unnatural curses.

The girl stood absorbed in the battle so near by—the battle in which father, brothers and two lovers were fighting for "our cause."

But yesterweek both armies had rushed pell-mell across the peaceful farm, leaving only desolation and ruin in their wake. They had found a battlefield some miles distant and now the bloody contest was on.

The girl was strangely perturbed. It was not only the nearness of the battle, its sounds and smells, although these were enough, Heaven knows, to perturb the mind of a simple lass; neither was it wholly because father and brother were over there in that smoking zone where death and destruction lay; neither was it because of the great stake of the issue, although she knew well by this time how much it all meant to the peaceful dwellers in the vicinity. But beyond all these things was the overwhelming one that her two lovers were over yonder in that blue maze of smoke—the two lovers between whom she had not been able to choose.

Presently the scene became more animated. Groups of soldiers wearing the enemy's uniform appeared. Wagons rushed past, from the front, filled with wounded. Soon it became aparent that it was a retreat, and later that the enemy were reforming their lines directly before the house. At nightfall a group of officers took possession of the house and established headquarters, tersely informing the girl and her aunt and the few servants left that it was a military necessity, but that they need fear no violence. Their apartments would not be disturbed.

The girl, who was watching the whole scene with pale cheeks and clenched hands, saw him and started forward. Then she drew back in surprise. It was Lieut. George Graham, one of our officers and one of the two lovers about whom she was so perplexed. But, could she believe it, in the uniform of a colonel in the enemy's army. Surely there was some mistake.

"George!" she exclaimed, rushing forward.

"I beg your pardon," said he; "you have made a mistake," and turned to the officer who had emerged from the library in response to his summons.

The girl turned awkly abashed and cruelly hurt. She knew it was Graham. Why had he denied her? Why did he wear that hated uniform?

"I am Col. Cranston," said Graham, steadily to the other officer. "I am from Gen. B——" naming a famous commander of the enemy. "He is coming as fast as he can, and sends me on to confer as to the place he can strike the most effectively in the morning. Here are my papers."

The other scarcely glanced at them, but cordially responded:

As the two disappeared through the door the girl gazed after them with blazing eyes and flaming cheeks. This man whom she had permitted to speak of love to her—to whom her heart had turned, a traitor and a spy. The idea was intolerable, and she walked into the garden and threw herself weeping onto a seat in the old arbor where she had spent so many happy hours. How long she was there she did not know, but she was aroused by a low whistle. Several times it was repeated. Finally she raised herself noiselessly and peeped through the trees. Again she started in surprise. There, peering over a rose bush was Lieut. Charles La Fountain in the same uniform he had marched away with—the rival of Graham for her hand and heart. She was so astonished she could not move, and before she recovered from her paralysis she received another shock. Graham appeared, peering cautiously about. At another soft whistle from the man behind the bush he glanced that way, put his finger to his lips and swept the entire garden with anxious gaze. Then he moved to the bush and said, in low, rapid tones:

"They will mass heavily in the center—about the Johnson farm, and make a strong demonstration at their extreme left—somewhere near Paxton's hill, and try to draw our main force there. Gen. B—— is three miles from Lakin's spring, with 20,000 men. He will fall on our extreme left and while we are meeting these two flank attacks at the expense of the center, their main force will try to break through our center and whip us in detail. Our only hope is to ignore the flanks, attack their center early and then turn and meet Gen. B——"

"You are sure there is no mistake?" asked La Fountain, in a tense whisper.

"I sat at their council as Gen. B——'s representative. I heard all their plans. I am sure. In Heaven's name go before it is too late."

At this instant there was a rush of hurrying feet from the direction of the house. Graham drew his sword.

"Hurry!" he whispered; they are suspicious."

As La Fountain turned, sharp cries of command came from behind and shadows flittered about them. Both men turned pale.

"Quick! Challenge me," commanded La Fountain.

The coming rush was nearly upon them.

La Fountain, with a wild cry, sprang upon Graham. "It's all up with me," he whispered hoarsely. "You must carry the message—and you must be beyond suspicion."

Then the girl in the vine-clad arbor saw La Fountain seize the blade of the other's sword and bury it in his chest. He fell heavily as the officers from the house rushed up. They beheld the tall officer in their uniform standing with bloody sword over an unconscious and bleeding form in their enemy's uniform.

The girl saw it all. Her two lovers were playing the most dangerous game in the annals of war. A great joy swept over her at the realization that Graham was not a traitor, but a hero. Mixed with it was the shock and sorrow of La Fountain's tragic fate. Her first impulse was to rush to him. Then she thought of the tremendous import of the message she had heard. Every word of it was burned into her memory. What if Graham failed? She could carry it herself. She knew how to slip through the enemy's lines easily along the side of the old ravine. As to our lines—well, she would trust to native ingenuity for that.

Three hours later a girl, hatless, bedraggled and exhausted, but burning with impatience, was ushered to the tent of the commanding general of our forces, guarded carefully by a squad of soldiers.

"She would come, general," said the officer in charge, apologetically. "Says it is of vital importance."

"Want news of a sweetheart, I suppose," said the general, gruffly.

"No, sir; it is to save our army," said she, breaking into tears. Then she burst forth into her story.

The general leaped to his feet in excitement. He sent for Col. Ainsworth, the girl's father, to identify her, and in ten minutes aides were dashing in every direction along the moonlit roads. All night long great columns of soldiers marched, and heavy cannon were hauled wearily into place.

The morrow's dawn was the signal for a tremendous onslaught of our troops in the center and the night fell upon a complete victory.

All this was many years ago. After the war was over the girl became a matron, and once a year ever since she and her tall husband, Col. Graham, go to the old churchyard and cover with flowers a grave, the headstone of which bears the simple name, "Charles La Fountain."

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Young Boy Alleged to Have Killed His Mother.

Trenton, N. J., May 30.—Nathan H. Sibbetts, aged 14 years, of Jacobs Creek, this county, was arrested last night and is in custody here charged with the murder of his mother. The boy and his mother lived together and the mother did washing for the people in the neighborhood. The mother had not been seen since last Tuesday and today some of the neighbors broke into the house. The woman's body was found on the second floor covered with bed clothing. Decomposition had set in. The boy was found and arrested and last night was put through a searching examination by Prosecutor Crossley. The boy denied all knowledge of his mother's death. He stated that he had been home on Friday but that his mother was away washing and that he didn't see her.

Neighbors insisted that the boy was home on Wednesday and Thursday and this led to the lad's arrest.

METHODISTS ADJOURN.

Great General Assembly at Los Angeles Finished.

Los Angeles, May 30.—It was after 11 o'clock Saturday night that the Methodist Episcopal church finished the roll-call which brought to a close the most memorable gathering in the history of the church. Yesterday memorial services were held and a jubilee service at the pavilion closed the series of meetings. When the final roll-call was taken Saturday night 600 of the 750 accredited delegates were in their seats. The conference just closed has accomplished much for the interest of the Methodist church and will go down in church history as one of the most important in the point of legislative action. The action of the general conference in retiring four bishops and electing eleven others probably attracted the widest attention of any other single happening, but there were many other subjects that affected the great membership of the Methodist church and which were watched with deep interest.

"A GIRL FROM DIXIE."

The theatergoers of Duluth manifested very little interest in the visit of "A Girl From Dixie" at the Lyceum Saturday, small audiences being at both the afternoon and evening performances. The musical comedy is a very clean and clever one and the singing and specialty features were all very good.

ISABEL IRVING.

At the Metropolitan this evening Miss Isabel Irving wil open her engagement of two nights in Winston Churchill's "The Crisis." Miss Irving has been starring for over two years as Virginia Carvel, the heroine of the Churchill play and has made a remarkable success. Her present season, which is just drawing to a close, will prove to be one of the most profitable of any stars now on the road and the past year has been a disastrous one to most players. Miss Irving's success has been even greater during her second season than during the first. "The Crisis" is said to be a delightful comedy of American life, ful of strong human love interest and played in a most delightful manner by Miss Irving and her clever supporting company.

"THE GAMEKEEPER."

Tonight, at the Lyceum, "The Gamekeeper," which was seen at the same house last Thursday evening, will again be played. The production made a pleasing impression and the work and singing of the young comedian, Thomas Smith, was entirely satisfying.

THE NATION'S DEAD.

America will do honor today to the heroes of the civil war who sleep in silent graves throughout the length and breadth of the land. To those who live and those who died the nation owes a world of gratitude. Within the span of a few fleeting years the Grand Army of the Republic will be but a sacred memory. It is a matter for gratification that while yet many of the victors live, sectionalism and hatred have been practically obliterated. People North and South, forgivers and forgiven, join in doing honor not only to those who saved the nation, but to those who fought so valiantly although so hopelessly on the losing side. These Southern men fought for what they thought was right as well as the Union soldier, but they were wrong in that they sought to perpetuate slavery and dissolve the Union, and they paid the cost.

This touching tribute to the heroes whose sacred dust finds repose under the little mounds of mother earth, the strewing of their graves with flowers, cannot fail to have an elevating and ennobling effect upon the minds of the rising generation, because it teaches them that while these men lost their lives in battling for the right they did not die in vain. No man can do greater deed than to sacrifice his life for the benefit of humanity. Yet it is hoped, as time passes, mankind will also learn the lesson that victories are won at awful cost when human lives are sacrificed. Speed the day when the hearts of all will be so filled with love for fellow mortals that bloodshed will be abolished from the earth and there will be no more wars forever.

Sleep, comrade, sleep. No more to hear
The clash of sabres and the call to arms;
Your saintly crown purchased at cost of life,
Man's sweetest heritage. This noble sacrifice
Has earned for you eternal gratitude
From those who, left behind, and Others, following after reap the blessings
Of that priceless boon, the liberty
Thus dearly purchased with your precious blood.
In greed for gain and lust for power
Men bound themselves in error's chains
While making brothers slaves.
Arising in your manhood and your might,
With noble purpose to uphold the truth,
And build a nation where men might be free,
You struck these fetters off.
Master and slave alike you saved.
From monstrous evil that engulfed them 'round,
And set both prisoners free.
From Heaven's high embattlements you may look
And see expressed a nation's gratitude
For your great deeds of valor and of love
On this Memorial day.
Rest, comrade, rest. For your reward,
Although, perhaps, struck down ere triumph came,
Yet you may hear free men for aye proclaim:
"The victory is won."

A GREAT POLITICIAN.

A remarkable politician was Senator Matthew Stanley Quay of Pennsylvania, who died on Saturday. Ever since 1855, when he secured his first public office, that of prothonotary of Beaver county, he was in active political life, with the exception of the time he was in the Union army during the civil war. As head of the Republican machine in Pennsylvania for many years, he was a very successful political "boss" and, though his supremacy was several times disputed, he was able to defeat his enemies and retain his control of the machine. A lieutenant of the famous Simon Cameron, he became a greater political general than that distinguished politician. His methods were often criticised by his enemies, but they could not fail to recognize his courage and political sagacity. He was first elected to the United States senate in 1887 and remained in that body until his death. As chairman of the Republican national committee in 1888, he added to his reputation as a politician by his skillful handling of the successful presidential campaign of that year. "Matt" Quay will not be accorded a leading place as a statesman, but as a political general he will be remembered as one of the greatest the country has ever seen.

THEY SUFFER FOR OUR SIN.

Martin Travieso, a Porto Rican graduate of Cornell, recently said in a speech: "The main product of Porto Rico is coffee. Before the war we had good markets for it. Spain, Cuba, France and Germany paid high prices for it, and the island was prosperous. When the war ceased the same countries which had theretofore bought our products began to levy on them the same duties exacted from goods imported from the United States. So the price of coffee has been reduced one-half of its former price and many coffee-growers are going bankrupt."

This is the benefit that Porto Rico derives from being a colony or dependency of the United States. If it were an independent, self-governing nation it could deal with these other countries in such manner as it might choose in the matter of tariffs so as to best promote the interests of the people, but being bound to the United States its leading industry must suffer from the trade antagonism that is created in other countries by reason of our high tariffs and other trade restrictions. In othef words the Porto Ricans are granted the privilege of being governed by another country while they are denied the opportunity of making a livelihood.

Every day brings fresh proof that the Republican administration at Washington made a colossal and costly error when it decided to deal in different manner with Porto Rico and the Philippines from the policy that was pursued with regard to Cuba.

Cuba free and prosperous—the Philippines and Porto Rico dependent and suffering from industrial stagnation and retrogression. The immortal truths of the Declaration of Independence stand out more prominently than ever before, because they have been trampled under foot by the very people for whose benefit they were promulgated.

IS IT CHEAPER TO STEAL?

The Sauk Center Herald makes a very interesting suggestion in this way: "The fact that the state examiner's report may have been made for political purposes; that it ought to have been made, if at all, a long time ago; or that James J. Hill has contributed to campaign funds in times past does not hide or explain away the ugly fact that for some time past it has been cheaper to obtain timber from state lands by trespass than it was to purchase the same at regular and legal sales."

The state of Minnesota passes laws governing the sale of its lands, both timber and agricultural. These laws are just and fair to all concerned. When pine timber is to be sold due notice is given in the press and then the timber goes to the highest bidder. It has often been charged that lumber concerns frequently pay more for this timber than it is worth, expecting to break even and make a little something by arranging with the surveyor general of logs and lumber to cut down the scale. It is claimed that sometimes this scale is not half what it ought to be. That is one possible way of beating the state out of its just dues.

But this is the first intimation that there is another plan to defraud the state through trespass and connivance with the state auditor. It is to be hoped that it is not so. But the fact that there has been so much timber stolen and so few thieves punished under the criminal laws lends color to the report.

It may be true, as the past and present state auditors say, that they collected all that it was possible to collect from these timber thieves, but perhaps they might have collected more if they had sent a few of the largest and most persistent thieves to jail. If they had done this, it is altogether unlikely that the charge would now be made that it was more profitable to steal timber from the state than to purchase it outright.

The Sauk Center Herald is reputedly the personal organ of Candidate Eddy, and its utterances may be somewhat controlled by bias, but this charge is too plain to be met with silence. It will certainly hurt unless a satisfactory explanation is offered.

HE IS JUST THE MAN.

President Roosevelt's uncalled for insult to the other nations of this continent calls forth the following pro test from the Toronto Globe:

"President Roosevelt wrote a letter which was read at a banquet held to celebrate the second anniversary of Cuban independence and the completion of the organization of the Cuban government. In it he said: 'All that we desire is to see that all neighboring countries are stable, orderly and prosperous. Any country whose people conduct themselves well can count upon our hearty friendliness. If a nation shows that it knows how to act with decency in industrial and political matters, if it keeps order and pays its obligations, then it need fear no interference from the United States.' Canadians do all these things, but when it comes to reciprocity in trading, or in towing, or in vessel rescuing, or in settlement of boundary disputes, we are treated with scant courtesy and sometimes have to put up with sharp practice."

The Globe treats this matter very calmly. But what it does say bears out The Herald's contention that, on account of the present state of mind of the people of Canada, political union with this country is an impossibility. They believe that the United States does not deal fairly with them and The Herald must confess that they have grounds for that belief. To be sure President Roosevelt had the headpiece through which he was shooting hot air pointed in the direction of South America when he relieved himself of the screed contained in that Cuban letter, but it applies to Canada just as well, and we now see that the Canadians take advantage of it to call attention to some of our own shortcomings, as might have been expected.

If the American people desire a man in the executive chair who can be relied upon to create friction and trouble with other nations, Roosevelt is certainly just the man they want. For playing the rowdy and bully in international affairs he has no superior.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Public Opinion makes a suggestion with regard to the exclusion of Anarchist Turner that is worthy of consideration: "This law aims to penalize the holding of opinions hostile to our form of government; it is legislation against a state of mind, and the anarchist who wishes to come to this country has only to keep his mouth shut in order to gain a free entry. While the 'philosophic' Mr. Turner has been kept out, a couple of hundred 'revolutionary' anarchists may have come in. The law, therefore, while doubtless constitutional, is hardly effective or sensible."

Gen. Bell has decided that he has done mischief enough in Colorado, and has resigned as commander of the state militia, having discovered that "the state militia was degraded to the uses of corporations which connived at the breaking of the law." This is quite a change of front for a man who recently said: "To hell with the constitution." It almost makes one feel like asking: "How much?"

It is barely possible that the grave warnings which emanate from certain quarters against the dangers of municipal ownership are born of the fear that the usual success of these experiments may soon lead to a demand for federal ownership and operation of all natural monopolies, including railroads, telegraphs and minerals. This fear is no doubt engendered by contemplation of the fact that when the time arrives for government operation and control of monopolies many "captains of industry" will be deprived of the privilege of drawing more than a fair share of the fruits of production which they now enjoy to the great injury of the general public. If municipal ownership leads to "inevitable bankruptcy," the experience of the people of Duluth with municipal ownership of water and gas plants had led them to the conclusion that it pays to risk the danger of bankruptcy.

Even the most ardent supporters and apologists of President Roosevelt would just as leave not undertake the task of defending that letter of his read at the Cuban dinner.

President Baer says he will charge just as much for coal as the people will pay. That, perhaps, is another divine right. But when people cannot get anything but coal to burn they are disposed to pay what they are compelled to.

HOTEL GOSSIP

B. B. Ulrich, formerly of this city, but now of Hancock, shivered this morning before the counter at the McKay as he contemplated the boat trip down the south shore.

"There's a pretty good wind outside and something of a roll, too, and I shouldn't wonder if I'd want something warmer for the trip than I've been carrying," said he.

"Things down our way are looking better and I think the general feeling is one of encouragement. There is a lot of exploration work going on in the copper country, new work, and I think there will be quite a number of new mines brought out as a result. The South Range Consolidated Smelter is about in shape and has a new process, through which they remove the sulphur from the copper by electricity. It's a pretty smooth arrangement and in every way the smelter is one of the best I have ever seen, complete, thorough and remarkable in every way."

"Speaking of experiences of young folks in getting married, there are some occasionally that are calculated to make the grooms shun their fellow men for evermore," said D. P. Brown, of McKee's Rocks, Pa.

"I was best man not so very long ago at a wedding and saw a stunt done by the jocular young men friends of the groom that was certainly a good one. Never mind about me and what part I took in it, for that's another matter entirely and has something to do with the story.

"The young man in question—I mean the groom, now, so don't mistake my meaning. No, I was not the groom, for I assure you that I was the best man. My wife and I eloped, if you must know, so that there was no chance for that sort of thing, which we were very anxious to escape.

"As I started to tell you, the groom who was the principal actor in this story was a very tall young man and very slender. He was also quite backward, so much so that his friends always wonder how it was that he brought himself up to the point of asking the young lady to become his life partner. He would sit all evening with strangers and never open his mouth to say a word. He hated to go out in company. The girl was a short and stout brunette, and very handsome, her beauty often accounting to people for my young friend's ability to overcome his diffidence when it came to wooing her. But those things have different effects, of course, for sometimes beauty stupefies and in other cases it electrifies and inspires.

"But this is not a sermon, of course. Well, the girl was a stunner, and he and she, when they were engaged, used to go out to parties and all that, and they would sit and look at one another with warm smiles if they were at the same table, and with appealing looks if they managed to get separated. She was about as quiet as he, but all she had to do was to turn those eyes on you, and you were it from that moment. Now, after all the praise I have bestowed on the young woman you must surely know that she is not my wife, for tradition, at least, will tell you that no ordinary man like myself cares to praise his wife, at least for the benefit of the public.

"To get back to the original subject. The night of the marriage, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents, there was a good turnout of the invited friends, and the affair was all that anyone could expect. The guests were handsomely entertained, the bride looked like a 'four-time winner,' and all went well up to the eleventh hour. But when it came time for them to depart to get the train for their wedding trip the plans began to be acted.

"The boys had hired a two-horse omnibus with a couple of kids on top with a supply of red fire which was big enough to do any city of 100,000 inhabitants for a public display, and as boys like red fire there was no trouble in that part of the arrangements being properly carried out without constant nagging of the kids.

"The horses had banners hung down their sides, with appropriate signs telling that the folks were just married and all that, and the bride and groom were in blissful ignorance of all the arrangements, for the omnibus had been very quietly backed up to the curb and the red fire was not started until the 'good-byes' were begun between the loving parents and the departing young ones. You know those 'good-byes'—the kind the railways never dare to hold trains for—and of course there was plenty of time for the red fire to be well kindled.

"Did the groom have a carriage waiting to carry them to the station? Well, I guess he did. But that cuts no figure when there are a score or more of your friends waiting to take you in their own especially prepared vehicle. You're in the hands of your friends in such a case, so you just ride with them whether you like it or not. Did he? And did she? I guess they did. It was not nearly as much trouble as we—I mean as the fellows—thought it was going to be, either.

"They were all laying for the bride and groom in the hall downstairs by the door, and of course they did not form a football wedge or anything like that, but stood causally around waiting for a good chance to get action. Pretty soon the pair came down the stairs.

"He had the bride on one arm and his grip and overcoat in the other hand. He stopped at the foot of the stairs and asked her to let go for a minute until he could put on his overcoat as the evening was rather cool. She obliged him, of course, not knowing what a favor she was doing the boys, for she had no sooner taken her hand from his arm until they grabbed her—two of them, one on each side, and gently lifted her up and carried her out.

"She was a delightful little bundle and the boys seemed to enjoy carrying her down those steps and out the walk into the carriage—I mean the 'bus. Several others followed to guard the progress of these two principals and see that no one interfered. They also got into the wagon to see the same end.

"Others who stayed behind to pacify and plead with the enraged groom assured him that no harm was coming to the girl. She was only going to the station with them in their special equipage and they would be glad to have him come along. No, they would not permit him to go alone with her, in the omnibus or anything else, but they would agree to take her safe and sound to the depot. No use of his riding in the carriage when he might go with them. And by going with them he'd be with the bride, too. Maybe he wasn't mad. But he could not say anything. He would open his mouth like a sick cat, but not a sound would he make.

"They saw they were not going to get anything out of him but indignation, and they left him in the hall with his grip, and went out to the omnibus and climbed in. Finally they called to him that they were ready to start and would see him at the station. Out he came on the run and got into the 'bus, but they would not let him sit near the bride and he would not speak a word to them all the way to the depot. The horses looked very happy with their special decorations and the red fire burned gloriously all along the route, which, by the way, was three miles long, for this was in a pretty good sized town.

"At the station there was a committee with a lot of printed cards and they went through the train as soon as it was in and distributed the cards. On them were printed the names of the bride and groom, both the bride's maiden and married names being included. Where they had lived and would live, place and hour of the ceremony and where they would stop on their honeymoon were facts all included in the information on the cards.

"And that was not all. They knew if they let loose of that boy before the train started that he and his bride would retreat from the fun, leave the train and go away from all the mortification that was being heaped on them. So the boys stayed on the train until it pulled out, and as the next stop was over a hundred miles away, they evidently made up their minds that they were as well off by staying and carrying out their original plans as to try to change trains. As far as we know they carried out the trip along the route that had been so well advertised, I forgot to say that the committee sent these cards to all the places where the pair were likely to halt in their journey. Oh, it was well done, and well planned, but he has fought shy of the bunch ever since they got back."

MUST THE CHILD GO?

New York World: "Prattle Row," in the Bronx, is to be Silent Row hereafter. Prattle Row was a little oasis in a desert of race suicide. Two hundred children raced and chattered about the corridors of its six apartment houses. There were from three to six of them in each family—not very extravagant numbers from the point of view of Benjamin Franklin's generation, but a disgraceful excess in the opinion of the modern janitor and landlord. The children damaged the halls and annoyed the neighbors. So they were all evicted, and forty-eight flats became available for childless couples, or families with an outside limit of two children each.

And still President Roosevelt wonders why modern parents do not have large families. Where would he have them experiment on the grass in Central park? Commissioner Pallas would not allow even that.

Is there not a promising field here for a combination of philanthropy and business such as has been so successfully exploited by the City and Suburban Homes company in the construction of model tenements? Why not build houses especially designed for people who still retain the ancient fatherly and motherly instincts? If necessary, let them have indestructible floors, sound-deadened walls and washable finish. Then let them open their hospitable doors and make the forlorn children welcome.

There would be no charity in such an interprise as that, and no risk. Parents encumbered with broods which they feel a sentimental reluctance to drown have money that they would joyfully exchange for shelter. The demand is here, and clamorous. Why should it not bring the supply?

Whence Came It?

New York Sun: Whence came this hostility to the automobile? Without doubt its first cause was the accidents arising from reckless running of the machines. Upon the heels of this came the open scorn of the courts by a few wealthy youngsters to whom the foolish ten-dollar fines were amusing. Then certain newspapers which regard it as their duty to incite people of small means to hate the rich narrated these cases and commented upon them in such a way as to convey the idea that an automobile was a sort of plutocratic car of juggerment in which the multi-millionaire was to go about and crush the life out of laboring victims at $10 a crush.

It is this notion which in a vague form lies at the bottom of the growing hostility to the self-propelled cars and which urges the unreasoning small boy to the discomforting conclusion that the automobilist is what his favorite authors call a "varmint" and ought to be "wiped out."

Bag-Bag.

"Now let the wig-wag, wag;
"Who'll swim the big Bag-Bag?
And for the Old Flag bag
Each false "Amigo?" "

"Ours not to 'nig' Bag-Bag!"
Cried out brave troop's brag wag.
"Now your last glad rag drag
Off the way we do!"

Stripped our last rag, Bag-Bag's
Swum; and the swag bagged—Krags,
Mausers and Bag-Bag flags—
Over the river.

Poets with Bag-Bag jag,
Kansans should brag Bag-Bag—
Crossed as the flags wig-wag—
Thin-line without sag, lag, flag,
And Funston forever!

Didn't Kill It Altogether.

Kansas City Star: Still, pessimists who write pieces about "The Vanishing Sabbath" ought to be able to find some comfort in the thought that, even as it is, there is much more left of the Sabbath than there would have been if an effort had been made by the churches to keep up the habit of feeding people on cold pork and beans on Sunday, and keeping the children penned up with the Bible and the catechism until sundown.

THE INTERNATIONAL BULLY

New York Herald: To the "weakling" who has been his permanent object of aversion President Roosevelt has added in his remarks to the schoolboys at Groton the "prig" and the "snob." Might it not have been appropriate, especially in addressing such an audience, to include the bully?

Certainly any South Americans who might have read the President's letter to the Cuban birthday banqueters would have thought so.

In order to enjoy its independence free from the fear of interference by the United States, a Latin-American nation, according to this manifesto, must fulfil the following conditions:

It must show that it "knows how to act with decency in industrial and political matters."

It must keep order.

It must pay its obligations.

The first requirement is rather elastic, like the "general-welfare" clause of the constitution. It may be made to mean anything we wish it to mean. As long as the present administration remains in power, however, it may be taken for granted that the test of "decency" will be conformity to the ideas of Mr. Roosevelt. But if Peru should launch a Ship-Building trust would she be convicted of indecency in financial matters? Or should the president of Ecuador should remove a competent postmistress because she had displeased a man who was trying to buy a Senatorship would he be lacking in decency in political matters?

And South American republics must "keep order." How much order? Would the Colorado variety do, or would it be necessary to reach the level of mas-hunting county in Louisiana? If the chief of police of Buenos Ayres should announce that automobilists desiring to keep their heads intact could find protection from mobs on two days in the week by confining their routes to certain streets, would Mr. Roosevelt consider that a case had been made out for landing marines?

Finally, a country that wants to escape American intervention must pay its obligations. Not merely its bonds but its obligations of all kinds, which in South America include hundreds of millons of subsidies, often fraudulent, promised by tottering governments to shady concession-hunters. Such promises have been made and repudiated by scores of our own counties and States. We have a long list of repudiated State bonds, too, which the holders would be glad to exchange for bonds of Venezuela or Colombia, dollar for dollar.

In national interst-bearing securities alone the debts of the Latin-American republics foot up over a billion and three-quarters dollars, or nearly twice the bonded debt of the United States. For all of this, under the Roosevelt doctrine, we may assume a collector's responsibility. Most of this money is owing to foreigners, who lent it at usurious interest on speculation, making the exorbitant terms cover the risk. Now President Roosevelt proposes to relieve the speculators of the risk against which they have already insured themselves by giving their ventures the guarantee of the United States.

These are some of the noble objects for which the president would have us provide ourselves with a "big stick."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Elk River Star News: They had to call in the militia at the Illinois Republican convention, but if things keep warming up the whole federal army will be necessary in Minnesota.

Glenwood Gopher: Ten different string fiends "concede" Frank Eddy 67 votes and each one locates them in different parts of the state. That makes 670. That is more than we ever claimed.

Bemidji Sentinel: "Fourteen years ago we favored the theory of the municipal ownership of electric lighting plants and fourteen years' experience with a municipal plan confirms the municipal ownership theory. We have seen plants installed, seen them operated, and know that in other towns the size of Bemidji the result has been that at no cost to the municipality lights are provided for street lighting, a sinking fund is provided for the purchase of supplies and repairs, and the general conduct of the business of electric lighting, while the consumer pays no more for his lights than he does here—much less in fact. These are facts in spite of the argument that politics and electric lights do not go together.

Austin Herald: The Minneapolis Journal in large display type, announces "Public Sympathy is Aroused as Indicated by the Prompt Contributions for the Stricken Family." The amount contributed under this big heading was $22.00. Minneapolis has a population of 202,718. "Public Sympathy" when it is aroused in Minneapolis, means much—it means a per capita contribution to a noble cause of $.0001. If a little country weekly had contained such an item of Aroused Public Sympathy the big dailies would tear columns open with laughter.

Princeton Union: William R. Merriam, ex-governor of Minnesota, has been mentioned for the position as secretary of the department of commerce and labor which has been held by Secretary Cortelyou. The appointment of Mr. Merriam would be a good one, as he is well qualified for the position.

St. Cloud Times: "Following the fatal accident recently on a Minneapolis street car crossing the papers of that city are agitating the safe guarding of these dangerous crossings over the railroads, as long as there are such crossings there will be accidents and the only way to prevent the destruction of life is to absolutely forbid them by law.

Wabasha Herald: No, gentle reader, you will not be obliged to hold your nose forever. As soon as the Republican state convention has been held, you may begin to gradually loosen the grip of your thumb and first finger thereon, and eventually it will be safe to take a full, long breath of Minnesota's usually pure air.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man can know darn little and yet make his wife believe he is a wonder at fixing the plumbing.

There are lots of ways for a man to make love to a woman, and she invented everyone of them.

A girl hardly ever gets mad at somebody she likes without being nice to somebody else she doesn't like.

It's awfully nice the way a woman can convince you that you ought to do a thing she says you ought not to do.

Scotch Thrift.

London Globe: Sir A. Geikie's "Scottish Reminiscences" contains this Glaswegian episode:

"At a funeral in Glasgow, a stranger who had taken his seat in one of the mourning coaches excited the curiosity of the other three occupants, one of whom at last addressed him. 'Ye'll be a brither o' the corp?' 'No, I'm no a brither of the corp,' was the prompt reply. 'Weel, then, ye'll be his cousin?' 'No, I'm no that.' 'N! Then ye'll at least be a frin' o' the corp?' 'No that either. To tell the truth, I've no been that weel myse'f and as my doctor has ordered me some carriage exercise, I thocht this wad be cheapest way to tak' it.' "

ACRES OF GROUND

Twelve Required For the Great Barnum & Bailey Show.

Problem to Find Amount In Good Place In Dututh.

Twelve acres of ground are required for the Barnum & Bailey show to properly disport itself, and it is to look after these acres that R. M. Harvey, special agent of the mammoth circus, came in today and registered from Cincinnati at the St. Louis. Part of the bill posting and other forces are already here, John Lebis, E. R. Taylor and Tom Barman, although the show is not due until August. It is said that the coming of two circuses in a season to Duluth is one reason for the early missionary work which is being done here, but the Barnum proposition says "Who's afraid?"

It is the immense size of the tract of land needed for the exhibition that gives the show more worry than anything else. Mr. Harvey was telling a man this morning that the fair grounds were not large enough and inquired about the land across from them. The man laughed at him.

"It is a fact, though, 'Mr. Harvey repeated." "While the show goes to a great many places there are some of the forces that never see all the towns. Only where there is trouble about getting the ground or a competitive show, or some place with a complication, do I go. Had a funny experience last week in Bay City, Mich. Found the grounds there were not large enough, and had to go after the golf links, and the golf people are a hard lot to handle, as they hate to have their grounds torn up and made the circus pay mighty well for the privilege. But we have wooden rings now instead of tearing up the ground and banking it around in a circular form, as in the old days, so that the damage to a golf ground or any other piece of land is comparatively small now.

"Down in Canton, O., we thought we had everything arranged about our ground for we had engaged a 12 acre tract from a farmer—it was a field, in fact—and he seemed to think we were very foolish to insist on having it all, saying no other circus ever came along wanting so much. But we told him we wanted every foot of it and arranged to pay accordingly. The fee was ninety dollars.

"When the circus got there do you know that fellow had five acres of that place ploughed up, because he was so sure we were bluffing? We had to get another place to show on.

"In years gone by all the freaks, the fire eaters, midgets, fat women and giants, as well as the albinos and the people that write with their toes, used all to be matters of extra charge in the circus. Nowadays they are not only shown under the same tent with the menagerie, but are frequently exhibited in the ring with the other performers. Carl Claire is the musical director of the show now, and we claim to have remarkable music for a circus. The general public, of course, does not appreciate the hardships in the show business, and the musicians, for instance, are working just as hard in these circus performances as they would in a Wagner opera. If you don't believe it just stop sometime in the circus and listen to the players, for they hardly have a chance to rest an instant. They blow constantly for two hours and with two performances a day it takes capable men to stand the work.

"Our people have a floor now under the tent and if you drop your handkerchief you can pick it up without leaving your seat, even if you're clear at the back of the tent, for it does not fall to the ground as it would have years ago. Every seat is reserved and a coupon issued for it, so you can see with such improvements, the electric lighted, steam-heated circus does not seem far off. Seats are carried for 11,000 people, the circus carries about 1,000 people, one-third of which are preformers, and five trains are used to transport the show, 100 cars—the first time in circus history where so much equipment has been necessary. Two cars alone are required for the apparatus of the 'Looping the gap' bicycle trick, which has succeeded the 'loop the loop' feat. The trick in looping the gap is to land plumb on the other side.

"Last year our people did not go west of Chicago, but are making a bigger tour this year. Yes, a circus is very expensive and costs about $6500 a day for ours. You can figure for yourself what it costs for a year—over a couple of million.

"It is a lamentable fact that elephants cannot be had nowadays as large as Jumbo, the Rajah, Bolivar and some of the other famous fellows, but circuses have to make up in number now what they lack in size of elephants. We carry thirty.

"The attractiveness of the circus seems to be pretty well divided, and I hardly think, as has been suggested, that a greater intelligent interest is manifested in the menagerie than any other part of the performance. It has been our experience that the country folks and the matinee crowds seem to take the most interest in the menagerie and the night performances get more attention in the rings.

"Used to be in the newspaper business myself, and I feel every time I get into a new paper office that I ought to sit down and go to work. I started in as a 'devil' and had almost every other branch of the work before I went into the show business. For a few years I was on the Des Moines Leader, and later my brother and I run a morning paper in Dallas county, Iowa."

TRIED TO CUT HIS THROAT

Herman Beckert is claimed by the police to have attempted suicide Saturday evening about 5 o'clock near the ship canal on Lower Lake avenue by severing an artery with a jack-knife.

Shortly before noon Saturday Beckert appeared at police headquarters and asked Capt. Resche the best way to commit suicide. The captain though, he was joking and advised a jump into the lake. Four hours later the man was discovered by Officer Grandmaison on Lake avenue, sawing at the artery in his wrist with his knife. He was taken into custody and sent to St. Mary's hospital.

Beckert is a German about 52 years of age. He says he is from the north shore, but refuses to state what town. He claims to have been struck a vicious blow on the head before coming to Duluth, and it is the belief of the police that it has rendered him unaccountable for his actions. He denied that he was drunk when he attempted to end his life.

He was booked up on the police record on the charge of having attempted suicide, which is an offense against the laws of the state.

Offices Closed.

All of the offices in the city hall are closed today in commemoration of the holiday. The municipal court officials were the only city employes doing business today with the exception of the members of the police and fire departments.

No business will be transacted by the council this evening. The regular meeting will have to be held, but an adjournment will be taken until tomorrow night.

OPENING OF NEW LANDS

But Two Weeks Remain —Many Inquiries Being Received.

Only about two weeks now remain before the opening for settlement and entry of certain lands in Pigeon River, Bois Fort, Deer Creek, White Oak Point, Red Lake, Chippewa of the Mississippi, and Winnibigoshish Indian reservations, in northern Minnesota. This important event in the history of the settlement of the northern counties has been set to occur at the hour of 9 a. m., June 15.

The reputation of this section of the state for possessing a large amoun of choice farming land has become so thoroughly established in the central West, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota particularly, that the advertised opening of any piece of land, no matter how small, is sure to be the means of bringing in inquiries regarding the settlement of the land in almost every mail. The local land office clerks are kept busy answering the questions, and sending out circulars giving necessary details.

Particularly is this true in the present instance, when 49,517 acres of good agricultural land in the Duluth land district will be open to entry, located in the Pigeon River, Bois Fort and Red Lake reservations. Most of the land in this district to be opened is located in the Bois Fort reservation, where 38,622 acres are free to be taken by actual settler

Inquiries received at the local office are by no means limited to the land in this district, however. Many people do not understand the land district divisions, and when they wish to find out anything about the opening to settlement of agricultural lands they address the nearest office, instead of the office in the district in which the land in question is located. But this answers the purpose equally well, for usually the officials of one district can give information of this character regarding neighboring districts. It makes the clerks a little more work, is all.

In all 248,731 acres of reservation land will be opened to entry. Of this there are 71,168 acres in the Cass Lake district, 128,045 acres in the Crookston district, and 49,517 acres in the Duluth district. A prior right to enter the lands will not be secured by settling on them before the date of opening.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Unknown Vandals Ruin Valuable Property In Lumber Camps.

Menominee—Unknown men have broken into the camp of the Pankratz Lumber company of Sturgeon Bay, near Cedar River, Menominee county, and demolished everything in sight. Sheriff Stiles has a clew to the guilty parties and arrests may be made. Property worth several hundred dollars is ruined. The officers are inclined to believe that it was planned to burn the camp, but that its proximity to several farm houses deterred the vandals from so doing.

Peter Coakley, of Menominee, has applied for a pension for bodily injuries received during the civil war. He was in the Eighteenth Massachusetts regiment in the Army of the Potomac. He does not claim to have been wounded in an engagement, but says that he was so badly injured through falling through a bridge into a river that he had to be discharged. He was among a detachment ordered to burn bridges over which the army had passed so as to hinder pursuit, and it was while engaged in this work that he was hurt.

M. F. White, an old resident of Dagget, Menominee county, but who has been an inmate of the Washington Soldiers' home for the past year, recently received a back pension of $2000 from the government, while his monthly pension has been increased to $50. Mr. White had his injuries during the civil war on the second day of the battle of Gettysburg. He has now leased a lot in St. Louis and will conduct a news and refreshment stand in the World's Fair city.

Escanaba—The Tilden house, one of the landmarks of the city of Escanaba and of Delta county, is to be torn down. Resident owners, together with the officials of the Northwestern railroad, who control the old hotel site, have given the building to Paul Kiene, a wrecking contractor of Menominee, who will demolish the structure for the material in it.

The valuation of all taxable property in Escanaba has been assessed this year at $3,909,254. This is $297,002 greater than the valuation made by the board of review a year ago and still less than the valuation as assessed by the state tax commission. Whether the latter will stand for the reduction this year is an interesting question.

EXERCISES AT CEMETERY

Only Feature of Memorial Day Observance In Morning.

A high northeast wind and a very low temperature for May 30 marked the morning of Memorial day. Up to noon there had been no rain, and it is thought that Duluth will escape all showers this afternoon.

There was no special program arranged for the morning. The decorating of graves of old soldiers at the cemeteries was about the only feature of the morning. Much interest is being manifested in the exercises to be held this afternoon, and in spite of the chilly weather it is expected that large crowds will turn out to witness the G. A. R. parade at 2 o'clock, and attend the special exercises at the Armory at 2:30.

The parade will form on First street, the right resting on Fifth avenue west, at 1:30 p. m., and will move at 2 p. m. The line of march will be down Fifth avenue west, thence east on Superior street to Third avenue east.

The ceremony of scattering flowers in the canal, as a memorial of the sailors who died in the service, will be performed by the women of the auxiliary branch of the G. A. R. after the meeting at the Armory.

COUNTY'S DEAD

Not Much Profit In Burying Cases County Pays For.

W. J. Ryder, accompanied by Mrs. Ryder, was here from Hibbing a few days ago and registered at the St. Louis. Mr. Ryder is an undertaker and does a good deal of public work. While here he looked up some bills against the county for burials which had been hanging fire for about a year, the delay having been due to uncertainty whether the county poor commissioner or the coroner should look after the defraying of the expenses.

It seems that when a poor person dies attended by a physician, the charge for burial is paid through the poor commissioner, and when no physician looks after the patient, the coroner looks after the burial.

The undertakers frequently have a good deal of trouble in trying to get the cases of poor people buried by them properly settled, owing to it sometimes being a matter for one official to liquidate and sometimes the other.

There is no great profit in taking care of the remains of those whose last rites are performed at the expense of the county. After the undertakers get from the county is $12.50 per case, and the principal reason undertakers are willing to look after such cases is that when the relatives of such people are found they are generally anxious to have a better funeral conducted than that furnished by the county, and willing to pay accordingly.

In this neighborhood it costs $5 to have a grave dug, and the burial box used in such cases costs $3.25, plus about 50 cents freight. Up to this stage of the proceedings the expenses are $8.75, and the difference between this and the $12.50 is $3.75, out of which some other small expenses have to come. Sometimes the undertaker spends this much in trying to find the relatives of the deceased, as if an undertaker in this county and it is believed there are relatives at Minneapolis or St. Paul who can be notified and who will want him to have a better funeral, the undertaker phones to the Twin Cities, and Mr. Ryder cited ona case where it cost him over $3 for telephoning alone, and then he did not find the relatives and had to bury the body for the county price.

The correspondence about disputed cases frequently gets very bulky, and as one letter or paper is added to the bunch the amount of going back and forth between officials who have the matter in hand frequently gets too large for convenience. It has been known to get so large that it could not be transported by mail, so the express companies had to be entrusted with it. This is another feature of the expense, but of course a rare one.

In the out-of-the-way portions of the county the undertaker is sometimes not notified until the death has been a thing of forty-eight hours past or so and the result is that he wants to bury the body as quickly as possible. The Finnish people, in frequent instances, do not notify the authorities of their dead as soon as they should.

In one instance, during the cold weather, when the snow was very deep the undertaker was called out in the country to the little shack where a dead man was to be found, and found that from the road to the house was a distance of about half a mile or more that had no approach excepting a foot path. The undertaker had driven out with a team, and had to think for a while as to how to get to the house and bring out the body.

He could not take in his team and he could not tell before seeing the body whether he could well carry it, distasteful though it might be. So he decided not to make two trips, and unhitched his horses, hitching one of them to a large basket. He led the horse, hauling the basket, through the singe path to the house. There he got the body, put it in the basket and led the horse out, dragging the burden behind over the snow.

SOME FINE SHOOTING

The squad record of the year was broken yesterday afternoon by five of the members of the Duluth Gun club, who broke 120 out of 125 birds shot at.

The above average was obtained in the second half of the shoot for the Panton & White trophy. The members of the squad were Parmelee, Fulton, Jackson, Berry and Storey. The two latter broke 25 birds out of the 25 shot at, while Parmelee had 24 and Fulton and Jackson each 23.

This gave the squad an average of 24 out of 25, which breaks the record for the club. It was the prettiest shooting ever seen on the local ranges, and the five marksmen were given some hearty applause for their work.

Both the class medals and the Panton & White trophy were shot for yesterday, on account of the latter shoot having been postponed from last week. The following were the scores:

STILL ON BOAT

Capt. Craine Has Not Yet Left Steamer Saxona.

Several Boats Leave Duluth For the Lower Lakes.

The steamer Saxonia has arrived in port. At the office of the Tomlinson line this morning it was said that Capt. Craine was still on the Saxonia, and it may be assumed from this that Capt. Craine will take out that boat, unless he should make up his mind later to leave her. Some people are inclined to speculate as to what Capt. Craine would do if he left the boat, as he will not be in good standing with the Masters' and Pilots' association until he pays a fine of $2000, at least this fine is alleged to have been assessed against him for his action in leaving the association ranks.

At a special meeting last night of Duluth Harbor, No. 44, of the Masters' and Pilots' association, a committee was appointed to wait on Capt. Craine. As he claims to have repented taking his boat out it is thought that he may not take her back to Lake Erie. Nothing in regard to the meeting was given out for publication except that all there was to say was that the men are standing pat.

No word of other captains having come to Duluth to take out boats was obtainable this morning in local circles. It has been reported that the masters who take boats out against the will of their organization should be pretty well assured of the future by their employers, in case any layoff should in any way make concessions to the captains' organization, and thus give that organization the upper hold.

The men who are on the fence about taking out their vessels are in a very ticklish position, for such as are willing have not yet taken the fatal steps are being subjected to much persuasion from both their fellow sailors and their employers.

If they get out of the association, and the association should prove victorious in the present struggle, no doubt the association would make it as difficult as possible for the men to get back in that body, unless the trouble should be settled on condition that all the strike-breaking ones be taken back into the organization.

Last year Capt. Frank Ray, of the Clemson, when there was a strike on account of his non-union standing, was made a member of the Masters' and Pilots' association before the trouble could be settled.

Capt. Ray has been picked to sail the enormous Augustus B. Wolvin, this year.

KEEN LOCAL INTEREST.

Excitement Over the Lake Situation Is Growing.

The excitement in local marine circles in regard to the Lake Carriers' difficulties is daily growing more intense. Efforts are being made on the part of the vesselmen to get men to man their boats, and the Masters' and Pilots' association members are making just as strong efforts to hold the men in check. There have been no arrivals or departures of any nature this morning.

The steamer John Sharples, of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation company, cleared the Duluth harbor Saturday night for Montreal with a cargo of flour. She was in command of Capt. W. D. Waite. This company is a member of the Lake Carriers' association, Yesterday the Saxona, in command of Capt. D. C. Craine, who is reported to have repented taking his boat out, arrived in the local harbor yesterday.

From Superior the report is sent out today that the steamer Stillman, gasoline, belonging to the Tomlinson fleet, cleared for Buffalo this morning, in command of Capt. George McCullough. At the Tomlinson office in Duluth it is denied that the Stillman has cleared, but further than that nothing has been said.

The steamer Frederick B. Wells, grain laden, of the Peavey line, cleared last night for Buffalo, commanded by J. W. Norcross, of Montreal. Capt. Norcross is marine superintendent of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation company of Montreal, and was brought here for the purpose of taking this vessel out.

LETTER A FAKE

So Says Capt. Craine of Str. Saxona.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 30.—It is asserted here that the letter alleged to have been written by Capt. Craine, of the steamer Saxonia, saying that he was sorry he broke away from the masters and pilots, and asking how he could make good, is a fake. Superintendent Joseph Ripley, of the ship canal, says Craine told him so when he passed through. Craine has about $30,000 tied up in the boat and could not afford to be idle.

THE PATHETIC SIDE.

Captain Cries Like Child on Leaving Steamer.

Chicago, May 30.—The parting of old-time masters from vessels they have commanded for many years has its pathetic side. Capt. Babbitt had been on the bridge of the steamer Samuel Mitchell ever since the ship came from the shipyard. The boat had become his floating home. He was given a final chance Saturday night to take his steamer out, but refused. He removed his belongings to the dock and Capt. C. C. Mason came to the steamer's bridge. Babbitt cried like a child. He watched the Mitchell as long as he could see her lights.

MUST LEAVE UNION

In Order to Sail Lake Carriers' Vessels.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 30.—William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carries' association last night gave out the following statement:

"The Masters' and Pilots' association having resorted to blacklisting, intimidating and heavy fines in an endeavor to prevent men from manning vessels, the executive committee have decided that to protect the men now at work, and to settle positively this question, no captain will be employed who retains his membership in the Masters' and Pilots' association."

FAILED TO STOP STEAMER.

Marshal Declines to Serve Warrant on Captain.

Detroit, Mich., May 30.—Efforts were made here and at Port Huron to stop the steamer Joliet, which, in spite of the Masters' and Pilots' strike, succeeded in clearing from Cleveland Friday for Fort William. Warrants were sworn out for one of the officers of the vessel, charging that he had jumped board bills at both Detroit and Port Huron. The proceedings at Detroit were not carried beyond the point of issuing the warrant. At Port Huron a tug was in readiness to chase the Joliet, when the Deputy United States marshal to whom the case had been referred by Sheriff Davidson, decided that no violation of federal law was shown in the Port Huron warrant. He therefore refused to act in the matter.

Foreigner Who Will Teach Us How to Live.

People who want to live some hundred years will be interested in a stranger of quaint appearance who set sail for the United States recently, says the London Mail. To live to the age of Methuselah is the modest ambition of Herr Joseph Salomonson, and being a person of unselfish notions, he is going to show the American people how the thing is to be done. He is going to New York on the invitation of Benedict Lust, of East Fifty-ninth street, who is offering him a post in his publishing house, but this benefactor of mankind has no need for wealth, and he is not at all anxious to accept business responsibilities. He understands that America is ripe for his teachings, and he is assured by friends who have been communicating with him that he will have a large number of disciples.

This enterprising German incurred the displeasure of his relations some five years ago, when he sold out his connection with a big trading firm in Java to devote his life to propagating the gospel of the "Natural Man." He came to England three months ago to establish a colony, but his quaint appearance did not commend itself to the conservative notions of the people among whom he came to live. Instead of hearing bands play the encouraging strains of "The Conquering Hero," his neighbors would strike up "Get Your Hair Cut." Herr Salomonson is a serious man, and did not appreciate this. His reception in the streets of London has convinced him that the English are a very rude people indeed. He hopes to get a more favorable hearing in the United States, but if his ideas do not strike root he will go back to Switzerland, where he has established a sanitarium, or return to his home in Java.

Herr Salomonson's figure is not one to be forgotten. He is somewhat undersized and spare, but remarkably active. He strikes one as being about 40 years of age, but he tells you that he is really 51. "My mode of life," he said to the writer, "is responsible for my youthful appearance. Since Sept. 1, 1901, not a drop of any kind of liquid has touched my lips. I do not even rinse my mouth out with water." "Salt," he declares, "is the beginning of all evil. It is ruinous to the body, damaging to the soul and destructive of the intellect. Water or any other form of liquid is a mere burden to the stomach and has no value at all. When we live a natural life I see no reason why we should not attain to 200 or 250 years. I believe in the ages mentioned in the Bible, and I believe we should live as long in these days if we lived on the lines intended for humanity. I used to eat my meat and drink my my whisky and soda and smoke six or seven cigars, but now I want them not. They would make me sick.

"Man needs nothing but what comes from mother earth. He wants nothing of the beast, of the bird, or the fish, and he should want nothing cooked by fire. All living power is destroyed by fire. I eat all I can raw; I steam the rest. You have all the liquid you want in the fruit, in the vegetables and in the air, if you live my way. Water is full of bacteria; there is none in the juice of fruit."

Before his new idea got a hold of Herr Salomonson he lived at the rate of $5000 a year. "Now," he says joyfully, "I can live a healthier life on $250. My diet varies, but the following may be taken as my general rule: For breakfast I have a raw turnip, cut into thin slices, with a little watercress and some fliberts and apples. At midday I have leeks and potatoes and some brussels sprouts steamed. My 'tea' is the same as my breakfast. The fact is," he continued, "I go back to the earth in every way I can. I sleep out on the earth and get its warmth, purity and magnetism. You can never get a man or woman to bed again after they have slept on the earth. Many hundreds of men and women are adopting this mode of life in Germany and throughout Switzerland, and before the end of the century much of the world will turn again to the natural life."

Herr Salomonson does not pose as a medical professor in any way. "If people do as I do they will need no doctors," he says. "There are hundreds of people throughout Europe who have given up doctors and followed my teachings, with much benefit to themselves." He is not enthusiastic with regard to the prospects of being able to establish colonies of grown-up persons to take up his ideas. His hopes are more in the direction of getting children to practice his methods, and if he gets the necessary support in the United States, he will apply himself diligently to this phase of the idea. "I would bring the children up in the most natural way," he says. "I would teach them music, art, science, and show them how to produce what food they require, so that they may see the joy of life."

Although he is a devout vegetarian, he is not particularly fascinated with vegetarians as a body. He does not even know George Bernard Shaw. "Vegetarians, as a rule, are socialists or anarchists," he insinuatingly remarked, "and I do not like politics. Ah, no! Politics cannot be in the program of the natural man." His dress in winter consists of a brown corduroy cassock, encircled at the waist by a girdle. His long, thick brown hair, unencumbered by a hat, hides his collarless neck, and a neat beard droops over the open part of his gown. His feet are encased in sandals, and at times he carries a staff reaching to his shoulders. He looks as if he had walked out of the Old Testament, and he has a beautiful complexion.

A BANNER YEAR

Seem Likely to Exceed Those of Any Preceding Year.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Exports of manufactures in the fiscal year which ends with next month seem likely to exceed those of any preceding year. Ten months' figures just presented by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics exceed those for the corresponding period of any preceding year. The fiscal year 1900 was the banner year in exports of manufactures, but the figures of ten months' exports of manufactures in the fiscal year 1904 exceed by $19,000,000 those for the corresponding months of the fiscal year 1900. The total value of manufactures exported in the ten months ending with April, 1904, was $371,712,301, against $352,671,206 in the same period of the fiscal year 1900, which, as already indicated, made the highest record of manufactures exported prior to the fiscal year 1904.

The fact that the present fiscal year has only two months' record to make and is $19,000,000 ahead of the highest figure for the corresponding period in any preceding year (1900) seems to justify the prediction that the exports of manufactures in 1904 will be greater than those of any earlier year. The total value of manufactures exported in the full fiscal year 1900 was $433,-851,756. Should the present excess of 1904 over 1900 continue during the remaining two months of the year it would bring the grand total of exports of manufactures up to $450,000,000.

Imports of manufactures' raw materials also make a very satisfactory showing, the grand total of "articles in a crude condition which enter into the various processes of domestic manufacture" being in the ten months ending with April, 1904, $267,334,221, against $275,641,687 in the ten months of last year, and $273,796,650 in the corresponding months of 1902.

Exports of manufactures have more than doubled since 1894, and imports of manufacturers' raw materials have considerably more than doubled since that time.

The following table shows the value of the great classes of articles imported and exported, respectively, in the ten months ending with April, 1904, compared with the same period of the fiscal year 1894:

IMPORTS BY GREAT CLASSES.

The table which follows shows the total value of manufactures exported and of raw materials for use in manufacturing imported in the ten months ending April 30 of each fiscal year from 1894 to 1904:

PLANS CIRCUS THRILLERS

Havana, Ill., May 30.—This city boasts of one of the strangest schools in the world. It is nothing more nor less than a training place for people who furnish the thrills in circuses. In this unique institution contortionists are kept in training and taught new tricks to make the public hold its breath. Daring bareback riders are put through their paces and taught to do hair-raising turns, and slack-wire and trapeze performers, as well as clowns and tumblers, are kept in practice.

And the strangest part of the whole thing is that the school is conducted by a woman. This woman is Mrs. Linda Jean Julian, a bareback rider and a woman who has been in the circus business for the past thirty-three years. She has ridden around circus rings in every country on the globe and has girdled the earth in her travels.

This school which is presided over by this quick-witted and business-like woman is unique of its kind. The average circus performer is improvident. He is all right when the sun shines, the birds sing and the sound of the calliope is in the land. He is well fed, housed and happy when the parades are winding through the streets of the cities and towns and the sound of the brass band is heard in the land; but when the cold blasts blow, when the snow impedes the progress of the glittering wagons and the animals are in winter quarters, then the poor circus man is chilly, cold, comfortless and hungry.

It is this time of the year that he turns a longing eye in the direction of the Julian winter circus in Havana, and if he is able to get transportation he comes and spends the winter. Mrs. Julian, who, by the way, is a widow, runs a big boarding house. Here, about the long table in her dining room, the contortionists, tumblers, bareback riders, clowns and trapeze performers gather at meal times to discuss what they have planned for the future, talk over their new turns and tell tales of circus life.

Near the center of the town Mrs. Julian has what is called the winter circus. It is a big red barn-like structure. The inside of this corrugated iron building presents a sight to gladden the heart of the average boy and stir the blood of the jaded amusement lover. There in the middle of the place is the padded circus ring. Above are all sorts of trapeze bars, slack wires, and all the paraphernalia used in the most approved circuses.

To one side there is a fine, comfortable stable in which live the seven handsome horses belonging to Mrs. Julian. Three nights of each week during the winter months this place is filled with people from the town, traveling men and visitors, who go to look on while the circus people try their new tricks. The practice thus given them before the public keeps them in good shape, and Mrs. Julian is enabled to pay expenses and keep her big family from want and the cold.

The big family disbands when spring comes. The different teams go to take up their summer work. This year some went away with Ringling Bros.' show, some with Barnum, others with the Sells-Forepaugh, some with the Gollmar Bros.' circus and still others with the Robinson and the Campbell aggregations. Next fall when the circus days are over many of them will flock back to Havana to find a comfortable home.

IN NEED OF REPAIR

Miller Trunk Road Must Have Some Improvement.

Necessary to Preserve Portions From Being Totally Lost.

One of the county roads that is expected to come in for considerable improvement this coming season is the Miller trunk road. Just how much money will be available for expenditure upon it is not yet known, for the reason that the county commissioners have not made the usual district road appropriations out of the regular road fund. This, however, will probably be done at the meeting to be held the first week in June. The appropriations would have been made at the last meeting but for the absence of Commissioner Kauppi, who was in San Francisco.

The Miller trunk road is in two commissioner districts, that of Mr. Kauppi and Mr. McInnis, and the repair work and expenditure will be divided between the commissioners in proportion to the extent of road each has fixed up.

Last fall Commissioner E. M. Patterson went out over the Miller trunk road for the express purpose of forming an estimate of the work that should be done to save the old corduroy from rotting out. To save the timber he says it should be covered with sand and gravel, and makes the following estimates of the amount of road to be covered coming south from the St. Louis river bridge:

Two miles south of the bridge, 80 rods good gravel at south end; three miles south of bridge, 10 rods good gravel at south end; four miles south of bridge, 30 rods good gravel at north end; five miles south of bridge, 15 rods gravel at north end; seven miles south of bridge, 10 rods gravel at north end; nine miles south of bridge, 25 rods of new corduroy, there being no gravel in sight, and some of road is dangerous; ten miles south of bridge, 80 rods of sand and gravel at both ends.

This will make a total of 350 rods of corduroy that should be covered this year, according to Mr. Patterson's opinion, to save replacing the old timber with new, which will have to be done unless the old corduroy is taken care of right away.

Commissioner Patterson has given his estimates to the board, but the matter has been held up for the present until the road appropriations are made.

Reports from many of the county road districts indicate that the greatest harm is done to the roads, especially the new roads, by the tote teams belonging to the logging companies during wet weather in the fall and spring.

Some of the cross roads are at such times made practically impassable, and are of no use again until money is appropriated to put them in condition.

The tote wagons are loaded down with all the provisions and supplies they will carry, and sometimes as many as four or six horses are necessary to pull the loads. This heavy weight in wet weather causes deep ruts to be cut into the roadbed that soon ruins it for teaming purposes.

The United States government is this year making a special effort to gain statistics relative to county road building throughout the country, and to gather from various localities the best methods of making roads and the average expense. The work is being conducted through the department of agriculture and inquiries are being sent out to all the board of county supervisors or board of county commissioners in practically all the states, calling their attention to road building, and asking for figures as to cost.

The St. Louis board of county commissioners has received such a communication, which has been placed on file. The inquiry calls for the average cost per mile of building road in this county, etc. No figures have ever been made by the commissioners as to the average cost of road building here; in fact none of them claims to have any idea how the average could be arrived at. There are so many things to take into consideration in road building, where the nature of the soil is so diversified as in Northern Minnesota, that this condition alone would prevent any reliable estimates.

In some localities the nature of the soil is such that roads can be constructed rapidly. In other localities they are swamps, some of which are so treacherous as to almost preclude the idea of a road across them even after thousands of yards of dirt and other material has been used for filling.

Then there are other localities where a large amount of rock formation makes road making expensive.

There is still another side to the problem of road building, and that is the labor performed. It has been the experience of the commissioners that some of the road foremen can accomplish more road work for the amount of money they have available than others can do, and this, in a year, means a great deal of difference to the inroads made in the road funds.

Stack & Co. are now in their new store, 107 West Superior street.

STOCK YARDS LOVE STORY

Chicago, May 30.—Out of Cologne avenue, at the Union Stock yards, comes a romance and a mystery. The love story centers around Henry Elbert Wright, eldest son of an English duke, who is in direct line for succession to his father's millions and title. For three months he has lived in Engine House No. 53, in the Union Stock yards. A few days ago he disappeared.

Whether he has returned to his native land in answer to one of the many cablegrams he sent to his relatives during the weeks he spent among the firemen, or is lying ill in some hospital as the result of an injury, the firemen of the Stock Yards and Forty-seventh and Halsted street engine houses are unable to say. Lieut. Prim, of the Halsted street police station, has notified his officers to make inquiries concerning the missing nobleman.

The romance in the life of the English peer is another story. After he had been associated with the firemen in the packing town for some weeks, he one day related to Harry McGovern and James Barnard, members of Engine Company No. 53, the story of his life. He declared that, while he was heir to a dukedom and large estates in England, he would not reveal his prospective title because the fact might cause his relatives distress. In London he attended performances some years ago of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show. He became acquainted with all the members of the company, and friendly with Annie Oakley, the expert rifle shot, and Susy Emeline, one of the most successful broncho breakers in the history of the plains.

Young Wright said he fell in love with Susy Emeline, and proposed marriage to her. She accepted him, he said, but declared that the wedding must take place on her native soil. Wright said that when his family discovered that he was enamored of a show woman there was a furious scene. His father ordered him from home, and his mother and sisters refused to speak to him. He had a small independent income, and with this money he accompanied Susy Emeline to America.

When they reached New York, nearly a year ago, the young nobleman asked a fulfillment of the promise made across the waters, that the feminine "broncho buster" wed him. But Susy Emeline wanted to know a few things.

She cross-examined him, and asked his some pointed questions. While he declared that he answered her truthfully, that when he came into possession of his estate and title he would be a millionaire and she would be a duchess, she persisted in her "show me" tactics until the interview wound up in a stormy quarrel, and Susy packed her saddles in a box, put her ponies in a car, and started for her home at North Platte, Neb. Wright, crushed in spirit and almost destitute of money, soon after started for the West. The nobleman blushed as he confessed that the latter part of his trip from Ohio was made in a stock car.

The
of To-day

Until a few years ago people didn't think very much about soda crackers—housewives bought them occasionally, but the position of the soda cracker in the family larder was a very humble one indeed.

What was the reason?

There were two: first the soda crackers were not of the best possible quality; and second, the method of selling them in bulk from barrels or boxes resulting in loss of flavor, and exposure to damp, dust and odors.

Then the National Biscuit Company came upon the field. This company saw the possibilities of the soda cracker—saw that it possessed many of the qualifications of an ideal article of food—and started in to perfect it.

First they improved the quality of the cracker itself—used only the finest materials and gave a care to the baking hithertofore unknown.

Next they adopted a new and better way of packing these crackers—they packed them fresh from the oven in air tight, damp proof packages so that they reached the consumer with their delicate flavor fully retained, pure, clean, and crisp.

Then these crackers were named Uneeda Biscuit and sold at the remarkably low price of 5c. a package.

Their success was instantaneous, unprecedented.

They are sold in every city, village and hamlet in the country.
They are bought in place of the old fashioned crackers, and they are bought by people who never bought the old fashioned crackers.
But perhaps the best proof of the place that they hold in the hearts of the people, is found in the fact that in five years America has eaten over 300,000,000 packages of

SEVEN PIERS DESTROYED

Disastrous Blaze In Delaware & Lackawanna Property.

New York, May 30.—Seven freight and coal piers of the Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad in Jersey City, were destroyed by a fire that started about five o'clock yesterday afternoon in pier 12, on which a lot of barrels of oil were stored. The flames spread rapidly. Pier 12 was 800 feet long and was soon ablaze its entire length and the firemen who were trying to fight the fire from the shore were able to accomplish but little. The flames swept across to Pier 11 and beyond being finally checked at Pier 15, which is a new coal trestle, steel framed and iron clad. Here the firemen and fireboats made a desperate stand and stayed the advance of the fire on the burning piers. Although there was but little wind, sparks fell all along the water front for the better part of a mile, endangering the Lackawanna depot and even the Hamburg-American and Bremen line piers, which the firemen were kept busy playing streams of water upon the buildings and over the ships at their docks. The building of the Hoboken Coke company, five blocks from the main fire was set ablaze by the burning brands, but the firemen responded quickly and the building was only slightly damaged.

A number of canal boats and several tugs were burned, the loss of small boats being variously estimated at from 30 to 200.

The number of freight cars burned is not known, but on this class of rolling stock and on coal cars the loss will be heavy.

During the fire the Lackawanna moved its passenger coaches from its yards out to the meadows and one train of a dozen box cars was hauled out of a burning pier and saved.

Piers 11 and 12 were full of general merchandise, piers 7, 8, 9 and 10 were used for coal and pier 6 was a grain loading pier.

PHISTER'S NEMESIS

Has Found Three Other Wives and More Traced.

New York, May 30.—Miss Minnie Behler, or Mrs. Charles J. Phister, No. 3, or Mrs. Charles J. Miller No. 2, the third wife of Charles J. Phister, has made a detective bureau of herself and single-handed will track her husband until she gets together all the women duped. So far wives Nos. 7, 2, 3 and 4 have been found. Traces of a few others have been obtained, and the man may be shown to be a nine-time bigamist.

At New Brighton on Saturday last Mrs. Phister No. 3 joining hands with Mmes. Phister one and two, confronted the author of all their martial woes in the police court. They were all dressed in black and in their hearts was a disere to wreak vengeance on the man who had not only trifled with their affections, but who had held them up to the pity of their friends. The cohorts of Mmes. Phister, then a trio, has now been augmented by a fourth.

Mrs. Phister No. 1 was Miss Minnie Umland, of No. 83½ Johnson street, Newark; Mrs. Phister No. 2 was Miss Bessie B. Wandall, of South Seventh avenue, Mount Vernor; Mrs. Phister No. 3 lives at Port Richmond, S. I.; Mrs Phister No. 4 hails from Yonkers. Where the other wives are is a matter which No. 3 will try to unearth for the benefit of all.

In the Staten Island court the magistrate, after looking at the women who confronted the man whose towering courage given in another cause might have made him one of the moving figures of his time, said that he "could see his finish." There was the spirit of "never let up" plainly written in the faces of the women. And they said as much to the magistrate. Phister was held for the grand jury in $3000 bail. He is a man of some wealth.

"You are not a handsome man," said the magistrate, and the man smiled. "But you are a courageous one," added the dispenser of justice. Phister smiled again. His eyes were soft and brilliant, and he has what women say is a winning way. He talks softly to his courting, and pleads in low, soothing tones. Every time he smiled and cast his amorous glances the women looked daggers.

Miss Behler is happy to be the spokeswoman for all the wives. She expects to find others.

"I wish there was a law permitting abused wives to horsewhip their husbands," she said today. "If each and every wife of Charles J. Phister, who married me under the name of Miller, his cousin, were armed with a horsewhip and then his back were bared to each of us in succession I think we might keep him from doing wrong in the future. He is worse than any sailor with a wife in every port."

"What sort of a man is he?" asked the reporter.

"He has treated me in the most brutal fashion in the world," was the reply. "My mother had to buy clothes for me while we were married. He owned a butcher shop in Linoleum where we lived and I had to get up early in the morning to sweep the place out. Then I waited on customers. I chopped the meat and did all the work that a man usually does in a butcher shop. I didn't have time to sew or do things that a tidy woman must to have a home of her own.

"Then he left me. Yes, abandoned and deserted me and another poor girl was made to suffer. He us'd to brag about his being a lady killer. He would sit by the hour and tell me how he had broken the heart of this woman and that. He mentioned the names of those who, as I now know, are his wives. But I didn't think that he had married them. He said they were his sweethearts at one time and that he had been engaged to them.

"He married his first wife on June 9, 1889. Her first name is Minnie. Twelve years later on the very day he married me, and my name is Minnie, too. Is there anything in that name that is so attractive? He said he could win any woman who ever lived. He was as boastful a bragger about this as any man that ever lived.

"You don't wonder that I am wrought up about this, do you? I have worked very hard to bring this man to justice and I am going to work a great deal harder before I finish with him. Wait until he sees all the Mrs. Phisters staring him out of countenance and asking a stern judge to pile on the sentences.

"How did I discover his hiding place? I got suspicious about certain things he said when he piled on the agony of his woman killing. I got tired of that and he let something slip that aroused me. Then he disappeared and I heard recently that he was back again in Staten Island. I went over to a friend of mine in Plainfield and he told me to go to Mount Vernon, where I would probably learn a lot about him. I did, and what I found out was enough to satisfy a dozen wives. Then we got the officers to help us and when he was arrested he was found in the room of a friend, shivering and shaking with fear.

"I didn't know he was worth so much money. It is said that he has a fortune of $30,000 [illegible] invested in property in Staten Island and Brooklyn. His brother, I am told, is a college professor, and his sister writes school books. And to think of it! He goes around the country just marrying women. What sort of a craze is that, anyway? Do you know? I don't.

According to Miss Behler, Phister worked many years ago in a butcher shop at 571 Park avenue, where he met the daughter of one of the men who worked with him. He was very constant in his attentions to this girl and Miss Behler has her name on her list, thinking that she too might have fallen a victim to the marrying proclivities of Phister.

BAD FIRE IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, May 30.—Fire caused by crossed electric wires did about $500,000 damage yesterday. The Louis H. Rice saddlery factory, Common and Magazine streets, the Simonds Manufacturing company, and the Moig, Brady & Lincoln woodenware establishments, were destroyed. The fire was in the heart of the wholesale district, and was well fought, being stopped short of two oil companies and several big drug establishments. The insurance is estimated at $350,000.

TO EXTEND ROAD

Weyerhaeusers May Build To Cloquet From Island Lake.

It Would Mean Practical Abandonment Of the River For Driving.

Rumor has it that the Weyerhaueser interests are contemplating extending their logging road, which now terminates at Island Lake, on the Cloquet river, to Cloquet, in fact it is reported from Cloquet that the Weyerhauser company is already collecting material for the road, with a view of starting the construction work early the coming year.

The Weyerhaueser logging road as it is commonly called is properly known as the Duluth & Northeastern Minnesota road and runs about 30 miles in a northeasterly direction from Island Lake to Hornby, the junction point with the Duluth & Iron Range road. The logging road originally tapped considerable of the Weyerhaueser timber that was hauled to Island Lake and put in the Cloquet river to be floated down to the company's mill at Cloquet, a distance by river of about 40 miles.

The proposed extension is to be 30 miles which is the shortest distance between Island Lake and Cloquet.

If the logging road is extended as proposed, it practically means the abandonment, in the future, of the Cloquet and St. Louis rivers as the means of conveyance of the logs in the Cloquet river district to the mills at Cloquet.

Millions and millions of feet of logs have already gone down the Cloquet river in past years and it is considered a safe estimate that nearly five per cent of the logs have been lost either in being stranded and left during particularly high watr or have sunk to the bottom and become imbedded in the mud.

The uncertainties as to the amount of rainfal during the driving seasons of the year have caused the larger logging operators to depend less and less on the river as a means of transportation, and to depend more and more on the railroads, because they are a sure and quicker way of getting the logs to the mill being attended by no loss whatever.

The first cost of the railroads is always considerable, but after the roads are put in, the expense is minimized and the lumbermen can tell exactly every year just how much of their cut they will be able to get to the mill.

Weather uncertainties are sometimes rsponsible for the shutting down of the large sawing plants where, if the logs could be shipped by railroad, the supply could be kept steady and no time would be lost.

If the extension is true it would seem that the Weyerhaueser interests are getting in line with the policy of the other big lumber companies in abandoning river driving for increased logging railway facilities.

At the present time the Brooks-Scanlon company is making every effort to extend its logging lines into the timber regions formerly dependent on Cloquet river driving to get the logs to its mill and there is now pending in district court of this city contested condemnation proceedings for a right of way for one of the logging railway tracks.

THE SSS BEST TONIC

It increases the appetite, tones up the stomach, invigorates and strengthens the system, and furnishes purer and better blood for the upbuilding of the run-down constitution. You will find no tonic to act so promptly and beneficially where the health has given way, the strength over-taxed by hard work and close confinement. Those living in the low, marshy sections of the country, exposed to miasmatic poisons and breathing the impure air arising from stagnant pools and swamps, till their systems are filled with malaria and their health undermined, will find S. S. S. a most excellent tonic, and its timely use has many times prevented the serious complications that so often result from malaria.

Good blood, good appetite and good digestion are the foundation stones of good health. S. S. S. supplies all these, containing as it does ingredients for the purification of the blood and also well-known tonic properties, making it the ideal remedy in cases where the blood has deteriorated, the stomach disordered and appetite has failed.

S. S. S. being a purely vegetable compound, leaves no bad after-effects, like the strong potash and mineral remedies, which are bad on the stomach and nerves. A course of S. S. S. now will fortify the system, and the impurities that have accumulated through the long winter months are more readily and promptly thrown off, and the warm weather finds you in good physical condition, instead of weak, run-down, tired and debilitated, with no appetite or energy, as is apt to be the case where the system is neglected and nature left to take care of herself. If you need a tonic and appetizer, you will find S. S. S. the best. Medical advice without charge to all who write us about their case.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1903.

Gentlemen: S. S. S. is a good medicine. I keep it in the house all the while. It is an excellent tonic to give strength to the system and tone to all the organs. It gives appetite and energy and makes one feel better in every way. I have found it also an excellent blood purifier. For months I was troubled with an itching skin eruption on the face, and I tried specialists and many remedies to get a cure, but S. S. S. is the only medicine that seemed to relieve. I am now comparatively free of this eruption. I think a great deal of your medicine, believing it to be the best blood purifier and tonic known to the world to-day.

MRS. FRANK HORNER.

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I have always been averse to giving a testimonial, and only do so now because of a desire to have others benefited by the use of your most excellent medicine. Before using S. S. S. this spring I very much felt the need of a tonic; was troubled with Dyspepsia and Constipation, and my blood was in bad condition. The use of your specific has driven away all indications of Dyspepsia, regulated my bowels, enriched my blood, and caused me to gain 20 pounds in weight, so that I feel in better physical condition than I have in years. In my judgment there is no better tonic and blood purifier on the market than your preparation, and I unhesitatingly recommend it as such.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

DOCTORS TURN LEPER LOOSE

Walking Chicago Streets Without Knowing His Terrible Ailment.

Chicago, May 30.—A leper is loose in Chicago. He is walking about the streets unaware of the terrible plague with which he is afflicted. His condition is well known to many members of the Chicago Medical society, who have seen and examined the man.

The sufferer is 27 years old, and came to Chicago from Nebraska. He rode in trains with persons as ignorant as himself of his ailment. His case had puzzled a physician in his home state, who sent the patient to Dr. Oliver S. Ormsby, who immediately recognized his disease as a well-developed case of leprosy.

Covered with brownish nodule, the leper stood before the Chicago Medical society at the rooms in the Schiller building. A discourse on the case was delivered by Dr. Ormsby.

The leper is being kept unaware of his complaint, and the Greek and Latin terms used by Dr. Ormsby in describing it last night, while plain to the assembled physicians, gave the Norwegian-American no clew to his disease.

The man's skin is covered with slight nodules, brownish in color, but painless. The only symptoms of sickness the man endures are chills and fever. According to Dr. Ormsby, the man contracted the disease from his father, who undoubtedly died of leprosy, although the attending physician called it consumption.

"Contagious leprosy has retired before medical science," said Dr. Ormsby, after his patient had been hurried away. "Sanitary and medical advance have robbed it of the terrors it contained in Bible times. The modern cases are much milder, mildly contagious, but a person need not fear traveling with or touching a leper, as in the case of a consumptive.

"According to government statistics there are nearly 300 lepers in this country, mostly in Louisiana and California. Minnesota has some, while there are many in Hawaii, Porto Rico and Cuba.

"Modern leprosy seldom kills. The lepers usually die of some other disease contracted. Lepers are no longer hopeless, they can be cured, and to cure them it is perfectly safe to take them into large communities for treatment, although the state should regulate their care."

POLITICAL STATE

Of Affairs, as Related to the Democratic Nominee.

The Situation Resembles Somewhat That of Eight Years Ago.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The political situation, so far as the Democratic nominee for the presidency is concerned, resembles in many respects the state of affairs which existed eight years ago. Then it appeared that "Silver Dick" Bland, of Missouri, had the lead. It was a silver convention from the start and Bland, who had been the champion of the white metal in congress for a quarter of a century, was the "logical" candidate. Then, as now, there were a host of candidates in the field. And yet up to the moment that William J. Bryan made that "cross of gold" speech almost any man present would have been willing to wager that the Missourian would certainly be nominated. But upon the first ballot Mr. Bland had less than one-half the number necessary for a choice. The ballot resulted as follows: Bland, 352; Bryan, 119; Patterson, (Pa.), 95; Boies, (Iowa), 85; Blackburn, (Ky.), 83; McLean, (Ohio), 54; Mathews, (Ind.), 37; Tillman, (S. C.), 17 Pennoyer, (Oregon), 8; Teller, (Col.), 8; Stevenson, (Ill.), 7; Russell, (Mass.), Hill, (N. Y.), 1; Campbell, (Ohio), 1; not voting, 178. Five ballots were required to secure a nomination. On the final ballot Mr. Bryan received 500 votes, but just as soon as the result was announced enough others were transferred to his column to give him more than the 512 necessary.

As matters stand today no man is likely to have the necessary 666 votes to secure the nomination at the St. Louis convention. Perhaps there will not be fourteen candidates, but the number will not fall greatly below that total. Judge Parker, who four weeks ago was regarded as almost certain to have at least a majority of the delegates on the first ballot, will probably fail to secure more than 400. Some of the Southern men who have been here during the past few days, express great disappointment over the failure of their respective states to follow the lead of New York and instruct for the New York jurist. The political statisticians who put in a great deal of time upon pre-convention figures, are predicting that the first ballot will result in 400 votes for Parker, 250 for Hearst, 40 or 50 for Olney, as many more for Gorman and the remainder scattering among Miers, of Indiana; Harmon, of Ohio, and half a dozen lesser lights.

No one expects that the final result will be reached on the first day of the balloting. And it is conceded by the warmest friends that Mr. Parker has that he must concentrate his strength at an early stage if is to be successful.

In the event of a long drawn out convention there are likely to be a number of "dark horses" brought into the race. The most prominent of these is Judge George Gray, of Delaware, whose record is of the cleanest character. He has proved himself to be a statesman, a diplomat and a jurist of the highest order. As a senator, a member of the commission which negotiated the treaty with Spain and as an arbiter between the coal operators and their employes, Judge Gray won the confidence of his countrymen. But, unfortunately, for his presidential ambition, if he really has any, there is a bar sinister upon his political escutcheon. He voted against Bryan in 1896 and, in consequence, he is not looked upon as a "regular."

Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, will trot out George B. McClellan, mayor of New York city, upon the first oportunity whenever he is convinced that Judge Parker cannot win. It is known that McClellan's big majority last November has attracted to him a very wide following. He is the second choice of several hundred delegates already elected. He must be reckoned as one of the dangerous candidates now under cover, but against him will be brought the charge that he approved the New York city gas bill, which the governor subsequently vetoed, and which would doubtless serve to drive away a great many votes in greater New York, if he should by any chance be nominated.

There are many more dark horses being groomed for the race and the Southern states can supply a dozen men of presidential size, but the fear of sectionalism will keep them back, and it may be that after all some other Bryan will arise and in a Niagara of eloquence name the winner from a list not considered up to this time.

The tariff is to be featured in the political discussions between the two great parties in the impending battle of the ballots, according to Republican and Democratic leaders. The Democrats will also, it is asserted, make a general assault on the Republican administration of the postoffice and interior departments, demanding further investigation and possibly of other bureaus where it is alleged frauds have been perpetrated and not yet fully brought home to the supposed officials. This fever for investigation may find a lodging place in the platform of the Democrats to be adopted at St. Louis in July, but as matters political are now shaping themselves tariff revision will be the paramount issue. The Republicans are arranging to meet the attack of the Democrats on the tariff question and will doubtless be able to flood the country with campaign material bearing upon this most vital question. But the Republicans will not permit the tariff to be the only issue. They will show the attitude of President Roosevelt on labor questions, the Panama canal and Cuban reciprocity which was brought about during the last session of congress. Should the Democrats tackle the proposition to cause further investigation of affairs in the various executive departments it is asserted that there is ample oratorical ammunition available in the Republican ranks to controvert all assertions the opposition may bring forward.

The Republican congressional committee has decided to spring on the country a number of speeches made by leaders of their party in congress during the session just closed. The able speech of Gen. Charles E. Grosvenor of Ohio, relating chiefly to an exposition of the true attitude of President Roosevelt on labor questions will be foremost among the number. This speech attracted considerable attention at the time of its delivery and is voluminous and exhaustive. This speech alone consists of 88 printed pages and there is still another speech of Gen. Grosvenor's upon tariff and general political affairs which will be used extensively by the Republican committee. Representative John Dalzell, of Pittsburg, made a speech upon reciprocity and tariff matters generally which will also be used. An exhaustive speech by Congressman Cousins of Iowa, on the tariff and probable issues of the campaign is also scheduled for extensive circulation. Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, delivered a speech in the senate which has also attracted the attention of campaign managers and as it covers tariff matters it will be given large vogue in the farming and manufacturing centers of the country. Representative Edward L. Hamilton, of Michigan, and J. Adam Bede, of Duluth, each made speeches during the recent session which are to be used by the Republican committee.

On the part of the Democrats, Bourke Cochran's speech attacking the tariff policy of the Republicans will be used, as will be several of the speeches of the minority leader, John Sharp Williams, Congressmen Lind and Champ Clark and Senators Bailey and Gorman. The presses of the government printing office are working night and day, and it is expected that they will be doing double "stunts" until the tides of November bring to a close what promises to be one of the most exciting campaigns in many years.

LATEST FADS AND FANCIES FOR WOMEN

HAND CARVED JAPENESE SEAL

FANCY DRESS BALLS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS REINSTATED FAD

NEW LINEN COLLARS ARE DAINTILY EMBROIDERED

BY MISS MANHATTAN.

New York, May —. When the fashion heralds across the sea proclaimed the Directory style the thing nearly every woman gave a little gasp of delight as visions of rich brocaded silks, heavy satins, lace frills and jewelled buckles swept before her eyes. It is by all odds the most becoming dress that a tall, slender woman can wear, and the quaint little jackets, wide cuffs and jaunty hats are such a decided contrast to what has been seen for the past seasons that there was all the more reason for a change. Nobody thought, however, of one phase of the revival until the prettiest and one of the best dressed women in England gave the finishing touch to her Directory costume by carrying a jewelled staff.

In the eighteenth century, when the Directory held sway in France, the gayest and prettiest women of the capital never thought of taking a single step without the aid of a long fancy stick, which they carried more for effect than for any actual support it gave. Since that time there have been numerous efforts to make the fashion a popular one and within the last five years two noted feminine members of the White House families have favored the Directory staff with up-to-date costumes. It is rather a pretty idea, too, to have the revival owe its being to members of the first family in the land. In the chronicles of fashions five years ago makes any fad belong to ancient history, and to come down to present times and facts I need only say that the previously mentioned lady of London has found a staff a fitting accompaniment to any and all of her present costumes, and the charm of her appearance has impressed itself so deeply on those who have beheld her that they, too, have joined the Directory movement.

Mrs. Chauncey—for she it is who lends the fashions in England by right of her beauty, exquisite taste and friendship with the reigning house—does not insist upon a Directory tout en semble. She carries a stick with any of her modern costumes, but so "delightful" is she in her daintiness and grace that those who see her are of the opinion that scarcely any weapon is more effective in feminine hands than a staff. Ordinarily her staff is of plain polished ebony with a round gold head handsomely chased. It is somewhat shorter than the old-fashioned kind and looks like any slightly enlarged cane of a decade or two ago.

Modern art and fancy have discovered rare opportunities in this feminine fad and "vanity cases" are being cleverly concealed in the filigree tops of these staffs. The same instinct that led Du Barry to smuggle her powder puff and dab her nose with it as she was driven to the guillotine reigns in the feminine breast of the twentieth century woman, and if she doesn't carry a little jewelled box on her chatelaine, or a purse in which may be hidden a powder puff, then she takes refuge in this latest fad of hers, the Directory staff, and makes it serve more than one purpose. If the stick is plain and finished at the top with a round golden knob, then it is a simple matter to have it designed so that the top will lift up to disclose a lining of fine French plate mirror and a tiny receptacle, in which reposes an exquisite swansdown puff with a fancy handle.

Ebony, rosewood and teakwood are favored for the stick part, for they are strong woods, take an excellent polish and set off the silver or gold trimmings better than a lighter material. Gun-metal is effective for ferrule and knob, but with gold or silver the possibilities in the way of ornamentation are almost limitless. Cabochon stones are set in the rim and incrusted in the top; there is fine hand carving on the metal and in the most expensive staffs glittering gems form no small part of the decoration. Of course, it strikes the average mind that all this is useless extravagance, but isn't that exactly what feminine fads are supposed to be?—new ways for the fair sex to spend their money and get as much enjoyment and diversion as possible until another fad comes along.

On account of the picturesque charm of staff carrying the fad is particularly suitable for weddings, a fact that every woman is quick to see and appreciate. We may expect to hear of many spring and summer ceremonies of this kind in which the Directory insignia cuts no small figure. It will appear as a plain long cane, on which will be tied a huge bunch of flowers with the usual streamers of ribbon. Some of these staffs are made expressly for this purpose, and as they are fashioned for effect, the material is far from expensive, so that it is possible for the moderately well off young bride-elect to choose these accessories and have the flowers all the rarer and more beautiful in inverse ratio. If, however, genuine gold-headed sticks or jewelled ones are selected, then they are presented to the bridesmaids as a souvenir of the occasion.

The shepherd's crook comes to the fore again on account of its near relation to the Directory staff. Only at weddings and for fancy dress affairs is this variety of walking stick considered appropriate, but here again am I glad to mention another revival, and that is in shepherdess styles—hats, gowns, etc. Hats built on lines known as shepherdess and immortalized by many a famous artist are being copied with great precision and exactness to details and are already crowning fashionably coifed heads. This is all apropos, of course, but I am discussing mainly the fad for carrying staffs, and the subject cannot be dismissed without a few words about the grace required and the grace displayed in the handling of a long stick. Many a woman has longed to try her hand at it after watching La Tosca wield her staff and adjust her pretty shoulder scarf, but it isn't quite so simple to manage as it seems. Primarily one must take great care to have the staff exactly the right length, otherwise one cannot help appearing awkward. The hand should rest on the knob or grasp it just below in a very delicate though firm manner, and the stick should be lifted and swayed gently as one walks. By no means should it clump and thump. Never at any moment should the staff appear superfluous, and herein lies the secret of making the fad successful as well as charming. Just so soon as a woman makes it look as though she were struggling with an unwieldy object with a do-or-die air she becomes ridiculous instead of attractive, and she would better find some other means of keeping her hands employed.

Staff carrying is one more instance of the adaptability of feminine fads and fancies to the tall, slender woman. One of this type looks wonderfully charming and picturesque standing with arm extended and hand resting on the tip of a slender ebony-and-gold support. In repose the lower end of the staff should be placed nearer the body and the top should be allowed to fall outward gracefully, thereby forming an angle with the perpendicular position of the figure. There are many little wrinkles to learn in the management of this weapon, all of which tend to increase the charm of lovely woman.

NEW LEATHER BELTS, SILVER GILT MONOGRAM BUCKLE

The largest department store in the Kingdom of Denmark carries a full stock of American shoes (except patent leathers) and an especially good stock of women's and children's "storm rubbers." The climate is moist. For nine months in the year the sidewalks are wet with rain or snow practically all the time, but the wearing of rubbers, strange to say, is a comparatively recent custom. There is a promising future for American-made rubbers in that market.

Perfumes and Toilet Notes.

In the spring of the year nostrils, as well as palates, long for something refreshing, and as green salads appeal to the epicure, so does a dainty and clean perfume attract an equally dainty woman. Violet and heavy scents are well enough for the winter months, but when the air begins to feel close there is nothing quite so delightful as an odor of lavender to clear away undesirable stuffiness. At this season of the year many women make dozens of sachets filled with lavender and stow them away among their lingerie and other belongings, so that when an article is taken out it wafts a delicate perfume that is positively refreshing and stimulating on warm days. Too much lavender is a dangerous thing—dangerous in the fact that it becomes obtrusive and finally sickening; but it is possible to have the perfume very delicate if the right proportions are used, and there is a toilet water that might be termed the dew of heaven, so dainty and delicious is it.

The first gray hair a woman discovers in her own head brings a positive shudder for the future, and she conjures up visions of whitened locks prematurely turned. Some women lose the coloring matter in the hair earlier than others, and without any apparently good reason there will appear stray hairs that are perfectly white. Now, no woman wants these to be discovered by her devoted friends, and so the woman of today counts among her toilet articles a little cake of substance which is of the nature of dye, but yet could not consistently be classed along with the bottled concoctions. The quality that recommends this cosmetic to the careful woman is that it is said to be perfectly harmless, and as it can be brushed off very easily there is no reason to disbelieve what is said of it. It suggests silver polish in the way it is put up and used, for the cake is solid, and is to be moistened slightly with a brush, then rubbed on the white hairs. It comes in the usual shades—light, two shades of brown, and black—but if one's hair happens to be none of these it is possible to get just the right tint by mixing two colors as one would water-color paints. The cosmetic is not greasy and does not give any great luster to the hair, its aim being to impart a natural tint to hairs that have lost their original coloring.

Embroidered Linen Collars.

Did anything ever equal the cleverness with which the feminine mind conceives ways and means of improving masculine fashions? The question, by the way, really needs no answer, for all the world acknowledges the superiority of the fair sex in this particular realm. What woman has done now is to take the severely stiff turnover collar that men have been wearing for sometime and by introducing a little embroidery on it to impart a dainty touch that marks it at once as something to surround fair throats. There was always a very mannish appearance to the stiff, plain linen collars, no matter what sort of a tie was worn with them, but the embroidery takes away none of the trimness of this style of neckwear without in the least making it come under the head of the fluffy belongings of dress. In shape these new collars are exactly like those that have been in the shops for several seasons. They are made of the finest of linen and are not so thick as to be perfectly unwieldly. So far only French collars of this kind can be bought, but in a little while we may expect to see domestic factories turning them out by the carload.

Either round or square corners may be chosen, and the embroidered design, which is very dainty and done entirely in white, runs entirely round the collar in a flower spray or is a series of conventional medallions. One of the prettiest shows lilies-of-the valley in leaves and flowers making a border on the collar and running up the front, where the design is somewhat more elaborate than it is elsewhere. Another very charming model has openwork discs through which the tie is seen. Large bows of soft silk are the correct thing to wear with these collars, and, in fact, they are the only ties that women seem to fancy at the present moment. The ends of the ties are cut in points. A few four-in-hands are seen in plain colors or plaids, and when these are worn the knot, instead of being tied very tight in accordance with the previous fashion, is fastened very loosely, so that a jaunty air is given to the neck arrangement.

The New Lucky Stone

Always a lucky gem, the sapphire is considered the chosen stone to wear this year if one wants to have the best that the gods can offer. The style of the stone does not count—it may be a cabochon, a beautifully cut stone, or a star sapphire—but whatever it is it should be worn constantly, or luck will not come. Set in a ring, it is by far the most convenient way to follow the decree of fashion; but there is such a vogue for long chains that many women are choosing them studded with sapphires. These chains are no longer worn in the simple fashion that they seem to have been designed for, but the woman of the day loops one across her bodice; she crosses and recrosses it over the decollete corsage, or she winds it several times around her throat with a long pendant piece In this way the stones are brought closer together, and the effect is a massing of the blue.

Blue may be for luck, but fox brown is the fashionable color at the moment. It was first introduced in Paris, and between the time it made its bow and its acceptance over here very few days have been allowed to pass. It is an extremely trying shade, and for that very reason will not become common, and at present it can be had only in the most expensive fabrics. The tone is accurately described by its name, for it is that golden, clear brown that distinguishes undyed fox fur. Comparatively speaking, the shade is a light one and is wonderfully beautiful in the soft shaded voiles and aeolians.

Some dressmakers have an idea that these shaded materials show best when made up perfectly plain, but the French are cleverer in their handling, and they never think of leaving the skirt without tucks or gathers in some suitable arrangement. In one of the choruses of the latest musical comedy there are eight young women who wear shaded violet costumes, and the skirts of these hang from the waist to the feet without a single break. The effect is very bad, for the eye immediately catches the merging from one tint to another, thereby spoiling the effect, which would have been beautiful had the skirts been laid in horizontal tucks, so that the changes from one tint to another were not discernible. Small as the difference is, it only goes to show that the French grasp of things pertaining to dress is keener than almost any other.

The Craze for Japanese Art.

Everywhere is the influence of Japanese art to be seen, and most particularly in those things that have to do with the fair sex. Already society women are arranging for series of Japanese teas to be given during the summer, and one wealthy woman is having a Japanese garden built at her Newport home. It is an exact copy of one of the loveliest in Japan, and to make it very realistic she has imported a quantity of dwarfed plants and trees, with quaint lamps and buildings besides. The latter have been sent over in pieces and will be put together by an expert on the grounds. The expense of securing this miniature garden was far from small, but it is something that will always be worth the price, from an artistic point of view, at least.

In the field of ornaments another Japanese novelty has made its appearance. This is a heavy seal ring for milady's little finger, and the flat space is carved with a Japanese inscription which is supposed to bring good luck and happiness. These rings are made of very rich yellow gold; they are carved by natives by hand, and supporting the seal part there is usually a pair of quaint figures carefully and wonderfully wrought of the metal. The Japanese and Chinese are very clever at this sort of thing, and the delightful part of it is that the rings can be purchased for a very small price. They are becoming so popular, however, that the ever-expected end will come—that is, a raise in price and poorer workmanship. Another orientatl ring that is striking and beautiful is of Burmese gold and has the figure of a child carved of the metal. It is about half an inch high, with its arms raised directly above its head, and in them it holds a huge fresh-water pearl. The idea is certainly quaint and unusual enough to make it appeal to many.

Belts That Are Wide and Crushed.

The seeker after something exclusive in belts becomes discouraged in a very little while, for belts that cost $10 or $12 are built upon exactly the same lines as those that sell at the bargain counters for 50 cents and, to make the state of affairs even worse, there are such quantities of these cheap belts that it promises to be months before they will be replaced by something new. The only chance for novelty lies in the sort of fastening one chooses, and after trying broad and narrow buckles of gilt or metal covered with leather one firm has introduced brass initials wrought in the form of a buckle. At least one's neighbor doesn't possess the same letters, and a little variety can be had as a result of this circumstance. Three initials made of polished brass or silver gilt and linked together, with a rim of the metal surrounding them, unite to form a very effective belt clasp.

For summer dresses there are belts of canvas and linen in straight bands that are shaped a trifle to fit the figure and finished with a gilt or mother-of-pearl buckle. These have the advantage of being able to stand a good tubbing, and for that reason, if for no other, will be popular. Very wide and heavy silk braid in a loose basket weave makes a stunning belt when finished with gilt buckle and eyelets. The end of the braid is turned in a point and stitched with several rows of silk. When this belt is crushed about the waist it gives one of the prettiest and coolest touches to a trim costume.

Think what this means. Imagine the amount of misery that exists and is endured simply because people do not know there is an absolute cure.

The only way to cure any complaint is to remove the cause. There are very few diseases or ailments that can be cured by external application—and piles is not one of them. Piles can be cured; the treatment must, however, be internal, for the cause of piles is an internal disorder of the liver or the bowels. Even catarrh of the stomach and bowels can be cured by DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, The Internal Remedy. Here is an instance of what this practically infallible remedy will do:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—Dear Sir: I have nearly finished the former bottle of Perrin's Pile Specific and am practically well. My case was one which most physicians would have pronounced incurable, as I was afflicted with a dysentery and compelled to go to the toilet room from three to five times each day and each time would bleed from one-half to one teacupful. I had to resort to bandages and absorbent cotton to check the flow of blood, and now the past ten or twelve days there has been no sign of bleeding and my appetite is good; have gained ten pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me.

Very truly yours,
T. R. HARRIS,
October 20th, 1902. Yerington, Nev.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold by all reliable druggists at $1.00 the bottle, under an absolute guarantee to refund the money should this great internal remedy fail to cure.

FIRE DAMAGES THE ST. JAMES

Rear Portion of Hotel Building Suffers Considerable Loss.

The rear portion of the St. James hotel, one of the oldest buildings in Duluth and the first building in which theatrical entertainments were ever given in this city, was badly damaged by fire Saturday afternoon.

The fire started shortly after 4 o'clock in the frame addition at the rear of the building. It is believed to have been caused by a defective flue. The flames spread to the roof and smoldered beneath the shingles, bursting out fiercely from time to time. The firemen tore up the shingles in order to reach the fire, and after about half an hour's work succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

The loss, which amounts to about $2500, was largely due to water and smoke. The building had been partially refurnished just previous to the fire, but the proprietor, W. F. Hackett, carried sufficient insurance to cover the loss.

The building, which formerly stood on the site of the Merchants hotel, was built in 1873. It has been damaged no less than six times by fire. It is owned by J. B. Maltby, of Corning, N. Y.

Members of the Kennedy Stock company occupied rooms in the front part of the building, and they did some quick work in removing their wardrobes, fearing that the entire structure was about to be destroyed.

JURY COULD NOT AGREE

Unable to Render Verdict In the Gillespie Case.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 30.—After deliberating for many hours without coming to an agreement, Judge Downey discharged the jury in the Gillespie murder case yesterday afternoon. When the jury was brought into the court room yesterday afternoon, Judge Downey asked whether there was any probability of agreeing on a verdict, every man of the twelve shook his head in the negative. Judge Downey then thanked them and discharged them from further services.

Prosecutor McMullin said the prosecution would oppose any application on the part of the defense to release James Gillespie, and stated the case would come up again next September. The status of the prisoners is the same as they were before the trial, as their bonds are continuous. It is said that a motion will be made before Judge Downey to release James Gillespie from custody and declare him acquitted. In the event that the motion is overruled, the defense will ask that James Gillespie be admitted to bail along with the other three defendants. Should the writ of habeaus corpus be denied by Judge Downey, the matter will be taken to the supreme court of the state.

'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 30.—The British steamer Rosetti, having on board forty-five laborers from the United Fruit company's plantation, went ashore off Port Royal, while on her way to Bocus Del Toro, and up to the present time all efforts to float her have proved futuile. The vessel lies in an exposed position.

MEMORIAL SERMON

Rev. E. C. Clemans Delivers Fine Sermon Appropriate to Occasion.

The special Memorial day services conducted by Rev. E. C. Clemans in the First Methodist church yesterday morning were largely attended by old soldiers and their friends. Rev. Clemans, who is presiding elder of the district, is also brigade chaplain of the state militia, and occupied the same position in the Twelfth Minnesota regiment during the Spanish-American war, so that the veterans of the civil war felt that he was well qualified to address them.

The two Duluth G. A. R. posts, Culver and Gorman, were escorted from their halls to the church by a battalion of the National Guard, the Sons of Veterans and the Third Regiment band of forty pieces, making quite an imposing array. The troops left the Armory at 10 o'clock in the morning, marching to the church by way of the Masonic Temple and Kalamazoo hall, where the posts have their headquarters, and escorting the veterans from their respective halls.

It is an annual custom for local Grand Army men to attend these special Memorial day services, and this fact, with yesterday's pleasant weather, brought the old soldiers out in force. Probably not an old soldier in the city was absent from the services, unless compelled to by sickness, or some cause equally as important. Seats had been reserved for the veterans in the body of the church, while their friends occupied the balconies and remaining seats down stairs. The church was well filled when Rev. Clemans started to speak. Special music, appropriate to the occasion, was given.

"What mean ye by this service?" was the title of Rev. Mr. Clemans' address. He opened by referring to the peculiar observance of the passover by the Hebrews of old, by the roasting and eating of a lamb and sprinkling blood on the door posts, a ceremony that provoked the query, "What mean ye by this service?" to which was answered that it celebrated a great national deliverance and salvation from galling bondage and oppression. He then said:

"We have a peculiar and wonderful ceremony today. This day set apart for memorial observance; this assemblage of patriotic citizens; these younger soldiers and sailors; these women of these patriotic orders; these veterans with their badges, with gray hair and faltering step, indicate that some solemn celebration is taking place. Some citizen from another land, some stranger, these children may well ask as they look at marching veteran, at waving flags, at decoration of flowers, at badges of mourning, 'What mean ye by this service?' For this service means something. Israelitish Passover commemorated a great salvation. This memorial service commemorates a greater salvation. The blood of the slain lamb upon the lintels and door-posts saved the life of the eldest sons. Five hundred thousand heroic men have sprinkled their blood upon the lintels and door-posts of our nation and by this great sacrifice have saved our government, preserved every American home from the blighting touch of the black angel of slavery and bondage. Kept our country upon the map of the world and our flag flying among the stars of heaven."

"The meaning of this service cannot be interpreted until something is known of the preparation of a great country to be the home of a God-chosen people."

Mr. Clemans then dwelt upon the vastness of America's territory, the immensity of its resources, reviewed the revolutionary war and then discussed the events that led up to the civil war. In this he reflected severely upon the treason of the Southern ladies who undermined the spirit of loyalty to the government among the people of the South. The conflict was then reviewed, the freeing of the slaves, and then the victory insuring the safety of the Union but requiring the sacrifice of an enormous number of lives. The men who fought to save the government came from many nationalities and many walks of life. He dwelt upon the struggles in the homes of the soldiers away at the war, the heroism of the wives, forced to be both fathers and mothers and too often left widows.

After reviewing these things at much length, Rev. Mr. Clemans said:

"Great evils confront us as a nation. We cannot shut our eyes to them on this Memorial Sunday, though much cannot be said about them. Trusts, greedy corporations, venality in politics, material selfishness, the spread of crime, but with the power of higher manhood and citizenship, they will be solved and be solved aright. Said President McKinley: 'There must be a remedy for every wrong, a road somewhere and somehow to be found which leads to righteousness;' and the higher manhood of American citizenship will find that way. Men, there are, who invest and live abroad because they see the shadow of their property abroad and would live there because they see the shadows of anarchy and communism which will touch their possessions. For that watery patriotism that despairs for the future, I have no sympathy, but only contempt. I have no patience with weak-kneed, water-brained, and jaundiced liver people who have no faith in the ultimate triumph of American institutions. The memories of this day prove to us that in the future as in the past patriotism and manhood when put to the test will rise superior to selfish greed, to inordinate ambition, to demagogism, to anarchy, to communism and make for eternal righteousness.'

Another lesson of this service is that the sacrifices of the heroic dead have given to us a united country. The rebellion would lead to other secessions. The work of the soldiers of the civil war was to restore seceding states, preserve on the map of the world an undivided country and to fly our flag in heaven with not a single star obscured or destroyed. But with the close of the war there came geographical and governmental union but not a fraternal union. For all these years there has been a North and a South in this land of ours. But what thirty-five years of peace have not done, this Spanish-American war has done and that is to unite the people of this country in the bonds of fraternal love. When our regiment went South, we were enthusiastically received as we passed through Northern states, but, if possible, when we went through Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama we were received with greater enthusiasm. At Jackson, Tenn., I talked with a veteran of the Confederate army and he said as to the feeling of the South in the war. 'We uns is with you uns now.' At Chickamauga, my regiment, the Twelfth Minnesota, was brigaded with the First South Carolina. Think what this means. Minnesota, through its war governor had offered the first regiment of state troops to President Lincoln. South Carolina first fired upon the flag at Sumpter. I remember the day the First South Carolina came into camp. I heard the playing of a regimental band and saw our boys running to the road that wound by our camp. I asked what the noise was and was told that the First South Carolina was coming into camp. I went out to see its coming. Down the road I saw 130 officers and men from South Carolina wearing the blue uniform and carrying the stars and stripes, while the band played patriotic airs. I thought of what the past had seen. On the very battlefield that we were camped upon, years before, the fathers of those men wearing the gray had met our fathers wearing the blue and long the awful combat had waged, but now the sons of those same rebel fathers were here in their true country's service, wearing the old Union blue uniform, and proudly marching as the old stars and stripes waved over them. Tears filled my eyes as to myself I said, 'This is the day I long have sought and mourned because I found it not. Now indeed we are united once more. Henceforth, there is no North, no South, no East, no West, but one people, one country, one God, and one triumphant flag.'

"The last lesson of this service is that God has a great and glorious future in store for this country. God has, I have feebly tried to show, during all the ages been preparing a land, a people and a government for this country and God's work will never be wasted. Everything of value in this world has had a great price paid for it. Freedom we have, but the earth has resounded with the shock of 400 battles before we secured it. The sacrifice of half a million lives and the preservation of this government means for this nation of ours a great destiny. We have the resources, we have the people, and we have the courage, invincible spirit that can be used of God to secure his great ends for humanity. Republics have lived, flourished, and perished, but this country will never perish. Other flags have waved and then gone down, but this old flag of ours will never go down but will forever wave. The flag was made to go up and to never come down. Wherever the foot of an American soldier has trod and whether his blood has been spilt to raise this flag, Almighty God wants that flag to stay raised. I sympathize with the little boy in the Sunday school who, when asked to give a verse from the Bible, gave this verse, 'If a man pull down the American flag, shoot him on the spot.' That kind of a man needs shooting.

"I am not an expansionist except as an American has always been an expansionist—an expansionist for the good of others. In this sense, I want the boundless world to receive the blessings of American liberty and American institutions, I believe in expansion. Not for vain honor or glory, but because where the flag goes there other things go; an open Bible, a free school, and a free ballot; and any people buttressed up against these will have all that Christian civilization can give. So let the flag wave. Let the lessons of this Memorial day remain with us. As we think of sacrifice and suffering, of loyalty and patriotism, let us try to make them part of our own lives. May the heroism of the dead make us better American citizens, give us a higher manhood, a truer patriotism, a grander inspiration to give the best of our lives for our country, and the sacrifice of the dead will not have been given in vain, and it will never be said of this nation of ours, that the ocean was dug for its grave or the winds woven for its winding sheet, or the forest grown for its coffin or the mountains reared for its monument, but the country of Washington and Lincoln and all the heroic dead will move onward to the last syllable of recorded time. God's great instrument to bring the world to Him.

"Then earth shall sing as through the blue she rolls
Laden with joy for all her thronging souls,
Then shall want's call to sin resound no more
Across her teeming fields. And pain shall sleep,
Soothed by brave science with her magic lore,
And war no more shall bid the nations weep.
Then the worn chains shall slip from man's desire,
And ever higher and higher
His swift foot shall aspire;
Still deeper and more deep
His soul its watch shall keep,
Till love shall make the world a holy place,
Where knowledge dares unveil God's very face."

CLEVELAND FOR PARKER

Philadelphia, May 30.—The North American this morning prints a special dispatch from Princeton, N. J., on national Democratic politics, in which ex-President Grover Cleveland is quoted as follows:

"I have believed for some months, and I believe now, that Judge Alton B. Parker of New York will be the nominee of the national Democratic nomination for the presidential office. This expression of mine is not new. In reiterating it at this time, when there seems to be a lull in the party movement, I do not mean to yield my original judgment, which was that Judge Gray might have proved the strongest candidate for the Democracy to name for the contest with Mr. Roosevelt.

"Circumstances and the state of public sentiment were such, however, that months ago it became apparent that Judge Parker was the man upon whom the conservative party could and should concentrate. Neither the circumstances nor the state of public sentiment have changed, and Judge Parker remains now, as he has been for some months, the logical candidate of his party.

"Some months ago conservative leaders of the Democracy began to experience alarm over the strength this man Hearst was seemingly developing. I took no stock in the Hearst candidacy myself, but realizing the necessity for checking a movement which might grow formidable, I occupied ground in common with a number of others, and gave out a statement favoring Judge Parker for the nomination.

"I do not mean to infer that my support of Judge Parker was given grudgingly. I named Judge Parker at that time because his candidacy had gained such a lead over that of any other man whose nomination could be deemed acceptable to conservative Democrats, that he appeared to me as the most likely man about whom that element of the Democracy could concentrate in its efforts to purge the party of that irrationalism with which it had become afflicted the last two presidential campaigns."

ROMANCE IN WILL

Woman Leaves $60,000 to Lover of Fifty Years Ago.

He Wooed and Won, But Did Not Wed Her.

Boston, May 30.—With the death of Miss Elizabeth C. Kimball is brought to light the story of a courtship and betrothal of nearly 50 years ago. Why she could have left all her property, estimated at about $60,000, to Harrison Whittemore of Dorchester, to be held in trust for him, and at his death to be distributed among various churches and missionary organizations, is explained by her loyalty to the only man she ever loved.

By her will Miss Kimball, who was 63 years old, practically cuts off 31 cousins and other relatives so that Mr. Whittemore, 67 years old, married, and the father of a family, may share in the benefits of her estate so long as he lives.

Equally remarkable is the fact that Mr. Whittemore is as much surprised as the heirs are chagrined. In his school days he met, wooed and won the woman who remained true to him, only to have the pretty little courtship shattered for a reason not generally known. His hair is now gray and his face is covered with a beard, but his step is sprightly and his eye clear. While the subject is one which he had supposed Miss Kimball had long ago forgotten, when requested to talk about it his eyes filled up and he had considerable difficulty in keeping back the tears.

"I thought she had forgotten all about me," he said, "for it is 50 years nearly since we saw each other. And to think she would remember me in this manner! I was greatly surprised to hear of her death, to say nothing of the bequest. It was in 1854 that we parted, our engagement broken, and from that day to this it never entered my head that she even thought of me.

"It is a simple story, though an unusual one, which has become public through the announcement of the will of Miss Kimball," he said. "We were sweethearts, and would probably have been married, but were parted. I married, but she remained single through her lifetime. Miss Kimball and I were both in the same town.

"It was in the Peabody High school that I came to know her real well. We were in the same class, and during the first two years were simply friends. She was a bright girl, studious, and always stood well up at the head of the class. Besides that, she was a fine looking girl, entertaining and attractive.

Just about this time the civil war broke out, and I enlisted for three years' service with Company K, First Massachusetts, made up of Roxbury fellows. Up to that time our acquaintance had been nothing more than friendship, and when I went away nothing was said by either of us about remaining true to each other or that sort of thing. While in the South we corresponded frequently, until my service had been worked out. Then I returned to Peabody in the summer of 1864. I met Miss Kimball and we became engaged and the match met with the approval of her parents and mine.

"About two months later we separated. I came to Boston, where I have since remained, and she stayed in Peabody."

"But what was the cause of your parting?" was asked.

"That is something that we have always kept to ourselves, and is a matter which neither of us have ever referred to. It is a personal subject, and one that would not interest the public, since it concerned only ourselves. It is a fact that we agreed to part, but other than that I do not care to make any explanation.

"From the day we parted in Peabody I have never seen her or heard from her directly. I went my way and she went hers. Now she is dead and I am living happily with my family.

"Of course, the money which she has left at my disposal will be accepted, but as it is, I am comfortably situated and have plenty of the world's goods with which to make the reminder of my life an enjoyable and happy one. I will take no steps to secure the bequest, but will only with the action of the executrix."

During the last four years Miss Kimball's eyesight failed her considerably and she was unable to look after her business. She relied upon Mrs. Culliton, her neighbor across the street, for many things, and this is the reason Mrs. Culliton was chosen to be her trustee and executrix. One who had known her for many years says that she never heard her mention Mr. Whittemore in all that time until a few weeks before her last illness. Then she wrote his name on some cards attached to some of her personal belongings that she desired should be given to him.

RUSSIANS SEND TROOPS TO RELIEF OF PORT ARTHUR; JAPS LOSE MORE WARSHIPS

The Entire First Division Is to Move South From Tashechao.

It Resulted In the Loss of One Gunboat and Two Destroyers.

Tien Tsin, May 31.—It is reported here that the First brigade of the First Russian division, consisting of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Siberian regiments, left Tashechao (a point on the railroad about thirty miles south of Newchwang) for Kin Chou yesterday. The purpose of this movement is not known, but it is believed that the troops are moving to the relief of Port Arthur. They are to be followed by an entire division.

Mukden, May 31.—The Japanese, on the night of May 28, made another attempt to block Port Arthur by sinking merchant vessels in the harbor entrance. The attempt was discovered through the operations of a searchlight and one Japanese gunboat and two torpedo boat destroyers were sunk. The merchantmen then retired.

Tokio, May 31.—Four gunboats, two destroyers and two torpedo boats, sent to Port Arthur early on Monday morning by Vice Admiral Togo, effected a careful reconnaissance, facing a heavy fire from the land batteries. They discovered a new Russian searchlight station and one or two new forts on the Liao Tien Shan promontory. No. 3 gunboat was struck by a shell, which killed one petty officer, injured three men and damaged one of her guns. The other boats escaped without any damage.

STRATEGICAL POSITION

Occupied By Gen. Stoessel Near Port Arthur.

Mukden, May 31.—According to advices received here Gen. Stoessel's force has taken up a strategical position near Port Arthur, which is supported by the guns of the outlying batteries and the fortress.

It is believed here that Gen. Oku has received strong reinforcements from the Japanese army which landed at Taku Shan.

There is little change in the situation to the westward of Liao Yang.

A correspondent of the Associated Press has just returned here from a sixty-mile trip in the neighboring country, which has disproved the reports of the presence of Japanese in this vicinity. He found that perfect order prevailed, and the conversation of the people showed that they had no knowledge of the hostilities.

Japanese Find Valuable Property at Dalny.

Tokio, May 31.—The Russians evacuated Dalny so hastily that they failed to destroy much property which will prove highly valuable to the Japanese. Gen. Oku's scouts report that over 100 barracks and storehouses remain uninjured.

The railroad and telegraph stations, with 200 passenger and freight coaches, are also uninjured. The Russians destroyed the big pier and blocked all the dock entrances with sunken steamers. They destroyed all the small railroad bridges in the vicinity of the docks, but left the jetties uninjured. It is evident that the Russians fled quickly when Nan Shan hill was lost, expecting that Gen. Oku would immediately take possession of Dalny. All previous reports of the occupation of the town were false.

SEVERE DAILY FIGHTING

On Liao Tung Peninsula Reported By Refugees.

Newchwang, May 31.—Refugees who continue to arrive here from the southern part of the Liao Tung peninsula report daily fighting there and severe loses for both armies, but the reports are not confirmable officially. The Russians here are depending on the press bulletins for news from that vicinity.

The very highest Russian authority here while not believing that Port Arthur will fall, admits that its loss would be a terrible blow to the Russian army. The same authority says Russia may send a large army to the south of Newchwang in the event of Gen. Stoessel being able to hold his own at Port Arthur. This, however, is not possible at present, owing to the positions occupied by the Japanese armies operating from the Yalu river and Taku Shan. The Russians are not sanguine as to the outlook for Port Arthur. More contraband of war is arriving here. Two cargoes of flour and tinned meats, and some species were rushed to Mukden as soon as they were unloaded.

DOUBTS SOME REPORTS.

St. Petersburg, May 31.—The Russian press is sparing of its comment on the Kin Chou affair, but there is an evident disinclination to accept the Japanese official reports in their entirety. The general tone of the papers indicates the belief that even the fall of Port Arthur would not decide the war. Much praise is given for the splendid defense of Nan Shan made by the Russians against superior numbers.

ATTACK ON PORT ARTHUR

Is Expected to Begin About June 15.

London, May 31.—The attack on Port Arthur, the Chronicle's Tokio correspondent telegraphs, is expected to begin about June 15. Correspondents will leave here June 10 in time to see the capture, probably about June 20. The correspondent also says that 10,000 Russians have been sent up the Liao river in junks to Tie Ling.

The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent wires that several Japanese transports are landing troops in northeast Korea.

AI-YANG-PIEN-MEN FIGHT.

Russian Report Shows Loss to Have Been Small.

St. Petersburg, May 31.—The war office has received a detailed report of the fight at Ai-Yang-Pien-Men, about sixty miles northeast of Feng Wang Cheng, on Saturday night, in which two battalions of Japanese infantry and one squadron of Japanese cavalry numbering about 2200 men, attacked five squadrons of Cossacks. The Russian losses were seven Cossacks killed and one officer wounded and nine horses killed. The Cossacks were encamped twelve miles northwest of Kui Dian Sian, which was held by several Japanese battalions, two of which and one squadron of cavalry left May 28 for Siamatsza. This force encountered the Cossack bivouac at 10:30 o'clock the same night and attacked the Cossacks, who retired in good order, keeping up a running fight along the road to Saimatsza. There was a great deal of firing on both sides, but, like most fighting in the dark, it was very ineffective, as shown by the smallness of the Russian losses. It is believed the Japanese did not sustain any greater casualties, but, according to one account the majority of the Japanese squadron was wiped out. After reaching Saimatsza May 29, the Japanese returned to Kui Dian Sian, apparently not liking the vicinity of the Cossacks and in view of the possibility of Gen. Rennenkampff bringing up reinforcements. The war office attributes little importance to this engagement, which was heralded from Tokio as a Japanese victory.

BURNED EVERYTHING

Of Use to Japs Before Leaving Dalny.

Che Foo, May 31.—Five hundred Chinese refugees from Port Dalny and Talien Wan arrived here today. After sifting their conflicting stories it appears that the Russians left Talien Wan, May 26, for Port Arthur, after burning everything likely to be of use to the Japanese. Bandits later took possession of the town and were pillaging when the Japanese cavalry appeared May 27. On May 26 the Russians left Port Dalny, previously burning the offices and residences, destroying the railroad and scuttling three large merchantmen, the Zeid, Borela and Nagadan, and all the dredgers and launches.

Some of the refugees also say the Russians destroyed the gunboat Bobr, which is believed to have taken part in the battle of Thursday last at Kin Chou and three torpedo boats. Others say these vessels returned to Port Arthur.

The docks and piers at Dalny were not destroyed. Bandits occupied the city after the Russians left and levied tribute on the inhabitants. A Chinese contractor who had built most of Dalny for the Russians was held for ransom and his clerks were killed. The town was still burning May 28, when the refugees started for Che Foo. The Japanese had not apeared at Dalny up to that time.

One junk, which was leaving Dalny, was sunk by bandits and fifty persons were drowned.

The Chinese who have arrived here did not leave Dalny or Talien Wan because they were afraid of the Russians or Japanese. They fled from the bandits who entered those towns.

MINE PETER'S GULF.

Vladivostok, May 31.—It is believed from information received here that the Japanese have mined Peter the Great gulf (on which this town is situated), a task easy of accomplishment because of the recent heavy fogs. One small Korean sailing vessel was blown up yesterday. The region is quiet so far as military operations are concerned.

DANGER OF FLOOD OVER.

Topeka, May 31.—The Kaw river at this point and west of here is falling rapidly and all danger of further flood damage has passed.

TRUSTED CASHIER IS SHORT ABOUT $100,000

New York, May 31.—The suspension of S. Munn, Son & Co. was announced on the cotton exchange today. The firm is one of the oldest in the cotton trade in this city. The head bookkeeper and cashier disapepared about ten days ago and the firm believes that as soon as its accounts are straightened out it will be able to resume.

At the office of the firm it was said that Clarence F. Cameron, the office manager and head clerk, had been absent for about a week. An examination of the books so far made, it was added, showed apparent discrepancies amounting to about $126,000.

The Munn firm is one of the most conservative and respected in the cotton business. It is composed of Samuel G. Munn and H. Tileston Munn and the estate of A. Godwin Munn, Jr. The firm had a coffee exchange membership, but had few open accounts there. The following announcement from the firm was read on the cotton exchange:

"We hereby announce to the members of the cotton exchange, that through the absence of our head and trusted clerk, who has left his books in an involved condition, we are obliged to suspend. We trust this suspension will only be temporary. We would request all members of the exchange having open contracts with our firm to present the same to us with accounts at once. We further state that we have very few open conracts on the New York cotton exchange and that these balance each other."

August H. Skillen, the legal representative of the firm, said that the Chicago board of trade accounts of the suspended firm were badly tangled up. A week ago last Saturday it was said Cameron left the office, saying that he was boing to Brooklyn, where his baby was ill. Mrs. Cameron called at the firm's office this morning and told the officials of the company that she had not seen her husband since that day. Cameron had been in the employ of the firm for fifteen years.

Members of the firm of Munn & Co. say that their local cotton accounts are all right and have already been adjusted and that the property of the firm improperly diverted was comparatively small and not nearly $100,000.

Several claims to meet notes were made some time ago by firms doing business with Munn & Co. by houses creditors to the suspended firmm and in this way it was discovered that something was wrong and on examination of the books the irregularities were disclosed.

MORRIS, MINN., MAN IS SHOT

Morris, Minn., May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ray W. Harrison, a member of the firm of Davis & Harrison, well known here, was taken to a hospital at Minneapolis today to be treated for a gunshot wound. As he was entering his room in the hotel at Donnelly last night he was shot by Miss Meda Mahn, who immediately afterward killed herself with the same pistol. Miss Mahn was a domestic, who had been employed in hotels at Donnelly and Morris, and it is thought she was insane. Harrison may recover.

WARSHIPS IMPRESS MOROCCANS

Tangier, May 31.—The United States gunboats Castine and Marietta arrived here during the night, completing with the cruisers Brooklyn and Atlanta, which arrived yesterday, the American fleet sent here in connection with the kidnaping by the bandit Raisuli of Ion Perdicaris, the Amberican, and his stepson Cromwell Varley, a British subject. The population is deeply impressed by the assembling of so many United States warships and people living outside the city are removing here for safety.

The British and American representatives have sent a special courier to the sultan concerning the prisoners. The officials maintain strict secrecy regarding the negotiations in progress.

A death has occurred on board one of the American ships. Funeral services were held today.

FIRE DISCLOSES STRANGE AFFAIR

New York, May 31.—A small fire which destroyed a negro hovel in Brooklyn has disclosed to the police a strange case of hidden identity. In the fire which destroyed the building, a beautiful white child, 8 years old, lost her life.

It was learned that the child had been reared by the negress and had been compelled to grow up without education and find playmates among the colored children of the neighborhood. In some manner the child had been slightly crippled.

Fragmentary admissions by the negress lead to the belief that the child's mother was a young woman well known in Brooklyn society. Its foster mother said she received for a time $500 every twelve months to care for the little girl but that payments had stopped five years ago. She was absent when the hut was burned. The child was locked in and perished. Thus far all efforts to unseal the woman's lips and disclose the child's identity have failed.

LUNCHEON FOR MISS ROOSEVELT

St. Louis, May 31.—The social event on the grounds today was the luncheon tendered Miss Alice Roosevelt by the board of lady managers. It was held in the Women's building. It was the first intention of the board to limit the invitations to 100 but the pressure brought by St. Louis society women, who wished to meet Miss Roosevelt was so great that the list was extended to 150.

Kogoro Takahira, the Japanese minister to the United States, arrived and was greeted by President Francis. Mr. Takahira visited several buildings and expressed himself as much impressed by the magnitude of the exposition. There were a number of military displays. The United States marines gave a troop drill and the West Point cadets an exhibition of army maeuvres. The press humorists held their convention here today and visited the various buildings, and called on the Igorotes.

ENDORSED BY VAN SANT.

Governor Approves Cotton's Selection as Speaker.

Washington, May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. Adam Bede spent Decoration day at Old Point Comfort, and upon his return this morning found a letter from Governor Van Sant urging that all efforts be made to give Hon. Joseph B. Cotton of Duluth an opportunity to represent Minnesota as one of those who will make the seconding speeches at the Chicago convention. As has been stated in these dispatches Mr. Cotton is on the list, but Mr. Bede said this morning that the endorsement of Mr. Cotton by Governor Van Sant could not fail to be gratifying. Cotton has now been recognized by the "Big Four"—Senators Nelson and Clapp, Governor Van Sant and Tom Lowry—for a burst of oratory seconding the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt at Chicago.

All Towns In Beaver Valley Are Draped In Mourning.

Brief Family Services Held at House In Morning.

Body Lay In State Previous to Church Services.

Beaver, Pa., May 31.—The day of the funeral of Senator Matthew Stanley Quay dawned with a drizzling rain falling, but by 9 o'clock the rain had ceased and at 10 o'clock, when brief services were held at the house, the sun was beginning to shine. All Beaver valley was draped in mourning and crepe hung from every business house and many residences in Beaver.

One of the first arrivals here was Governor Pennypacker, who, with ex-Lieutenant Governor Walter Lyons and a number of relatives of the late senator, came in on the 9:30 o'clock train. The party was at once driven to the Quay home, and shortly after their arrival there private services were held at the house.

The leave-taking in the home was silent and sad. There were brief services by the Rev. J. R. Ramsay, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, consisting of a prayer and a few brief words of consolation to the family. Only the family went up to the little bedroom above the senator's beloved library and took a last look at the dead. Mrs. Quay broke down again and cried, as she did by her husband's bedside on Saturday afternoon when the physicians told her he was dead. Those of the family in the room were Mrs. Quay, Richard F. Quay and his wife and little children, of Sewickley; Maj. A. C. G. Quay and his wife, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Mary Davidson, of Beaver, a daughter, and her child; Miss Sue and Miss Coral Quay, Jerome Quay, superintendent of Morganza, the senator's only brother; his daughters, Miss Pride Quay and Mrs. E. A. Franks, of New Jersey, and Quay's cousin, Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker.

Upon the conclusion of services, the casket, at 10:30 o'clock, was conveyed from the residence to the First Presbyterian church, almost directly opposite, on College avenue, where the remains weer taken in charge by a guard of honor from Beaver post, No. 473, G. A. R.

Probably 5000 people had gathered about the church and as soon as the doors weer opened a long line of people began to file past and up until the time the church was closed in order to give time for the preparatiqns for the services, the crowds continued to come. Every train brought in persons of prominence in the state and country, and others who wanted to be present for the last rites.

There were representatives of all classes and among them all there seemed to be a general and sincere sorrow as they walked slowly past and looked for the last time on the face of the dead.

A large silk American flag was draped across the casket and no other decoration marked it.

During the two and a half hours the body lay in state several thousand people viewed the remains.

At the public services, a committee of the United States senate was in charge as a guard of honor. The services were marked by simplicity. Rev. D. Appleton Bash, of the M. E. church, offered the opening prayer. A passage from the scriptures was read by the Rev. Mr. Fields, of the Church of Christ and Rev. J. S. Ramsey, pastor of the Presbyterian church, delivered the funeral oration. The closing prayer was offered by the Rev. R. P. Miller of the United Presbyterian church.

The remains at the close of the services were conveyed to the plot in Beaver cemetery for interment.

The floral tributes were beautiful and in some cases elaborate.

THE VIRGINIA POSTOFFICE SAFE EXPLODED BY ROBBERS

Overcharge Was Used and the Safe Was Blown All to Pieces—All of Its Contents Taken—Amount of Booty Not Known.

Virginia, Minn., May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The safe in the postoffice at this place was blown to pieces at an early hour this morning and robbed of its contents. Not only that but the mail pouches in the office were rifled by the thieves, evidently in search of valuables. The stamps in the drawer and the few pennies there were also taken, in fact nothing of any value that the thieves could lay their hands on was left in the office. Eva Demgen is the postmistress and she refuses to give any idea of the amount of booty secured by the thieves.

The postoffice building is situated in the opera house block in the upper end of the town. A heavy storm prevailed at 2 o'clock this morning and it was during that that the thieves entered the postoffice, breaking in through a rear door.

The charge which they used to blow up the safe was stronger than they needed and gives rise to the impression that they were not as familiar with its use as they might have been. The safe was blown to pieces and its pieces were hurled through the walls of the room.

A singular fact is that in an adjoining room were several men sleeping, and one of the pieces of the safe crashed through the wall and struck the wall on the opposite side, passing over the bed occupied by one of the men and nearly striking him. The crash awoke him but as he heard nothing further he took it to be caused by lightning striking near by and went to sleep again. Another piece of the safe tore a hole a foot square through the steel ceiling.

No trace of the thieves was obtainable this morning.

This is the second safe robbery Virginia has had within a few months, the safe of W. H. Eaton being robbed two or three months ago. The robbers were never caught.

PICKED OUT HER CASKET

Dr. Anna E. Park Felt She Was to Die.

New York, May 31.—Dr. Anna E. Park, said to have been the first woman admitted to medical practice in New York, is dead, at the age of 74. Three weeks ago, when in perfect health, devoting herself to the care of a number of charity patients, she visited an undertaking establishment and told the manager she wished to arrange for her funeral.

The undertaker was startled. "You are perfectly well, doctor," he said.

"I am well now, but fear the end of my labor is near," replied the aged woman. She chose a casket and robe with care and arranged the details for her funeral before leaving the shop.

In Securing the Release of Kidnaped American.

Washington, May 31.—Through Ambassador Porter, Secretary Hay has requested the French government to exercise its good offices toward securing the release of Perdicaris, the kidnaped American in Morocco. The French government has undertaken the task, and because of its closer association with the various elements in Morocoo, it is believed here that it can accomplish more than any other government.

The British government also is acting with great energy in behalf of young Varley, the stepson of Perdicaris, and a British subject, and the British officials are in communication with the United States government in the pursuit.

MILLER IS OUT

For the Republican Nomination Against Congressman McCleary.

Is Strong Believer In Tariff Revision and Reciprocity.

St. Paul, May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—A dispatch from Luverne says that Former State Senator H. J. Miller, of that city, has formally announced his candidacy for the Republican congressional nomination in the Second district against Congressman James T. McCleary, of Mankato.

Mr. Miller has had this step under consideration for several months and while attending the recent meeting of the Republican state central committee said that he would make up his mind definitely in a short time. Since then he has been sounding the sentiment of politicians in the Twin Cities and in other parts of the state and, it is thought, received many assurances of support.

revision of the tariff and reciprocity and will probably make his campaign on that issue, since Congressman McCleary is a stand-patter of the most pronounced type. The former state senator has promulgated his views in favor of tariff reform in his paper, the Rock County Herald, to considerable extent lately, and it was largely on account of this that people believed he would be a candidate.

A close friend of Mr. Miller said yesterday regarding the attitude of the Luverne editor on the congressional question:

"Mr. Miller believes that Congressman McCleary does not represent the views of the people of the Second district on the tariff and he has all along been willing to support for congress any strong man who would come out openly for revision. Senator George W. Somerville, of Sleepy Eye, Brown county, was considered for the nomination. If he had got into the race, he would undoubtedly have received the support of Mr. Miller. Mr. Somerville, however, refused to enter the field, and Mr. Miller has been urged by a large circle of friends to make the run.

"Mr. Miller is satisfied that a majority of the people of the district want the tariff revised and he believes that one way to bring this about is to elect men to congress that will work for revision through thick and thin. He recognizes that Mr. McCleary is an influential man in congress and that it will be very difficult to defeat him on the first trial, especially."

The Luverne editor is a strong Collins man and his entry into the congressional race may have an important effect on the gubernatorial situation in the Second district. Congressman McCleary has not announced his views on the gubernatuorial question, but many believe that he is inclined to favor Dunn. Should Miller actively identify himself with the Collins organization in the Second district, which is a powerful one, Congressman McCleary might be forced into the Dunn camp.

Word has been received by the managers of Mr. Dunn's campaign that all is not lovely in St. Louis county, but the Dunn men say that everything has been fixed up all right now and are confident that they will carry the county.

According to reports, several of the county officers are more or less interested in the candidacy of Judge Collins. These officers have an opportunity of seeing a large number of farmers and out-of-town residents of the county, and, according to reports received at St. Paul, some of them are busily engaged in boosting the candidacy of the St. Cloud judge. It is reported that one county officer has recently gone to a large employer of labor and solicited his support for Judge Collins.

In addition to this the Dunn men have received information that the working organization of the Princeton candidate has deteriorated to some extent. The absence of William Getty in Iowa for two weeks was noticed considerably, but now that he has returned the Dunn men are more confident.

These hitches in the campaign have encouraged the Collins managers in St. Paul and they do not hesitae to predict that they will carry the county.

"I have got some money to wager that Collins will carry St. Louis county," said a Collins man yesterday. "I believe that the judge will get a solid delegation. He has a large number of active supporters in the Zenith City and his supporters are the kind that bring results."

Isabel Irving opened in "The Crisis" yesterday at the Metropolitan to an audience that almost filled the theater, and which manifested its pleasure at the performance by frequent applause or laughter. Winston Churchill is responsible for the dramatization of his own book and the work has been effectively done, with here and there a change from the book for dramatic convenience, or to bring something before the auditors without making an extra scene or act. As given the play is in four acts, and in the first, to give effect, the buying of the slave Nancy by Stephen Brice is made to take place from a window of Judge Whipple's office and the consequent ire of that gentleman toward Brice is based on that desecration of the abolitionist's quarters.

The second act is the ball at Col. Carvel's country place; the third the parlors of his town house when he is about to start for the war and the fourth, where all ends well, is back again at the law office of Judge Whipple. All the scenes are exceedingly well arranged, even to the introduction of fire flies in the yard at Carvel's house when the young folks are dancing there, and of illuminating gas in the office of Judge Whipple.

It is a little hard to determine, however, why Miss Irving should be starred in this play, for she is capable of stronger work. The part of Virginia Carvel is a weak one, at least dramatically, if not in character, and does not give a capable actress any will scope for work. To say that Miss Irving was adequate is about all that can be said, and is no discredit to her power, for the part at no time really dominates the interest of the witness, and seldom dominates the stage.

There are at least five male characters which are more important—those of Brice, Whipple, Carvel, Elliphalet Hopper and Clarence Colfax. That of Brice, taken by Wilfrid North, was effective and given in a refined style of repression but North's enunciation of English is decidedly more British than Yankee. Elliphalet Hopper was capably handled by Jacques Martin, who furnished a good deal of comedy in the part of a blundering and crafty young Easterner on the look out for himself at the expense of all others.

Judge Whipple, as portrayed by Charles Lamb, and Thomas A. Hall's Col. Carvel, were well played at one another, for these two had the most impressive and exacting parts. Both had a great deal of hard work, and the lines given to them in the play are especially interesting to a student of history.

In this connection it may be said that the play was a most appropriate one for Decoration day, owing to the large amount of patriotism in it and the fact that yesterday commemorates the time in which the scenes are laid. The Clarence Colfax of Seymour Rose was given despite a very bad cold on the part of that gentleman, which accounted for poor enunciation.

Another member of the Irving family, Evangeline, had the principal prominence among the feminine members of the cast, and her Puss Russell was brimful of girlish merriment.

The performance will be repeated tonight.

ROGERS BROTHERS.

"The Rogers Brothers in London," John J. McNally's latest vaudeville farce, will be the attraction at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday. It will be presented by those celebrated comedians, Gus and Max Rogers with a number of popular players assisting. It is said to be the best of the series of plays in which the Rogers Brothers have yet appeared. There is an abundance of fun of the sort usually introduced into their plays and there is sufficient good music to constitute an operatic production.

SUICIDE OF MAYOR

Baltimore's Chief Executive Ends His Life With Revolver.

No Reason Apparent For Deed, Excepting Temporary Insanity.

Baltimore, May 31.—Mayor Robert M. McLane, of this city, shot and killed himself yesterday afternoon in his bedroom at his residence, No. 29 West Preston street. His bride of less than two weeks was at the time of the tragedy asleep in an adjoining room, and was awakened by the discharge of the revolver, which Mr. McLane evidently fired while standing before the mirror of the dressing case.

The bullet entered the right temple and, crashing through the head, escaped in the rear of the left ear. Mrs. McLane and other members of the household rushed to the mayor's assistance, but he did nit regain consciousness after he fell to the floor, and expired within an hour. A number of physicians who were immediately summoned expressed the opinion that the wound was necessarily fatal.

No cause can be assigned for the act by the members of Mr. McLane's family. Since the fire of last February he has been kept assiduously at work administering the affairs of the city, besides endeavoring to direct the rebuilding of the burned district. This, together with criticisms by his political opponents, are thought by many to have caused a temporary aberration of mind.

Coroner Benjamin F. Hayden signed a certificate giving suicide as the cause of death, and the remains were turned over to an undertaking firm to be prepared for burial.

Mayor McLane was elected as a Democrat to the office of chief magistrate of the municipality in May of last year for a term of four years. Under the city charter he will be succeeded by E. Clay Timanus, Republican, president of the second branch of the city council, to serve out the unexpired term. The second branch of the council, which is Republican, will elect a president, not necessarily a member of the present body, to preside over its deliberations.

Mayor McLane was 35 years old, the youngest chief executive Baltimore ever had. He was the son of James L. McLane, president of the First National bank, and nephew of Robert M. McLane, former governor of Maryland and United States minister to France during President Cleveland's first administration. Previous to his election as mayor he had for four years filled the office of state's attorney, in which he had distinguished himself by a zealous and intelligent discharge of his duties. During his brief administration of the mayoralty office he had brought upon himself the antagonism of the regular Democratic organization by the appointment of independent members of the party. Recently there has been marked opposition to him among Democratic members of the city council in matters relating to the rebuilding of Baltimore, and this is ascribed by many as a contributory cause of suicide.

Mayor McLane was married two weeks ago to Mrs. Mary Van Bibber, a well-known and popular society leader of Baltimore, and the newly-made bride is prostrated by the terrible tragedy.

The dead mayor was very popular among the people generally, irrespective of party, and the whole community has been profoundly shocked by his tragic end.

Adjourned Meeting.

Alderman Wing held a meeting in the council chamber last evening and adjourned the regular session until this evening.

The postponement was taken in recognition of Memorial day, but it was necessary to adopt the adjournment proceedings for the purpose of keeping the minutes of the regular meeting nights. Deputy Clerk Axel Zimmerman was present and called the roll, which was answered by Alderman Wing. As no quorum was present the meeting adjourned.

It isz not the first time that Alderman Wing has represented the council in this capacity. His home is nearest to the council chamber and he has performed this duty on several occasions.

MEMORIAL DAY

Observed In Fitting Manner Throughout City of Duluth.

Parade and Armory Exercises—Rev. R. J. Mooney's Address

Memorial day was elaborately observed in Duluth. Everyone seemed to be fully alive to the significance of the day, and deported themselves accordingly. The weather was cold and dreary, but this fact did not appear to dampen the enthusiasm of the crowds, which could hardly have been larger if the weather had been ideal. A good many picnic parties were doubtless spoiled by the cold wind and cloudy sky, but in the city everything passed off as planned in spite of them. The banks, railroad and public offices, stores and all principal places of business were closed throughout the day. Flags and red, white and blue bunting were everywhere in evidence.

The procession in the afternoon was the feature of greatest interest to the general public, but the exercises in the morning, beginning at 10:30, when members of the G. A. R. marched out to Forest Hill cemetery to decorate the graves of the old soldiers resting there, attracted many observers. So that there might be no mistake, the graves of veterans had previously been marked by means of small flags. Prayer was offered by the chaplain, Rev. Mr. Kimball. Fresh flowers were strewn freely over the graves. The infantry band softly played "The Star Spangled Banner," and at the conclusion a firing salute was given by a detail of Companies A and C.

Flowers had also been sent to Ely and Tower, where six old soldiers lie buried. Exercises of a similar nature were held in these towns, but as the soldiers buried there once lived in Duluth the local G. A. R. posts wished to in some manner remember them.

* * *

Several thousand people witnessed the parade in the afternoon. The procession formed at First street and Fifth avenue west, and marched down Fifth avenue to Superior street. A squad of police, in command of Captain Resche, and followed by the Third Regiment band, headed the procession. Companies A and C, under Major H. B. Eva, and the Sons of Veterans, who constituted the body guard of the Grand Army, came next. The next section in the line of march was occupied by the naval reserves, commanded by Lieut. Commander Guy A. Eaton.

When the procession reached the Armory the building was already well filled. The veterans proceeded to the platform, while the infantry and reserves retired to their apartments. It is estimated that 4000 people were crowded into the Armory when exercises began.

The address of the day was given by Rev. Roderick J. Mooney. His subject was, "An Interpretation of the Unwritten History Above a Soldier's Grave." There was also a program of musical selections and brief addresses. Mayor M. B. Cullum was presiding officer, and made the opening remarks. Opening the program the Third Regiment band played three selections, "The Star Spangled Banner," "Home, Sweet Home," and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The invocation was by Rev. Alexander Milne. Miss Florence Clement sang a solo, "The Star Spangled Banner," in an excellent manner. W. S. McCormick read Lincoln's Gettysburg address, and a vocal selection, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," was sung by the choir of the Pilgrim Congregational church.

Rev. Mooney spoke of the necessity of fairmindedness on the part of the historian in relating the events of the day.

"If eternal vigilance is the price of political liberty, it is likewise the price of intellectual freedom," he said. "He only reads books wisely who reads between the lines. To the man who thus reads the history of his own time, the unsatisfactoriness of what is written is a well known fact. The men by whose deeds and achievements the history of this age has been wrought out, are having the opportunity to contrast the course of events, in which they were actors, with the story of the very same events, as it is told in recent literature."

Mr. Mooney spoke of how often the members of the Grand Army then listening to him had occasion to blush at the ridiculous way in which the events in which they took part were chronicled. "The palpable failure of written history to reproduce in the imagination, the events and spirit of of an age is due mainly to the inability of the men who are concerned in the particular event, to describe it, uninfluenced by their own prejudgments, theoretical opinions, personal sympathies and temperamental tendencies."

Continuing the speaker said that the scholarship of the future, while it will do full justice to literature and science, will not be so exclusively bookish as it has been in the past. He spoke of the book of nature, where an ancient life is revealed in the shell banks and peat mosses of Denmark, in the supporting posts of the lake dwellers in ancient Switzerland, and in various other similar ways. He said that the valleys of this country tell the story of new harvests they yield and the very rocks rent, quarried and reconstructed into human habitation, likewise tell the history of America.

The speaker said the soldier's grave is full of meaning, and spoke of the mound marking it as the cipher of the country's history, first telling how, in the use of the telegraph is used a language called cipher, each word used sometimes signifying several sentences.

"The soldier's grave," he said, "though itsef a mute, unconscious mound of earth, is, in the light of history, full of meaning. Let us then dwell on the earth word in the record of our country. That word is written, not to be erased for countless ages. We, nor our children, can never ignore it. It stands out fresh and distinct on the page of nature. Reverently come with me to the graveyard in spirit and there let us ask, why was the man whose remains occupy this grave, and who loved life as well as we do, having just as many ties in life as we, willing to part with his life? This man around whom twined a father's pride, a mother's love, a sister's veneration, why was this man plucked from such surroundings, to go forth to battle? The answer to this question is the translation of the earth word into human speech. It maters not where he fell; the grave of the Union soldier has always the one signification. If I read aright, the meaning of this historic word is written on the soil. One element of that answer is, that the soldier made the sacrifice because he esteemed the honor of his country worthy of it."

The speaker said that there are those in the present day who talk contemptuously of the sentiment which exalts the defense of honor in a nation or an individual, and asked such sentimentalists to remember there are worse horrors in a peace bought by the sacrifice of a nation's sense of honor than from all the terrible carnage resulting from a war in its defense.

"Thrice holier and happier the man who wins peace by resisting evil than the one who buys peace by compromising with evil."

He spoke of the honor paid the country's heroes, and why they should be honored, and said that there could be a grand army only when the ranks are filled with grand men.

"The veteran soldier who lies beneath that mound died for our country, and it is our duty to live for it. The price we must pay for freedom is a pure manhood and eternal vigilance. The monument which I would place beside our noble dead would not be a cold marble statue, but an honest, intelligent, God-fearing American citizen.

"The nation which the war could not wreck, moral evil, infidelity, atheism and social impurity or a devitalized gospel can wreck. This being so, let us serve our nation by wheeling into line on the right side of every great and moral issue.

"The soldiers of the North fought against the soldiers of the South not to subject them; fought not as king's army against a foreign foe—but, paradoxical as it may seem, fought as brothers to preserve a brotherhood. Nor is there any reason for doubt but that the war was fought for the preservation of the Union."

Rev. Mooney concluded with a glowing tribute to the dead soldiers and the colors which they wore.

At the conclusion of the exercises in the Armory, the Women's Relief corps, accompanied by the Flaaten band and a large number of old soldiers, marched to the canal pier to strew flowers in the water in commemoration of the naval heroes. The address at the pier, a part of most impressive ceremonies, was delivered by Rev. Charles Fox Davis.

He spoke of the bravery of the American sailor and of the important part he had played in the country's history, paying a handsome tribute to the memory of the sailor dead.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

Are Never Without Pe-ru-na in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

UNDER date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past 25 years.

"Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"She also was passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life. In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for these wonderful remedies.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of 25 years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me.

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Success to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated Jaunary 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh."

John O. Atkinson,
Box 272. Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on, catarrh diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safe-guard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

REFUSE TO BITE

Fisherman In Pursuit of Bass Have No Luck.

Several Weeks Too Early For Them to Take Bait.

The bass season is now open in Wisconsin and Minnesota, but the bass are taking a vacation and all invitations extended to them on the end of fish lines have proved futile.

Last evening and this morning the local fishermen who went out to the Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin lakes for bass fishing over Sunday and Monday returned without catches, save an occasional black bass or a mess of blue gills and rock bass caught with worms.

The bass fishermen claim that it is, from all indications, from two to three weeks too early to catch bass. The fish are out in deep water and they refuse to touch the most tempting bait, whether frogs or minnows. When a black bass refuses a frog the old fishermen say it is time to lay up the rod for a few weeks. In localities where bass are known to be plenty nobody is known to have made a single catch of any size Sunday or Monday.

People living near the inland lakes say that it is fully two weeks too early for good fishing, that the ice was so thick the past winter that it has been out of the lakes for only a short time and the weather has not been such that the water has warmed up to any appreciable degree.

One muscallonge is reported to have been caught in Pike lake, at Middlebrook, Wis., by one of the several Duluth and Superior fishermen, who spent a couple of days at that locality.

The South Shore train Saturday evening also took a large party to Delta, Wis., for bass and trout, but poor luck is reported by those who have returned.

The Brule river district was fairly invaded by fishermen Sunday and yesterday and while some trout were caught, the concensus of opinion seemed to be that the water is yet too cold for good trout fishing. The trout that were caught were not at all gamey and permitted themselves to be pulled in without showing much fight.

The largest trout catch on the Brule is reported of a party of seven Duluth fishermen, who got about 100 fish among them.

Large fires on cutover lands are reported by persons returning from the several North Wisconsin districts.

THIEVING BOYS

Held High Carnival on Lake Shore Saturday Night.

Five young lads between the ages of 17 and 21 are in the lock-up at police headquarters with the charge of larceny hanging over their heads.

The boys are claimed to be members of a gang of twenty-three young men who held high carnival Saturday night and Sunday morning. They are said to have stolen three half barrels of beer from the rear of 217 West Superior street, and several chickens from the coop of J. W. Nelson, at 727 East Superior street. The beer and the chickens are said to have been taken to the vacant property on the lake front, at Ninth avenue east, where a fire was built.

The boys are claimed to have attempted to cook the chickens in the fire, and to have consumed the beer. The names of the five boys who are now in custody are Edward Brooks, John Kelley, Fred Walker, Patsy Sheehan and John Tate.

Patsy Sheehan and John Tate are already under parole, Sheehan from the municipal court and Tate from Judge Cant, in the district court. The paroles of both the boys will probably be revoked and they will be sent to Red Wing to serve out the legal term, until they are twenty-one years of age, or until they are released for good behavior. An officer will arrive in Duluth today to take charge of Sheehan, and proceedings will be commenced in the district court by the humane officer to have the parole of Tate revoked.

It is not yet known what will be done with the other boys. It is claimed that some of them joined the party after the alleged theft had been committed and were innocent of the fact that the beer and chickens had been stolen. The police are investigating the matter thoroughly and more arrests may follow. Those that had no hand in the theft may be arraigned on the charge of drunkenness, as it is claimed that most of the boys were under the influence of liquor before the party broke up.

The police claim that several of the boys are young toughs, and are anxious to see the gang broken up. A vagrancy charge may be laid against those that were not intoxicated.

Among the fowls stolen from Mr. Nelson's coop was a Golden Wyandott rooster, which has been a prize winner at several poultry shows. Mr. Nelson refused several offers of $25 for the bird.

WEST DULUTH

The West Duluth baseball team returned home this morning from Hibbing, where they suffered two defeats at the hands of the range players in games played Sunday and Monday afternoons. Yesterday's contest was a close one, the final score standing 12 to 13, in favor of Hibbing. Up to the last half of the ninth inning it appeared that West Duluth had the game cinched, for the score stood 12 to 7 in favor of the locals. Hibbing braced up in the ninth, however, and Young forgot to get the right twist to the pitched balls, with the result that Hibbing brought in six scores. The latter made five safe hits in the ninth inning. They made a total of fifteen hits off Young. Kleffman caught for Hibbing and Freeman and Sauer pitched. Robinson and Young made up the West Duluth battery.

Although the first West Duluth team was out of town Sunday, two fast and interesting games were played on the Fifty-second avenue grounds in the afternoon, between Proctor and the Second Streeters, and Holter's Athletes and the Floan and Leveroos aggregation from Superior. Proctor won its game by a score of 15 to 6, but Holter's men lost to the team from across the bay, the final score standing 8 to 6 in their favor. The teams were evenly matched and the game was hard fought throughout, furnishing plenty exciting features for the large crowd of rooters which had assembled.

Another Sunday game was between the West Duluth Vikings and the Eighth avenue team. The former won by a score of 15 to 14. Yesterday the Vikings won from the New Duluth Tigers by a score of 11 to 1. Clifton and Hoyt and Hix and Saller were the respective batteries.

PLANT IS HAUNTED.

Strange Occurrences Reported at Ironton Works.

It has been some time since Duluth has had a haunted house story, but since Sunday there has been one current in West Duluth. The tale appears to have had a hazy beginning, about as mysterious as the ghosts themselves, for no one can tell who started it, or who claims to have seen the spooks, but tell of the affair as though they believed it nevertheless.

The scene of the nightly revels is placed at the old factory at Ironton, which has stood neglected and unused for a long period of years. Strange noises, and mysterious figures and lights are supposed to be in evidence about the structure at night, frightening people who pass the gloomy spot. Unbelievers laugh at the tales of the superstitious, and lay the blame of the ghostly doings to hobces. As no one appears to have made a close investigation, this explanation will be allowed to stand until further developments.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Yesterday would have been a gala day on the St. Louis river picnic grounds had the weather not been so disagreeable. In spite of the cold wind and threatening clouds, a number of picnic parties went up the river as planned, both by team and by boat, and a good many people were caught in the rain in consequence.

Memorial day was observed in West Duluth by the closing of all leading places of business. The mills ran through the day, however, and work on the new sewer was continued with a small force. The other men working on the street took a holiday. A number of people visited the cemeteries to decorate the graves of friends and relatives and others attended the exercises up town.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Yesterday a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Willie, 306 South Fifty-sixth avenue west.

A son was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Krause, 601 North Fifty-ninth avenue west.

The health commissioner, after a tour of the district yesterday afternoon, said that more money would be expended in West Duluth this spring in cleaning than in any other part of the city, because of the fact that its sewer system is inadequate.

Joe Curtis and Gene Carr returned yesterday from a fishing trip to French river. They met with excellent success and brought a fine string of trout back with them.

J. Allyn Scott, who has been in attendance at the St. Louis exposition, is expected home today or tomorrow.

The West Duluth Social club gave an enjoyable dance at Schell & Wade's hall last night. There were about eighty couple present.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Several Cases of Black Diphtheria In Town of Powers.

Powers—Several cases of black diphtheria have developed at Powers, Menominee county, and four homes have been quarantined. The health officials are taking every precaution to prevent an epidemic. One death—that of a daughter of Anton LeBlanc—is reported.

Menominee—Justice Henry Nason, who has been a conductor in Menominee county for twenty years or more, has an assortment of about fifty relics, weapons used by persons in taking their own lives. He has jack-knives, razors, revolvers, rifles and shot guns, each one properly labelled.

Rev. E. W. Frazee will not be a candidate for reappointment to the pastorate of the Methodist church in Menominee. He has made public announcement of this intention and at the Detroit conference in September may petition to be transferred to some other conference.

Crystal Falls—Crystal Falls is much interested in the opening up of the Rosebud Indian reservation to settlement in July. Many people will enter their names at South Dakota land offices.

The death of A. Lustfield, one of the best known business men on the Menominee range, occurred last week at Crystal Falls. His funeral was held at Milwaukee yesterday. Mr. Lustfield was a pioneer of Crystal Falls, going there when only a cruiser's trail led through the from Florence, Wis., to the new mining camp on the bank of the Paint river.

Sault Ste. Marie—George Ingham, chief engineer of the supply boat Superior, at the Soo, has received a patent on a steam boiler that promises to be especially valuable on ships, as it will do away with the running down of steam every time a plug blows out. Some times when the sea is rough and the water in the boiler moves from side to side the plug is uncovered. It is this action of the water that leads to the blowing out. In case the boat has but one boiler it is necessary to stop, as the steam must be blown down and a new plug put in. The invention which Mr. Ingham has received a patent on makes it possible to remedy the difficulty as soon as the plug blows out. The right of manufacture is being sought by several concerns.

Dunn Men Claim County Committee's Action Was Antagonistic.

Designed to Prevent Attendance of Delegates From Towns.

While the Republican county committee at last Friday's meeting, was overwhelmingly "Collinsy," the Dunn men say that the action taken will work as a boomerang in the hands of the Collinsites and come back to smite them. As stated in The Herald, the meeting was practically a Collins one, as the adherents of that candidate outnumbered the Dunn men present by a preponderance of six to two, and the fixing of the primaries for one hour on the evening preceding the convention date, which is Tuesday, June 28, is regarded as an effort on the Collins people's part to keep the Dunn delegates in the uper part of the county from coming to the convention.

At least the Collins people showed pretty plainly at the meeting that they were not greatly concerned whether those people managed to get to Duluth or not. When it was suggested that the primaries be held on the evening before the convention Senator Hawkins, who is chairman of the committee and was presiding at the time, and is also a Dunn man, suggested that it was too near the convention. He proposed Saturday night, and this was met with the statement that stores would be open on Saturday night and this would not give every man a fair chance to attend the caucuses, especially as they would be open but an hour.

Senator Hawkins then said they might be held Friday night. But the Collinsites had things their own way and held out for Monday night, despite his protest. It is even said that they intimated that they did not much care whether the range delegates got here or not.

The Dunn men were much angered over the result of the meeting and are said to have placed the matter before the people on the ranges in the light in which they see it and feel that it settles any chances the Collins men may have had of getting any votes from the ranges. They assert that it shows that the Collins people are desperate, but that the game will not work for they will get their delegates here if they have to hire special trains to do it.

The delegates from the many little towns through the country will have more trouble in getting here, however, and it would seem that some of them must fail to do so.

The meeting Saturday lasted from 2 p. m. until 4 p. m. and it was stated by A. P. Cook, who acted as secretary of the meeting, that there was no friction and that all that was done was to fix up some new precincts and get out the call for the primaries and the convention. But it appears that not all the surplus time was taken up in the members "boshing" one another, as the secretary expressed it.

Bonesteel—City Marshal Ault arrested Merlin North, who came here from Omaha last week, for attempting to commit a criminal assault on the 7-year-old daughter of K. Hoyt. The child, with two other smaller girls, was picking flowers near town when North came along and told them there were pretty flowers over the hill near by. The children followed him, and the Hoyt girl being in advance, he seized her and dragged her into a plum thicket, where he attempted the crime charged. The three girls began screaming and the two smaller ones ran toward town, it being only about eighty rods distant. North, in fear of being discovered, released the child, who ran home and told her mother. The prisoner was identified positively by the little girl after his arrest. North denied the charge at first, but later confessed. The jail is guarded to prevent an attack on the prisoner.

Sioux Falls—A suit for damages against the Omaha Railroad company may result from the dismissal in the circuit court of a case against J. J. Loftus, a former section boss of the railroad company.

The alleged theft of furnishings from a sleeping car which was in a wreck on the Omaha road near Sioux Falls was the charge preferred by officials of the road, and which resulted in the original arrest of Loftus. He was cleared and soon afterward the railroad officials again caused his arrest on the charge of embezzling sums of money alleged to have been received from the sale of rails and other property belonging to the company.

Loftus furnished bonds for his appearance, but after being at liberty for a time, some of his bondsmen withdrew and he was lodged in jail. When the case came to trial it was dismissed on the ground that the defendant had once been placed in jeopardy on a similar charge. Now it is said Loftus will seek to recover damages from the railroad company for false imprisonment.

Lead—Two South Dakota cadets attending the academy at Annapolis have received special compliments from the commander for brave deeds. Midshipman Howe, of Spearfish, saved a companion from drowning, and Midshipman Stuart, of Hurop, attempted to rescue companions who had been capsized while sailing.

Mrs. Charlotta Swanson has been adjudged insane and will be taken to Yankton.

Mitchell—Three boys made a sensational escape from the Plankinton reform school. They were captured by a boy named Frank Miller, who took his repeating rifle, mounted his horse and started after them. He ordered them to throw up their hands and marched them to Mitchell.

Rapid City—Otto Beranek, game warden of this district, and his deputy, Frank Faulkner, have been fined for dynamiting a creek for the purpose of killing trout.

Huron—The thirtieth annual convention of the South Dakota Sunday School association will begin here tomorrow evening and continue until the night of June 2.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Cannonball—The Lake Tomb Cattle company and other concerns that have cattle on the reservation have finished dipping their herds, about 40,000 head. The dipping was done at the rate of 2,500 a day, and with hardly any loss. The cattle will be dipped again in about three weeks.

Indian Agent Carigman is about through paying the Indians $32,000 interest and lease money. The payment was the quickest on record.

Every able-bodied Indian is employed at some kind of work, being paid $1.25 to $2.25 a day. The government is fencing the entire reservation and connecting the substations with the agency by telephone, all the work being done by Indians.

Fargo—The street railway company has practically decided to extend the line on the west side of the Fourth ward, as petitioned for. Instead of running south on Eleventh street, it will go to Fourteenth. This will give residents of that section fair service and add a large source of revenue to the company.

Rev. John K. Burleson, of Grand Forks, was elected clerical delegate to the Episcopal convention to be held in Boston, and Attorney Newman, of Fargo, the lay delegate. The reception of Bishop and Mrs. Mann was largely attended. The convocation closed Sunday with appropriate services at the cathedral.

PATRIOTIC ESSAYS

First Swedish Baptist Sunday School Observes the Day.

Prize Winning Patriotic Compositions By Sunday School Pupils.

The patriotic exercises last evening at the First Swedish Baptist church on Nineteenth avenue west and First street, in honor of the fallen heroes in the civil war were very interesting. The particular feature of the program was the reading of compositions by the scholars of the Sunday school on "Why do we celebrate Decoration day?" The scholars read their own compositions and all indicated excellent study by the writers of United States history and particularly of the causes leading up to the civil war.

Rev. J. W. Loughridge gave the opening address of the evening and spoke interestingly on the valor of those that gave their lives that the country might be saved and free. Rev. Edstam gave an address on John Ericsson and Col. K. O. Broady, who took prominent parts in the civil war. Patriotic selections were rendered by the choir and by the scholars of the Sunday school.

The compositions by the scholars were read at intervals during the program and were attentively listened to by the audience. The following received the prizes: First, Gertrude Fredin; second, Hulda Paulson; third, Selma Strom; fourth, Theresa Anderson; fifth, Wahlborg Newlander; sixth, Naomi Lindahl. The prizes consisted of books.

FIRST PRIZE.

"Now that spring is at hand all our thoughts are centered on nature; the growth of the flowers, the grass, the opening of the buds, which have been so long sealed upon the trees, everything springing into new life. As now we reflect over winter with its hardships we may reflect over war time with its still greater hardships. We realize how much our veteran heroes have done for us.

"To show our appreciation of their services Decoration day has been set aside by legislatures of every state in the Union, except Idaho. On that day we bring the bountiful offerings of nature and strew the graves of our dead soldiers.

"The custom of decoration day originated in the Southern states and was copied scatteringly and on different days in some of the Northern states. All the days being in spring for natural reasons. On May 5, 1868, Gen. Logan, who was then commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, established Decoration day. By a general order May 30, 1868, was designated as a day set apart for the purpose of paying tribute to the memory of those brave men who died in defense of their country. The national encampment held in Washington had it incorporated in its rules and regulations May 11, 1870.

"Since then, by act of congress, May 30 has been established as a national holiday and it is a universal custom to decorate the graves of all the ex-soldiers, thus making it one of the most patriotic days of the year, wherein all classes unite in paying honor to our heroic dead and feel a conscious pride in being able to thus show respect for their memory and of the cause for which they fought.

"At the present time all the ex-soldiers living are dressed in their uniforms and pay tribute to the dead heroes. Patriotic selections are given in the schools the day before and members of the G. A. R. speak, some being in each school.

"Some people celebrate it the way it was not meant to be celebrated by having field efforts, such as bicycle races and other sports."

SECOND PRIZE.

The second prize won by Hulda Paulson, 16 years of age, was entitled "Abraham Lincoln's Connection with the Civil War," and was as follows:

"With Abraham Lincoln is connected the greatest series of events that has taken place on this continent. Had he not been given the president's chair in 1860, our nation might have belonged to the past.

"The question of state rights had been before the people of the United States for many years. The North said that no state could withdraw from the Union, while the South claimed that a state might secede whenever reason was found for doing so. Slavery had long been a drawback to our nation's welfare. The Northerners were opposed to slavery and had long since freed the blacks in their territory. The Southerners, on the other hand, said they could not progress without the slave labor and were, therefore, greatly in favor of it. As the North was so greatly opposed to slavery, the Southerners now had reason to secede and so seven states seceded from the Union, others being ready to follow.

"Mr. Lincoln had seen a great deal of the cruel treatment of slaves and had wished that he might set them free from bondage. He saw the danger our republic was in by the difference of beliefs in regards to state rights. His greatest aim was, therefore, to preserve the Union either by our nation being entirely slave or entirely free. He knew that the only way of settling the question was by war, as compromieses and bills of all kinds had been of no avail. Though it was at the time of his inauguration that the seven states seceded, he was peacefully installed into office.

"The North had possession of Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor, and the South began the great Civil war by capturing that fort. This great struggle raged for four long years and at last the South surrendered to the Northern army. During this struggle Mr. Lincoln issued the proclamation of Emancipation which freed all slaves.

"As the South had now surrendered there was to be but one nation hereafter. No state could now withdraw from the Union and no black man could be held in bondage.

"Surely, we owe this nation as a whole to Abraham Lincoln. No other man could have taken the reins of government in his hands and have driven through the struggle as successfully as Abraham Lincoln. Though Mr. Lincoln was at the head of the government and the army he was not the only man that worked that this nation might live and prosper. There were thousands of others. So to show our regards for these we set aside one day each year to decorate their graves. This day is commonly known as "Decoration or Memorial Day."

STEVENS' MURDERER

Thought to Be In Great Falls Jail.

Helena, Mont., May 31.—Held in the Great Falls City jail under commitment for ten days for vagrancy is a man who the officers believe has been guilty of a serious crime somewhere and they are not certain that he is not John Benner, alias Smith, the alleged murderer of Night Marshal Fred Steven of Havre. He answers in every detail to a description of Benner that has been sent from Havre.

The prisoner is a puzzle to the officers. He declares that he is a miner and came from Mexico, but refuses to state in what part of Mexico he worked or to tell where else he has been.

When taken out of jail to be photographed he did not protest, but refused to look at the camera and upon his face was a peculiar expression almost identical with that shown in the photograph of Benner.

YOUNG COUPLE

Locked In Nebraska Capitol and Ransom Demanded.

Lincoln, Neb., May 31.—Charged with locking Harry Kirk and Josie Cutler in different rooms of the statehouse, Night Watchman George S. Van Houten, formerly of Auburn, was arrested yesterday and released on bail furnished by Attorney General Prout.

Kirk says he was locked in a closet, money demanded for his release, and kept thirty minutes. He was then told that the girl had been released. She was detained until 4 o'clock in the morning by Van Houten.

The watchman, it is said, covered the two with a revolver and compelled them to enter the capitol. A similar charge was filed against him some time ago, but the complainants decided not to prosecute. He denies the charge.

Ottawa, May 31.—The rapid development of industrial enterprises in the maritime privinces of Canada, especially in Nova Scotia, is drawing from the Atlantic fishing industry a large number of men, who find that they can now get less hazardous and more remunerative work on shore. In consequence of this condition a petition has been sent to the Dominion government by the fishing operators, urging that some 500 or more Scotch fishermen be imported to man the Nova Scotia fishing fleet.

The government has not yet taken action, believing that the men would return to their accustomed vocation in the fisheries owing to the high wages paid this season. This, however, they have failed to do. It is now too late to get foreign crews this season, but if the dearth of fishermen continues a colony of fishermen will be brought out from Scotland next year to check the decidence of the bank fishery, which requires very large crews for profitable prosecution.

This state of affairs must also affect the fishing fleet of Gloucester, Mass., whose vessels have hitherto been largely manned by Nova Scotia crews. The catch of bank cod by the Nova Scotia fleet last year was 135,000 quintals, a decline of 105,000 quintals from the average take during the year.

This same condition is reported to prevail in Newfoundland, where fewer men than ever will be engaged in cod fishing this season. Hundreds, if not thousands, are said to have abandoned fishing for easier work, and the wages being paid are larger than ever before given.

Another "Yankee bogey' is being created by certain writers in the public press of Canada out of the alleged desire of Americans to acquire possession of the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It is openly asserted that every isolated or remote bit of Canadian territory is now regarded throughout the Dominion as attracting the covetous desire of United States politicians.

By the ultra-loyal and pessimistic class of Canadians, particularly since the decision in the Alaska boundary matter, this declaration is credited to its fullest extent. Consequently the statements which appear in Canadian newspapers from time to time of late, that the Unuited States is laying claim to Hudson bay and the adjacent north land, that they are proposing to purchase the Miquelons from France, that their explorers are penetraing Labrador for a sinister purpose, and that now they have designs upon the Magdalens, have aroused considerable uneasiness amon ga large and important section of Canadian citiezns.

Some five years ago M. Menier, the millinonaire chocolate manufacturer of Paris, purchased the Island of Anticesti and established a virtual allen proprietorship over the key to the gateway of the St. Lawrence. A storm of protests raged about the heads of the Ottawa ministery for the moment, but now the circumstance is nearly forgotten. Subsequently a Canadian company acquired the Magdalen Islands which, it is said, they now propose to sell to an American syndicate, and accordingly it is pointed out in a sensational yal calculated to excite the fear and aprehension of the people that the danger to Canada from the Magdalens falling into American hands would be far greater than the supposed menace which French ownership of Anticesti exerts over the well-being of this country, because United States fishermen possess the right, under the treaty of 1818, of unrestricted access to the Magdalen waters.

For this reason, it is claimed, American fishing interests wish to strengthen their hold on the Magdalens, so that they may secure some convenient advanced base in the North Atlantic in the event of a possible future contingency arising. This contingency would happen should complications occur between the United States on the one hand and Canada and Newfoundland on the other over fishery matters which would lead to the cancellation of the modus vivendi by which American fishermen now obtain free access to the non-treaty littoral of Canada and Newfoundland. This would lead to annoyances such as resulted from the use of the Miquelons by the French.

The strategic consequences, it is also urged, arising from the acquisition of the Magdalens by the Americans, might be far-reaching. These islands stretch like a screen across the front of Cabot strait. They are ninety miles from Newfoundland and sixty miles from Nova Scotia, so that the channels though which the internal waterborne traffic of Canada must pass are within comparatively easy range of a speedy hostile cruiser, while both channels converge into the strait, which would be easily dominated by a warship having her base at Amherst Island.

While there may be some fair show of good reason in raising an alarmist cry over this matter in order to arouse the Dominion and provincial authorities to a plain sense of the situation and move them to guard against the future possibilities of any serious menace to the welfare of the Dominion, nevertheless there is no real cause for agitation. Aliens have the right to purchase and hold lands in Canada wherever situate. They are amenable to the laws of this country. The right of expropriation of all lands in the Dominion exists in the crown, and may be exercised when deemed necessary and expedient, and Canadian officials are to be found in every community within the borders of the Dominion to safeguard the interests of the country.

It seems that the only purpose such stories as the foregoing can possibly serve is to intensify Canadian distrust of American public men and their policy in regard to the northern part of this continent.

MOHAMMEDANISM.

The origin and spread of Mohammedanism occurred in the seventh century. Mohammed, the founder, was an Arabian, born at Mecca, about 570. He at first met strenuous opposition. Finally the people flocked to his standard until his new religion swept all Arabia and Persia. Another notable conquest is that of pillsbury's vitos, which has become the leading cereal food of the world. Have you tried it?

PROBLEMS OF LABOR

And Immigration to Be Discussed By Southern Convention.

Manufacturers to Meet at Warm Springs, Ga., June 9.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Those concerned with the social, economic and industrial problems which at this time are confronting the new South will be deeply interested in the fifth annual meeting of the Georgia Industrial association which will be held at Warm Springs, Georgia, on June 9. This organization comprises a membership of one hundred and fifty Georgia cotton manufacturers, noted for their progressive views and their ability in industrial lines, whose intelligent efforts have done much to restore and upbuild the industries of that section. The approaching meeting will be especially noteworthy because of the variety and importance of the topics scheduled for discussion, which are of great moment to the South and of general interest to manufacturers throughout the country. The principal discussion will deal with the problems of labor and immigration, and state and national legislation affecting the same; the effect of the construction of the Panama canal on Southern industries; and the condition of the far Eastern markets as affected by the Russo-Japanese war. Of these the South is at present more vitally interested in the question of labor supply—labor for its fields and its mills.

As yet the South is singularly free from labor legislation of a restrictive character. The labor unions have made but little headway in the cotton-growing states but as the great industrial progress of this section is attracting the investment of northern capital, so the increase in the possibilities of Southern labor is causing the leaders of organized labor to look with longing eyes on this comparatively virgin field for their endeavors.

It is not putting the case too strongly to say that the manufacturers of the South view with grave apprehension the possibility of a growth of the labor unions in their section, accompanied by the limiting of output and apprentices and followed, as it inevitably would be, by clamor for restrictive legislation. For several years past they have sent delegations to congress to protect against the general principle of the National Eight-Hour Bill and there they have met and exchanged views with New England manufacturers who have related their unfortunate experiences with labor unions and the depressing effect of such restrictive legislation upon their varied industries. The Southern cotton manufacturers hope to profit by the experience of their New England competitors and avoid the legislative pitfalls in which they have fallen, and, therefore, in order to learn, first hand, of the pernicious consequences of this kind of legislation, first upon the industry and then upon the very labor which its enactment, the association has invited Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, to deliver the usual address. Mr. Davenport is the executive agent and one of the attorneys of the American Anti-Boycott association, an organization which was formed especially for the purpose of resisting the encroachments of organized labor in the halls of legislation, and to secure the enforcement of the laws against boycotting, national and state. To prevent its members from being subjected to boycotts because they belong to the association the strictest secrecy is maintained as to its personnel, but is well known as being one of the largest and most influential organizations of the kind in the country and as having an unusually extensive membership among the leading manufacturers, merchants and contractors. It is especially strong in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and other New England states, so that Mr. Davenport, who has visited thousands of factories in those states within the past three years, is well qualified to tell the Georgia manufacturers the difficulties under which their New England brothers are laboring and point out evils which they may avoid. For a number of years he has devoted himself to making a special study of all the legal phases of the labor problem, and is recognized as probably the leading authority and speaker on this subject in this country from the standpoint of the employers. During the last session of congress the Anti-Boycott association took the principal part in opposing the anti-injunction bill and the national eight-hour bill, Mr. Davenport's efforts being most ably seconded by Hon. Jas. M. Beck, of New York, formerly solicitor general of the United States, whose speech before the house committee on judiciary in opposition to the anti-injunction bill was regarded as a classic by such constitutional lawyers as Representatives Littlefield, of Maine, De Armond, of Missouri, and others.

Mr. Davenport's address before the association will deal with the effects upon the industries of New England, of strikes, lockouts and boycotts, legislation restricting the hours of labor in mills and factories, the rules of union labor limiting apprentices and output, and other kindred topics, and, as in addition to being thoroughly cohversant with his subjects, he is a polished orator of force and vigor, his address should prove unusually interesting.

That the South is keenly alive to the importance of preparing to meet, sooner or later, the same problems which have confronted the northern manufacturers is shown by their pleas before congressional committees "to be let alone." The Georgia Industrial association has been among the foremost organizations in the South in preventing labor troubles and taking cognizance of such questions far enough in advance to escape the perils which threaten the very existence of the New England manufacturers. Mr. Frederick B. Gordon, of Columbus, Ga., president of the asosciation, is himself a native of Massachusetts, who went to Georgia twenty years ago to engage in the manufacture of cotton there because he foresaw that labor disputes in the older manufacturing state would inevitably drive capital to fresh fields nearer the source of supply. "What we need in the South is laws to make people work and not laws to make them idlers," he told Senator McComas' committee.

"The entire world looks to the South for the bulk of its cotton. Twelve million bales will be required to meet the demand this coming year, and the South is going to try to produce it. The greatest obstacle in the way is lack of labor. The pampered plumber of Washington may want an eight-hour day, but the hungry cotton picker of the South does not! The former measures his work by the sixty minutes, the latter by the hundred pounds. When Georgia wants shorter working hours public sentiment will enact a law to meet its requirements. No one in the South wants a dwarfed labor day. Capital is pouring in for the developing of her vast natural resources and we want no disturbing legislation. Our conditions are entirely different from those of the older and more thickly settled states. The manufacturers of cotton goods in Massachusetts and Rhode Island are so severely hampered by laws applying strictly to the cotton mills, which is purely class legislation, that those of us in the South who are familiar with the operations of those laws are going to use every effort to be freed from legislation of that kind."

The New England manufacturer is not behind the Southerner in recognizing the advantage of the South in having comparatively unrestricted labor if not an unlimited supply of the same, and Massachusetts has headed a movement to bring about the adoption of a constitutional amendment, giving power to the United States government to regulate, throughout the entire country, the hours of labor, to the end that conditions shall be equalized and all the various industries conduct their operations on the same terms. A resolution for such an amendment, has been introduced by Representative Lovering of Massachusetts.

Commenting on this fact, Fuller E. Calloway, of La Grange, Georgia, a member of the Georgia Indutsrial association, said: "We have no objections to the public in Massachusetts making any laws that they may see fit. If they want to walk on their heads, or their hands, that is their business. We do not object to or offer any criticism of what they do in any other state. We are in nice shape and we want to continue so. If they have made mistakes up in the North, why we are late getting into the game and we ought to improve our conditions by profiting by the mistakes the other fellows have made. Massachusetts is something like the fox that had his tail cut off and then wanted all the foxes to have their tails cut off because he thought it was the style. I'm sorry for the man who has his tail cut off, but I don't want to join him. A great many of the manufacturers of Massachusetts are building mills in Georgia, and that is where they are making their dividends. What we hope to do in our country is to profit by the errors that have been made before."

This question will be thoroughly discussed at the coming meeting of the association by Messrs. Davenport, Gordon and others and the discussion will doubtless attract wide attention in New England and throughout the South.

CONVENTION ENDED.

New oYrk, May 31.—The national convention has closed its regular sessions, says a Herald dispatch from Panama. A special session has been convoked, however, by the president and will begin June 1, to last ten days. Pending subjects and special matters proposed b ythe executive will be discussed.

DECLINED TO RUN

Only Person Who Ever Rejected Nomination For President.

Nomination For the Vice Presidency Refused Several Times.

Washington, May 31.—The statement is often made that no man ever declined a nomination for president. A convention of the Abolitionist party was held in New York city in November, 1847, and nominated John P. Hale of New Hampshire for president and Leicester King, of Ohio, for vice president. Mr. Hale declined the nomination and the ticket was abandoned. In 1852 the Free Soil Democratic party held a national convention in Pittsburg and nominated Hale for president. He accepted, and at the election received 156,149 votes in twenty states.

Party nominations for vice president have been declined a number of times. In the Democratic national convention of 1844 Silas Wright of New York was nominated for vice president on the first ballot, receiving 256 of the 266 votes. He declined to accept, and George M. Dallas, of Pennsylvania was nominated on the ticket with James K. Polk. The Democratic ticket was successful in the election. The nomination for second place on a national ticket by third parties has been several times declined.

Tuesday after the first Monday in November was fixed as the date for the election or appointment of presidential electors by act of congress in 1845, and the law took effect for the first time in 1848. Prior to that time each state fixed its own date for the election of electors. The framers of the constitution did not contemplate the selection of presidential electors by popular vote. In the early part of the last century many states chose electors by the legislatures. South Carolina continued that practice until 1860.

Edwin D. Morgan, of New York, was chairman of the first Republican national committee. He managed the Fremont campaign of 1856 and the Lincoln campaign of 1860. He was succeeded in 1864 by Marcus L. Ward, of New Jersey. The Democratic party did not organize a national committee until 1856. David A. Smalley, of Vermont, was the first chairman. August Belmont, of New York, was chairman of the Democratic national committee in 1860, 1864 and 1868. In 1872 Edwin D. Morgan, of New York, served a third term as chairman of the Republican national committee. He was succeeded in 1876 by Zach Chandler, of Michigan. In the same year Abram S. Hewitt, of New York, became chairman of the Democratic committee.

In the election of 1860 Stephen A. Douglas, one of the Democratic candidates for the presidency, received 1,365,976 votes in the popular election, but carried only two states—Missouri and New Jersey. The popular vote for Lincoln in the same election was only 1,866,352, but he carried seventeen states. John C. Breckinridge, the Independent Democratic candidate for president, received only 847,514 popular votes, but he carried eleven states and seventy-two electoral votes. The electors of New Jersey, a state carried by Douglas, divided and four of them voted for Lincoln. Douglas, with the second highest popular vote, received only twelve votes in the electoral college. In the same election John Bell, the Constitutional Union candidate, did not receive a majority of the popular vote in any state, but he had a plurality in three states and thereby obtained 39 electoral votes—12 from Kentucky, 12 from Tennessee and 15 from Virginia. The electoral vote for Lincoln was 180, a majority over all.

Martin Van Buren was elected president in 1836 as a Democrat, was defeated in 1840 and in 1848 was the candidate of the Free Soil party. In the latter election he polled 291,263 votes, of which 120,510 were cast in New York state. He did not carry a state, and received no votes in the electoral college. In 1856 Millard Fillmore, as the candidate of the Know Nothing party for president, received 874,534 votes out of a total of 4,063,967, and carried one state, Maryland, receiving eight electoral votes. In the Democratic national convention of 1856 ten candidates for the nomination for vice president were balloted for, and all were from Southern or border states. John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, was nominated on the second ballot.

James K. Polk was the only man who had been speaker of the house of representatives who was elected president. In the national convention of 1844 Martin Van Buren was the leading candidate for the nomination for president. The convention wrangled for a day and a half over the rules proposed, and finally adopted the two-thirds rule for nominations. The name of Polk was not mentioned in the convention until the eighth ballot, when he received 44 votes. On the next ballot he received 206 votes, the entire vote of the convention. That was the last time that a Democratic national convention had attempted to repeal the two-thirds rule, which was adopted at the first convention held in 1832.

The Democratic national convention of 1842 was in session for six days and forty-nine ballots were taken on the nomination of a candidate for president. Franklin Pierce did not receive a vote until the fortieth ballot, when twenty-nine were cast for him. On the forty-ninth ballot he was unanimously nominated.

George Washington was the only president to receive the unanimous vote of the electoral college. At the second election of James Monroe, in 1820, there was no political opposition, but one elector from New Hampshire voted for John Quincy Adams, explaining that he did so in order that no man might share with Washington the honor of unanimous election.

FATAL RESULTS

Followed the Walking Match of French Regiments.

Paris, May 31.—Fatal results followed the army walking match from the Place de la Concorde to St. Germain and back, a distance of about twenty-eight miles, in which two thousand soldiers from many regiments took part. Reports received by the ministry of war show that forty-twe men are missing and a number of them are believed to have succumbed to hardships. Besides those missing thirty-four men were taken to hospitals along the course, in various stages of prostration.

In the chamber of deputies yesterday War Minister Andre was severely criticised for permitting the contest, which is denounced as brutal.

Gen. Andre admitted that a mistake had been made and a vote of confidence was only passed by a narrow margin.

MANY DISQUALIFIED.

Midshipmen Not Up to Required Physical Standard.

Annapolis, Md., May 31.—The result of the annual physical examinations of the midshipmen of the three classes now at the academy shows that seventeen midshipmen are disqualified to continue in the service and their resignations will be handed in within a few days.

The third class men are: Charles S. Albert, of Philadelphia; Kenneth C. Boush, at large; Andrew C. Ball, of Chelsea, Mass.; Arthur R. Joyce, Minneapolis, Minn.; George W. Miller, Vicksburg, Miss.; George Morton, Orange, Va.; William T. Peacock, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Benjamin F. Tilley, Jr., at large. Those of the fourth class are: S. A. Clemant, Calland, Va.; O. W. Howard, Omaha, Neb.; E. F. Kelly, Boston; W. G. Coe, Baker City, Oregon; W. O. Wallace, Warrensburg, Mo.; E. A. L. Vossgler, Marysville, W. Va.; F. S. Macy, Cambridge, Mass.; L. S. Bisky, Lawrence, N. Y.

Hints To Advertisers

"Goods that are not good enough to advertise are not good enough to buy" is a pretty generally accepted truism.

No advertising is fully effective unless it is continuous. This truth is so elementary, so obvious, so unavoidable, that it cannot be stated too often or too strongly.

The timid advertiser shares the penalties of timidity which are meted out to the half-hearted in every walk of life. Lack of confidence is "the rock ahead" of more people than is recklessness, even, and that is saying a good deal.

The public is apt to accept the merchant's own estimate of the importance of his store. If a merchant thinks that a few inches of advertising space adequately represents him, the reader will probably think so too.

Owing to the daily increasing circulation of The Herald, an advertising contract with it is an asset always increasing in value to the advertiser.

Advertisers who consult their own interests best send their advertising copy for The Wednehday and Friday Herald to this office the day previous, thereby insuring running in the Iron Range and Superior editions of The Herald.

PLUNGED TO DEATH.

Twenty Precipitated Into River From Breaking Bridge.

Salida, Colo., May 31.—While the memorial exercises were at their height yesterday and the veterans were casting flowers in the waters of the Arkansas river in memory of the heroic dead, four people were suddenly plunged to death by the breaking of a foot bridge spanning the river at the lower edge of Riverside park. A number of others were thrown into the stream, several of whom are missing. The rest narrowly escaped with their lives. The accident was witnessed by a thousand persons, who seemed powerless to render assistance. The known dead:

MRS. CLARENCE A. TOMPKINS, aged 25.
HAZEL LINES, aged 6.
ESTHER MORGAN, aged 8.
PEARL HOLLAND, aged 9.

Nora Anderson, aged 13, is missing, and the body of a boy whose name has not been learned, was seen floating two miles down the river.

The people who witnessed the accident declare there were twenty persons on the bridge at the time of the collapse. A wire netting has been stretched across the river at Wellsville, six miles below Salida, in the hope that the bodies will be swept into it. A report is in circulation that the body of Mrs. Tompkins has been seen lodged on a rock several miles below the city, but this cannot be verified. It will require several days before it is positively known how many lives are lost.

KILLING OF BIRDS

Boys with sling-shots and rifles are apt to find themselves in trouble this summer if they attempt to kill any of the harmless birds which frequent Northern Minnesota.

The Duluth Humane society has had printed several placards bearing the following inscription: "Five dollars reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person attempting to kill harmless birds, or rob or destroy birds' nets, or for any person who unjustifiably administers poison or noxious drugs to any animal. Boys with rubber slings or pop-guns are hereby warned."

The signs have been posted in conspicuous places throughout this part of the state. On his recent trips to the range towns, Humane Officer Withrow has taken a number of the signs with him and distributed them in the places where he though they would do the most good. The remainder of the signs will be distributed in the immediate vicinity of Duluth.

The signs have been printed in accordance with a resolution passed at a recent meeting of the Humane society, when it was decided to prosecute all offenders of the law governing the killing of harmless birds. Last year the woods about Duluth were frequented by boys with small rifles and sling-shots who worked havoc with the robins, woodpeckers and other harmless birds which are found in this part of the country, and this season the society determined to protect the birds as far as lay within its power.

The latter part of the notice is intended to stop, if possible, the malicious poisoning of dogs and cats, of which a number of cases were reported last summer. Several valuable hunting dogs were lost in this manner last fall and every summer cases of this nature come to the notice of the police.

J. A. MANNHEIM'S FUNERAL

Body Laid to Rest—Eagles Accompany Body.

The body of Joseph A. Mannheim was laid in its last resting place this morning. The funeral services were held in the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart at 9 o'clock this morning. They were conducted by Rev. Father Corbett.

The members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which Mr. Mannheim was president, accompanied the body from the house to the grave in Calvary cemetery.

Owing to the fact that the services were held in the cathedral, the ritualistic funeral services of the order were dispensed with.

All of the members marched in full regalia, headed by Flaaten's band, which accompanied the body as far as Eighth avenue east only.

Four of the pallbearers were chosen from the order as follows: Archie Kenney, Frank Horgan, E. T. Ellsworth and Dennis O'Leary. The other two were J. F. Dacey and Sergt. J. D. Kenna.

A number of beautiful floral tokens were received, including a large pillow of flowers from the order of which he was president.

READY TO FIGHT

Mrs. Charlotte Thompson Tells Court Her Marital Troubles.

Forty Years of Wedded Life, Mostly Filled With Fighting.

"Then I told him if he wanted to fight to come outside. I picked up two sticks of wood and if he had come on out I guess we would have had it," testified Mrs. Charlotte Thompson, this morning, who is suing Thomas M. Thompson for a divorce, in Judge Ensign's room.

The Thompson case was begun last week, the grounds on which the decree is asked being desertion and bad treatment.

The parties in the action have been married 40 years and Mrs. Thompson says that while nearly all those years witnessed almost daily scraps, domestic troubles have been particularly noticeable for the last nine years.

She claims that she and Mr. Thompson moved out to Calgary about two years ago, where they started a farm, but he gave her some money one day and left home never showing up again until she had come back to Duluth and started in farming.

She alleges that there was no one but herself and little grandson to look after the horses, cows and farm and she was compelled to hire men to do the work. On one occasion she took a lot of wood land on debt and gave a contract to one Peter Nelson to cut the wood on shares. Mrs. Thompson drew up the contract herself and one of the provisions was that Nelson was to do what was right in order that the agreement might be fulfilled.

Mrs. Thompson claims that her husband came back after she had made the contract with Nelson and became unreasonably jealous of the hired man. She says Thompson declared that unless she would send Nelson away he would not remain at home, but she told him that she had made a contract and would have to live up to it. "I told him," said she, "that if I wanted Nelson to cut poles he was going to cut poles and that is all there was about it."

Mrs. Thompson testified that her husband had made many remarks in very uncomplimentary terms relative to herself and Nelson and had a habit of using bad language. She also said that on one occasion Mr. Thompson even struck her in the nose and mouth. This was nine years ago, but he has since, she claimed, made motions as if to repeat the performance and she considered that sort of usage too harsh for any woman to put up with.

Mrs. Thompson was a particularly strong witness for her side of the case, possessing narrative powers on the stand not often heard in district court.

She is represented by Adams & Miller, while Mr. Thompson, who is contesting the divorce proceedings, is represented by M. H. McMahon.

In Judge Cant's room the court is hearing evidence in the case of Marion Corkery against Thomas Slattery and others, of Hibbing. Miss Corkery, who is the administratrix of the estate of her sister, a milliner, who died last year in Hibbing, brings suit to recover damages on account of a sale of the millinery stock at Hibbing. She sold the stock to a Hibbing woman, taking a note as security for payment. When the note fell due the purchaser claimed she could not meet it, and the parties indorsing the note, which was for $350, refused to take care of it.

Miss Corkery claims that she then tok the millinery stock back, its inventoried value to be applied on the note. When she went to take possession she found that it was claimed by Mr. Slattery, owner of the building where the millinery store was located, the latter having purchased the stock at an execution sale, and refused to give it up.

J. H. Whitely represents Miss Corkery and Martin Hughes represents Thomas Slattery.

PLAN IS NOT FEASIBLE

Planks Under Cedar Blocks Would Not Do For Roadway.

The plan to remove the cedar blocks from Central avenue and West Michigan street, and use the planks laid beneath them for a roadway, is not a feasible one, according to the report which will be made by the board of public works to the council this evening.

At the last meeting of the council the board of public works was requested to examine the condition of Central avenue north of Cody street and also West Michigan street, with a view to determining whether or not it would be better to remove the cedar blocks altogether and allow the teams to use the plank foundation for a roadway. The cedar blocks are in a very bad condition, having crumbled away in many places, leaving holes in the pavement. It was thought by the council that the bare planks might make a better roadway than the rotted cedar blocks.

The board after investigating the matter, have decided that the plan would not be a good one. The planks are simply laid down and any traffic over them would doubtless displace them making the road practically impassable. Many of the planks have also become partially rotten and they would be broken up as soon as the protecting layer of cedar blocks was removed.

The board will report to the council this evening, advising that the cedar blocks be allowed to remain.

WANTED IN MINNEAPOLIS

Young Negro Lad Missing From There Is Arrested Here.

August Plummer, a 16-year-old negro lad from Minneapolis, is in trouble with the local police.

H. C. Allen, of 21 Fifth avenue west, complained to the police last evening, that he had been robbed of a ten-dollar gold piece. He stated that he suspected a young negro lad who was boarding at the same house.

Detective Fritz was sent to the house in question and arrested the boy. A thorough search of his clothing at police headquarters failed to reveal the lost money, but he was held while the detective returned to search the house. After ransacking the house he finally discovered the money hidden beneath some ashes in the kitchen stove. It had been thrown into the ash pan and covered up with the ashes that had fallen from the grate.

The money was restored to its proper owner and the young lad was held by the police while the Minneapolis authorities were communicated with. It was discovered that the boy had run away from his home in Minneapolis, and that his mother has been searching for some clue to his whereabouts for several days past.

The police have no proof that the lad stole the money, as he denies it, and the case may be dropped and the boy returned to his parents in Minneapolis.

The discovery of the money in the ash pan of the kitchen range is an example of the queer places negroes will chose in which to hide money. The police, in searching a negro's house, always looks in the most out-of-the-way places they can think of. But a few weeks ago a negro woman concealed a roll of money under the salt in a large salt shaker in the kitchen cupboard.

LARGE STOCK SOLD.

I. Fremuth Attends a Large Auction of Jobbing Stock.

I. Freimuth has returned from a flying trip to New York, where he attended the great liquidation sale of Sweetser, Pembrook & Co.

Through the death of the principal member of the firm this, one of the oldest wholesale jobbing houses in America, was forced to go out of existence, and the $1,850,000 stock of merchandise was sold at public auction last week.

The reputation that Sweetser, Pembrook & Co. have attained for the high grade merchandise carried, resulted in the sale being attended by fully 400 buyers from the principal cities of the United States. Buyers from Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, the Middle West and even California and the Western coast were there.

I. Freimuth was the only Duluth merchant who attended the sale and he promises a rare merchadising treat to the Duluth public on the arrival of the purchases.

R. D. HAVEN DENIES.

Is Not a Candidate For County Treasurer.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Under the head of the political column in your issue of Saturday last, and in rather large headlines, I notice that you connect my name with the county treasurer's office. And it would seem to carry the idea that I am looking to be a candidate at the coming primary election for that office.

I am at a loss to know who gave any such information, for it certainly did not come from me. And I wish to deny, absolutely, that I have any idea of being a candidate for said office, either now or at any time in the future.

I trust that you will make this correction and give it as much notice as you did the fact that you thought I was a candidate for the office.

INTERFERES WITH GOLF

Cold Prevented Carrying Out of Full Decoration Day Program.

Weather interfered with yesterday's games on the North Land club grounds and the women's match, in the "blind bogey" special tournament for Decoration day, was called off, but the men's match was played with fourteen entries. Each man to enter contributed a golf ball and this made 14 balls divided into first, second and third prizes o feight, four and two balls, respectively.

In the men's match W. Dalrymple and P. C. Watson tied for first place, and rather than play it out in such weather decided to divide the first and second prizes, each taking six balls. F. E. House won third.

HEARST'S BOOM ENDED.

It is announced that William R. Hearst, who aspired to become the Democratic candidate for president, has closed his literary bureau at Washington and has canceled his contract for 150 hotel rooms at St. Louis during convention week. This practically ends the remarkable campaign upon which he started several months ago. There was no popular demand for Mr. Hearst's candidacy, but he deliberately set out to manufacture a boom and by a lavish expenditure of money sought to secure delegates favorable to his nomination. For a time he made considerable headway. The purchaseable element was quickly attracted by the free outflow of money to push his candidacy, and many other people, who honestly believed that he represented their principles, came to his support. The result was a temporary boom of not insignificant proportions. But it was a movement that soon reached its limit. No man ever before expended so much money to get a presidential nomination, and it is not likely that the incident will be repeated. Mr. Hearst's boom has collapsed, after an expenditure of between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. It is a gratifying outcome because it demonstrates that no man can buy his way to the presidency.

Of course, Mr. Hearst has secured a vast amount of advertising, and the newspapers which he owns have been benefited by his spectacular campaign, but it is doubtful if the returns will recoup Mr. Hearst for the vast sum he has expended. He may have from 125 to 150 delegates in the St. Louis convention—not enough to have any influence either in shaping the platform or selecting the candidate.

THE TAX-DODGING FARMER.

The down-trodden and oppressed business men of the cities, the wholesale dealers, elevator men, railroad owners and other representatives of the corporation underdog have decided to rest no longer under the cruel oppression of unjust taxation. They will no longer permit the plutocratic farmer to escape his just share of the public burdens by undervaluing his property when the assessor comes around. Consequently the representatives of these institutions on the state board of equalization have given orders to the state auditor to send positive instructions to each township assessor, telling him just how much he shall value each item of personal property found on the farm. One year-old horses and cattle must be assessed at a fixed figure and upwards, 2-year-olds at so much, 3-year-olds at so much, hogs and sheep at so much. The instructions are very strict and definite.

It is not thought necessary, of course, to make a basis on which the assessors must value stocks of goods in wholesale houses, in mills and elevators and in manufacturing concerns. The proprietors of these are all honest and list their property at full value. It is the dishonest farmer who must be watched. He has such a way of undervaluing his 2-year-old horses and cattle and pigs. The law requires that all grain in elevators on railroad right-of-way or elsewhere shall be assessed and taxed against the owners in the assessment district where such elevator is situated. Grain in elevators at terminal points is assesed at 10 cents a bushel. County assessors are required and directed to assess the property of farmers at 50 per cent of its value.

The Northfield News, in meek innocence, asks: "Why the discrimination in favor of the millionaire mill owners and elevator men and against the man who grows the grain?" As if us city people did not know that the farmer is the man who makes all the money off the grain, and that the poor elevator man has an awful time to get money enough together to buy an automobile or a trip to Europe.

These plutocratic tax-dodging agriculturalists have had their own way long enough. It is the corporations' innings now, and they are going to see that justice is done in future in the way of compelling these farmers to meet a just and proportionate share of public burdens.

SUBSIDIES NO GOOD.

What difference does it make to the American people generally whether American ships or foreign ships carry the commerce of the high seas? If we cannot have American ships in this traffic without taxing ourselves, what is the sense in having American ships? If anybody is desirous of putting his money into ocean ships he is not prevented from doing so. And if the shipping restrictions in the United States laws were removed he could sail those foreign-purchased ships under the American flag if he so desired.

The ship subsidy schemers found small consolation in the testimony of J. J. Hill before the congressional committee the other day. He bluntly told them that subsidies would be of no avail and that if adopted the entire amount thus extracted from the pockets of the American people would soon be going into the coffers of a small group of ship-owners. Mr. Hill is a ship-owner himself, and it is said that he has found that American-built ships do not pay, but he is fair enough not to ask the American people to make good his losses and pay him a profit through subsidies.

When the American people desire to have ships built in America let them so reduce the tariff that the necessary materials can be purchased as cheaply here as they can be in other countries. American skill and American enterprise will do the rest. The ship-subsidy plan, bad as it is, however, is no worse than the policy pursued by the "stand-pat" element in the Republican party. No nation can make itself prosperous by taxing the many for the sole benefit of a few.

NOT ALL BAD.

A woman teacher in the Brigham Young college in Utah made a spirited defence of Mormonism before the National Federation of Women's clubs on Wednesday last at St. Louis. Certainly she showed great bravery because most of the opposition that arose to the seating of Congressman Roberts and Senator Smoot came from this club federation. But that the young woman was justified in defending her church as long as she did not attempt to justify polygamy, there can be no doubt. We do not need to depend upon her testimony to learn that the Mormon church is doing good in many ways.

The Herald has already called attention to the evidence of an eminent Idaho jurist who said that the Mormon church was doing a splendid work in that state. Ray Stannard Baker, a writer of undoubted ability, has been investigating the church in other states, and he gives the result of his investigations in the current number of the Century Magazine. He finds that the Mormon church is, without question, a great factor in the civilization of the entire West, and says it is expanding "in a manner little short of amazing."

The Herald does not believe that any system built on error can constantly grow and thrive. Therefore, in looking for the reasons for the exceptional growth of this church, it is necessary to look for something different from the evil of polygamy. It is necessary to look for something good and this is found in the system of mutual helpfulness or co-operation employed by the church officers. Mr. Baker finds that as a result they are in political control or hold the balance of power not only in Utah, but also in Idaho and Nevada and possibly Wyoming and Colorado, and in Arizona and Washington their hold is strong.

A banker at Logan, in the Cache valley of Utah, who is not a Mormon, says that he "had never known a community so prompt and honorable in its business dealings." Crime is rare. The people are hardworking, sober and honest. They do not differ in appearance from those of any other agricultural section of America. Many of them are rich for farmers. They are intelligent, well-dressed and bear all the indications of an orderly and prosperous community. The county seat is Logan, with 5,000 inhabitants, which Mr. Baker says, is a "fine, well kept city."

The valley was a desert region and they have made it fruitful and prosperous by irrigation, and it is also producing an overflow of population, which is going forth to open up new valleys in Wyoming, Idaho and Canada.

Now, is this not a terrible indictment to bring against a church—industry, sobriety, honesty, uprightness, intelligence, cleanliness, prosperity and progress? Is it any wonder that the Mormon church grows? It would seem that if the other churches are anxious to fight and destroy its growing power they might make better progress if they would adopt some of its methods.

GORMAN'S DEMOCRACY.

Senator Gorman of Maryland wrote the platform for the recent Democratic convention in that state. He also sat down upon the proposition to instruct the delegates to vote for himself as the presidential nominee. He recognized the fact that he was an impossibility and he wanted the delegation free to use its best judgment when the national convention meets. He won his point.

Gorman's Democracy has sometimes been called into question on account of his opposition to the Wilson tariff bill, which finally passed congress in mutilated form when the Democrats were in power. But there was never any question as to his Democracy in the broader sense and during the last session of the senate he was recognized as among the ablest of the leaders on the Democratic side. The platform of the Maryland convention again proves his Democracy. Therein the Democrats of the state pledge themselves to the adoption of measures "to rescue the government from the evil consequences of so deplorable a departure from the fundamental principles of the constitution" as the acquisition of the Philippines. They demand that "at the earliest posible moment independence shall be granted to the Filipinos with the same general relationship to this country as that now enjoyed by the people of Cuba."

There is little doubt that the national convention will take a similar stand, and that as a result the party will add thousands of independent voters to its ranks in all sections of the country.

The Chicago Tribune, which has an idea that as long as the Democratic party asks for anything, its duty is to shout against it, asks: "Where is the statesmanship of giving the Filipinos an independence they are not fit for and promulgating a new Monroe doctrine for their protection from European and Asiatic powers?"

It is just exactly the same kind of statesmanship as was shown in the case of Cuba, which has proved both just and wise. There is no need of promulgating a new Monroe doctrine or any other kind of a doctrine in order to establish Filipino independence as soon as the people are ready for it. The Declaration of American Independence furnishes all the doctrine that is necessary. The claim that the Filipinos are not fit for self-government is only a subterfuge and a lying one at that. The same charges were made against the people of Cuba. They do govern themselves and do it well. But whether well or ill, that is their own business, not ours. Our duty as a nation ends when we see that they do not trample upon the rights of American citizens within their borders.

President Roosevelt, to the contrary notwithstanding, was never commissioned to see that other nations, either in the Eastern or Western hemisphere, governed themselves according to the American standard.

Has the New York Sun seen a great light at last? At the head of its editorial page in the issue of Saturday last the Sun said: "It is a noteworthy circumstance that—barring only Grover Cleveland, whom many Democrats persist in regarding as the man who could surely beat Roosevelt—the name now most frequently mentioned North, East, West and South with the accent of hope, is that of the young mayor of New York city." Evidently the men who like to sell stocks by the gallon instead of the block are on sufficiently good terms with Tammany Hall that they are allowed to occasionally pat the tiger.

THE FIELD SURVEY

The veteran editor H. P. Hall is said to be writing a history of Minnesota. It is safe to say that some things with which he is well acquainted will be left out.

* * *

Leprosy, like consumption, yields to a treatment which includes cleanliness, good food and pure air. And the greatest of these is cleanliness. Instead of following the ancient custom of learning how to die people are just beginning to learn how to live.

Chicago is preparing to enforce its new Fourth of July ordinance by having the public school teachers instruct the children that it is against the law to set off fireworks in the streets on that day. A similar plan might be followed in Duluth to advantage.

* * *

When a real battle did take place in the far East, the war correspondents appear to have secured a very good and satisfying description of it. It is evident that Japan does not object to the sending out of actual news.

If, as President Thomas says, the coal business is the riskiest in the world, it is evident that the coal barons manage to put the losing risk on somebody else. They appear to be willing, at least, to continue to assume their share of the risk.

Why should not a women's club discuss politics if it wants to? In that way the desires of its members can be learned. Those who advise the club federation at St. Louis to eschew politics are evidently afraid that some pet form will be tread upon. Everybody should discuss political affairs whenever possible.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

Speaking of a private gymnasium and bathroom recently established in Hibbing, the Tribune of that place says:

> The Tribune looks upon this addition in Hibbing's industries as a boon to many a mother and father and also as a safeguard to our younger folks who have been in the habit of spending their idle hours many other ways, much to the detriment of their health and morals, and would suggest that everyone who can should patronize this place and help keep it in existence, for in so doing you will not only be giving strength and morality to youth, but you will be assisting our police department in keeping down vice in our midst.

This is good advice. It is hoped that in time Duluth may have such institutions in outlying districts where not only those who are able to pay can gather for innocent instruction, but where those of greater need, the boys of poor families or without homes, can find wholesome companionship and recreation without money and without price. Who will undertake to supply this urgent need?

The Eveleth Mining News is three years old and a lusty youngster. It is a reliable and newsy paper.

The proper way to make a hit with a pun is thus indicated by the Wabasha Herald:

> A nice, harmless, little congressman, down in Illinois, is expecting a streak of Republican vice presidential lightning to come along, strike him a blow, and say "your HIT." How much more polished that is than the coarse, far-fetched treatment of the subject by the Princeton Union, in the following words: "It looks as if the Republicans would nominate a man for vice president who will make a great HIT."

The acme of organization for self-protection will be reached in the good times coming when the union will decide how much each employe can legitimately steal from his employer. This suggestion is made by the Wabasha Herald:

> The Great Northern road discharged about twenty conductors, a few days ago, for failure to account for cash fares, and because thereof the conductors on the entire system threaten to strike. As yet the brotherhood has not declared in dollars and cents how much each conductor must be allowed to "knock down" daily, but no doubt the present trouble will bring forth a specific demand on that subject.

How the editor of the Fergus Falls Globe stopped the toothache in his heel is thus related by that paper:

> Sunday morning, May 22, I noticed a sharp pain in the sole of my right heel. There was no outward sign of any foreign matter having penetrated the skin, but on making a forward pressure on the heel the pain was acute. I cut away some of the cuticle, when to my amazement a hair was seen sticking inward. When pulled out with a tweezer the hair measured ¼ inch and appeared to be from the head of a boy whose hair I had trimmed.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW:

That for the first time in our history our money circulation has reached $31.02 per capita. This shows a gain during the year of $1.44 per capita in circulation and a gain of $2.36 since May 1, 1902. Our entire circulation is $2,532,645,135. $1,120,000,000 of which is in gold.

That during the month of April, 46 banks have been launched into existence, but 42 were organized in March. The total capitalization of the 46 during last month was $2,338,000. Of these banks the South is responsible for the organization of 13 during April, while the West launched 14. In the East very few banks are being organized. Since the passage of the act of March 14, 1900, there have been organized in the country 1206 national banks, with an aggregate capital of $124,591,000. Of these 1077 are located in the South and W-

HOTEL GOSSIP

Capt. W. D. Hamilton, who is at the Spalding registered from Chicago, is a member of the executive committee of the Lumber Carriers' association, which, union committee some time ago at the Spalding, agreed to leave the matter of at its meeting with the Longshoremen's raising the wages of the men to 52½ cents per hour from 50. Capt. Hamilton says the matter has not yet been arbitrated as there has been no opportunity for the arbitrators to get together.

President Keefe, of the Longshoremen's union, has been busy attending to the strike at the grain elevators in Buffalo, and, having settled that, is expected to come to Duluth soon to take up the matter of the wages for the men who handle the lumber at this point. Chairman Hines, of the Lumber Carriers' executive committee, and President Keefe are two members of the arbitration committee, and the third has not yet been selected, or at least he has not been named. It is said that he will be appointed when the other two meet in Duluth, which is expected to be within the next ten days. It is understood, while not openly stated, that the third arbitrator will be a Duluth man who has practically been determined on. It is thought that the committee will meet in Duluth within the next ten days.

Owing to the unexpected press of business last night the McKay was filled to overflowing and had to get out cots. This is decided contrast to the general run of the hotel business recently, for the hotel men have complained that there was practically no business. They say travelling men would come and after a look around in their trade report that there was no chance to do any business worth while, and would leave the city. While the registers have showed the usual quantity of arrivals, it is said that the failure of them to stay any length of time cut heavily into the revenue of the landlords.

A large party of people from up the Iron Range road came in last night to the McKay to attend the performance of "The Crisis" at the Metropolitan. The following were from Two Harbors: Mr. and Mrs. Ing were from Two Harbors; Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Fitch, E. Griggs, D. D. Wan, J. W. A. Barton, the banker, and Dr. Chiency, of Duluth, formerly of Two Harbors; Miss Isabel Alton, Miss Helen H. Carter, Miss Ida Gauthier and M. M. Honna. Capt. C. Anderson, of Knife River, and daughter, and Miss Marie Briggs were also down for the play. The captain is one of the oldest of the Knife River residents, and a good deal of ground formerly owned by him at that point is a part of the present townsite. He keeps a general store at the station.

J. W. Walsh, of Tower, president of the Walsh Mining company, is at the McKay, where he resided all winter before going to Tower to proceed with the spring work on his company's mining property. Mr. Walsh is said to be much pleased with the developments. The drill is 300 feet down now and it is said the farther north the company investigates the better the product appears to be.

Walsh has been a steadfast friend of Landlord William McKay for twenty years, and twenty years ago these two and some other young men had a tintype picture taken, which picture is enrolled contrast with the appearance of the gentlemen today, and only a few favored ones are allowed to see it.

President W. F. Fitch, of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, who is a frequent visitor in Duluth, at the Spalding, has a very peculiar signature, and a great many people mistake the way he writes it for "Wm. Fitch." Mr. Fitch, in order to cross the two F's at once, draws a short line from the waist of the W and puts over this what looks like a small m. The writing that he puts under it is formed in such a way as to make a very interesting combination. The signature would be hard to imitate, and it may be for this reason that Mr. Fitch makes his autograph so original.

Miss May Gorman, of Appleton, Wis., who was at the McKay last night, is going to take a trip down the lakes on the new steamer Huronic.

R. C. Ray has left the McKay and has resumed housekeeping in the East End. Mrs. Ray having returned from her Southern trip.

R. B. Dole, of the United States geological survey, is at the Spalding.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ringwald, of St. Paul, are St. Louis arrivals.

S. T. Barton, of Ft. Francis, the little Canadian city situated on the Rainy River directly opposite International Falls, says that he looks to see the manufacture of peat into briquettes for fuel purposes become an important industry in certain parts of Northern Minnesota. Mr. Barton, now in Duluth on a business trip, though he resides in Canada, is greatly interested in the development of the northern counties of this state, and has extensive land holdings there.

"The big swamps of that part of the state lying to the north and northwest of Duluth," he said yesterday, "are generally considered valueless, and many of them are. This is not true of all of them, however. Some of the muskegs are nothing more than large peat beds. It may be many years before any use is made of these beds, but I am of the opinion that some day factories will be built in their vicinity, and that the manufacture of the fuel into briquettes will be carried on on a large scale.

"With conditions as they now are it would be rather a hard proposition to get the right kind of machinery on the ground, and once there the demand for the output would probably be small up there in the land of cheap fuel, but as soon as the railroads are laid through the region these conditions will be changed, and there should be a ready market for the product."

Mr. Barton spoke of the success attendant upon the manufacture of peat briquettes in Ireland, where the finished product is produced at an actual cost of $1.21 a ton. The peat is cut, and the whole process of manufacture gone through with machinery. The peat is made into little bricks by very great pressure and dried by an electrical process. It is claimed that drying by electricity keeps certain qualities in the fuel which make it burn more readily than is the case with sun-dried bricks.

There are also extensive peat beds in Northern Wisconsin, and at different times in the past twenty years there has been talk of making some use of them. Whatever plans were laid, however, were never carried out.

THE JOSHERS.

Puck: "What does Windem do?"
"He's a safeblower."
"Oh?"
"Always telling tall stories about himself that nobody can show are not true."

Chicago Daily News: Barker—Was there much wine down at Bender's dinner party?
Barker—I should say so. They had to have a phonograph to deliver the after-dinner speeches.

Chicago Daily News: "I suppose, my dear," said old Mine-boys, "that you object to my using tobacco because it is a poison?"
"Yes," replied his young wife, "because it is—er—such a slow poison."

Chicago Daily News: Husband (reading)—I wonder why they say a woman bestows her hand when she marries?
Wife—Oh, she doesn't realize until a few weeks after that she has put her foot in it.

"I am sure I don't know," replied the young man.
"Huh!" exclaimed the boy, disgustedly "I'll bet after I'd held anything on my knee for an hour I could make a pretty good guess."

Chicago Journal: Wigg—There is nothing so contradictory as a woman.
Wagg—Oh, I don't know. How about this war news?

Puck: Mrs. Sparrow—Aren't you going to build a nest?
Mrs. Redbreast—We can't. The housesmiths' union called Robin out on strike.

"No, suh! I got false teeth on de bottom on only two on top!"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Rush City Post: Woman has once more demonstrated her superior ability in the person of Mrs. Frank Dodson, who has made a perfect record as county recorder of Polk county, Iowa. Her books have balanced to a cent the first time in the history of the county.

St. Paul Dispatch: A convention capable of saying that "we believe it is equally unwise to legislate in a manner to provoke American industries to making war upon each other" is equally capable of saying that home markets should bear the burden of furnishing the foreigners with cheap goods.

McIntosh Times: The best way to control anything is to own it. In this particular, government control of railroads is no exception. The next best method would be for the government to fix the rate.

Adrian Democrat: The Japanese-Russian war doesn't seem to influence the price of hogs and cattle in this country as was expected. The packer's trust seems to have a lead pipe clinch on the situation, and no difference what the demand for the cured product may be, they keep hammering down the price of hogs and cattle. Judges may issue injunctions, investigating committees may be appointed, the infamy of their methods by which they rob the farmer and producer may be exposed, and even fines may be imposed, yet the packers' trust continues to meet every morning and fix the maximum price to be paid that day for hogs and cattle, and the "maximum price" is sure to be as low as the shippers can stand and frequently lower. The stock men of this country are robbed of millions of dollars every week by this trust, and there seems to be no possibility of breaking it up.

Sauk Center Avalanche: Often the only difference between the civilized man and the cannibal is that the latter knows what he does his killing for.

Red Wing News: Three hundred pool rooms have been raided in New York, either because Mayor McClellan is a lurking possibility, or because Tammany is framing a new tariff sheet, or because the authorities have really taken a notion to enforce the laws.

WATER FOR BRYAN'S WHEEL.

New York World: Science denies the possibility of a perpetual motion machine working by power developed within itself. To some the recent career of Mr Bryan has seemed to contradict this scientific principle. But the power that has kept Mr. Bryan going for eight years has not been spontaneously generated. It has been applied at frequent intervals from outside.

Mr. Hill gave the lagging Bryan wheels a new impulse when he drew up his Albany platform and put Mr. Woodward at the head of the electoral ticket. And if they showed any indication of running down they would be wound up again by such things as the comments of our esteemed and conservative neighbor the Sun upon the Northern Securities decision.

"The decree which the president obtained by 4½ to 4½," says the Sun, "has carried no moral force anywhere. It is generally condemned and spit upon."

When the supreme court, by a majority of one rotary member, reversed the unanimous decision of a court in the matter of the income tax, Mr. Bryan was fiercely denounced for criticising its latest judgment and refusing to accept it as final. But Bryan never said anything concerning our highest court equalling the "scorn and contumely" so freely expressed by the Sun.

Is the impression to be propagated over the prairies of the West and East-by conservatives regard the supreme court as a convenience, to be cherished when its decisions suit their desires and "spit upon" when they do not?

Bulletins of the Doctors.

I've noticed with a saddened thrill
That when a great man's falling ill,
At once the bulletins appear.
Apprising people far and near.
"His pulse is high, but we have hope—
We've pumped him full of Squibler's dope."

The days go on—and still we see
No change. With scientific glee
The literary experts write
This bulletin: "At eight tonight
We shall experiment and pump
His system full of Umpty-Gump.

At last the bulletin is read,
"Our famous patient now is dead,
We kept him worried all we could,
Stuffed him with predigested food.
We tried our projects great and small."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The way to solve the financial problem of how to keep money in circulation is for everybody to get married.

After a girl gets engaged she acts like a man who has just bought a dog supposed to be able to lick anything in his class.

A girl has an idea a man is crazy over her if he wears a boutonniere that matches some of her ribbons she is wearing where nobody can see them.

What convinces a woman that she is an economical housekeeper is the way she can save on the furnace coal bills in summer and the ice bills in winter.

Do Not Need Your Pity.

"A Country Cynic" in Chicago Journal: Of course it is very sad that people should gamble with cards or in stocks. But until the conditions of human nature change it seems, also too true, that people will gamble. Then why occupy valuable space in a valuable paper like the Journal with hyperbolical lamentations on the inevitable end of the gambler? Some of them end in a blaze of glory and a few gamblers in stocks have died comfortably in their beds, with the pleasing knowledge that there was a fat bank account left behind to care for their families.

Of course it's sad and distressing for the fellows who get it in the neck. But, really, they don't need our sympathy. The best was none too good when they had the price. Let them live in the memory of the good times they have had.

P. S.—I have just sent an order for a few shares of Lead stock in a company which is now being promoted. It "looks good to me."

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Grand Forks.
Winnipeg at Fargo.
Superior at Crookston.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Duluth's pennant aspirations received two severe jolts here yesterday, when the White Sox bumped up against the Tigers in the Memorial day games. For eighteen innings not a Duluth man crossed the plate, and the fans had the satisfaction of watching the Tigers shut out the team that had walloped last year's champions in three straight games.

The batteries in the morning game were Owens and O'Leary for Duluth and Morton and Brown for the locals. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the game was the fact that there was no official scorer on the ground, and this was not discovered until four innings had been played. The rest of the game was tabulated and the first four innings were patched up in the afternoon.

"Rusty" Owens pitched a winning game, allowing but one hit and two passes, but an error on the part of Martin and another by the right fielder tells the tale of defeat. The only score made by either side was made in the sixth inning. Hutchinson was the first man up to bat for the Tigers. He drew a hit, and went to third on an error by Corrigan. Cheek flew out to Corrigan. Then an error by Martin let Hutchinson score.

"Iron Man" Morton was on the firing line for the Tigers. Six strike outs and two hits is all there was to his sid. of the game.

Notwithstanding Owens' good work in the box luck was with the Tigers and with the hits about even they took the game without earning a run.

AFTERNOON GAME.

The second game was played at 4 p. m. The attendance was larger than at the opening game of the season. The weather was not the best for ball playing, but the fans minded it not. They were anxious to see the White Sox perform, and were thirsting for more blood.

Little Shaw was on the firing line for the visitors. He allowed but six hits and struck out five men. Hughes was behind the wind pad for the visitors, and caught an errorless game. Quillin took the only error for the visitors and that was a very bad one. In the second inning Cole hit him an easy grounder and he threw it into the bleachers. Cole went clear home.

O'Brien was in the box for the Tigers and pitched in bautiful form. Seven of the White Sox struck out, and three of them he gave passes to. Duluth made a desperate rally in the ninth and got three men on bases, but Owens, who batted for Shaw, flew out to third and it was all off.

NOLDIN AGAIN WINS

His Third Successive Victory For Superior.

Crookston, Minn., May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior won a hard game from Crookston here yesterday afternoon, before a crowd of 1,000 enthusiastic fans. Rain prevented the morning game, but the afternoon contest was a splendid exhibition of baseball. Thomas and Noldin were the opposing slab artists and both were in fine form. Noldin kept the hits scattered better than his opponent, however, and won his third successive victory since joining the Superior team.

Schills laced out a home run in the fifth, but luckily for Mr. Noldin the bases were empty. The score:

VERITABLE HAMMERFEST.

Fargo and Winnipeg Pound Ball to Limit.

Fargo, N. D., May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg's initial appearance in Fargo this season was the occasion for a big swatfest. In yesterday afternoon's double header in which the teams broke even, forty-eight hits for a total of seventy-eight bases were made, each team making two dozen safe ones.

Fargo took the first game by superior work both at the bat and in the field, the visitors playing a very loose game. Avery, the new man in center for Winnipeg was the chief offender and had three infractions, but his two hits in a measure redeemed his work.

Mankie's sensational stops were the feature of the game. Lempke's pitching hand was split in the first of the seventh and he was replaced by Foulks.

Manager Kelly got into an argument with the umpire in the eighth over a second base decision and was chased to the bench, Green finishing the game.

In the terrific batting contest in the second game, Winnipeg had the best of the argument. Fargo took kindly to Green's curves but the visitors had such a head they could not be overtaken.

Mixed up in the bombardment were two home runs by Rose of Fargo, five three baggers and four two sackers. Clark, who had failed to hit in the first game, secured five safe ones in five times up, and a pair of them were for three bags.

Foulks started to throw in the second game but was hammered hard and in the third was put out of commission by a hard drive. Milton lasted two innings and was replaced by Mehl, who was hit hard in the sixth and ninth.

Umpire Hamilton's work was unsatisfactory to both teams and showed up poorly contrasted with Smith's umpiring. The scores:

Off the Bat.

Lo! How have the mighty fallen!

• • •

Eighteen innings of whitewash for the White Sox.

How did they do it? From 16 to 1 to 0 to 1 is a big drop.

• • •

They were two great games. Shaw and Owens were pitching great ball and it was just a toss-up.

• • •

Two more games remain to be played with the Tigers before coming home. An even break on them will leave Duluth in first place.

• • •

Quillan had an off day yesterday. He sent one throw to first into the bleachers, allowing a man to score.

• • •

The coveted bit of bunting isn't floating over Athletic Park yet. A few games still remain to be won before the pennant is landed.

• • •

It looks like a race between Duluth and Grand Forks from present indications. Wait till they meet at Athletic Park.

• • •

Poor old Winnipeg keeps tumbling down the list and at her present rate will bring up with a bump at the bottom, within a few days.

• • •

Crookston certainly has the hoodoo that followed the White Sox last season. All of the six games lost have been close ones.

• • •

While the White Sox have been tearing loose in Winnipeg, Fargo and Crookston, that Superior bunch has been saying nothing and sawing wood. An even break away from home is going some.

• • •

Two more games with Grand Forks and then the opening of the season with Winnipeg at Athletic Park.

LECTURE ON INDIA.

Dr. Cleland Reads One By Missionary Located There.

Sunday at the First Presbyterian church, Rev. Thomas H. Cleland, D. D., the pastor, read a lecture on India prepared by Rev. Francis Newton, M. D. the medical missionary pastor at Ferozepur, India. The talk was a very interesting one and was illustrated by some fine stereoptican views. Facts were given relative to the condition and characteristics of the people in such a way as to make them very clear to the listeners.

Among other things it was stated that one eastern proverb qualified children and legs of stools as needing no clothing, and the proverb held true as far as the little ones were concerned, as they wore principally a necklace. The men and women dressed in very plain, loose clothes, rich and poor dressed in the same fashion save in the quality, the wealthy people wearing garments of silk.

Some of the handiwork of the natives was being lost in the advance of the century. Some of the fine light weaving which used to be frequently found, was hardly known now, as the western cloth by machinery was taking its place. The lecturer remarked the variety of western products used in India and said that the country represented a greater variety of interests than any other in the world.

Court Pneumonia.

The terrors of rheumatism, cramp, and pneumonia were braved by a number of small boys who indulged in the first swim of the year in some of the small creeks and ponds back of Duluth.

"The water was fine" said one youthful pneumonia aspirant, as he came down from the hill-top where he had been enjoying a plunge in the icy water. "It was kind'er cold at first, but it was all right when you got used to it."

Result of Error.

The flag above St. Luke's hospital floated at the top of the pole for three hours yesterday morning, through no fault of the hospital authorities. In hoisting the flag it was lifted to the top of the pole by mistake, and for three hours the piece of bunting defied all the efforts to lower it to half mast. The hospital authorities received telephone calls asking why they did not show the honor due to the dead soldiers by placing "Old Glory" half way up the mast and were compelled to make repeated explanations of the cause.

WHOLE FAMILY POISONED.

Two Dead From Eating Canned Green Peas.

New York, May 31.—After eating a can of green peas a few days ago, an entire family, consisting of five persons, were taken ill. Two of them have already died, a third cannot recover, and the other two are still alive, and it is believed their chances of recovery are good.

Guissippi Obraco, his wife, Marie, his daughter, Angelina, 18 years old, and his sons, Vincent, 14, and Antonio, 11, had a can of peas for supper last Friday. A short time later they were all taken ill and grew rapidly worse. A physician advised that the family go to a hospital, but they refused. Saturday Vincent, the eldest son, died. Yesterday Angelina died, and Antonio is beyond help.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 31.—While kneeling on the Plymouth bridge praying for a relative who was drowned five years ago, George Shepla has fallen into the Suspuehanna and been drowned. He was a foreigner, but knowing the American custom of services for the dead on Memorial day, he decided to go to the bridge and pray, thinking it appropriate to do so because the body of his relative was never recovered and the river was the only grave it knew.

CURES OTHERS, WILL CURE YOU.

Rea Bros.' Cascarin a Remedy of Merit.

You can't prevent a poisonous herb from growing by cutting off its leaves Neither can you prevent a disease from gaining ground by geting rid of its symptoms. With lots of medicine, all they do is to just ease the pain for a while, and leave the sufferer in hopes that he is cured, and then he finds, to his sorrow, when the lulling effect of such trashy medicines are worn off, that the trouble is worse than before. A medicine, to be of any real good, must uplift the disease, root and branch and all. Cascarin does this It goes right to the seat of the disease and overcomes and throws it out of the system forever Get your stomach and bowels in order. Cascarin will soon do that, and you will find that those sufferings you have so long and needlessly endured are ended at last. Put a stop to your unnecessary sufferings—unnecessary, when Cascarin will so readily cure you—give Cascarin the credit of one more added to its long list of cures. At leading druggists, 50c.

A NOTABLE ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT

Delivered on the Historic Cemetery Hill at Gettysburg.

Same Spot Where Lincoln Delivered His Immortal Address.

A Speech By Governor Pennypacker Introducing President.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 31.—On historic Cemetery hill, overlooking ground hallowed by the blood of half a hundred thousand brave men and in the presence of a concourse of thousands who had assembled to pay tribute to the memory of the nation's dead, President Roosevelt delivered a notable address.

On nearly the same spot on Nov. 19, 1863, President Lincoln delivered the immortal address enunciating principles which have rung around the world for more than a third of a century.

President Roosevelt was escorted to the cemetery on the battlefield by a body of several hundred veterans of the civil war. The president and his special escort were preceded by several organizations, including a squadron of the United States cavalry, the Third artillery and the Marine band of Washington, which had been ordered here for the occasion. Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the president's party followed in carriages. The rear of the procession consisted of civic organizations and citizens in carriages. Governor Pennypacker presided at the ceremonies, which were held in the rostrum in the cemetery. After the Memorial day services of the G. A. R. had been concluded, and the pupils of the schools had strewn flowers over the graves of the thousands of dead, during which ceremony the Marine band played a solemn dirge, Rev. Dr. Edward Everett, chaplain of the United States senate, pronounced an invocation.

GOVERNOR PENNPACKER TALKS.

The president was then introduced by Governor Pennpacker, who said:

The battle of Gettysburg, momentous in its exhibition of military force and skill, tremendous in its destruction of human life, had consequences which in their effect upon the race are limitless. As the seeds of the cockle are sown with the wheat, so in the constitution adopted by the fathers in 1787 lay the germs of an inevitable struggle. Two antagonistic forces grew in vigor and strength, side by side, in one household, and like Ormuzd and Ahriman, they must strive for the mastery. Upon this field the struggle came to a determination, and the issue between them was here decided with cannon and musket. The rebellion was undertaken by the followers of the doctrines of Calhoun and Davis with the purpose to rend the nation asunder and mould into fragments. Alas, for the futility of the expectations of men. The Lord, who holds the peoples in the hollow of His hand, and who since the dawn of history has taken them up by turns in the search for one fit for broad dominion, did not forsake us. The extraordinary powers exercised for the maintenance of the national life in that dire time of war became fixed as the principles of the national government. The flame of strife but tested the virtue of the metal. The blows intended to disever, only welded the sovereignties together more firmly, for future wider effort. The nation as it exists today rose when Pickett tried to drive the Philadelphia brigade from the spot on Cemetery Hill. A seer sitting on that dread day upon the crests of Big Round Top could have figured in the clouds of smoke rolling over the Devil's Den and the Bloody Angle, the scenes soon to occur in Manila bay, at Santiago and San Juan hill, the beaming of a new light at Hawaii and in the far Philippines, the junction of the two mighty oceans and the near disappearance of English control of the commerce of the world.

The presidential office is so great a station among men that those who fill it are not to be regarded as personalities. Their individuality is lost in its immensity. They become the manifestations of certain impulses and stages of development of the national life. Jackson represented its rough, uncouth and undisciplined strength. Lincoln looms up above all other Americans bearing the burden of woe and suffering which fate laid upon his broad shoulders in its time of stress and trial. Blessed be his memory forever more.

No people can look forward to the fulfillment of such a destiny as events seem to outline for us save one alert and eager with the enthusiasm and vigor of youth. No other president has so stood for that sweep of the winds over broad prairies, the snow-capped mountains and the rushing rivers, the sequoia trees, the exuberance of youth, conscious of red blood, energy and power painting our bow of promise—as does Theodore Roosevelt. He has hunted in our woods, he has enriched our literature, he has ridden in the face of the enemy, he has maintained our ideals. Upon this day, devoted to the memories of the heroic dead—in Pennsylvania, a sad Decoration day—the achievements of the prolific past and the promise of the teeming future confront each other. Today for the first time Theodore Roosevelt treads the field made immortal by the sword of George Gordon Meade and hallowed by the prose dirge of Abraham Lincoln.

The place where we now are has won a double distinction. Here was fought one of the great battles of all time, and here was spoken one of the few speeches which shall last through the ages. As long as this republic endures or its history is known, so long shall the memory of the battle of Gettysburg likewise endure and be known; and as long as the English tongue is understood, so long shall Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech thrill the hearts of mankind.

> The civil war was a great war for righteousness; a war waged for the noblest ideals, but waged also in thoroughgoing practical fashion.

It was one of the few wars which mean, in their successful outcome, a life toward better things for the nations of mankind. Some wars have meant the triumph of order over anarchy and licentiousness masquerading as liberty; some wars have meant the triumph of liberty over tyranny masquerading as order; but this victorious war of ours meant the triumph of both liberty and order, the triumph of orderly liberty, the bestowal of civil rights upon the freed slaves, and at the same time the stern insistence on the supremacy of the national law throughout the length and breadth of the land. Moreover, this was one of those rare contests in which it was to the immeasureable interest of the vanquished that they should lose, while at the same time the victors acquired the precious privilege of transmitting to those who came after them, as a heritage of honor forever, not only the memory of their own valiant deeds, but the memory of the deeds of those who, no less valiantly and with equal sincerity of purpose, fought against the stars in their courses.

> The war left to us all, as fellow-countrymen, as brothers, the right to rejoice that the Union has been restored in indestructible shape in a country where slavery no longer mocks the boast of freedom, and also the right to rejoice with exultant pride in the courage, the self-sacrific, and the devotion, alike of the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray.

He is but a poor American who, looking at this field, does not feel within himself a deeper reverence for the nation's past and a higher purpose to make the nation's future rise level to her past. Here fought the chosen sons of the North and the South, the East and the West. The armies which on this field contended for the mastery were veteran armies, hardened by long campaigning and desperate fighting into such instruments of war as no other nation then possessed. The severity of the fighting is attested by the proportionate loss—a loss unrivaled in any battle of similar size since the close of the Napoleonic struggles; a loss which in certain regiments was from three-fourths to four-fifths of the men engaged. Every spot on this field has its own associations of soldierly duty nobly done, of supreme self-sacrifice freely rendered. The names of the chiefs who served in the two armies form a long honor roll; and the enlisted men were worthy, and even more than worthy, of those who led them. Every acre of this ground has its own associations. We see where the fight thundered through and around the village of Gettysburg; where the artillery formed on the ridges; where the cavalry fought; where the hills were attacked and defended; and where, finally, the great charge surged up the slope only to break on the summit in the bloody spray of gallant failure.

But the soldiers who won at Gettysburg, the soldiers who fought to a finish the civil war and thereby made their countrymen forever their debtors, have left us far more even than the memories of the war itself. They fought for four years in order that on this continent those who came after them, their children and their children's children, might enjoy a lasting peace. They took arms not to destroy, but to save liberty; not to overthrow, but to establish the supremacy of the law.

> The crisis which they faced was to determine whether or not this people was fit for self-government and therefore fit for liberty.

Freedom is not a gift which can be enjoyed save by those who show themselves worthy of it. In this world no privilege can be permanently appropriated by men who have not the power and the will successfully to assume the responsibility of using it aright. In his recent admirable little volume on freedom and responsibility in democratic government, President Hadley of Yale has pointed out that the freedom which is worth anything is the freedom which means self-government and not anarchy. Freedom thus conceived is a constructive force, which enables an intelligent and good man to do beter things than he could do without it; which is in its esence the substitution of self-restraint for external restraint—the substitution of a form of restraint which promotes progress for the form which retards it. This is the right view of freedom; but it can only be taken if there is a full recognition of the close connection between liberty and responsibility in every domain of human thought. It was essentially the view taken by Abraham Lincoln, and by all those who, when the civil war broke out, realized that in a self-governing democracy those who desire to be considered fit to enjoy liberty must show that they knew how to use it with moderation and justice in peace, and how to fight for it when it is jeopardied by malice domestice or foreign levy.

The lessons they taught us are lessons as applicable in our everyday lives now as in the rare times of great stress. The men who made this field forever memorable did so because they combined the power of fealty to a lofty ideal with the power of showing that fealty in hard, practical, common-sense fashion. They stood for the life of effort, not the life of ease.

> They had that love of country, that love of justice, that love of their fellow-men, without which power and resourceful efficiency but make a man a danger to his fellows.

Yet, in addition thereto, they likewise possessed the power and the efficiency; for otherwise their high purpose would have been barren of result. They knew each how to act for himself, and yea, each how to act with his fellows. They learned, as all the generation of the civil war learned, that rare indeed is the chance to do anything worth doing by one sudden and violent effort. The men who believed that the fight would be ended in ninety days, the men who cried loudest "On to Richmond," if they had the right stuff in them speedily learned their error; and the war was actually won by those who settled themselves steadfastly down to fight for three years, or for as much longer as the war might last, and who gradually grew to understand that the triumph would come, not by a single brilliant victory, but by a hundred painful and tedious campaigns. In the East and the West the columns advanced and recoiled, swayed from side to side, and again advanced, along the coasts the black ships stood endlessly off and on before the hostile forts; generals and admirals emerged into the light, each to face his crowded hour of success or failure; the men in front fought; the men behind supplied and pushed forward those in front; and the final victory was due to the deeds of all who played their parts well and manfully, in the scores of battles, in the counties skirmishes, in march, in camp, or in reserve, as commisioned officers, or in the ranks—wherever and whenever duty called them. Just so it must be for us in civil life. We can make and keep this country worthy of the men who gave their lives to save it, only on condition that the average man among us on the whole does his duty bravely, loyally, and with common sense. That is the test which life allots to him. National greatness is of slow growth. It cannot be forced and yet be stable and enduring; for it is based fundamentally upon national character, and national character is stamped deep in a people by the lives of many generations. The men who went into the army had to submit to discipline, had to submit to restraint, brought to bear upon them by the leaders they had chosen, as the price of winning. So we, the people, can preserve our liberty and our greatness in time of peace only by ourselves exercising the virtues of honesty, of self-restraint, and of fair dealing between man and man. In all the ages of the past men have seen countries lose their liberty, because their people could not restrain and order themselves and therefore forfeited the right to what they were unable to use with wisdom.

> It was because you men of the civil war both knew how to use liberty temperately and how to defend it at need that we and our children and our children's children shall hold you in honor forever.

Here, on Memorial day, on this great battlefield, we commemorate not only the chiefs who actually won this battle; not only Meade, and his lieutenants, Hancock and Reynolds and Howard and Sickles, and the many others whose names flame in our annals; but also the chiefs who had made the army of the Potomac what it was, and those who afterwards led it in the campaigns which were crowned at Appomattox; and furthermore those who made and used its sister armies: McClellan, with his extraordinary genius for organization; Rosencrans, Buell, Thomas, the unyielding, the steadfast; and that great trio, Sherman, Sheridan, and last and greatest of all, Grant himself, the silent soldier whose hammer-like blows finally beat down even the prowess of the men who fought against him. Above all we meet here to pay homage to the officers and enlisted men who served and fought and died, without having, as their chiefs had, the chance to write their names on the tablets of fame; to the men who marched and fought in the ranks, who were buried in long trenches on the field of battle, who died in cots marked only by numbers in the hospitals; who, if they lived, when the war was over, went back each to his task on the farm or in the town, to do his duty in peace as he had done it in war; to take up the threads of his working life where he had dropped them when the trumpets of the nation pealed to arms. Today, all over this land our people meet to pay reverent homage to the dead who died that the nation might live; and we pay homage also to their comrades who are still with us.

All are at one now, the sons of those who wore the blue and the sons of those who wore the gray, and all can unite in paying respect to the memory of those who fell, each of them giving his life for his duty as he saw it; and all should be at one in learning from the deaths of these men how to live usefully while the times call for the performance of the countless necessary duties of everyday life, and how to hold ourselves ready to die nobly should the nation ever again demand of her sons the ultimate proof of loyalty.

ABOUT THAT COAT

You wear a coat. Why? To keep the cold out? No; to keep the warmth in. What of the body that has no warmth—the thin, poor body that lacks the healthy flesh and fat it needs?

For such we say that Scott's Emulsion provides the right kind of a coat.

Why? Because Scott's Emulsion builds firm, solid flesh and supplies just enough fat to fill nature's requirements—no more. That means bodily warmth.

FORTIFYING FORT WOOL

The War Department to See If It Is Practicable.

Washington, May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The war department is preparing once for all to ascertain if the fortification of the Rip Raps, the old Fort Wool of the Civil war, in Hampton Roads, is practicable, and worth the while. If it can be strongly enough fortified it will be the very key to the Chesapeake bay, and will be even a greater protection to Washington, Baltimore, Norfolk and Newport News, than Fortress Monroe is popularly supposed to be. If, however, the fortifications do not stand the test of heavy firing to which they will be put during the coming summer, the fort will be practicaly abandoned and the millions or more dollars spent on trying to make a modern fortification of it will have been sunk to the bottom of the sea, literally as well figuratively.

Fortress Monroe is popularly supposed to be the strongest fortified place in America, and the average American rests secure believing that no battleship would ever reach Washington while Fortress Monroe interposes its rock ribbed walls. But naval and military experts who know something of the real strength of Fortress Monroe express the belief that the capital will have to look to other protection than that of Fortress Monroe, in case the United States becomes involved in an international war. The old, antiquated stone walls of that part of the port the public sees, would hardly stand an hour before the thirteen-inch guns of a modern man-of-war, and it is to the disappearing guns up on the beach above the fort that the war officers are pinning their faith. But even they realize that the starteglic position of Hampton Roads is the Rip Raps, and if the tests that are to be made this summer prove it to be suitable to withstand the recoil of the big guns that are mounted on it, it will likely be made the real fortification of the Chesapeake. Where the doubt comes in is whether the island itself will withstand the firing of heavy guns. It is said to be sinking slowly but surely notwithstanding that new material is being constantly carried there.

The island is all made land. In the century that has passed it was the spot where all vessels threw the superfluous ballast they had on board, and as the deposits of the millions of little polyps make the coral reef, finally these deposits reared their heads above the water and assured the dignity of an island.

Prior to the Civil war it stood there as simply a ballast made island, but with the firing of the first gun of that period it was realized that section would be one of the great theaters of war, and every available inch of ground was fortified by one side or the other. The artificial island was deemed an important strategic point and was fortified. Its fortunes varied with the viscissitudes of war but it ended up as a federal fortification. Ever since that time a sort of half hearted effort has been made to make a strong fortification of it, but not until now has it been decided to see if, after all, the game is worth the candle.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, Editor. PAPAL NOTE AN INSULT

Rome, May 31.—The chamber of deputies was crowded today to hear the discussion on the interpellation of the attitude of the government towards the vatican protest against President Loubet's visit.

Signor Mazza, Republican, called the note of the papal secretary of state, Merry Del Val, a perfect insult. He recalled that the pope had not protested againts atrocious offense to religion in France. His holiness had now risen against a king who, according to the vatican, had stolen the pontifical patrimony, designating his majesty as a usurper.

The note, therefore, was a declaration of war. Signor Mazza asked the government to take energetic action to prevent the invasion of the church into the kingdom's affairs. The government has forgotten all pride and the national dignity in answering the vatican insult by giving hospitality to Cardinal Svampa when the king on Saturday went to Bologna. The government permitted the people of France to defend Italian rights.

Signor Guerel, Radical, followed, saying that "This time the vatican is not protesting, but bleating." Signor Cabrina, Socialist, interrupting: "Call it braying." (Laughter).

Signor Guerci continuing, said that Italy had less to fear from the papacy than other countries. Being near the vatican she could always see preparations behind the scenes. He complained that the pope, who in his career before he became pontiff saw, appreciated and profited by Italian unity, should now as pontiff have as his inspirer and executive against Italy a foreigner, Cardinel Del Val.

Premier Giolitti, who arose amidst a breathless silence, said that the vatican note naturally was not communicated to the Italian government. France had answered as she thought best. The affair was one in which Italy could not interfere. The vatican note contained a phrase regarding the king of Italy, but the effect produced was such that they must be extremely glad of the existence of that phrase as it had offered Premier Combes the opportunity to make a statement flattering to Italian patriotism."

"Therefore, the unhappy phrase was for Italy the happiest. The note contained the usual protest which the vatican has been repeating for thirty-four years. Italy has no reason to change her policy. She does not fear the invasion of the congregations, as she has laws to protect herself. If these laws are insufficient we will make new ones. To fear that the country cannot protect itself against the influences of foreign congregations is to insult Italians. The state and the church must be as two parallel lines which never meet. Both must enjoy liberty. It will be worse for the church on the day that she illegally interferes in the affairs of the state." (Applause).

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for Indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—" Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

WHEAT IS DULL

Chicago May Option Goes Out With Some Excitement.

Duluth Market Very Slow and Lower—Flax Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 31.—Practically the only thing of interest in the wheat market this morning was the action in Chicago May but that was of course largely only an observer's interest for very few were affected. The May price there ran from 93½c to 98¼c within a very few minutes slipped back as quickly to 55½c and then closed at 97c. Some belated shorts were being made to suffer.

The wheat market started out lower and there was not much to aid it except strength in corn, although the smaller world's shipments had some effect and there was a fairly large decrease in the visible. The Liverpool market closed ⅝@¾d lower. Paris ½ to 1½c lower and Antwerp unchanged. There were reports of too much rain in the southwest and some buying came from that section because of it.

The Duluth market closed ½c lower for July, and Chicago ½c lower, Minneapolis and New York were not open Saturday and the former closed ⅞c lower for July and the latter lc lower.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the previous week and the same week in last year were as follows:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bullish Sentiment In Corn Gave Wheat Strength.

Chicago, May 31.—A bullish sentiment in the corn market was largely responsible for a strong tone that developed in wheat today. The opening was weak under the influence of lower cables, July being off ¼c to ⅜c at 85½c to 85⅝c. On a sudden advance in corn prices comission houses became active purchasers of wheat, the demand from St. Louis house being especially good. Offerings were light resulting in a quick advance in July to 86¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 756 cars (two days) against 160 cars last week and 576 cars a year ago.

On the theory that most of the short lines in May had been covered, there was considerable selling during the latter part of the session, and the market lost its early strength. The May delivery fluctuated nervously during the last half hour, selling between 93¾c and 98¼c. The close was at 97c. After selling up to 86¾c July declined to 85¼c and closed at 85⅝c, a net loss of ⅞c.

An active demand from shorts in the face of light offerings caused strength in corn. Favorable weather and lower cables were apparently ignored, the market appearing over sold. July opened ¼c lower to ¼c higher at 46⅞c to 47¼c and sold up quickly to 47⅝c. Local receipts were 850 cars, with nine of contract grade.

The market continued strong the entire day, July advanced to 48@48¼c, but reacted to 47⅞c and closed at 47⅝c, a gain of ⅜c for the day.

Under the influence of small receipts oats held steady. July opened unchanged to ⅛c down at 38¾c to 38¼c and sold at 38¼@38⅝c. Local receipts were 175 cars.

Provisions were firm on the strength in corn. Trading was light, being confined to local interests. July pork opened unchanged at $11.27½, and advanced to $11.37½@11.40. July lard was a shade higher at $6.47½@6.50. Later the price rallied to $6.55. Ribs opened unchanged to ¼c higher at $5.57½ to $5.60 and sold up to $5.62½.

Close: Wheat—May, 97c; July, 85⅝c; old, 86¼c; September, 80¼c; old, 82½c; December, 80c. Corn—May, 47c; July, 47¾c; September, 47¼c; December, 43¾c. May, 1962 45¾c. Oats—May, 40¼c; July, 38⅝@38⅞c; September, 30⅝c. Pork—May, $11.60; July, $11.72½@11.75; September, $11.35. Lard—May, $6.52½; July, $6.60; September, $6.77½. January, $6.52½. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was quite a lot of contract wheat came out of private houses and there were deliveries of No. 2 hard wheat on the payment of the 5 cent penalty. Stocks of contract wheat must have increased considerably during the week but the exact figures will not be known until tomorrow. Liverpool was lower, as were also Berlin, London and Paris. There is still a belief of outside speculative interest and both the flour situation and the cash wheat demand are dull. Broomhall cabled that the drouth contiues in Hungary and that conditions are serious.

Corn—Opening was firm and sold up about a cent a bushel. This was in spite of receipts greatly in excess of expectations and large estimates for tomorrow. It reflects the general nervousness of the short interest and the tendency toward an oversold market. There were rains pretty generally through the west and southwest and this with the low temperatures was sufficient to induce the buying. The general reports indicate that large amount of replanting will be necessary throughout the central valleys and lake regions.

Oats—There was still some open interest to liquidate but the shorts met with free offerings and there was no effort to sustain prices. It was a very quiet market and sympathized but little with the strength in corn. The Illinois state report is bearish.

Provisions—The market is sharply higher. Pork advanced about 45 cents. It was not an active market, but offerings were very much restricted. We are inclined to think a good deal of the buying was covering of scattered local shorts, while the large interests were bearish. We do not see that packers are accumulating any long stuff and the holdings still seem to be for scattered outside trade.

Chicago Record-Herald: There was general comment on the curb regarding the heavy purchases of old September that had been made by the George H. Daggett company. Close observers in the pit figured that they had bought fully 1,000,000 bus and it was remarkable that it had all been bought at one price—82¼c. Had the firm in question been identified in any way with Southwestern interests the trade would have at once concluded that the buying had been for the account of the late J. W. Kauffman, who was known to be heavily short of the old September. The Daggett house, however, is distinctly a Northwestern concern, with all of its interests allied to that section. If the orders executed were for Kauffman account it indicated that perhaps the son who is now winding up his father's affairs has a little of the elder Kauffman's talent in the way of disguising transactions.

"We are further away from an export trade on flour now than we have been for some time," said Victor Peterson, of Peterson Brothers & Co. "The difference now is 20c to 25c per barrel, taking extreme bids and offers from both sides. A week ago they were down to about 12½c difference and we succeeded in working just a little job lot business. The outlook for export trade is very poor for at least the next two months. The local demand is very quiet also, but it will probably revive sooner than the foreign. I doubt if jobbers are as heavily stocked as the trade has been led to suppose. It is surprising to me that business has been dull as long as it has. If jobbers' stocks have not been considerably reduced since the last little show of activity over two months ago, I would be led to believe that people are not eating as much flour as they formerly did. In no other way can one account for such long delays between purchases."

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—There was a little spurt in prices shortly after opening, but it was quickly met by heavy buying on reports of deterioration of winter wheat owing to heavy rains. Offerings were rather free at the advance, causing a gradual recession in prices to a reaction below the opening where the market is holding fairly steady.

Corn—Corn opened firm around Saturday's close. There was good demand for July corn right from the start and continued throughout the morning. The market at this writing shows an advance of about ¾c. The strength in the provisions market is a help to corn.

Provisions—Provisions opened about the same as Saturday's close. There was a good demand for the product from shorts and packers, also considerable commission house demand. Pork at this writing shows a net gain of 40c for the day and acts very strong. Believe you can safely buy provisions on all breaks.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 31.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 11 to 15 points following very weak cables and generally favorable weather over the holidays. The announcement of the suspension of S. Munn Sons & Co. had little effect on the market. There was considerable covering at the early decline which carried July to 12.01 and the market followed the call, recovered a few points on a sharp rally in Liverpool and expectations of a bullish weather report at midday.

Spot closed quiet 4 to 5 points lower. Middling uplands, $12.75; middling gulf, $13. Sales, 3480 bales. Futures closed steady. June, $12.33; July, $12.40; August, $11.98; September, $10.95; October, $10.56; November, $10.47; December, $10.45; January, $10.47.

DULLNESS RULED

In the Stock Market and the Close Was Easy.

Opening Was Higher on Saturday's Favorable Bank Statement.

New York, May 31.—First prices of stocks today after three days' interval were a fraction higher all around, reaching a half in three or four stocks. Dealings were on a moderate scale and there was no special feature in the market.

Interest in the market flattened out after the initial dealings. Smelting advanced 1½ on a few transactions. Leading stocks eased off in spots toward 11 o'clock. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis declined 4, Chicago & Alton 2 and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred; Detroit Southern and Westinghouse Electric 1. Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred and Pipe preferred gained 1 and Realty preferred ⅞.

United States Steel preferred sold off ¾ and kept the tone of the market heavy in sympathy. Prices generally got below Friday's close. The movemint was narrow and trading dull. Chicago Union Traction preferred rose 1¾ and United States Rubber preferred 1⅝. Detroit Southern preferred lost 2. Bonds were heavy at noon. Some long dormant issues made wide declines.

Stocks were pressed on the market at gradual concessions without arousing any sustained demand. The Eries were affected by the unfavorable April earnings and there was also considerable liquidation of the St. Louis, Southwestern securities. Losses reached 1⅝ in Erie first preferred and Consolidated Gas 1⅜ in St. Louis Southwestern preferred, 1½ in the Consol bonds and ½ in North American. Amalgamated Copper and Brooklyn Transit were nearly a point off and Smelting about last all its early rise.

Selling orders were curtailed late in the day and some of the weak stocks recovered slightly. Elsewhere speculation was practically at a standstill.

There was some short covering by room shorts in the final hour. Erie first preferred rallied ⅞ and others a small fraction. Toledo, St. Louis & Western and Western Union fell 1 and Colorado Southern second preferred 2. The close was easy and dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened up higher on Saturday's bank statement. This was extremely favorable. The market met with no support, however, from any source, and the improvement was lost and it again lapsed into dullness. There seemed nothing in sight to relieve this dullness. The market may not sell down much, but a bull market hardly seems likely, and we are inclined to think they may be sold on the rallies. A little later, when the conventions have been held, the tickets nominated and the effect of late spring on the crops possibly found not to be harmed, there may be some renewed confidence. We hardly look for it before then.

* * *

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is nothing encouraging about business reports on railroad earnings at present. The tip has been pretty widely circulated that the Standard Oil interests were going to move the market sharply and run in the shorts. I must say that I was inclined to believe this, and expected a good rally. The rally, however, fails to materialize and although bull talk of this kind continues, I am very skeptical about it. Should such a movement come, it would merely be a run in of shorts and when they had covered up there would be no support to the market and it would rapidly drop off again. It does not look to me as if anything interesting in the market would happen right away although a great many judges don't think the present inactivity will last much longer.

* * *

Coe Commission Co.: London stocks were firm. Our market opened firm, fractionally higher than Friday's close. The market relapsed into a listless, dragging affair after the opening, losing about all the early advance. Trading to noon, 73,600 shares. Considering the dullness, the market is holding remarkably well, and we believe any activity will be the signal for an advance in the market. Short interest is large and the bears have taken every advantage of every point in their favor and still have not been able to break prices to any extent, and this in the face of heavy gold exports and without any effort on the part of the holders to sustain prices. Advise buying the better class of railroad shares on all the declines.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: A decline of 12 shillings in London copper market since Friday would be responsible for selling pressure in Amalgamated, which caused a decline of a point. Other coppers sagged slightly but developed very little activity. The general market was fractionally lower on a small volume of activity. There is no news of a character to influence prices either way, and the market seems to be waiting for something to turn up. Saturday's bank statement was better than forecasted. As the market stands, think would rather buy stocks on reactions than sell on rallies. We see nothing in the general situation that should make us think coppers should be sold.

EDUCATED PUPS.

Police Department Hounds Return From College.

For the past six months they have been taking a special course in tracking and following trails at the academy in Wichita, Kan., and their education is now complete.

They arrived in Duluth yesterday afternoon and were immediately taken down to police headquarters. They were plainly delighted to get back, and Lucy leaped about their mother, "Kate," with every sign of affection. But that heartless parent did not appear to recognize her offspring. It was not much wonder, for the pups left when scarcely half-grown and returned as full-grown bloodhounds.

The five pups are now claimed to be fully educated in following a scent. The police despaired of bringing them up in the way they should go and sent them to Wichita to be properly trained.

MEETING IS PRIVATE

Representatives of Carriers and Masters Before Civic Federation.

Latter Body Will Try to Settle the Deadlock.

Cleveland, May 31.—The meeting of representatives of the Lake Carriers' association and the Masters' and Pilots' association before the special committee appointed by the Civic federation with a view to bringing about a settlement of the existing deadlock between the two associations began today.

The Civic federation was represented by Judge John C. Hutchins, chairman; J. A. Reynolds, P. O. Thomas, J. J. Sullivan, W. P. Hunt, E. M. Avery, W. H. Cannift, Peter Hassenpflut and E. W. Ogleby.

All the members of the board of directors of the Masters' and Pilots' association was present as follows: Paul Howell, Cleveland; Leroy Rand, Chicago; John Lowe, Cleveland; F. L. Tonkin, Milwaukee; C. T. Clark, Buffalo; W. B. McGregor, St. Claire, Mich.; W. H. Clark, Anderson, New York; J. C. Sauers, Bay City, Mich., and J. C. Jamieson, Cleveland.

The Lake Carriers' association was represented by Messrs. Livingston and P. E. Coulby, chairman of the executive committee.

It was decided that the meeting should be private and newspaper representatives were therefore not permitted to be present.

GET READY TO LEAVE.

Captains Houghton and Ballentine Going on Boats.

Capt. E. D. Ballentine paid his bill at the St. Louis and had his baggage taken away from that hotel. It was not taken to a depot, but to some vessel, and the transfer man who handled it was not instructed as to what vessel to take it to until he reached the docks. He will take out the D. G. Kerr. She got her clearance papers at Superior this morning.

Shortly after 12 o'clock Capt. F. P. Houghton came in Saturday with Capt. Ballentine, paid his bill at the hotel and left. He is understood to have gone aboard his boat, the James H. Reed, and it is believed that both captains will have their vessels out of the harbor tonight, if not this afternoon. Capt. Houghton would not make any statement about the vessel situation, and when asked about the report that Capt. Ballentine and he were to take out their boats said:

"We aren't gone out yet."

"You are not going?"

"We are not gone."

When asked if he had seen Capt. Craine, of the Saxona, the captain said he had not.

While the break in the strike up to this time is comparatively small, considering the number of men directly interested, it looks much as though the men who have deserted the Masters' and Pilots' association were going to make a thorough job of it. All the endeavors of the local strikers to do missionary work with Capts. Houghton and Ballentine have apparently gone for naught, with those gentlemen going aboard their boats. Friends of the captains who are out for higher wages lay stress on the difficulty in getting proper crews for the vessels, while others say that there are plenty of crews from mates down if there were enough captains to be had.

It is reported that two mates who had come up to Superior with the intention of starting out on vessels went home last evening, but the details of this report were not obtainable, and if such is the case it could not be verified.

Some interests who are in touch with the situation pretty closely and who have been constantly predicting "something doing" by June 1, which is tomorrow, are now saying that within a day or two the reporters will not be around hunting for strike news, and the fact that the slight break in the strike to within such a near margin of the magic date has not shaken their predictions nor the trend of their talk may be taken to indicate that the strain that is on is about at the breaking point somewhere.

Whether this means that there will be wholesale desertions within the masters' and pilots' organization, or whether it is based on a belief that the civic federation's efforts will be fruitful, is a matter for conjecture only. The steamboat owners have taken their stand against arbitration, while the captains have assented their willingness to arbitrate. The fact that the captains are willing is claimed by some as an evidence of their anxiety to get out of the difficulty

COLD FOR ROWING

Work of Oarsmen Greatly Interfered With By Weather.

Will Leave For Madison Sunday—Friends May Go.

Cold weather continues to interfere with the comfortable and most advantageous practice of the Duluth Boat club eight, which is in preparation for a trial of strength and skill against Wisconsin university at Madison. While cold weather is bracing for football, it is very uncomfortable for the sweep handlers, as they have to bundle up more than is conducive to fast work.

It is said that they are now getting up to a speed of 32 to 34 strokes per minute, without slighting the sweep of the strokes, which is considered very encouraging. But up to this time there has been no account taken of the time the eight has made, at least no record can be obtained for publication. It may be that the Duluth eight is well aware of its time, at least approximately, and is playing 'possum on this point.

The new white shirts of the eight, with the big blue D on the front, have arrived, and they lend much to the appearance of the eight.

It has been decided that the crew will leave next Sunday afternoon for Madison, going via the Great Northern to St. Paul and then via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. The eight goes as the guests of Madison, which, as host, pays for the transportation and hotel accommodations of the challenged team. The eight will send its shell in a sixty-foot baggage car with a vestibule door added to give sufficient length for the boat. The Madison people made the arrangements for the transportation of the Duluth men, as they were "paying the freight" and entitled to this decision. Some of the local men would liked to have gone over the Northern Pacific to get the use of a seventy-foot baggage car, as that road is said to be the only one with cars of such unusual size.

Friends of the crew who wish to attend the regatta will wait until toward the middle of next week before going to Madison. If a party of twenty-five or more decide to go at the same time the various roads, it is said, have offered to make a round trip fare of about $13 per capita, and whichever road gets the business, it is said, will furnish a special car. Some people interested in the trip have already been to the boat club for information, and the club is anxious to know all who can join the "rooters." Any who wish to join the party can enroll by reporting to Capt. Dan Mahoney.

The Silberstein & Bondy company announce the June sale of white, and the annual June sale of Oriental rugs, for Thursday, June 2.

Owing to yesterday being a holiday the Commercial club meeting scheduled for last night failed to draw a quorum, and a meeting will probably be called by President W. A. McGonagle for next week to attend the business.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of county poor commissioners is being held this afternoon at the office of A. P. Cook, secretary of the board. Only matters of a routine business were scheduled to come up for action by the board.

J. E. Sullivan, of Deer River, who was brought to St. Mary's hospital a few days ago with a bad case of blood poisoning, is reported to be improving rapidly, and will probably be able to return to his home within two or three days. It was feared for a time that his hand would have to be amputated.

The final report of Mary Ann Canning, administratrix of the estate of Charles Canning, deceased, was filed in probate court today. The estate has been in probate court for the past ten years. Most of the land concerned is in the West, but some of it is in St. Louis county. The administratrix's report shows the estate to have an appraised value of $40,858. H. Phelps is the local attorney for the administratrix.

Probate Judge Middlecoff, this morning, gave Henry S. Mahon, administrator of the estate of Frederick Sahlberg, deceased, license to execute a sale of all the live business formerly conducted as the East End Ice company, including the ice houses and the real estate in connection with the buildings. The ice company was owned entirely by Mr. Sahlberg.

Port Wing Work.

Capt. Charles L. Potter, United States engineer in charge of this district, with Assistant United States Engineer J. H. Darling, has returned from a survey trip to the Port Wing harbor, on the south shore. Last season the government expended some money in the construction of a pier at Port Wing, and this year some dredging will be accomplished. About 15,000 cubic yards of earth are to be dredged, and the contract has been awarded to the Northern Dredge company of Duluth. The work will start very shortly. The dredge company also has the contract for some dredging work for the More & Kepple Lumber company, which has a sawmill with lumber docks at Port Wing harbor.

TIRES OF LIFE

Has Been Invalid For Long Time—Delay In Reporting.

William Rehbein, 87 years of age, committed suicide last night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Matilda Wendt, 423 East Sixth street. He hung himself by an ordinary clothes line, attached to a hook above his bedroom door. The body was found at 6 o'clock this morning, but no report of the affair was made to the coroner of the affair until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Rehbein had long been an invalid, confined to his bed. Evidently he had contemplated suicide for some time, for several days ago he made the request that the piece of rope be placed in his room so that he might use it in moving about in bed. The rope was fastened above a door located just at the foot of the old man's bed.

Rehbein was one of Duluth's oldest settlers. His wife is dead, but he has a son besides the daughter residing in Duluth. There are also several grandchildren living here.

The old man went to bed as usual last night. He seemed in his natural spirits. The family can give no reason for the act other than that of his illness.

DISPUTES SUICIDE THEORY.

McLane's Physician Does Not Agree With Coroner.

Baltimore, May 31.—The entire city of Baltimore is in a condition of mourning today over the tragic ending of the life of Mayor McLane. The flags on the court house, city hall and chamber of commerce and numbers of hotels are at half mast. Mayor Timanus' first act was to order the draping of the city hall in mourning for his predecessor. All the municipal boards met and adjourned as a mark of respect to the late mayor. The supreme bench of Baltimore had a special meeting today and ordered that the several courts of the city be adjourned until the morning after the funeral. Chief Judge Harlan and other judges referred to the "public sorrow" that had come upon Baltimore. Many leading citizens, including Cardinal Gibbons, are giving public expression to the view that the death of the mayor is in the nature of a serious public calamity. Mayor McLane's family physician and many of his friends dispute the theory of his death was a suicide, though Coroner Haden still maintains that there is no doubt upon that point.

REHEARING ORDERED.
Washington, May 31.—The United States supreme court today ordered a rehearing in the cases brought by the Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal against other newspapers published in that city, charging them with conspiracy to boycott it.

DECISIONS ON PHILIPPINES

United States Court Renders Three Concerning Criminal Law.

Washington, May 31.—In the United States supreme court opinions were handed down today in three cases involving questions pertaining to administration of criminal law in the Philippine islands. The points raised were as to the right of the government to take appeal in criminal cases and of an accused person to demand trial by jury.

The first case was that of Kepner vs. the United States. Kepner practiced law in Manila and was charged with embezzlement. The court of first instance acquitted him, but the supreme court of the Island convicted him. The case was then appealed to the United States supreme court by Kepner on the ground that by the process of appeal he was put twice in jeopardy, contrary to the constitution of the United States. The opinion of Justice Day sustained this view, reversing the decision of the Philippine supreme court. Justices Holmes, White and McKenna united in one dissenting opinion, while Justice Brown wrote a separate dissenting opinion.

The case of Mendazona vs. the United States, involving the same question, was similarly rendered in favor of Mendazona.

Another Philippine case was that of Dorr and O'Brien, in which was raised the question of the right of a defendant in a criminal case to demand trial by jury in the Philippines in absence of congressional enactment granting such right. The court held that the constitution does not carry the right without legislative enactment. Dorr and O'Brien are editors of a newspaper published in Manila and were prosecuted for criminal libel.

The chief justice and Justices Brewer and Peckham united in an opinion concurring in this result, but stating different grounds. Justice Harlan delivered a vigorous dissenting opinion, saying that the opinion is contrary to the established system of the United States, and declaring the opinion of the court to be in effect an amendment to the constitution of the United States.

TO OYSTER BAY.

The President Will Leave Washington, July 2.

Washington, May 31.—While only tentative arrangements have been made for the president's sojourn during the summer at Oyster bay, it has been decided that he will leave Washington for his summer home on the morning of Saturday, July 2. He has decided to receive his notication of the nomination at Oyster Bay. The day will depend very largely on the desires of the members of the notification committee. It will probably be early in uJly.

It is expected that the president will return to Washington in the last week of July to remain here until about the middle of August, when he will return to Oyster Bay for perhaps a month. When he returns to Washington in September he will remain until election day, going then to Oyster Bay to cast his vote.

Dropped a $1000 Bill.

The party who recently dropped a $1000 bill in the cabin of a feryboat had considerable difficulty in recovering it because he could not remember its number or date. Persons with a weak stomach also have considerable difficulty in trying to regain health and strength. Their meals cause them so much distress, such as heartburn, gas of the stomach, nausea and sick headaches that they are completely discouraged. Then dieting is suggested. This is also a mistake, for nature intended you to eat heartily and the stomach to properly digest the food. If yours is weak and unable to do its work properly a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will soon restore it to its normal condition. It also cures insomnia, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and malaria, fever and ague. Be sure and try it.

WATERS RECEDING.

GREEN BAY, WIS., HAS A HEAVY FIRE LOSS.

Milwaukee, May 31—An Evening Wisconsin special from Green Bay, Wis., says: A total loss of nearly $100,000 is the result of a fire in Albert Delaporte's clothing store and adjoining buildings, in this city.

The loss is partially covered by insurance. The loss on Delaporte's stock is $60,000, with $38,000 insurance.

The adjoining buildings occupied by John Robinson, drugs, and William Hoffman, clothing, suffered a small loss. The offices of Dr. A. W. Slaughter and John F. Watermolen, attorney, were gutted by flames. The origin of the fire is not known.

BALLOTING AGAIN

In Illinois Republican Convention on Governor.

Springfield, Ill., May 31.—The delegates to the Republican state convention, in reassembling today were quite generally of the opinion that no nomination would be reached before tomorrow or Thursday. The fifty-ninth ballot resulted as follows: Yates, 487; Lowden, 396½; Deneen, 383½; Hamlin, 116; Warner, 41; Sherman, 50; Pierce, 28.

CONDITION OF CROPS

As Shown By Weather Bureau's Weekly Report.

Washington, May 31.—The weekly summary of crop conditions issued by the weather bureau today follows:

With the exception of the Northern Rocky mountain region and upper Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys, where the early part of the week was too cool, the temperature of the week ending May 30 was favorable in all districts, especially to the eastward of the Mississippi river and in the West gulf states. Oklahoma and portions of Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Ohio and Pennsylvania have suffered to some extent from excessive moisture, while drought continues over a large part of the South Atlantic and East gulf states. Well-distributed and beneficial rains fell over the greater part of Texas and the central Rockies. Light frosts occurred in Wisconsin and heavy damaging frosts in Montana, Idaho and the eastern portions of Oregon and Washington. Continued northerly winds caused considerable damage to fruit and possibly injured grain in California. Rain is generally needed on the North Pacific coast. Except in the more northerly sections where corn planting is much delayed, this work has progressed under favorable conditions, but the reports indicate that a large amount of replanting will be necessary throughout the central valleys and lake regions, due in part to poor seed. Cut worms are causing much damage in the Ohio valley and Middle Atlantic states. A general improvement is indicated in the Southern states, where the crop is largely laid by, having reached the earing stage in the West gulf states. A general improvement in condition of winter wheat is indicated in the principal wheat states, but the condition of the crop continues very poor in the Ohio valley. Harvest is in progress in the Southern states. On the North Pacific coast winter wheat has done well except in portions of Eastern Washington, where it has been hurt by frosts. In California the crop is maturing rapidly, but has probably sustained injury by dessicating winds. Early-sown spring wheat is growing nicely and the general outlook for this crop in the spring wheat region is promising. Some fields in South Dakota, however, are weedy, and the late-sown in North Dakota has not germinated well. On the North Pacific coast early spring wheat is doing well, but rain is needed for the late sown.

Nearly all reports respecting oats indicate that this crop has made very favorable progress. Early oats are heading as far north as the central Mississippi valley and the southern portion of the middle Atlantic states. Harvesting continues in the South.

Although cotton continues small, a general improvement in its condition is indicated, especially in the central and western districts, where rains have been well distributed and generally ample. Tobacco transplanting has progressed slowly in Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina, and this work awaits rain in Maryland. Planting has made favorable progress in New England, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The reports respecting apples received from the central Mississippi and Ohio valleys are somewhat less encouraging, but from the middle Atlantic states, New England and the upper lake region the reports are more favorable. In the east gulf states a good crop of peaches is promised, but elsewhere the outlook is poor.

In the principal hay-producing states the condition of this crop is uniformly good. Haying has commenced in Texas.

JOHNSON CONTINUES REPORT ON TRESSPASS.

St. Paul, May 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Public Examiner Johnson today filed with Governor Vant Sant, a second report bearing on his investigation of the state timber trespass settlements.

The report is a continuation of Mr. Johnson's charges that the state auditor's department in the past has been lax to a degree in the state's timebr interests.

DECISION REVERSED.

Verdict Against St. Louis Boodlers Is Set Aside.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 31.—The Missouri supreme court today reversed and remanded the cases of T. Edward Albright, Jerry J. Hannigan and John A. Sheridan, former members of the St. Louis municipal assembly, convicted on the charge of bribery and sentenced to five years each in the penitentiary. The cases were reversed on the brief of the attorney general that the informations were not verified by affidavits, as required by law.

CRACKSMEN ROB CAR BARN SAFES.

Philadelphia, May 31.—Four masked robbers early today visited the car barn of the Delaware County Electric railway, at Clifton Heights, near here, and blew open two safes, securing $150 in cash, but failed to get $1000 which was in one of the safes. The cracksmen bound and gagged three employes of the company and two male passengers, and terrorized two belated women passengers before the robbery.

The result of the convention is so much in doubt that predictions are unsafe.

THE JAPANESE ARE SAID TO HAVE COMPLETELY ROUTED FORCES OF GEN. KUROPATKIN

Squadron of Cossacks Captured and Many Guns Taken.

Japs Have Fears For City of Wonson In Korea.

London, June 1.—A special dispatch from Rome says a telegram has been received there from Tokio reporting that General Kuroki has completely defeated General Kuropatkin's forces near Sumentze (probably Saimataza or Simatsi.)

All the Russian positions east of Hai-Cheng have been abandoned according to the telegram; several guns have been taken, and whole squadrons of Cossacks captured.

It is possible the news received in Rome refers to the fighting reported in last night's Associated Press dispatches from Liao Yang and St. Petersburg. These did not indicate a general engagement, but showed that a series of sharp engagements had taken place east of Simatsi, lasting from the morning of May 27 until daylight May 30, which resulted in severe losses on both sides and the retirement of the Russians upon Simatsi. The latter place is 35 miles north of Feng Wang Cheng.

WIPING OUT COSSACKS.

Japanese Have Special Gun For That Purpose.

Victoria, B. C., June 1.—A former captain of Japanese artillery bound for London, England, who has arrived here on the Empress of Japan, on official business, said that Japan military chiefs had made preparations some years ago for dealing with the peculiar fighting tactics of the Cossacks. A special light machine gun, invented by a Japanese engineer is carried on a pony accompanying each detachment. It has a greater range than the Nordenfeldt and can be operated by four men. It is with these deadly weapons that the Japanese are wiping out the Cossacks wherever they meet them. He says the Japanese artillery proficiency was acquired in long secret practice with the Arisaka gun at all ranges and regardless of cost before the war.

FEARS FOR WONSON.

Russian Cavalry Reported South of That City.

New York, June 1.—Fears are entertained here for the safety of the Japanese garrison and settlement at Wonson, as Russian cavalry is reported south of Ham Heung, says a Herald dispatch from Seoul. Reinforcements are being sent to Wonson from Ham Heung and Ping Yang.

Reinforcements sent to the latter point and Anju have reduced the strength of the local garrisen to about 2600, which is considered sufficient, as any Russian approach by way of the east coast against Seoul would be speedily known through the numerous small Japanese squads located in every village to the north and east. These squads also can be used to reinforce Seoul.

No local disturbances are feared, the Korean court being dominated by Japanese influence.

Attempts to persuade the emperor to remove his residence to the east palace are thus far futile. Memories of the riots of 1894 are still strong in the imperial mind.

JAPANESE PRISONERS.

Those In Western Siberia Used Well By Russians.

St. Petersburg, June 1.—Advices received by mail from Tomsk, Western Siberia, report the arrival there of a detachment of Japanese prisoners, consisting of twenty-six officers and 180 men, the majority of whom are sailors. All were in good health. The officers were sent to the Officers' club, while the men are quartered in a riding school.

A food allowance has been granted the officers of $25 to $62.50 monthly, while the enlisted men receive 8 cents daily.

Workmen have reached Lake Baikal to construct wireless telegraph stations for communication across that body of water.

FAMINE PRICES

Are Said to Prevail at Port Arthur.

London, June 1.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Newchwang says:

"Some Chinese fugitives from Port Arthur arrived here described the situation of the inhabitants there as desperate. Famine prices exist. The cost of provisions increases weekly. Many persons are reduced to eating Chinese food, and even that is dear. Millet flour costs $6 a bag. Whole streets and several public buildings have been wrecked by Japanese shell fire. The hospitals are packed with sick and wounded.

The Tokio correspondent of the Chronicle telegraphs:

"Russian strategy has undergone another change. Yingkow is to be again fortified. Four guns have been brought from Newchwang, the garrison increased and the harbor mined."

NOT TILL JULY

Does Gen. Kuropatkin Intend to Move Army.

Paris, June 1.—The correspondent in St. Petersburg of the Echo de Paris says:

"A friend of Gen. Kuropatkin tells me that before his departure the general said:

"'The first month it will be said that I am inactive; the second that I am incapable, and the third that I am a traitor, because we will be repulsed and beaten, although that will not seriously affect the result of the operations. I shall let people talk, firmly adhering to my resolutions not to march before July, when I shall have the overwhelming masses I need.'"

RUSSIANS GLOOMY

Over the Japanese Victories at Kin Chou.

Tien Tsin, June 1.—A courier who has arrived here from Newchwang, says:

"While it is known that the Russians received reports from Mukden last night, giving the losses sustained by them during the fighting at Kin Chou and Nan Shan hill, and the conditions prevailing, they will not talk on the subject. The officials are desperately gloomy. The press bulletin, giving the news of the fighting on the Kwan Tung peninsula, with the European comments on the victory of Japan, was suppressed on its arrival at Newchwang, but was released when the Russians learned that two copies of it were in possession of Englishmen, and were being shown to other people. The Tien Tsin newspapers, which reached Newchwang last night, were eagerly snapped up. Knots of officers stood in the streets and in and about the club eagerly scanning the papers.

"Six hundred junk-loads of supplies, mostly beans and grain, purchased at Newchwang, were shipped to Liao Yang yesterday. These were the same supplies the Russians ordered from the Chinese in the interior at the time of the second evacuation scare, saying the Japanese would confiscate or burn them. The Russians were compelled to pay four times the prices demanded a month ago. The Russians are again meddling with the telegraph offices between Newchwang and Shan Hai Kwan."

FUJI SAID TO BE AGROUND.

St. Petersburg, June 1.—An unconfirmed report has reached here from Mukden, that the Japanese battleship Fuji is aground on a reef off the Miao-Tao islands between the Kwan-Tung and Shan-Tung promontories, where she is being guarded by torpedo boats.

The emperor, on account of the state of war prevailing, has ordered the postponement of the celebraotion of tomorrow's fete.

BATTLESHIPS AT LISBON.

Lisbon, June 1.—The United States battleship Kearsage, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Barker, commander of the North Atlantic fleet and the battleships Alabama and Maine, have arrived here.

FOREIGN MINISTER LAMSDORFF ASSAULTED BY RUSSIAN PRINCE

COUNT LAMSDORFF.

St. Petersburg, June 1.—Reports of an attack upon Count Lamsdorff, minister of foreign affairs, which grew last night into a rumor (later denied) of attempted assassination, have their foundaion, as nearly as can be ascertained, in a personal assault committed Monday evening by Prince Dolgoruky, a disappointed office seeker. The prince is an opponent of Count Lamdorff's policy and is said to have become insane through brooding over his alleged grievances.

Dolgoruky formerly was an officer in the Imperial Hussars, but is now on the retired list. At one time he was connected with the foreign office as an attache at Vienna. Since then he is said to have been a constant applicant for a position in the foreign service but without success. He belongs to the Slavophile party, strongly opposed to the pacific policy of the minister of foreign affairs.

According to the story current in the city, the prince met Count Lamsdorff in the street Monday evening and without warning struck him on the head with a walking stick. In so doing, he is said to have calmly announced that he chastised the foreign minister in the name of the whole Rusisan people.

Police agents rushed to the scene and seized the prince, who immediately handed them a card saying it was a private affair. Nevertheless, he was placed under arrest.

Count Lamsdorff called upon the emperor Tuesday, it having been his regular day for an audience and, therefore, not necessarily connected with the assault. The count's friends are deeply incensed over the affair, which is regarded, however, as the act of a madman.

FIVE HUNDRED CLAIMANTS SUE PENNSYLVANIA RAILWAY CO.

They Demand Property Valued at $3,500,000 In the City of Chicago Which Is Now Used By the Railroad Company.

Chicago, June 1.—In a suit begun in the United States circuit court today, 500 claimants demand the eviction of the Pennsylvania Railway company from property here, valued at $3,500,000. The chief property at stake is all Stewart avenue, between Twelfth and Sixty-first streets. In the bill, filed by James Hamilton Lewis, as chief counsel, an injunction is asked against further use by the railroad company of tracks in the disputed district. The state of Illinois is represented among the claimants by canal trustees, who assert an interest in the matter in dispute. Among other claimants are said to be members of the family of President Roosevelt. The heirs of Mrs. Sanger, mother of Mrs. George M. Pullman, are also declared to have an interest in the property.

In event the court finds it impossible to disposses the railroad company, it is asked that they be directed to pay the claimants $3,411,000, declared to be the market value of the land.

The city of Chicago is made defendant to the suit with the railroad company, because of alleged wrongful acts in permitting the railroad company to monopolize Stewart avenue, to the exclusion of public traffic. On account of such action, it is claimed, title to the land reverted to the heirs of the original owners of abutting property.

MURDERER MAKES A CONFESSION

Washington, Pa., June 1.—Milavor Kovovick, now under sentence of death for the murder of Samuel Ferguson, a wealthy contractor, last September, has made a confession to the authorities, exonerating Milavor Pittrovick, who was recently convicted for murder in the second degree for the same crime.

In his confession Kovovick names Joseph Buchewicz, Pere Barac and Nikola Nikowicz as his accomplices, and says they are now in Croatia, beyond the hand of the law. The crime to which Kovovick confesses was committed Sept. 25 last, as Contractor Ferguson was driving along a road in Washington county, on his way to pay the men at the Ferguson railroad camp. He was blown from his buggy by a dynamite mine, placed under a small bridge on the road. In his possession was a satchel containing $5000, which was stolen. Pittsburg detectives traced Kovovick and Pattrovick to England, where they were made prisoners.

Detectives will leave shortly for Croatia in search of the three accomplices of Kovovick.

PEACE FOR WORLD

The Keynote of International Arbitration Conference.

Address By Judge George Gray Before Large Gathering.

Mohonk Lake, N. Y., June 1.—The tenth annual conference on international arbitration opened here today with a larger attendance than at any previous meeting of the body, nearly three hundred people being present. The opening exercises consisted of an address of welcome by Albert K. Smiley and a prayer by Dr. Edward Everett Hale. Judge George Gray, of Delaware, who was chosen to preside over the conference, on taking the chair, made an address.

"There has been a certain fullness of time," said Judge Gray, "tahat has made itself manifest before any of the great forward movements in the world's history have taken place, and that fullness of time seems now to have arrived for such a forward movement in the great cause we have at heart. There has been a long preparation for such a consummation. The peoples of the world are being drawn closer together by the wonderful achievements of science and art. The estranging seas no longer separate, but unite the people of the old world and the new, and a solidarity of material interests has produced something like a solidarity of thought and feeling. The belief that what was hurtful or injurious to the prosperity and well being of one country, might be helpful and beneficial to another, is not so prevalent as it once was. We no longer consider the advance of alien peoples in wealth and prosperity, as a menace to our own. We are more prone now than formerly to recognize such advance as an increment to the world's wealth, in which all, sooner or later, must have some share, however small, that, as the waters of a great lake cannot be drawn from or depleted at its most remote corner, without sensibly affecting the general level of the great body of its waters, so the material waste and destruction and moral deterioration of a war between nations, however remote, must to some extent injuriously affect the civilized world. The economic waste, consequent upon the maintenance of the great and increasing military and naval establishments of the world, is beginning to make its due impression upon the enlightened conscience and intelligence of increasing numbers in all countries. Altruism is no longer to be banished from national policies and national conduct, and there is growing recognition of the truth, that the obligation of the moral law are imposed upon nations, as well as upon individuals. Public opinion is no longer fenced in by national boundaries. It has o'erleaped them all, and now an international public opinion is making itself felt from one corner of Christendom to the other, and, through the instrumentality of a free press, forcesit and controls the conduct and policies of kings and cabinets.

"It may be said, and perhaps truly, that these are tendencies, and not accomplished results, but they are tendencies that fill our hearts with hope and encouragement. The progress of civilization has been a slow one. Inveterate prejudices die hard. There has been an ebb and flow, a receding as well as an advancing tide, but, on the whole, we recognize the steady gain of man. We are ourselves carried along with the tendencies of the time in which we live. We must recognize the opportunity and obey the call that has sounded in our ears of a power higher than ours. We are not to be discouraged by untoward conditions. The czar of Russia, who suggested the Hague tribunal, is involved in internecine war that strains the resources of his empire, but the international court of arbitration at the Hague will remain an enduring monument to his wisdom, and shed more glory upon his reign than any triumph, however great, his armies may achieve. The establishment and continued existence of the permanent court of international arbitration will make it more difficult in the future than it has in the past, for nations to engage in war. I believe that its influence will grow slowly, but steadily, and that each resort to its decisions, will tend to form and strengthen the habit of looking thitherward, to settle international difficulties by an appeal to reason, instead of an appeal to arms.

"There is good ground for thinking that the project of a treaty of arbitration between England and the United States is in a favored state of progress, and that the rejection of the treaty of '97 by the senate, will help, rather than hinder, the present movement. Its rejection has served to concentrate public attention upon the subject, and in the meantime free discussion and criticism have served to measurably mature a favorable public opinion on both sides of the Atlantic. What imagination is not kindled, what heart does not glow, at the thought of an arbitral agreement between the two great English-speaking nations of the world. Too powerful to be animated by any other motive than a brave and worthy one, the moral effect of their agreement in such a treaty, could not fail to advance the cause of international arbitration to a world-wide acceptance. As for ourselves, we are bound by our own past. There is no more glorious page in our history than that which records its lists of arbitral agreements, and establishes its leadership in upright diplomacy and peaceful settlement of international difficulties."

The review of the year in the history of arbitration was made by Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, of Boston, secretaary of the American Peace society.

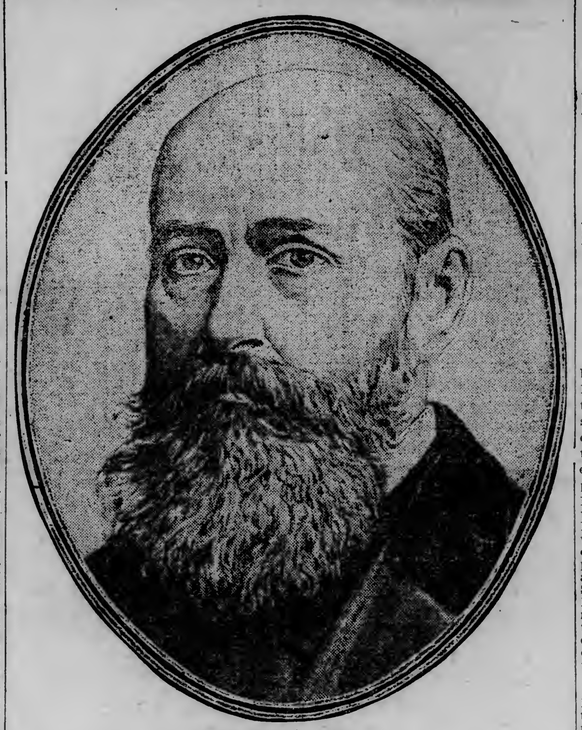
AMERICAN WHO IS BEING HELD FOR RANSOM



ION PERDICARIS.

The situation of Ion Perdicaris and his step-son is considered precarious. A cablegram from Rear Admiral Chadwick at Tangier to the navy department says:

"The seizure of the American citizen was by an insurgent chief, so as to bring pressure on the sultan of Morocco to secure the demands of the tribe. Our sense of the gravity of the case is shown by the presence of the American squadron and will undoubtedly cause the earlier yielding of the sultan of Morocco to the demands of the chief, which is the only safe means of releasing the captive."

There is the highest authority for the statement that an attack on Tangier or an expedition against the brigands will be followed by the immediate murder of the captives.

FRANCE PLEASED TO ASSIST IN MOROCCO

Request of United States In Perdicaris Case Recognizes Influence.

Paris, June 1.—The request of the United States for the co-operation of France in bringing about the release of Ion Perdivaris and Cromwell Varley has produced a very favorable impression at the foreign office here, where much significance is attached to the request as embodying the first distinct international recognition of France's paramount influence in Morocco. It is expected that this will lead to a more emphatic exercise of French authority over Morocco, with the view to suppressing lawlessness and the protection of foreigners, but the nature of the future steps is not announced, pending the negotiations on the subject. Ambassador Porter called at the foreign office today and conferred with Foreign Minister Delcasse relative to the course of the Washington cabinet. Yesterday M. Delcasse said negotiations were now progressing at Tangier and at Fez, the chief reliance being placed on the sultan's yielding before the united representations of France, Great Britain and the United States.

Washington, June 1.—It is stated at the state department that several days will elapse before the results of the reports of the French agents in behalf of Ion Perdicaris, the captive of the Morocco bandits, can be known. Reports that other tribal chieftains are talking about kidnaping Europeans tends to confirm the officials here in their original reluctance to compound a felony by paying ransom and thus encourage kidnaping. When the European squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Jewell, joins the South Atlantic squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Chadwick, at Tangiers, Admiral Chadwick will have command of the combined fleet of seven vessels. He ranks Rear Admiral Jewell by virtue of seniority of service and moreover he has been specially charged by the navy department with the conduct of the naval operations in connection with the Perdicaris case.

Tangier, June 1.—The United States cruiser Olympia, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Jewell, in command of the European fleet and the cruisers Baltimore and Cleveland, arrived here during the afternoon. There are no further developments concerning the kidnaping of Perdicaris and Varley, but a report is current that eight days have been allowed the sultan in which to produce the prisoners, beyond which time Tangier will be bombarded. This report is not confirmed.

Washington, June 1.—Secretaries Hay and Moody held a conference with the president today over the latest advices from Tangier regarding the Perdicaris case, but no news on the subject was given out.

BLOOMER GIRL MARRIES AT EIGHTY

New York, June 1.—Great surprise has been caused in Vineland, N. J., by the wedding announcement of Miss Susan P. Fowler, one of the original dress reformers of the country. She is now over 80 years old.

Miss Fowler has conducted a farm near Vineland more than forty years, and never would have a man about the place until last fall, when she concluded her farming days were over, and advertised for help. George E. Fowler, of Lemoille, Minn., applied for the job, and then proposed marriage. After a long correspondence he was accepted, and the wedding was set for the latter part of this month.

Miss Fowler taught school in her native town, Amesbury, Mass., until she was 28 years old. She espoused the cause of dress reform when it was original in the Oneida community, New York, and has worn the bloomer garb more than half a century.

CLERGYMAN SHOOTS A BURGLAR

Dubois, Pa., June 1.—Early today Captain Lahey, postmaster at Falls Creek, was shot twice by a burglar and probably fatally wounded and later one of the burglars was shot by Rev. Dr. Chisholm, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Falls Creek as they were about to enter the latter's residence. The wounded robber left a trail of blood and was captured in a lumber yard after daylight.

Captain Lahey had a desperate fight with the burglar in his bedroom and finally threw the robber down stairs. A companion standing at the bottom of the stairway then opened fire, the shots taking effect in the breast. The burglars then escaped.

The Sheriff Appeals to the Governor For Assistance.

Four Companies of Troops Ordered to Disturbed District.

Feared Serious Collision May Occur at Any Time.

Ironton, O., June 1.—The trouble that has been brewing this week at the Hanging Rock furnace, assumed threatening conditions today. The strikers began parading the streets carrying Winchesters and threatening the non-union men wherever found, especially the colored men who took the places of the strikers in the furnaces. It was announced at the same time that the new men were also armed. It was feared that a serious collision would occur at any time and a reign of terror existed over what was experienced during the night. As the authorities were defied and helpless, Sheriff Paine appealed to Governor Herrick for troops and the latter has replied that three companies in addition to the Ironton company have been ordered to report at Hanging Rock at once so that the furnace district there will be under military guard tonight.

Columbus, O., June 1.—The sheriff of Lawrence county today wired the attorney general making a request for military aid in putting down the insurrection at Hanging Rock, in that county. He asks that an entire battalion be sent forthwith, as there is every indication that there will be a bloody outbreak at any moment. The request was at once referred to Governor Herrick, and Company I of Ironton was orderede to hold itself in readiness to move at any moment. The trouble grew out of the importation of negroes from Virginia to take the places of the striking furancemen. One man was killed last night.

Four companies of militia were ordered to proceed to Hanging Rock, near Ironton, on the Ohio river.

Governor Herrick has just ordered out Company K, of Portsmouth; Company I, of Ironton, and two companies from Gallipolis and Manchester, under command of Major Howe, of the Seventh infantry. Col. A. C. Thompson will assume command of the troops. The companies left at once for Hanging Rock on a special train.

MUST KNEEL AND KISS HAND

Otherwise Visitors Cannot Have Audience With Pope.

Rome, June 1.—The vatican authorities have given the strictest notice to those who recommend people for audiences of the pope that they must guarantee that such persons will conform to vatican etiquette in kneeling and kissing the hand of the pope. This notification was issued as a result of the conduct of some Americans, a few weeks ago, who refused to kneel when the pope appeared.

STAMANT WINS DERBY STAKES AT EPSOM.

London, June 1.—The race for the Derby stakes (of 6500 sovereigns; about one mile and a half), at Epsom today, was won by Stamant.

The result in detail was as follows: Leopold De Rothschild's Stamant (K. Cannon), first; Sir Talton Sykes, John O'Gaunt (Thursby), second; S. B. Joel's St. Denis (Halsey), third. Eight horses started.

Iron Mountain, Mich., June 1.—General Manager O. C. Davidson, of the Menominee range United States Steel corporation's mines, has left for Negaunee on a special train with a crew of fifty men, to assist in the search for Mayor Hudson, of Negaunee, supposed to be lost in the woods near there.

JOINT WAGE CONFERENCE.

Pittsburg, June 1.—The annual joint wage conference of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and Manufacturers will be held at Cambridge Springs, Pa., beginning June 7. The Republic Steel company will be represented by James N. Nutt, chief engineer of the labor bureau, and President Schafer will head the Amalgamated committee.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

Portland, Ore., June 1.—A bold robbery was committed shortly after noon yesterday by two negroes who entered the office of the Pullman company at the union station just as the cashier, W. H. Aurelius, was making up his cash. Drawing revolvers upon the unsuspecting cashier the negroes demanded what cash was in sight. Aurelius handed over about $2500. The negroes backed out of the office door with their pistols still leveled on the cashier and then hastily disappeared.

PLUNGE IN FOUNTAIN

Was Taken By the Young Roosevelts.

Washington, June 1.—James Rudolph Garfield, commissioner of corporations, dined at the White House the other evening. The younger Roosevelt children were at the table. Mr. Garfield recounted some boyhood pranks he and his brothers used to play when his father was president of the United States.

He told how he and his brother, "Abe," stole downstairs one night after they had been sent to bed and enjoyed a swim in the basin of the fountain to the rear of the executive mansion.

Ethel and her brother Kermit were attentive listeners. The next night the youngsters jumped from their beds and scampered downstairs, evaded the watchmen, reached the basin and paddled in the water to their heart's content.

Ethel keeps a diary, which the president reads occasionally with much zest. Yesterady he was looking over the diary, and he was amused to find there a complete account of his children's escapade in the basin. Ethel had not failed to record the consequent reprimand received from her parents, and at the end was this terse statement: "But wasn't it worth it?"

GEORGIA DEMOCRATS

Meet to Elect Delegates to National Convention.

Atlanta, Ga., June 1.—The Democrats of Georgia met today in state convention to name delegates to the national convention, and to confirm the nominations of state organizers made at the primaries in April. Prior to the assembling of the convention the situation was chaotic. The contest before the committee, which several days' conferences among the leaders has been unable to settle in advance, is whether or not the delegation to St. Louis shall go instructed for Parker or shall be bound by the unit rule and by a preferential resolution fron the convention to support Parker at St. Louis so long as he shall seem to be the strongest candidate before the national convention. The Hearst element, it is said, while influential, is not strong enough to have a deciding vote in the final results of the convention.

FIGHT AGAINST HEARST

Will Be Made In the Oklahoma Convention.

Anadarko, Okla., June 1.—Before the Democratic territorial convention to elect six delegates to the national convention was called to order here today, the indications were that a determined fight would be made against instructions for Hearst. The strength of the delegates for and against instructions for the New Yorker however seemed to be about evenly divided. Leslie G. Niblack, editor of the Guthrie Leader, who leads the Hearst faction, had it well in hand. The argument against instructions was made principally on the ground that Oklahoma, fighting for statehood, would lay itself liable to attack of the Eastern wing of the party in case it instructed for Hearst and he were defeated.

RESIDENCE ROBBED

Occurred In Afternoon When Family Was Away —Valuables Taken.

The home of Victor Huot at 119 Seventh avenue east was entered by an unknown burglar Monday afternoon, and a number of valuables taken.

The robbery was committed during the afternoon of the holiday. All of the members of the family happened to be out for the afternoon, and the burglar evidently waited for his opportunity to commit the crime. Mrs. Huot, Mr. Huot's mother, had gone to the theater and Mr. Huot was at business.

The burglar evidently entered through the rear door and made a search of the house taking whatever valuables he though he could dispose of easily. He could not remove any bulky articles in daylight, and he contended himself with taking little trinkets that could be concealed about his person and on which money could be raised. A little silver wach and a few dollars in money, which had been left lying in a drawer, were purloined.

The police were notified of the robbery and a detective was detailed to the work. One of the neighbors had seen a man entering the rear door of the Huot residence about 2 o'clock on the afternoon in question. She did not take particular notice of the man's appearance, as she thought he was taking orders for groceries or was a delivery man. The police have little doubt that this was the man who committed the burglary as there was no person in the house at the time he was seen entering it. They have only the most meagre description of his appearance, however, and there is little chance of finding him.

The affair was kept quiet by the police in the hope that the man would attempt to pawn some of the stolen articles. A close watch was kept on the pawn shops, both here and in Superior, but none of the articles have made their appearance.

This is about the only hope the police have of locating the unknown thief, as the very boldness of his act, in entering during the daytime, disarmed suspicion and no notice was taken of him by the people who may have seen him hanging about the house.

The man evidently took his time to the work, and selected the articles carefully, as the loss of some of them was not discovered until today.

COLLEGE GIRLS ELOPE

With Iowa Waiters at the World's Fair.

St. Louis, June 1.—The Misses Nell Wetmore, of Chicago, and Pearl Troutman, of St. Louis, college girls, eloped with Charles F. Grant and "Tommy" Shea, center and halfback on the Iowa State university football team.

The girls dined at the Nebraska hotel, near the World's fair. They were served by Grant and Shea, who, while they see the fair, are supporting themselves by working as waiters.

Grand had met Miss Wetmore when visiting a Chicago college chum, but he blushed when he brought the soup because he was a waiter. The young woman's cordial manner put him at ease and he called "Tommy," to whom Miss Wetmore introduced her cousin. Next day the elopement was planned.

They went to Clayton and found the license clerk, who was sleeping. When a justice of the peace had married the elopers, the last car for St. Louis had departed. Shea hailed the driver of a passing wagon and engaged it to make a flying trip to the transit shed, which it reached in time for the party to board the 2 o'clock owl car.

AFTER THE LUMBERMEN.

Agent of Interior Department Coming to Minnesota.

Washington, June 1.—Protests have been received at the interior department from settlers adjoining the ceded portion of the Chippewa reservation in Minnesota, on which timber was sold at auction last December, stating that the lumbermen have not removed the debris as required by the regulations; that frequent forest fires are occurring, which are a menace to their homesteads. Secretary Hitchcock has ordered a special agent to make an investigation, and if the reports are found to be true, the lumbermen will be severely dealt with.

COLORADO'S GOVERNOR

Publicly Hissed During Memorial Day Parade.

On three different occasions the troops were hissed. The first time was when the governor was passing a crowd of workingmen in Glenarm street. Two blocks farther on the insult was repeated. Again, when in the final review, the National Guards were passing between lines of regular troops there was a distinct hissing sound.

Adjt. Gen. Bell attempted to discover the offender by riding down the line, but failed to see a familiar face.

The feeling between the state troops and the regulars is strained since the encounter with United States cavalry at Trinidad during the early days of martial law in that district.

POISONED BY SALAD.

WEST DULUTH

TOO MUCH CIRCUS

Fourth of July Celebration Is Likely to Be Dropped.

Lumber Boats Coming In Bunches and Employing Many Men.

The chances are that, in spite of the plans which have already been laid, there will be no Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth this year, except for the small celebrations undertaken by private parties. The announcement that the Ringling Bros.' big circus is to exhibit in Duluth on July 4, has raised consternation in the ranks of the committees having the celebration in charge.

Many of those on the committees are of the opinion that it would be foolhardy to go to great trouble and expense in arranging for a big celebration when it is known that the circus will be here on the national holiday. To find the sentiment of everyone concerned, L. S. Neuman, chairman of the executive committee, called a general meeting for last night to discuss the proposition. The attendance was very small, however, owing to a number of matters on hand last evening, so no definite action in regard to the matter was taken. The question was left for some future meeting to decide. Probably another meeting will be held within the next two or three days. The date for it had not been decided upon up to this afternoon.

If the celebration is not held West Duluthians will be generally disappointed, for they had hoped to make it one of the biggest events of its kind ever held in the city.

"We want to have a big celebration or none at all," said a committee member this morning. "If we have a big celebration it is liable to be at a loss to ourselves, running in opposition to the circus. We might make our plans for the day less elaborate, and have a fairly successful celebration, but it wouldn't look right to have a country town affair in a city like Duluth."

ARE COMING FAST.

Lumber Boats More Than Union Men Can Handle.

Lumber boats continue to arrive in bunches daily, keeping every member of the longshoremen's union busy as long as he wants to work. Almost as many non-union members are at times employed as union men, because there are not enough of the latter to load the many boats now in port as fast as desired.

This morning, at the West Duluth docks, seven "lumber hookers" were flying flags at their mastheads, signifying that more men were needed to assist in loading the cargo of lumber. These flags mean that there is work for non-union men. Generally the flags are in evidence, but a short time before enough men are on hand to handle the work.

West Duluth labor, with the mills and lumber boats, is now pretty well employed, and conditions appear more prosperous than early in the spring. At Proctor the effects of the lake strike are felt keenly, and scores of railroad men are out of employment because of the strike. The little town on the hill is having harder times now than ever before in its history, it is said.

COOLIES FOR AFRICA.

Col. Hamilton Arranges to Send Half a Million.

Victoria, B. C., June 1.—Col. Hamilton, British government special commissioner to the imperial Chinese government, has arrived on the steamship Empress of Japan, after successfully negotiating with the Chinese government for the sending of upwards of half a million coolies to work in the South African diamond and gold mines. Some days before the Empress left Hong Kong a mutiny broke out among the coolies in their big pen on the Kow Loon side. They were dissatisfied with the conditions under which they were to be deported and began to smash things. The troops were called out and the mutiny was suppressed. A number of coolies were injured in the melee.

BEMIDJI BEATEN

In Second Game With N. P. Team of St. Paul.

Bemidji, Minn., June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Bemidji and Northern Pacific team, (the latter from St. Paul), played their second game on the local grounds Monday afternoon, and the game was a comedy of errors, free hitting and inexcusable bungles, the final score being 24 to 14 in favor of the visitors.

Mike Houle, the Indian pitcher from Cloquet, was secured to pitch for Bemidji. For the first three innings, he pitched a gilt-edged article of the national game, but after that he seemed to lose his grip, and was batted very freely, the Northern Pacific players accumulating a total of twenty-three hits, among which were several for two cushions and two for three. Ludwig, of Cass Lake, caught for Bemidji, and his work was good. Hoff started in to do the slab work for the Northern Pacifics. He did very well for two innings, but in the third he took to the balloon and six runs were scored by the home team before he got to earth again. He was replaced by DePatti, who pitched Sunday's game. He did very well, but was given poor support.

NOT WITHOUT CLEVERNESS

The attorney in question was defending "Con" Sheehan, who was arrested in Duluth last week and sent to Superior on the charge of stealing a number of razors and some other barbers' supplies from a Superior store.

Lawrence Cannon, alias "Chicago Red," was on the witness stand. He was claimed to have assisted Sheehan in disposing of some of the razors in Duluth. "Chicago" had just completed a term in the Superior workhouse, and the attorney for the defense was trying to bring this fact to thee attention of the court, in a facetious manner.

"You have been working during the past forty days, have you not?" asked the attorney, with a geneial smile.

"Well, yes, I have had a job," said the witness, who was "wise."

"Who was your employer?"

"I had a county job."

"What were you doing for the county?"

"Oh, I was engaged in a little road work."

"Did you like your work?"

"Well, I stayed with it until my contract with the county expired."

"Were you paid for your work?"

"No, I didn't receive any remuneration for my services. They were given free gratis to the county. It was just a piece of charity on my part, you see."

At this point the court interfered.

"The witness was in the workhouse, was he not?" asked the judge.

"Yes, your honor," replied the clerk of the court.

"I was just trying to see how long it would take the witness to give us that information," explained the Duluth attorney.

"And I was just trying to find out how long it would take that lawyer to ask me the question," replied the witness, while the spectators and even the judge himself struggled to suppress their mirth at the manner in which the attorney had been scored off.

Sheehan was bound over to await the action of the higher court on the charge of grand larceny.

Gets Promotion.

He will fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Sergt. Fritz to detective work.

IS ARRESTED FOR OLD THEFT

A theft claimed to have been committed over a year ago resulted in the arrest of Oscar Larson this morning on the charge of petty larceny.

Larson is claimed to have stolen a tent last spring from a resident of the West End and to have disposed of it to a man named Clark for $2.50. Clark afterwards sold it for $4.50.

Larson could ont be located by the police at the time of the theft, and he probably left the city until the affair blew over. The police kept a record of the case, however, and watched for the suspect. He was discovered this morning by Sergeant Gillen in the West End and locked up in police headquarters. He will be arraigned in municipal court this afternoon on the charge of petty larceny.

When questioned in police headquarters this morning he admitted having the tent in his possession and selling it to Clark, but claimed that he had purchased it from a third party, whom he stated he would produce as a witness at the hearing.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Gym frolic! The two words will bring to the mind of some hundred of the members of the local Young Women's Christian association such a medley of gay pranks and absurd bits of mischief as were never before crowded into one night's fun. The affair was given last evening at the gymnasium, at the rooms on West Superior street, and was the wind-up of the year's work in the physical department. Each class planned their part of the entertainment and produced independent of the others. The whole produced an evening of rare foolishness and delight.

Perhaps the most awe inspiring and effective of the evening's entertainment was the Indian war dance, given by one of the classes. The thing was given by eight of the members, rigged out in stunning Indian blankets, beads, tomahawks, feathers and grotesque and fearfully painted faces that were equaled in their terrifying qualities only by the war whoops that one could not help but wonder how they survived the eliminating processes of a present day civilization. The dance was effective, and the war chief, with her buckskin trousers, and in her particular dance was fine. Now add to all this the discovery, later in the evening, that underneath the paint and feathers were some of the most dignified matrons in town and the combination is hard to beat.

Another of the features that equaled the Indian dance were the performing bears and the two monkeys, led by a small "dago" with light hair and dark beard, a combination nature seldom produces. The bears were more real than one can imagine, with bear hide coats, muzzles and long chains. They rolled over after much prodding and coaxing, waltzed, played horse all in a clumsy manner that their dainty feet almost belied. And the monkeys! Their get-up was dreadful, and the way they would scratch and pick off—well, you know, the things that monkeys do pick off themselves and each other! This part of the affair was well carried through.

The high school girls' class played a game of center ball with the feet of the guards tied together and the hands of the centers and basemen tied, a laughter producing combination. The contest was between the yellows and greens, and ended in a score of four to one in favor of the former.

Another class gave a Russian drill in costumes the like of which the Russians, it is hoped, have never seen. The long, morose, dejected looking faces of the drillers were not unlike what one would imagine the real Russians would possess if they might read the American war news.

A tight rope feat of about five minutes in length during which those in the audience were requested to remain perfectly breathless was well acted out. The string was carefully stretched along the floor, the band took its place, the ring master with a perfectly fascinating mustache and a cracking whip was announced and a dainty performer in white ballet skirts, pink cheeks and red ribbons, in a silence broken only by the discords of the orchestra, the Indian war whoops and high school yells, accomplished the feat.

Leap frog, soldier-playing and riding stick-horses was a lot of fun for the spectators as done by one class in football togs, bricklayers' costumes and other conglomerated dresses.

The last number was a minstrel show that was splendidly carried out. The members were blacked and garbed beyond recognition and "Bob" and the ships in which some of the members of the association have ridden and the one or two men who had by this time straggled in were hit unmercifully, metaphorically speaking of course. At any lull in the proceedings the staccato whoops of the Indians made the calmer spectator sympathize with John Henry and his fear of the crowd being "pinched" during the singing of a grand opera one evening. The whole evening was a howling success.

As last evening's frolic terminated Miss Maud Culver's work as physical director of the association she was presented by the gymnasium members with several beautiful pieces of silver and was cheered lustily by the enthusiastic members. Miss Culver has been in charge of the work for two years, since its organization and it has been a great success. The gym is now self supporting which is a record to be proud of in two years' time. Miss Culver has been engaged for two months as assistant secretary to Mrs. Wesley Feetham. Miss Ruth Roberts of New York will succeed her in the physical directorship.

Demonstration of Arnold Baby Outfits

Fine, very fine Knit fabrics should appeal to you as the proper material for baby. You wear them, why not baby? Change of temperature, such as we are subject to in this northern climate, and sudden chills, have less effect when you use absorbing clothing. They are cool in hot weather and warm in cold weather. The moisture of the body passes away, the skin becomes drier and thus the body is kept uniformly warm. For baby the Arnold knit outfits make all this possible. Prices, $12.75 and upwards, for mothers. These Arnold Knit garments perform the same function. But there's a practical demonstrator here now to tell you all about these meritorious undergarments. Come in and talk to her.

THE EVENING STORY.

MRS. PEABODY'S CONSCIENCE

By Dorothy E. Leonard.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The front gate fell to with a clang and Martha Moore turned her head and looked out of the window.

"Sakes alive, ma! If there ain't Mis' Peabody coming up the walk, and it's 'most 5 o'clock."

Mrs. Moore peered out furtively behind the curtain, then walked heavily into the entry and opened the door. The rays of the setting sun fell obliquely across the path, lighting up Mrs. Peabody's old black silk mantilla, and the jet ornaments in her bonnet, and touching her pale, patient face with rosy tints.

"Well, Louise Peabody, if this ain't an unexpected pleasure!" cried Mrs. Moore, in her deep voice, as her visitor toiled up the steps. "Dear me! You are all of a tremble. Nothing hasn't happened, has it?" the smile fading from her face as she took the hard, thin hand extended to her.

"Oh, no! I guess I hurried so," panted the little woman. "The air's so bracing today. I felt as if I couldn't go slow. It's the ozone in it, so Fanny says," she added, as she followed her hostess into the sitting room.

Martha turned around and nodded cordially, but did not rise. "I guess you'll excuse me under the circumstances," laughed she, "my lap's pretty full."

Mrs. Peabody laid aside her wraps and sank into the nearest chair, her heart beating like a trip hammer. The table was covered with a profusion of dainty materials and half-finished garments; and from where she sat she could see that the work over which the girl was bending was of an elaborate description. She was sure now that the report she had heard that morning was true, and that Martha was going to be married to Harry Summers. As she thought of it, and of it and of Harry's attentions to her own daughter Fanny, during the past year, her brain seemed to whirl. At last she was conscious that Mrs. Moore was addressing her.

"You didn't hear me, Mis' Peabody. Don't you want to see all we've got done?"

"Here, take this seat by the window," said Martha, rising. "you can't see well over there."

By a great effort she mastered her feelings, and, sitting down by the window, silently examined the articles shown to her.

"Why, this is real lace, Marthy," she said at last, in genuine surprise.

"Yes, there's to be a whole set trimmed with that pattern," put in the mother, proudly. "but yet I do think crochet is prettier and washes better too. Marthy does do crochet wonderful."

"So does Fanny!" said Mrs. Peabody, flushing suddenly.

"Dear Fan!" said Martha, "tell her to come over Saturday and see my things. Wait, ma! don't blow her the veil till I light the lamp. The light's all gone."

The veil would have seemed pretty to far more critical eyes than Mrs. Peabody's, but to the poor woman, overwhelmed with the petty cares of a poverty-stricken life, it was a vision of beauty. It was impossible to imagine it on Martha's head; and Fanny's delicate beauty rose persistently before her eyes until Mrs. Moore broke the silence.

"Mr. Moore and I ain't never goin' to tell what we paid for that veil. Even Martha don't know."

"It used to be considered awful bad luck to show the wedding clothes," answered her guest, struggling in vain to suppress the jealousy which surged in her heart.

"Oh, we've got beyond such nonsense now," laughed Martha, as she began gathering up her treasures. Her plain, coarse face was triumphant. Mrs. Peabody could not endure to look at her. "I just know how she tried to get him from Fanny!" the poor woman thought to herself, "she who has everything in the world she wants, too."

At last it began to dawn on Mrs. Moore that her visitor was very silent and possibly bored.

"Are Mr. Peabody and the boys well?" she asked.

"Yes."

"And Fanny? We hear she's goin' to have the school next year, too."

"Oh, that's fine for her," said Martha, carelessly.

Mrs. Peabody's heart beat fast, her brain was on fire. "I guess Fanny'll be havin' something else to do then beside teaching!" she said suggestively.

"Why, Louise, you don't say!" ejaculated Mrs. Moore.

"Do you mean she's keeping company?" asked Martha, peering shrewdly into the poor woman's face.

"Yes!" and for the first time in her life Mrs. ePabody had told a lie.

"I don't believe it!" cried the girl rudely.

"Marthy!" said her mother, reprovingly.

"Well, it's awful queer nobody's heard anything about it!"

Mrs. Peabody returned no answer. She fingered the veil absently for a few minutes, then rose and walked slowly to the door. "Well, good night, I guess I'd better be goin'," said she, and stepped out bareheaded into the darkness. Martha ran after her and laid a restraining hand on her arm. "You'll catch your death of cold, Mis' Peabody! Don't mind what I said. Come back and get your things on, and pa'll drive you home."

"I don't see what took her so," said the girl after they had helped her, unresisting into the wagon, and gone back to the house.

"Oh, I guess it was the heat o' the room after walking so fast," returned her mother placidly, "but you did speak up mighty loud and sassy to her, Marthy, and mebbe that turned her head."

Poor Louise Peabody leaned back in the wagon beside Mr. Moore in silent despair. Above the certainty that Harry had deserted her own dear daughter, above her belief in Martha's perfidy, loomed the lie in all its hideousness. Mr. Moore's jokes in regard to the approaching nuptials, and his information that Harry Summers had bought out his uncle's grocery business and would settle down near them, fell upon unheeding ears. She roused at last to the consciousness that he was helping her out of the wagon, and, after a hasty good-night, with burning cheeks and a heart like lead, Mrs. Peabody entered her home.

As the weeks passed by it was surprising to see how well Fanny bore up under Martha's engagement. In spite of the extra work of the spring term she was blooming, and fairly cheerful. She never mentioned Harry, nor did he come to the house; but as the days lengthened she would often go off alone for a ramble in the pine woods for an hour or two after school, coming back laden with violets, ferns and specimens of wild flowers, which she said were for her class in botany.

School closed on the 10th of June and the 11th was the day set for Martha's wedding. Mrs. Peabody had not intended to go, but Fanny insisted upon it. "It will look so queer if neither of us go, ma," she urged, "and as school only closed yesterday I don't feel like it. One of the boys can drive you over, and you must wear my muslin with the lavender stripes. It fits you all right, and you'll look fine in it." So the poor mother allowed herself to be persuaded and donned the dainty muslin, but a cold east wind having arisen, she threw her old black silk mantilla over her shoulders for the drive.

As Mrs. Peabody entered the house her last visit there came vividly before her mind; and, forgetting to lay aside her wrap she hurried nervously into the parlor. The folding doors between the parlor and sitting room were thrown wide open, and both rooms were profusely decorated with June roses and branches of the fragrant syringa. A number of the guests had already arrived, and a cheerful buzz of conversation greeted her ears as she sank timidly upon the sofa beside the minister's wife. All of the women were in their best with their hats off, and Fanny had dressed her mother's hair carefully, fastening a cluster of sweet English violets on the left side, but had been obliged to tie on her winter bonnet, as the shape of the summer one seemed likely to crush them. "It won't make any difference, ma," she had said, "for you'll take it off as soon as you get in and no one will notice it." In her nervous haste, however, poor Mrs. Peabody had forgotten all about it, and so sat silent and shabby in her old black mantilla and unseasonable headgear among the fresh, pretty toilets around her. Fortunately her nearest neighbor was the minister's wife, who spoke kindly to her and tried to draw her into conversation. Before long the minister himself arrived, and a hush fell over the assembly as he walked slowly in and took the seat prepared for him between the folding doors.

The clock struck 4 and all eyes were turned expectantly toward the hall door—but there was no sign of the bridal party. Mrs. Peabody could hardly keep the tears back as she thought of Fanny; but she clinched her hands under the old mantilla and nerved herself to bear the worst. The clock ticked on loudly, but no one spoke. At last a sudden ring at the door startled them. Steps came heavily down the hall, and the door was opened.

"It's a boy with a note!" exclaimed a young girl who sat near the door.

The guests could endure the suspense no longer, but began to converse excitedly in loud whispers. Suddenly a swish of silken skirts was heard on the stairs, and a tall, white-veiled figure entered the room. All of the women trembled, and one screamed. Martha Moore threw back her veil and looked proudly around the room. Her large, plain face was almost as white as her bridal gown, but she held her head up and eyed her guests defiantly.

"Will you please to walk out and have some refreshments?" said she. "There ain't going to be any wedding this afternoon, but I guess you'll find the cake just as good."

As she turned to lead the way to the dining room her eye fell upon Mrs. Peabody. Instantly her whole manner changed. Her tall figure grew rigid, her eyes dilated, and stretching out one hand toward her she screamed, "Oh, you wicked, deceitful woman! How dare you to come here this afternoon? You've known this all along!"

Mrs. Peabody trembled and clung to the friendly hand of the ministers' wife. Her breath came in quick, frightened gasps. The minister stepped forward and laid his hand on Martha's arm.

"Miss Martha," he said, kindly but firmly, "you forget yourself!"

She shook him off impatiently. The tears were now streaming down her cheeks, but she did not heed them. "Here Fanny Peabody's been a-plotting all along to run off with my young man the day of my wedding, just to shame me because I tried to get him away from her—just as if I hadn't a right! And then to send me a note and tell me they are leaving for Boston on the 3:45 train! I'll show 'em I don't care!" Her voice rose to a scream.

"Oh, Marthy! Marthy! Don't go on so!" sobbed her mother, pushing her way through the crowd to her daughter's side—but Martha heeded her not.

"And then for that deceitful old woman to dare to come here this afternoon!" she cried, almost pathetically, "when she's been in the plot all along, and had the cheek to tell me Fanny was keeping company—"

Mrs. Peabody started forward from her seat. "Oh, it wa'n't a lie! It wa'n't a lie!" she cried. "I told 'em, when I come out here 'most three months ago, that Fanny was keeping company, because I was so jealous that Martha'd got Harry away from her. But I didn't know 't was true. I thought it was a lie, and it seemed as if it would most kill me!" Her face was radiant through her tears.

Martha turned coldly from her; and, controlling herself by a great effort, again invited her guests to come out and partake of the wedding cake. She led the way, and the guests followed her one by one, until Mrs. Peabody and the minister were left alone.

"I think you and I are not needed here tonight, Mrs. Peabody," said he, kindly, "you had better let me drive you home." And taking her hand he led her from the room, and helped her, still trembling but happy and relieved, into the carriage.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

The class which graduated from the Clark high school this week numbers nine, Lula Day, Clara Polanshee, Georgia Meltzer, Mildred Cochrane, Florence Gates, Bracia Knox, Gertrude Gates, Ida Dean and Oscar Olverson. The commencement exercises will be held Thursday evening in the Methodist church.

Henry Rohn, a farmer living near Willow Lakes, was found dead in his buggy near the barn on his place. He had been at a neighbor's place on the evening previous.

Pierre—The last wolf bounty law provided a limitation of bounties to $5000 a year, with a set price for wolf scalps so long as the claims did not pass the limitations of the total amount which could be paid out in a year. It further provided that when the total number of claims filed exceeded the $5000 limitation, they should be met from the fund, each holder of a certificate getting his pro rata share of the total appropriation and no more.

In past years the appropriation has not all been taken up, and every claim filed has been met in full to the maximum amount. But this year the situation will be different. Claims have already been filed covering the total appropriation, and as many are always rushed in the last month of the fiscal year, and they are coming at a rate of over forty a day, before the first of July sufficient claims on the fund will have been filed to cut every application.

Webster—The program has been completed for the sixth annual celebration and picnic of the Day County Old Settlers' association, which will be held in this place June 18. The business meeting for the election of officers will be held at 10 a. m. The principal address will be made by Judge J. H. McCoy of Aberdeen. Music will be furnished by three bands. The sports will include foot races, married women's race, married men's race, sack race, etc. One of the features of the afternoon will be a ball game between the Webster team and the Gotham nine of Minneapolis.

Wessington Springs—Rev. H. E. Newton of Albert Lea, Minn., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Universalist church here.

Aberdeen—C. A. Spink's greenhouse was struck by lighting and 200 feet of glass destroyed. One and one-half inches of rain fell.

Flandreau—J. Bennett, who was almost 94, died Tuesday. He leaves a wife who is 92.

Mandan—Two girls, named Geigel and Nagel, while picking flowers, were struck by lightning. The Seigel girl, aged 16, was instantly killed. Her companion had her hair burned off her head and was made unconscious.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The Scandinavian-American bank, of Grand Forks, with Anton Eckern, Halstead, Minn., as president, and Samuel Torgerson, of Mayville, as cashier, will open for business in this city August 15. The new institution will occupy quarters in the Metropolitan theater block, and will make the fourth bank for this city.

Norway—George Walker, a cedar jobber of Iron Mountain, killed a pine snake measuring over six feet at the scene of his timber operations. Walker unexpectedly aroused the snake, which attacked him, only to be cut in twain. Pine snakes are poisonous and the only kind in the upper peninsula which possess that characteristic, although last week, near Sault Ste. Marie, a snake of the copperhead variety was killed by Thompson Allen of that city.

Marquette—A case of more than usual interest to be tried at the July term of the United States court here has for its central figure an Iron Mountain woman, Florence M. Ogden, who is being sued for the recovery of $3000 by the Bankers' Mutual Casualty company of Des Moines, Iowa. Miss Ogden is the deputy postmistress at the Iron Mountain office, and the Bankers' company alleges that she is responsible for the disappearance of a package containing $3000 in currency in shipment between a Chicago and an Iron River bank.

The currency was consigned to the Commercial bank of Iron River. The sack, properly locked and in good order, it is asserted, was delivered into the hands of Miss Ogden. She, it is alleged, neglected to comply with a postal regulation specifying how registered mail should be handled, and, instead of opening it in the presence of two clerks and at once having its contents checked over, opened the sack in a vault apart. When the contents of the sack were checked up by the way bills, the $3000 in currency was missing; nor has to this day any adequate explanation of its disappearance been made.

The litigation instituted by the Bankers' Casualty company is the first that has taken place in connection with the case. The government, it appears, never took any action, although the case was investigated by inspectors. The First National bank of Chicago did not concern itself with any of the details of the matter, but simply turned to the casualty company for reimbursement. The latter paid the claim and then set about seeing what it could do to recover the loss. It has employed its own detectives and finally decided to institute a civil suit.

It is now asserted by the casualty company that Miss Ogden took the package for her own use. The suit is brought simply with the idea that she is the person last responsible for it.

Escanaba—Although all arrangements had been made for the loading of the first ore boats of the season Tuesday the dock laborers refused to work at a scale of wages offered by the Northwestern Railroad company. Unless the members of the union comply with the demands of the company, non-union men will be employed. The wage scale last year was $2 for day laborers and $2.25 for night workers and by the scale proposed Tuesday day laborers will receive $1.85 and night laborers $2. Ore loading at the St. Paul dock was begun, the men accepting the new wage scale.

It's no use. The people are accustomed to Glass Block methods, and while the little fellows shriek we continue to give real values and do the business.

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY

THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE — WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

Notice!

You'll hear a great deal about the "Sweetser Pembrook sale." In view of which the "real facts" may be of interest. Read what our resident New York buyer says about it.

New York, May 25th, 1904.

Messrs. Panton & White Company,
Duluth, Minn.

Dear Sirs:—Enclosed find express and freight lists. Regarding the Sweetser, Pembrook & Co. sale, will say that I have been attending same with Mr. Field and his buyers since Monday morning. All goods sold have brought very high prices, in fact in a great many cases more than the goods can be bought for regular. Then again the auctioneers would not give you the choice of lots so that if you did want any particular lot you would not be apt to get it as they would sell a big range of numbers at one time and give the purchaser whatever lot they wished to put down. So far Mr. Field or myself have made no purchases.

Most of the stock, in fact the cream of it, was previously sold to Claflin, Tefft Weller & Co., and Dunham, or taken back by the commission houses, as a great many goods were on consignment. However the town is full of merchants and buyers, who have forced the bidding up, and who seem to be willing to pay any old price to get some of the goods. For instance, Red Seal shorts, which I am buying for you at 7¼c less 3 per cent 10 days, sold for 7¾c and 8c, take them as you could get them, bad colorings, and on which you also have the expense of shipping, etc. Yours truly.

GEORGE SLOAN.

Special values in ladies' house slippers—in pumps or strap sandals—all sizes—regular $1.50 values—Thursday, per pair..... 98c

Sole agents for Queen Quality shoes and oxfords—the best values made at the price—per pair.....$3.00 and $2.50

These prices are in every instance much lower than furniture trust prices for buggies and carts of equal value. These prices are on the celebrated "Whitney" carts and buggies.

These prices are on folding carts, reed and rattan carts, full-size buggies and twin perambulators.

JAPS BEGIN ATTACK

Movement Against Port Arthur Said to Have Commenced.

Land Forces and Navy Are Assisting the Garrison.

Indianapolis, June 1.—A special cable from the staff correspondent of the Indianapolis News at Che Foo, dated June 1, says:

"The Japanese land attack on Port Arthur was begun yesterday morning. Russian forces that were driven southward from Dalny and Kin Chou by the Japanese are assisting the garrison at Port Arthur, and the Russian navy has joined in the movement to repulse the enemy.

"There may be several days of skirmishing and outpost work before the Russian city is taken, but it is the opinion of refugees who have arrived here from the besieged Gibraltar that the Russians eventually must succumb to overwhelming numbers.

"Dalny, Kin Chou, Talien Wan and Nan Shan have already fallen before the Japanese."

JAPS ARE FALLING BACK.

St. Petersburg, June 1.—The war office has received reports showing that the Japanese are falling back from Siu Yen, southwest of Feng Wang Cheng, and in the meanwhile advancing on Saimatsza, almost due north of Feng Wang Cheng. Both movements are taken to indicate the continued desire of the Japanese to screen the operations before Port Arthur.

There is not the slightest foundation for the report that the Russians will abandon their positions east of Hai Cheng. Gen. Samsonoff, who is operating south of Kai Chou, is understood to have a strong force of troops, and likely to harass the Japanese outposts.

As regards the operations north of Feng Wang Cheng, the Cossacks have retired from Saimatza with the additional loss of two officers and seven men wounded. Saimatsza is now being held by a strong Japanese garrison.

RUSSIANS SHORT OF FOOD.

Seoul, June 1.—The Russian bands scattered throughout Ham Heung province are encountering commissariat difficulties. The country side is ill supplied with food and forage, owing to the bad crops of the past two years. Since the first Russian raid there has been no trade at Yen San and Song Jin and consequently no importation of foodstuffs. The Russian movements in Korea caused widespread starvation and they are now experiencing the same difficulty in obtaining food. A detachment of twenty Cossacks with two Korean interpreters yesterday ordered the governor of Ham Heung to arrange for suitable supplies.

A Japanese newspaper published here has bitterly attacked the Korean home minister, Yi Yung Tai. The latter's sale of office angered the prime minister, Cho Pin Sik, and a quarrel ensued, which resulted in the latter's impeachment and resignation. The Japanese paper demands that the Korean authorities take action against Yi Yung Tai.

Circus Men Here.

Louis Cook has arrived at the St. Louis from Newark, N. J., and is endeavoring to help find a twelve-acre site for Barnum & Bailey's circus. The forces of Barnum & Bailey are by no means the only circus men in town, for at the St. Louis there are probably half a dozen of Ringling's men, including W. H. Horton, Charles Webster, Walter Nissen, J. C. Hart and Harry Crafton.

Mr. Cook is well known in Duluth and his daughter has visited here.

Rummage Sale

The ladies of Pilgrim church will have a sale at 16 East Superior street Friday and Saturday, June 3 and 4. Store open at 9 a. m.

SUES FRED H. MERRITT.

G. W. McMullen Wants Large Sum From Him.

Charging Fred. H. Merritt and the Duluth Real Estate and Stock exchange with refusing to take certain stock which he alleges he bought for them at their request, George W. McMullen, of the George W. McMullen company, has brought suit in district court to recover $3175.95, which he claims is the amount due him as the difference between what he paid for the stock and what he was able to get for it in open market.

In his complaint, filed this morning by Alford & Hunt, Mr. McMulen claims that June 22, 1903, and at divers times since, at the request of Mr. Merritt and his company, he purchased a certain number of shares of stock of the Calumet & Pittsburg Development company, advancing $6153.70 to pay for them. Mr. McMullen claims that in July he tendered the stock to Mr. Merritt, but on request consented to hold it a short time longer. He says about Dec. 21, 1903, the stock was repeatedly offered to Mr. Merritt and his company failed to take it or to pay the amount advanced in its payment.

Mr. McMullen also claims that Mr. Merritt and the others have refused to make good the balance, when about Dec. 21 he was compelled to sell the stock in open market for $2993.75.

It is further alleged in the complaint that July 9, 1903, Mr. McMullen forwarded the shares of stock to Mr. Merritt in Duluth with a draft of $615.70 attached to it, which Mr. Merritt refused to pay.

Two Weeks Later.

Its first trip to Duluth this year by the steamer North West will be made June 28, which is two weeks later than last year, when June 14 was the date. This is one more evidence of the lateness of the tourist season, due to the severe weather and the lake strike. The boat will make Pier 4 this year, instead of Pier 3.

MILES WILL NOT DO

The Prohibition Party Will Look Elsewhere For Candidate.

Miles Could Be Nominated, If Identified With Party.

Chicago, June 1.—Oliver W. Stewart, chairman of the National Prohibition committee said today:

Gen. Miles without a doubt would be nominated by the Prohibitionists at Indianapolis, June 29, if he were known to be identified with the Prohibition party. His record in opposition to the army canteen is one of which Prohobitionists are proud. They confess to a great admiration for him. If he were to state publicly that in the coming campaign as a patriotic citizen, he would affiliate with the Prohibition party and support its ticket, my judgement is that there would be no other name proposed in the convention. However, Gen. Miles has made no public statement to the effect that he intends to co-operate with the Prohibition party. He has suggested that we postpone our convention until after the Democratic gathering at St. Louis on the ground that possibly the Democrats may take such action as will make a nomination by the Prohibitionists unnecessary. This is wholly unsatisfactory to the rank and file of the Prohobition party. We are confident the Democrats will make no such move and propose to go ahead with our convention and make our nominations. Since Gen. Miles is not with us to the extent, at least, of being willing to make an open public statement to that effect, it has become the settled conviction of most thoughtful Prohibitionists that we must look elsewhere for our candidate. The prospect is that the convention at Indianapolis will be more largely attended than any gathering that has ever been held by the Prohobition party.

Few In First Class.

Out of a total of 71 dairies in Duluth only 20 are in a first-class sanitary condition, according to the report of Inspector Langslow.

Mr. Langslow has been making a tour of the dairies during the past two months and has completed his report which will be presented to the council. Out of the 71 inspected 20 are in the first-class, 36 in the second and 15 in the third.

Four horses have been killed for glanders during the past month and two other cases are now under suspicion.

Looked Over Plans.

At the monthly meeting of the board of county poor commissioners yesterday afternoon, the commissioners looked over and discussed various sketches of the proposed county poorhouse, but no action was taken toward accepting any plans, nor is the board likely to do so until after the levy next October. Until that time, in fact until the money is collected on the levy, nothing can be done in the way of erecting the new building and such discussion as may be had by the board will be merely in the way of preliminary preparations.

WILL THROW BUT ONE.

Mayor Cullum Connot Pitch Whole Game.

Mayor Cullum will throw the first ball over the plate tomorrow afternoon, at the opening of the Northern League season in Duluth.

The mayor is an old baseball enthusiast himself and he is said to have offered to pitch the whole game but Manager Van Praagh intimated that it would be better to let Winnipeg have a show in the first contest, or else the fans would lose interest in the series. The mayor recognized the soundness of the argument and withdrew in favor of "Rusty" Owens of the long arm and mysterious curves. His Honor will therefore retire from the field after throwing the first ball and take his seat with the city "Dads" in the grandstand.

PARKER TALKS TO STUDENTS

At the Albany Law School But Not on Politics.

Albany, N. Y., June 1.—Chief Judge Alton B. Parker, of the court of appeals, was given a rousing reception by the students of the Albany Law school yesterday before whom he delivered a lecture on "The Development of the Law."

Judge Parker supplemented his address with an informal talk to the students in which he told of his first experience before the court of appeals.

"Well do I remember," he said, "my first appearance before the court of appeals. I had spent a couple of weeks in preparing and practicing my speech and had hired a room in the Globe hotel in this city, where I rehearsed my arguments. The night before my appearance in court was sleepless. The opposing attorney was a lawyer with whom I had studied. I had always had a great deal of respect for him, but as the hour of the argument approached the respect developed into terror.

"The hour was at hand for the opening of the court, and I, fully primed for my argument, with my brief under my arm, went to the capitol. We took our seats in the court room and in due time the number of our case was called. The climax of my nervousness came when Chief Judge Church, adjusting his glass and casting his eyes in my direction, said: 'Now, Mr. Parker, you may proceed.'

"The elaborately prepared argument, with its effusive introduction, which had taken weeks to prepare and which would have consumed an hour in delivery, vanished and I began a ten-minute speech to the court beginning with:

"'My point is this:' Chief Judge Church appreciated that it was my first appearance before that tribunal and that I had the usual stage fright. He was most kindly in his treatment of me, and so are the judges of all the courts of this state when the young practitioner appears before them."

NEW EVIDENCE

Being Secured In the Schafer Murder Case.

Bedford, Ind., June 1.—New evidence is being secured by the special grand jury which is investigating the murder of Sarah Schafer. A number of prominent women of Bedford, who were not examined heretofore, are testifying. The local manager of the Western Union Telegraph company has been summoned, and copies of some telegrams have been demanded. It is said they include one sent to a prominent Bedford person from Terre Haute a few hours before the murder, and which will play an important part in the evidence.

TRAGEDY ENDS IN WEDDING

Editor Marries Girl For Whom He Shot Himself.

Red Wing, Minn., June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Romance and tragedy ended in the happy marriage of Editor O. G. Sanstad of the Kenyon Signal, of this county, and Miss Maymie Blandin, at Riceville, Iowa. Several months ago Miss Blandin broke the engagement on the eve of the wedding. Thereupon the editor went to the girl's home in Iowa and, at her door, shot himself. His life was despaired of, but he finally recovered and the engagement was renewed.

OLD NEWSPAPER IN FINANCIAL TROUBLE.

Worcester, Mass., June 1.—The Worcester Spy, one of the oldest newspapers in the country, has suspended publication on account of financial troubles. The Spy was founded in 1770, the first issue appearing in Boston. Soon afterwards it was driven from the city on account of its utterances in favor of independence, and its publisher located in Worcester. Since the revolution the Spy had appeared continually, first as a weekly and then as a daily, until today.

STEAMER QUARANTINED.

Yokohama, June 1.—The American Mail steamer Korea, from Chinese ports, is quarantined at Kobe, owing to having a suspected case of the plague on board. The sick person is a cabin passenger, Mrs. Palmer. The steamer will probably be detained ten days. Third Assistant Secretary of State Herbert, H. D. Peirce, who has been inspecting the United States consulates in the far East, is a passenger on board the Korea.

STRIKE IN MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, June 1.—A strike of 500 woodworkers, members of the local unions Nos. 8 and 115, has been called as the result of the refusal of employers to grant an increase in wages. The strike affects six plants. The demands of the men, as reported by the labor leaders, are for an increase from 22½ cents to 25 cents an hour for bench men and machine hands, and an increase from 21 to 23 cents an hour for hardwood finishers.

BONDS FOR SALE—
Bids will be received by the undersigned until June 20, 1904, at 7 p. m., at Iron, Minn., for bonds of the Town of Clinton, St. Louis county, Minn., amounting to $1500, in ten bonds of $150 each, one bond to mature each year. Interest payable annually.

TWO LIVES LOST BY FLOODS IN THE GREEN RIVER IN WYOMING

Green River, Wyo., June 1.—Floods in the Green river and tributaries have cost at least two lives and much damage to property. A messenger has just arrived here with news from the inundated district. It is his opinion that the death list may be greatly increased, when complete reports come in. The known dead are:

FRANK WOODRUFF, range rider.
WILLIAM EUBANKS, range rider.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 1.—Word has just reached this city of a terrific flood which swept down the valley of Horse creek, 30 miles north of Cheyenne, yesterday afternoon. The flood followed a tremendous fall of rain about the headwaters of the creek and within a short time the creek was transformed into a torrent from 200 yards to half a mile in width. It is said that the damage to ranch property will be immense.

Kansas City, June 1.—Two inches of rain fell in southern Kansas today and it is probable that all streams which had been receding in the past few days will again rise and overflow their banks. Further flood damage is expected.

HAD OVER MILLION IN HIS VALISE

Chicago, June 1.—Ito Himatsu, a Japanese merchant of New York, has arrived in Chicago with a common split leather valise containing $1,120,000 in United States money, which he will give to the Mikado to help defeat Russia. The cash is all in United States gold notes and bonds. The money was deposited here with a trust company on the advice of the local Japanese consul.

Ito Himatsu expects to sail from San Francisco on June 11. He is a recognized authority in America on Japanese art and his discourses at Chatauquan assemblies for the last five years have been the subject of many written disquisitions on the influence of Japanese arts and Japanese ideals upon modern aestheticism. Ito Himatsu is known in New York as a dealer in objects of Japanese art.

"The crisis which they faced was to determine whether or not this people was fit for self-government, and therefore fit for liberty. Freedom is not a gift which can be enjoyed save by those who show themselves worthy of it. In this world no privilege can be permanently appropriated by men who have not the power and the will successfully to assume the responsibility of using it aright."

So spake President Roosevelt at Gettysburg on Memorial day. While speaking in regard to the fight of the Federal army to prevent dissolution of the Union, no doubt the president had in mind the formulation of some sort of excuse for the action of the Republican party with regard to the Philippines. It is a mighty lame excuse, but indicates the workings of a troubled conscience and for that reason is perhaps better than none. It does seem that there must be something wrong with a policy that is eternally in need of defense. The Republican leaders have felt called upon to attempt to justify American occupation of the Philippines ever since it was consummated. As yet, however, none of the beneficent effects that they have constantly prophesied for American rule have been accomplished. The people there are no happier and no more prosperous than they were before the Republican party undertook to teach them how to enjoy freedom.

The fact is that freedom is not a gift at all, but a right. If it is a gift, who is the giver? There were millions of people in the Philippines before Spain ever conquered them. They managed to live and get along some way without the assistance of any outside power. In beginning a war of conquest against these people no doubt the Spaniards justified their conduct just as Roosevelt does that of America today by saying that the Filipinos were not capable of self-government, and yet we know that Spanish rule was marked by cruelty, robbery and injustice.

Did the Federal army wait until the negroes were capable of self-government according to the American standard before giving them the privilege of voting?

No; they did not ask as to their capability. They simply said that all men should be equal before the law and they forced the South to cease preventing the black men from exercising their rights as members of the human race. There was no qustion as to their fitness. Liberty and political equality was recognized as their right.

The man who commits mob murder is as much a brutal savage as the vilest Indian scalp-taker that America ever produced, and yet we do not hear President Roosevelt demand that these lynchers be prevented from participating in their own government. That which prompts men to participate in lynchings is the same spirit that leads others to invade other countries and deprive the people of their natural right to govern themselves. Both attempt to justify their conduct on the ground that it is for the good of humanity. Both are radically and eternally wrong. One is just as much anarchy as the other.

A SOUTHERNER'S VIEW.

Just to show what a wide gulf exists even to this day between the sentiment of Democrats North and South, The Herald reproduces the following platform advocated by William S. McAllister, of Canton, Miss., a prominent and influential member of the Democratic party in that state. The platform was originally printed in a Southern Democratic paper, with evident approval of the sentiments therein contained. Mr. McAllister's proposed platform reads as follows:

1. Anglo-Saxon supremacy on the American continent and heroic opposition to negro domination or equality, whenever, wherever and by whomsoever asserted.
2. A sound, stable currency, in line with the historic ante-bellum gold standard policy of the Democratic party.
3. Tariff schedules framed with a view to revenue, to stifling avaricious monopolies and just protection to American industries.
4. Recognizing that aggregated wealth has been a blessing to mankind, we are not averse to such aggregations for legitimate profits and public progress, but against criminal trusts in restraint of healthy competition we will wage uncompromising war.
5. We favor making the nation a world power, and increasing the army and navy to that end.
6. Territorial and commercial expansion as taught by their great apostle—Jefferson.
7. Intervention in South American affairs, when such is necessary to the peace and progress of the Western continent.
8. We recognize the paramount supremacy of the Federal government, and that the states are only sovereign in respect to each other.
9. We congratulate the country upon the fraternal good will existing between all of its sections, and pledge ourselves to its encouragemet and maintenance.
10. Liberal pensions to Union soldiers and appropriations for internal improvements—agricultural development and for the arts and sciences.
11. Suppression of strikes when they interfere with the rights of private property, interstate commerce and the United States mails.
12. Protection in the enjoyment of religious liberty and opposition to all sumptuary and class legislation.
13. Federal arbitration of differences between capital and labor, to the end that justice may be done both.
14. Honesty, economy and efficiency in the public service and continuation of the civil service policy.
15. Sympathy for oppressed Jews in Russia and for Ireland in her struggle for freedom.

Leaving off the fist plank it is difficult to see where in this platiorm essentially differs from Republican policy of today. If the Republican party would simply adopt that Anglo-Saxon supremacy plank there is reason to believe that it could carry most of the states of the solid South. It is no wonder that Grover Cleveland, having adjusted his presidential lightning rods, took great pains to deny that he ever entertained a negro. He is shrewd enough to recognize the fact that this is the only issue that holds the people of the South in line for the Democratic party.

If the Democratic party would adopt the platform suggested by Mr. McAllister it would differ in no respect from the Republican party as at present constituted, except on the negro question. Northern Democrats generally take an altogether different veiw of the duty of the Democratic party with regard to the majority of these propositions.

IS FOLK ON THE SQUARE?

It may be only a campaign lie, of course, but a charge of connivance with railroad interests in order to secure his election as governor has been made against Joseph Folk of Missouri. The charge is made by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a Republican paper of good standing in the state. It is claimed that Congressman Willard D. Vandiver, manager of the Folk campaign, has some sort of an arrangement with John H. Carroll, general counsel of the Burlington railway system, and legislative agent for that corporation, as indicated by the following telegram:

> St. Louis, Mo., April 9, 1904.—John H. Carroll, Ouray, Colo.: Six more counties for Folk. Am following your telegram in every particular.
> W. D. VANDIVER.

The authenticity of this telegram is vouched for by the Globe-Democrat, which claims that a copy of it was obtained through one telegraph operator repeating it to another. Mr. Folk, as soon as he heard of it, denounced the story as a campaign lie, reading a telegram to himself from Mr. Vandiver, which branded it as such. But after his address, in which he contradicted the story that he had been governed, through his manager, by the instructions of Mr. Carroll, Mr. Folk told Paul White, formerly editor of the newspaper published in New Franklin, and now a real estate man there, that there was no doubt whatever about Mr. Vandiver having sent the telegram to Mr. Carroll.

It may be, too, that the latter part of the telegram does not refer to politics and it may also be true that if it does refer to a political understanding between the campaign manager and the railroad lobbyist, Mr. Folk himself knows nothing about it. Furthermore, as stated at the opening of this article, the incident may have been manufactured out of whole cloth by Folk's enemies.

However, The Herald must confess that Mr. Folk's career has been rather too spectacular to inspire the greatest confidence. It does seem as though he were in too great a hurry to reach the executive chair. It now looks as though his campaign against the boodlers of the state was undertaken solely with the object of boosting himself into power. If it turns out that he is in connivance with railroad interests Mr. Folk will certainly take a great tumble in the estimation of the general public. It is to be hoped that it is not true. It would be at least a consolation to those who believe in just and righteous government to know that there was one prominent man in the corrupt state of Missouri who was too great and noble to be tempted by sordid greed. We shall wait and see and hope for the best.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

It sounds comical to hear a newspaper abuse the coal trust and at the same time support the Republican party.

* * *

Somebody ought to establish a college of prize-fighting so that the president would have an opportunity to bring up his boys in the way they should go.

"William McKinley was largely indebted to Grover Cleveland Democrats, who put the public welfare above partisanship, for his election in 1896. We have not forgotten that," says the Hartford Courant, a Republican paper. Neither have the Democratic voters forgotten that, nor some other things that were done by "Cleveland Democrats," especially the attempt to sell government bonds at private sale at several million dollars less than their market price.

St. Petersburg reports via Mukden say that the occupation of Kin Chou by the Japanese "does not alter the situation." No, we have noticed that.

* * *

The appeals to Americans to favor Russia in its war with Japan are generally made by those who insist that Russia must win in the end. That shows the source of their inspiration. But Americans generally do not measure their sympathies by that rule.

* * *

"As to the Maryland Democrats, they view with amazement and consternation," says the Chicago Tribune. We also know some Republicans who view their president in the same manner just now.

* * *

President Roosevelt is credited with having shaken hands with 1200 people in twenty minutes. More people than that are liable to shake him in less time.

* * *

In his telegram of condolence to the widow of Senator Quay, President Roosevelt made five references to himself and four to the dead man. But maybe the proportion was all right after all for perhaps the sorrow of parting was greater on the president's part.

* * *

Mr. Hearst has found that it is expensive to advertise, although it may be a good investment in the end.

* * *

The Russian generals are still luring them on. They will soon be lured as far as Port Arthur.

Dr. Day decided that to be an educator of youth was a greater calling than a bishopric. And he was right.

* * *

The flag looks good to the really patriotic citizen, no matter where it is. No advertisement can mar the good it has done and it never will be revered except for the good that has been accomplished under its folds.

* * *

It is an odd criticism, but Yvette Guilbert finds the drama that London applauds too risque. Possibly Yvette is doing a little clever advertising, but we have often wondered if French audiences would condescend to applaud some of the things that find favor with American audiences.

* * *

The man who will take another's job when the latter is on strike is not much of a man, unless perhaps pressed to desperation by hunger. The professional strike-breaker is worthy of scant consideration from decent and honorable men. Yet both have the right under the law to take the place of strikers if they desire, and they shall and must be protected in that right. The union man who advocates or countenances violence or threats in dealing with strike-breakers is an enemy of organized society and a danger to the welfare of his country. Labor can never gain substantial victory by employment of force. Peaceable and lawful methods will make much better progress.

Mr. La Coste is well acquainted in this part of the country and is stopping on his way home from California to see some business acquaintances.

He says that in general he found things on the coast in a flourishing condition and the only department of commerce in which he heard of any lagging was in the lumber business, those interested saying conditions were somewhat quieter than they had been for two or three years. Before Mr. La Coste left New York he heard considerable comment on the slow state of things both in mercantile and financial quarters.

Here's one that is just to show how "near" some people are, or how well attached they are to their coin. The story was told in a local group who were sitting in a hotel the other evening, and was considered as taking the palm of all of the kind that were told during the social session referred to.

He is a well known young man and is said to be fairly well off in this world's goods, and engaged in a business that is presumably as profitable as the next one. But this does not make him see any more necessity of "loosening" any of his greenbacks, and the fellows say that the only reason his squeezing processes don't make the eagle scream is because the aforsaid process has gone on so long that the bird has exhausted itself and has no voice left with which to lament.

They were going to a dance one night—he and she. She is a handsome young woman and as polular as tradition usually has the good looking girls, and the boys are all wondering how it is she is attracted to him with his economical methods when they would be willing to spend their last red. But all that part of it will have to be solved by somebody else.

This party that they were going to was held down town, and was the kind of an event that was more of a dance than anything else, but for variety's sake such are sometimes termed "receptions" or "parties." Most of the fellows had looked forward to the time with anticipation of considerable pleasure, and thought the event well worthy of a carriage. But not so this here. Street car was good enough for him and his and it was in one of General Manager Herbert Warren's vehicles that they came down Superior street at less money than the carriage would have cost.

The party was a glorious affair. They had a fine time, for they got there in the best of condition and without a wrinkle, and the dancing was on one of the nicest floors you could imagine. In fact, they had such a good time that it bars description.

But it began to rain—outside, of course, not in the hall room. They did not think much of this until they got outside after the dance and found no cars were coming. But the hero thought they could wait a while, and they waited what the girl thought was several whiles. Still no car was in sight.

There was one carriage at the curb that was engaged, and the hero asked the driver whose it was. It belonged to two couples who had not yet come down, for the two young men were on the floor committee and were upstairs winding up some of the business of the evening. This suited the hero, for rather than hire a hack and pay for it, he would make a proposition to these people to take his girl and himself in with them.

When they came down he explained to them that there were no cars coming, and that he would like to have them take two more inside. The boys were pretty well acquainted with them both and liked the girl, but his methods about money were not up to their standard.

So they told him they could make room for her inside but not for him.

"Thanks, fellows," he said. "That'll do very nicely, for she can go with you and I can get along all right. I know—I'll get up on the seat with the driver."

They closed the door and he started to climb up by the driver.

"What do you want?" growled the Jehu.

"I want to ride with you."

"Not much. There's more in the carriage now than a fellow ought to haul, and I ain't goin' to haul no seven people in this rig. You'll have to climb down."

The hero expostulated, but in vain. The driver would not start until the youth got off, which he finally did.

As the carriage started away with the young man waiting on the curb, a bright thought struck him. He would beat the game.

He ran after the carriage and rode home on the springs.

A Full Menagerie of Names.

Kansas City Journal: A story is told of a Cherokee woman who has married six times, and has never gotten out of the animal line.

When she was a girl she was known as Miss Mollie Fanther. She married an Indian named Coon, and when that gentleman was transferred to the happy hunting grounds she soon became Mrs. Fox. The Fox did not last always, and when he entered the last chase the widow married a mild, placid man named Mule, who never had any kick coming till he harnessed up to draw his load across the Great Divide. After a period of mourning the widow again entered the realms of matrimonial bliss and became Mrs. Wolf, and when his scalp went to the Great Father, along with his corporeal remains, she became the wife of a man named Tiger, and when Mr. Tiger changed his stripes for a pretty white robe in the Great Beyond she selected another husband by the name of Rabbit.

PUBLIC BATHS.

Detroit Tribune: There was a celebration in New York city last week when a new public bathhouse was opened. New York is learning, and with her a few more American cities, that the public bathhouse ranks next to the schools in importance. They should be a feature in every city, maintained at public expense, open the year around and as free as the air we breathe. That is a broad program, but none too broad for the needs of cleanliness. The city that possesses clean inhabitants and clean streets has little to fear of disease.

Of course there should be a bathtub in every home. There is not. If you could make a city canvass you would be surprised and alarmed to find how few homes are properly equipped with bathing facilities. What is a necessity is too often treated as a luxury. London has $3,000,000 invested in public baths. There is no question about their utility. Every year sees an extension of the system, and every year sees thousands more of people making use of them.

There is another side to the bath subject. Perhaps you realize how hard it is to convince the average boy that he should be cleaned up from top to toe once a week. It looks like a hardship to him. He weeps when the soap gets into his eyes, and there is always a bruise or two that smarts when the water touches it, and he says "Ouch!" and "Gosh!" and other things that only mean disgust. It is easier to let him go dirty than to insist on the weekly struggle. All that is done away with at the public bath. There is a place to dive and splash; room enough to swim a little, and plenty of company. The lads go to the bath in flocks, and they rub and scrub and come out clean and glistening and happy.

The public bath is a great institution. Perhaps if more were builded humanity wouldn't need to spend so much money on hospitals and doctors.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A widow has a mighty quiet, soft way of making you do a thing you want to do.

There is something awfully exasperating about the comfortable way a fat girl can sit on a hard wooden bench.

The hardest thing is to convince your wife that you wouldn't like to go to church if you weren't a drinking man.

When a girl is afraid a hammock will break down with her alone, it's funny what a lot more confidence she has in it sitting in it with a man.

The Hero Fund.

Five millions for heroes—come, bring on the stuff!
Disburse it at once, we have heroes enough.
There's the hero who rescued the drowning from death,
The heroe who braves the red flames' tongue and breath.
There are heroes on land and heroes on sea,
There are heroes of varying style and degree,
But the man who slams out a homer when there are two or three men on bases and brings in the runs that win the game for the home team in the last half of the ninth inning—
He is the kind of a hero for me!

The women, God bless them, come in for a share
Of the heroine fund—there are heroes to spare
In the ranks of the sex; there's the one who can bake
The pies, rich and juicy, like mother would make.
There's the heroic woman, a marvel, I ween,
Who raises six children and keeps them all clean,
But the woman who never trumps her partner's ace, never leads from a short suit, and not once during the evening asks what is trumps and whose ace is that—
She is the kind of a hero I mean.

J. W. FOLEY in the New York Times.

A Special Mark of Virtue.

Kansas City Star: When a Missouri town came recently to bury a man who had been a notorious swindler it is reported that the neighbors remarked in kindly palliation of his offenses that he had always been kind to his old father and that he had taken care of his widowed mother. For some reason a man's failure to beat his parents or to turn them out of doors always seems to be counted heavily to his credit. In 1896 the Republican campaign managers used to send out dispatches telling at length how Mr. McKinley had helped his mother out of the carriage on returning from the daily drive. Yet it is fairly customary in the United States for men to be courteous to their mothers. Perhaps the time will come when it will be taken for granted that Americans treat their aged parents decently. But at present the announcement that a man refrains from brutality toward his father and mother is certain to evoke great enthusiasm, and to serve as an atonement for even criminal delinquencies.

It's an Ill Wind, Etc.

Indianapolis News: With so many declarations against divorces by the various church conventions, the justices of the peace are sweeping out their offices and preparing for callers.

In Habits of Thought.

Omaha World-Herald: But after all, for the most part what is called the divorce evil lies back of divorce itself. It lies in habits of thought, and as long as divorce is not actually penalized—and it should not be—the main influences to be relied upon to prevent a condition no worse than tolerable in the married state are those applied to the formation of character, individual and social.

FOR YOUR DAILY SMILE.

Yonkers Statesman: Yeast—I see a fellow in Chicago entered a saloon and made the bartender give him a drink at the point of a pistol. What do you say to that?

Crimsonbeak—Well, I should say that was without doubt a forced smile.

Judge: Miss 'Lizbeth—He asked me to be his, an' he said of I didn't be his, an' marry him, his heart wud be broke.

Her Dearest Friend—I doan' no much erbout his heart bein' broke ef yo' doan' marry him, but I do know, ef yo' do marry him, yo'll be broke all yo'r life

Puck: Dolly—Were you pleased when Charley proposed?

Polly—Pleased! I came pretty near giving him our college yell!

The Suburbanite—And you can't remember what it was?

His Wife—I think I'll think of it presently. It was awfully careless of you to forget it.

Town Topics: Briggs—Are you fond of golf?

Griggs—Fond of it! Why, when I first began to play, people asked me how I could find time to devote to it, and now they ask me how I can find time to devote to my business.

Chicago Evening Post: "Has he much of a memory?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. Why, he can always remember that he has forgotten something that he ought to remember and can't, which is certainly much better than forgetting that you've forgotten something."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Tribune: The real Republicans all over the country seem to favor such modification—reductions and increases—as the conditions as they now exist would seem to demand. A tariff law cannot be made so that it is self-regulating, as changes and developments in business interests imperatively demand that customs laws be modified or changed accordingly. The revision may be postponed for some time, but come it will.

Ely Miner: The name of George Vivian, of Soudan, has been brought forth by a large number of friends on both ranges for the position of treasurer of St. Louis county. His many friends are constant in their demands that he allow himself to become a candidate and we understand he is seriously considering the subject. Not since the election of John Owens as clerk of the court, years ago, has the Vermilion range been favored with a county office and we sincerely believe we are entitled to representation. Mr. Vivian is a man eminently fitted for the position and his long residence on the range and his untiring efforts for the party entitle him to recognition. We sincerely hope he may become a candidate.

International Falls Echo: We hear a great hue and cry about drainage and but little about road making. There are thousands of acres of good land in this section, much of which is inhabited. The need is not so much to make inhabitable land for more people, but to make possible the getting to and from what is now fit for habitation. Drainage alone won't do it in the majority of instances but a systematic building of roads will, aided by drainage in places. Let's have more agitation of road building and less of drainage. We'd better think more of the present settlers and worry less about the uncertain number to come.

FIXING THE BLAME.

Who was it raised the price of coal
Until expenses tried the soul?
The echoes loud in answer roll:
"'Twas the consumer."

Who boasted the bituminous
Until it seemed to all of us
A mournful subject to discuss?
'Twas the consumer.

Who was it when the anthracite
Had reached a price clear out of sight,
Said: "Sirs, a higher figure write?"
'Twas the consumer.

Who is it wants to pay for ice
An utterly tremendous price
For what melts ere he sees it twice?
That same consumer.

Who for his sugar, flour, and bread,
And beef, and things on which he's fed
Insists on prices o'er his head?
'Tis the consumer.

Who is it, when the price is low,
Howls discontentedly, "Ah, no!
The prices must much higher go!"
That fool consumer.

Who is it who is most at fault
For costliness of soap and salt
And all the rest, and calls no halt?
It's the consumer.

For whom do all the dealers weep
Because he will not make things cheap,
But calls for prices yet more steep?
That fool consumer.

LAW OBSERVERS.

Walker Pilot: Talking about his recent experiences in the Rainy river country looking after timber thieves, Deputy Marshal Frank Tufts says one thing he particularly noticed was the greater observance of law on the Canadian side of the river than on ours.

In Beaudette, he says, lawlessness runs riot, while in the Canadian town opposite there is very little, if any, trouble. And he learned from a Canadian officer with whom he had considerable to do that this was no exceptional case, and one reason advanced was that Canadian courts are far less lenient with persons brought before them accused of crimes and there are fewer technicalities in procedure whereby defendants can escape punishment.

But to Mr. Tufts there appeared to be something more than this. It was not altogether the dread of certain punishment that kept people within the pale of the law, but rather an innate regard and respect for the legally constituted authorities and a recognition of the rights and privileges of others. Canadians who have visited our country have sometimes commented on the frequency of crime and the failure of justice here, but their criticisms have been looked upon as coming from a biased mind. But when the same thing is observed by an officer of our own courts it is deserving of consideration.

CAMPAIGN SONGS.

New York Sun: Yesterday when the frivolous and peevish world was roasting in sulphur and washed in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire, snow from the north side of Parnassus was falling in this snop:

"To the Editor of the Sun—Sir: In Sunday's Sun you spoke of the wild yearning of the Banana Belt for

Four More Years
Theodore!"

"If you really desire a slogan for Roosevelt, I think you should modify this and make it a jingle.

"Four years more Of Theodore!"

"This has the ring of a war cry. W.
"New York, May 23."

Our correspondent is entitled to have his own arrangement of this simple meiody. We quarrel with no poet's license. He may cut his lines according to his pleasure. If he turns the plaintive aspiration of the Banana Belt into a Fijian war chant, what is that to us? It is ours to observe dispassionately the procession of the campaign singers.

They are out early this year. We may as well put a few into the cage and hear them whistle. "Sage Grass Jake" (the Hon. Nick Tubby of Tombstone) sets this trumpet to his lips:

With the trusts
We'll wipe the floor;
We are out
For good red gore.
Each of us
Has fifteen boys;
We are full
Of fight and noise.
Knock 'em, sock 'em, eat 'em up, roar,
Four years more of Theodore!"

Mr. Tubby is a little incoherent, but his heart beats warmly for the active virtues. The Hon. Joe Daviess Jones of Piggins Creek, Nev., is as earnest, but more concise:

"Wall Street, we've got you beat!
Pull down your vest;
Take your 'med'!
We're the West
And we're for Ted!"

The same wide emphatic accent is heard in these lines, signed "Strenuous," which are sent from Mugnamugchuyap:

"Hot stuff! Strip to the buff!
Bang, belt, punch, welt,
Buck the line for Roosevelt!"

The same delight of battle drops from the curious "cry" raised by "A Lady Admirer" in Socorro, N. M.:

He can ride
And he can fight,
Do jiu-jutsu
Out of sight!
He can sprint
And he can spar—
Our Nation's Noblest,
Teddy R!"

The economic motive is substituted for the chivalrous in the "People's Alarum," by Daniel A. Daniels (probably a pseudonym) of Hot Springs, Col.:

"He sounds to the Trusts the People's Alarum.
For he is the boy that is able to scare 'um
'Tis he tells the South America nations
That they must be good or we shall lose patience."

We love "Daniel A. Daniels" for the originality and bold felicity of his rhymes. Once more into the breach, and then we are done with song. "A Rough Rider" is the signature we are asked to append to a lyric worthy of Daniel A. Daniels himself:

"Who charged madly up San Juan
When there was something bloody doin'?
Who rode madly up Kettle Hill
Where there was Spanish blood to spill?
Who, wherever there was a hill?
Galloped fiercely for to kill?
You can bet your boots and pelt
That his name was Roosevelt!"

And so no more today of the first crop of campaign songs.

The Wise Vender.

New York Sun: An elderly man, broken in health, makes a scant living by selling mint to cafes on the upper West Side.

"So that's where the juleps come from," remarked the well-dressed loiterer to the vender, who was offering his wares to the bartender.

"Yes, young man," replied the vender, "and if you drink too many of them it's what you will come to."

To Get a Reputation.

Indianapolis News: Frank Eddy, the first native-born congressman from Minnesota, desires to be the first native-born governor of the state. If he is trying to break records, why doesn't he become the first native-born member of the police force?

STILL FOR HEARST

Members of Hearst Club Adopt Resolutions Endorsing Him.

At a meeting of the William Randolph Hearst club last night, presided over by D. G. Cash, vice-president, there was some discussion on the Democratic primaries, which are to be held next Saturday evening. The hours will be from 7 to 9 p. m. and the delegates will be selected for the county convention, June 11. It was the sense of the meeting that every effort be made to get the voters out for the primaries.

The following resolutions, signed by John T. Dow, T. T. Hudson, M. H. McGahan, C. D'Autremont and W. E. McEwen, the committee, were adopted:

"Whereas, a great majority of the people of this nation are deprived of a just proportion of the products of their labor through legislation contrived and designed to grant special privileges to the few in derogation of the natural rights of the masses of the people, and

"Whereas, it is evident that our national administration is being controlled more and more by those corrupting influences which are building up great fortunes, that are sapped from the wealth produced by the common people.

Now, therefore, be it resolved:

First—That it is the privilege and imperative duty of every lover of liberty to do all in his power to overthrow those powerful influences, which are so largely dominating this government, and seeking through forms of law to appropriate, without just consideration, the products of labor.

"Second—That we sincerely believe that through the Democratic party, as at present organized under the grand and noble leadership of William J. Bryan, is the quickest and surest escape from the grasp of unjust combines, trusts and monopolies.

"Third—That we most heartily and emphatically endorse the Kansas City platform, and trust that the coming Democratic national convention will reaffirm, in I fully sustain the same.

"Fourth—That in view of the great service of William Randolph Hearst, in his fight against the predatory trusts and against that class which are continually seeking special privileges from the government, we regard him as the most available candidate who has been mentioned during the present campaign for nomination to the office of president of the United States."

F. H. Cutting, secretary of the club, introduced the following resolution on the death of President Joseph A. Mannheim, which was adopted:

"Whereas, the death of Joseph A. Mannheim has made vacant the office of president of the William Randolph Hearst club of Duluth and thereby deprived our organization of an energetic and devoted leader, the counsels of our party of the services of an able and tireless worker, and our community of the active labors of a citizen ever identified with its best interests therefore be it

"Resolved, that we deplore this sudden termination of a career full of promise.

"That we render our deep sympathy to the stricken widow, children and relatives of the deceased.

"That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this club.

The Kennedy Stock company will resume its run at the Metropolitan this evening, presenting Bartley Campbell's great play, "Another Man's Wife." It will be staged and dressed appropriately, and there will be a new line of specialties.

ROGERS BROS.

"The Rogers Brothers in London," which comes to the Lyceum Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, does not confine itself to the English metropolis either with regard to its scenic products or the popularity of its stars on a thoroughfare like the Strand. Reports of this play, which attained an immense success in New York and other cities, say it is not only a spectacular marvel, but has more varied comedy in music and stage business than anything this season has offered. The cast is exceptionally strong, including Joseph Coyne, Lee Harrison, Melville Ellis, George Austin Moore, William J. Gale, James Cherry, Harry Brown, Lillian Coleman, Carrie Reynolds, Nova Aymar, Sue Stuart, Frances Tyson, William Torpey and Arthur Gibson.

Duluth Man Gets Job.

The contract for a new intake for the water system at Escanaba, Mich., has been awarded to Hugh Steele, a Duluth contractor, one of the six bidders. The water company chose between the two high bidders, not considering the four low bids.

The intake pipe will be twenty inches in diameter, will be of cast iron, and will extend half a mile into the bay. The contract price is $20,000. The water company is a private corporation, forced to make the extension by the city.

BRINGS SUIT AGAINST CITY

Barber Asphalt Company Commences Action In Federal Court.

The Barber Asphalt company yesterday started suit in federal court against the city of Duluth for the recovery of $38,316.14, claimed to be due as a balance on a contract for the paving of East Superior street.

It is stated in the complaint that the Barber people secured a contract from the city for paving East Superior street from Eighth avenue to Sixteenth avenue east with asphalt. They were to receive $54,799 for the work, the complaint states.

It is claimed in the complaint that the company performed the terms of the contract in every particular, except that it was not completed within the time limit, because of the Duluth-Superior Traction company replacing its tracks along the street. Owing to the fact that the traction company failed to complete its portion of the contract within the specified time, the Barber company, it is claimed, was also delayed. Instead of being completed October, 1902, as called for in the contract, the work was not completed until the following August.

The complaint states that the city has paid out two installments, one of $4799 and another amounting to $8250. Ten per cent of the amount of the contract has been retained in order to insure good faith in regard to the asphalt company's guarantee of the work.

The city has been unable to do anything in regard to the matter, owing to the appeal of seven property owners, in accordance to a charter provision, asking that the Barber company be refused payment on the amount claimed to be due. The appeal is now pending in district court.

Two Big Sales Commence Tomorrow.

The Silberstein & Bondy establishment will be the center of interest tomorrow for the shopping public. The June white sale, one of the most important of the summer season, commences tomorow. The firm has been making extensive preparations for this sale and interest will be further heightened by the arrival of several lots of fine white goods bought at the recent Sweetser-Pembroke sale by Charles S. Wood, Jr., the firm's Eastern representative.

The annual June clearance of Oriental rugs one-quarter to one-third off, will also commence tomorrow on the third floor of the establishment. All lovers of these rare and beautiful pieces should avail themselves of this buying opportunity as the lines carried are the choicest and gathered from the great rug marts of the Orient by experts in this line.

WEATHER IN JUNE.

Statistics From Records of Duluth Office.

Statistics from the weather records of the Duluth office for the past thirty-three years may give some idea of the sort of weather that may be expected for the month of June.

During the interval of thirty-three years since the local office was established the normal temperature of the month of June has been 58 degrees above zero. The warmest June was in 1894, when the average temperature was 63 degrees. The coldest was in 1897, with an average temperature of 54 degrees. On one occasion, June 23, 1893, the temperature reached the 92 degree mark, while on June 6, 1897, the lowest mark, 33 degrees, was touched. In the past twenty-nine years there has been just one killing frost in the month of June and that was June 8, 1885.

The average precipitation for the month in thirty-three years past has been 4.59 inches, showing the month to be usually one of the very wet months of the year.

The prevailing winds in June have been from the northeast.

HOMESTEADER INSANE

And Wandering In the Woods Near Itasca.

Maiard, Minn., June 1.—John Roberg, a bachelor homsteader, who has been holding down a claim near Itasca, has disappeared under circumstances that lead to the theory tht he has gone mad and is at large in the woods.

Friday afternoon a neighbor of Roberg called at the latter's cabin and found everything in disorder, but it was evident that the conditions was wrought by the owner himself. The furniture and dishes were smashed and other contents of the house were scattered about in confusion.

GET THEM AT ONCE

Naval Reserve Can Procure Cutters Without Any Delay.

Both Will Be In Commission Within Five Weeks.

"One of the 30-foot cutters to be used by the Duluth Naval reserve for practice this summer, will be in commission inside of the next 20 days, and the second will be ready for use inside the next five weeks," said Lieutenant Commander Guy A. Eaton, this morning.

A dispatch from St. Paul last evening, said that Adjutant General E. D. Libbey had received word from Charles F. Darling, assistant secretary of the navy, at Washington, authorizing the Duluth Naval reserve to award the contracts for the two boats, the cutters to be paid for out of the federal appropriation for "arming and equipping the naval militia."

The action by the navy department was anticipated and for some time past the plans and specifications for the two cutters have been in the hands of boat builders. The lowest bids submitted were by the Peason Boat Construction company, of this city, which will be awarded the contract. The construction work will be pushed in order that the boats may be ready for practice at the earliest date possible.

The cutters will be double-banked pulling boats, with 12 thirteen foot oars. They will be constructed largely of oak and will be complete in the way of spars and sails, to be used whenever necessary.

As soon as the cutters are completed the Naval Reserve will have built a boat house on the bay side of Minnesota point, between the Duluth Boat club house and the lifesaving station. The building will be large enough to easily shelter the two boats.

The St. Paul Dispatch was in error in stating that one cutter had already been secured and the reserves would have two more. The fact of the matter is that the Duluth reserves will have but two boats, and neither of these is yet completed.

"A great deal of credit is due Congressman Bede and his secretary, Stillman H. Bingham," said Lieutenant Commander Eaton, this morning, "for the arrangement that has been made whereby we can call for bids and award the contracts right here. Under ordinary circumstances the bids and awards would have been called for and awarded at Washington, whenever the government is to pay for the work done, but through the efforts of Congressman Bede and Mr. Bingham, we have been authorized to transact the business from this end, and the result is that we will have the boats several months earlier than if we had to wait for the authorities at Washington to act in the matter.

"The plans and bids are, of course, subject to the approval of the secretary of the navy."

INSPECT IMMIGRANTS.

Dr. S. H. Olson Recommended For Appointment.

Dr. Tallaferro Clark, of New York city, connected with the United States public health and marine hospital service, who arrived in Duluth last week, has recommended the appointment of Dr. S. H. Olson, of Duluth, to the position of surgeon for the inspection of immigrants at this port. Dr. F. O. Sherwin, who has for several years been marine hospital surgeon for the port of Duluth, will retain the position. Dr. Olson, who has been practicing with Dr. J. J. Eklund, will merely have charge of the immigration end of the work.

Dr. Olson is the first man to be appointed to the position in Duluth. Notification of his appointment has not yet been received, but it is expected daily. Last November Dr. John W. Kerr, of New York city, was temporarily detailed to act as examining surgeon at Duluth, and remained until the season of navigation closed.

IROQUOIS MAY OPEN.

Judge Dunne Orders City to Issue a Permit.

Chicago, June 1.—Judge Dunne yesterday issued a writ of mandamus ordering the city to issue a building permit for the remodeling of the fire stricken Iroquois theater. Judge Dunne issued the writ of mandamus on the prayer of the owners of the playhouse.

The judge says:

"If a man desires to open up a vaudeville performance in a private graveyard and the city has issued permits of this kind; and if the building complies with all ordinances, the city must issue the permit. The only objection to the remodeled theater now, is the contention of the city officials that the new theater ordinance provides that exits lead to the street, while I believe the council members meant that the exits should open on the street level. On these grounds I grant the mandamus."

Benjamin A. Marshall, architect of the theater, said that the Iroquois had been remodeled so that now all the exits from balconies and galleries lead to the street level. Former Manager T. J. Noonan, of the Iroquois, testified that the ownership of theater, had been deeded by the Iroquois Theater company to William Harris of Boston.

BOB DUNN SAYS

He Will Have Public Examiner Sam T. Johnson Indicted.

John Lind Tells Why He Is Opposed to Hearst.

St. Paul, June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert C. Dunn of Princeton, says that he will have Public Examiner S. T. Johnson indicted on a criminal charge by the grand jury of Ramsey county in a few days. What the exact charge will be has not yet been disclosed, but it is understood that it relates to Mr. Johnson's expense and transportation accounts filed in the state auditor's office.

Friends of Mr. Dunn have been examining Mr. Johnson's record in the auditor's office. They found some time ago that Mr. Johnson had not reported mileage rebates amounting to approximately $200, covering nearly two years, and after this fact was called to the attention of Governor Van Sant the rebates were hurriedly turned over to Mr. Iverson with the explanation that Mr. Johnson always had a cash box in which he put such trifling matters and when they accumulated to any sum turned them over to the state treasury.

"You can say for me," said Mr. Dunn last night, " that I will pay my respects to Mr. Johnson in a few days in a way that he will not forget it. I will see that the grand jury of Ramsey county pays its respects to Mr. Johnson."

"The second installment of the public examiner's report is a conglomeration of falsehoods," continued Mr. Dunn. "The political animus that is back of it is so evident that I do not consider myself justified in making a detailed statement on the matter.

"Public Examiner Johnson is being paid by the state for defaming my character and reputation," continued Mr. Dunn. "The state of Minnesota is furnishing the money for Judge Collins' campaign. I believe that the people of Minnesota revolt against a campaign of this sort and that the attempts of the office holders to ruin my reputation shall meet with just deserts."

Mr. Dunn said this to The Herald correspondent last night after he had seen the second installment of Mr. Johnson's report on timber trespass settlements during Mr. Dunn's administration.

The report is along the same lines as the first installment. Mr. Johnson charges the state auditor with settling for less than the actual value of the timber and makes the statement that under his administration it was at least one-third cheaper to steal timber than to purchase it at the market price. He charges that 286 stumpage permits were not recorded with the surveyor general until after the logging season, that eight stumpage permits were never recorded, that 143 permits contained no log marks for the first year, that 175 contained no log marks for the second year and 129 contained no mark for either year and that 69 permits were issued where some member of the firm or corporation was taken as surety on the bond.

Continuing Mr. Johnson says:

"The total amount of money collected, on account of trespass settlements, made by the state auditor, for the eight years, 1895 to Jan. 1, 1903, inclusive, was $146,632.20, as shown by this subdivision of the stumpage account. The state realized, because of settlements made by the state auditors, on account of trespass (timber stealing), prior to Jan. 1, 1895, $62,262.94, and, because of settlement on the same account, made by the pine land investigating committee, $17,332.50, to which add the $146,632.20, collected because of settlements since Jan. 1, 1895, as above stated, making a total of $226,328.64 realized by the state from this subdivision of the stumpage account. The records show that this money was all accounted for and turned into the state treasury; however, as has heretofore been shown, it was at least one-third cheaper to take timber, by trespass, and settle with the state auditor, than to purchase it from the state, in a legal way. The records also show that the same men trespassed on state timber year after year, sometimes paying nothing at all; but the records do not shown any case where, during this entire period, any attempt was made to prosecute, under the criminal provisions of this law, or any judgment obtained for the collection of penalties. It is common knowledge that no conviction was had, during this entire period. It must also be remembered that, prior to 1895, the state timber law was not so stringent and mandatory as it has since been; that the timber values were so low that the inducement to steal was very much less; even at state sale in 1895 stumpage only brought an average of $2.25 per thousand, and only $2.54 in 1897, while it increased to $8.30 in 1902."

Congressman John Lind, of Minneapolis, who was recently solicited by a Hearst supporter to work for the New York publisher, gave the visitor the following curt reply:

"Hearst wasn't ever really in congress. Hearst never cast three votes in congress in his life. He was practically never present; he was habitually absent. There is only one thing I have in common with Mr. Hearst and that is the work he has done in opposition to the trusts. I give Mr. Hearst full credit for the information against the combines of coal-carrying roads he brought to light and placed before the interstate commerce commission, and which was also placed in the hands of Attorney General Knox, who didn't see fit to do anything with it. But Hearst is an imperialist; I am an anti-imperialist. Hearst believes in having a large navy. We, a country at peace with all the world, are spending $200,000,000 in building new war vessels. I cannot see need for a single new battleship. I do not believe in increasing our navy. With my beliefs so generally opposed to Hearst why should I ever be expected to support him?"

Minneapolis Democrats say that the McClellan boom for the presidential nomination has struck Minnesota. They say that Alex. McKinnon, candidate for delegate-at-large to the national convention at St. Louis, favors the mayor of New York city as his first choice. According to the report, Mr. McKinnon believes that McClellan is more available than Judge Parker.

Talk in Minneapolis is that United States Marshal Grimshaw has come out for Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud. According to the report, Mr. Grimshaw appeared at a Collins meeting Saturday night and announced that he favored the judge. It has been supposed generally that Mr. Grimshaw favored Eustis.

Capt. C. C. Whitney, of the Marshall News-Mesenger, explains the delay in the presentation to Governor Van Sant of the public examiner's report by stating that the first report was lost in the office of W. B. Douglas, who was then attorney general. According to Capt. Whitney, the report was presented to Mr. Douglas and that shortly after the attorney general went to Itasca state park. When he returned, Capt. Whitney says, the report could not be found.

It was learned at the attorney general's office yesterday that the report was never referred to Mr. Douglas. This is confirmed by the statement of Mr. Johnson, who said yesterday that Mr. Barry had never made a report and that, therefore, it could not have been lost in the attorney general's office.

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

For years it has been the practice of medical men to treat patients suffering from piles by local, external applications. These treatments give but temporary relief, but have never affected a positive cure.

After months of research and study, accompanied by actual experience with various patients, Dr. C. A. Perrin arrived at a positive conclusion as to the exact action of the various parts of the bowel system, under different conditions, and when subjected to various prescriptions.

He finally prepared that wonderful internal remedy known as DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, which is put up in bottles, retailing at all reliable drug stores for $1.00 each. This internal remedy has been on the market for the past ten years, and in all of that time there has been but three cases where a positive cure has not been effected.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under a positive guarantee by the druggist making the sale, to refund the full purchase price, providing the remedy fails to cure. This is the absolute proof of its merit. Any man or woman who suffers from blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles can try this internal remedy with the absolute certainty that it will cost nothing unless it cures. Here is what one sufferer says of this wonderful remedy:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—I wish to thank you for the cure your wonderful medicine has done for me. I had the piles some five years, and under the advice of a doctor had them removed by the knife and felt free for awhile, but they returned and I at once got a bottle of your Perrin's File Specific and one bottle has entirely cured me, and I am as good as I ever was.
Yours truly,
JACK SULLIVAN.

PROMISE TO MARRY

Indianapolis, Ind., June 1.—A strange tale was related to the police when they were called on to prevent Charles Boeglen, a well-dressed man, apparently about 70 years old, from interfering with the funeral of Mrs. Eva Baumhofer.

Boeglen had possession of the Baumhofer home, at Miller avenue and Blaine street, when the police came at the request of her relatives and a trust company which is administrator for her estate.

Mrs. Baumhofer was well known in German social circles. Boeglen asserts that she had agreed to marry him and to turn her property over to him. He claimed the property and attempted to hold it at her death in spite of the relatives.

After a conference with him the police released him. He was informed, however, that he would be locked up if he did not remain away from the funeral services.

The police learned that he spent a considerable time about the Baumhofer home. She was about 70 years old, and a neighbor woman stated to the police that she promised to "stand up with them" at the marriage next month. Mrs. Bauhofer's children had not visited her much during the last few months because of the presence of Boeglen. The woman died suddenly and the attention of the coroner was called to the case.

HUSBAND FINED

For Not Beating His Wife's Traducer.

Bayonne, N. J., June 1.—John Vizgas was fined $5 by Recorder Lazarus because he failed to thrash the man who traduced his wife.

Vizgas has a young and comely wife, Katherine, and she and her husband added to their income by keeping boarders, one of whom was John Halenski.

The latter, according to Vizgas, told him that Mrs. Vizgas was keeping company with another man. Vizgas spoke to his wife about the charge and she denied it. Then he had him hailed to the police station. When the recorder learned the facts he said to Vizgas: "Why didn't you knock his teeth down his throat or wipe the floor with him?"

"Why should I?" Vizgas asked.

"Because a man ought to protect his wife against such a scoundrel as the meddlesome boarder. Instead of coming to court you should have first knocked his head off and then come here and we would greet you as a hero."

The boarder was fined $15 for causing the trouble and advised to get a new boarding house.

POSSE FIGHTS OUTLAWS.

Buffalo, Wyo., May 31.—Sheriff Webb of Natrona county and posse have fought a battle with outlaws near the Putney ranch in the Big Horn mountains. One of the outlaws was wounded and fell from his horse. A companion lifted him from the ground and escaped with his human burden into the bad lands. The officers followed and news of another battle is looked for momentarily.

TASCOTT IS DEAD

Long Sought Murderer Expires In Wilds of Alaska.

Confessed to His Identity Just Before He Died.

Chicago, June 1.—A special to the News from Victoria, B. C., says: If the voluntary declaration of a dying man is to be believed, "Finis" will be written to the historic Snell tragedy of fifteen years ago and Tascott, the long sought murderer, self-identified, has paid the penalty of his crime with penitence and now fills an unmarked grave in the heart of the Alaskan wilderness, whither he had fled for the effacement of his individuality.

Philip Robertson, a strictly reliable man, prospector and miner, received the dying man's confession, and tells the story simply and dramatically. Robertson left the Klondike capital, he says, late last fall in a small boat bound for the new placer grounds at Fairbanks. He reached a point near Dahl river in a particularly desolate and forbidding region when the forlorn wailing of a dog surprised his ears. He found the dog, a half-starved shepherd, scenting help in dire distress. Following this animal Robertson was brought to a seemingly deserted cabin some 400 yards above the river concealed in a clump of spruce.

"I ventured to the door of the shack and knocked," says Robertson, "and there was a feeble 'come in.' All was darkness inside and there was no sign of fire. I caught sight of a bit of candle, which I lighted and then advanced to where a man lay. With a feeble effort he turned and stared at me for a full minute. Then he said: 'Are you an officer?' The question amazed me a bit.

"'No,' I said, 'I am a miner and if there is anything I can do for you, I want to do it.'

"I had soon had a fire going and again approached the bed. The man's hair was white as snow, his face had a livid color in it that looked like death and he had the most terrified and hopeless expression I have ever seen on a human being.

"'Partner,' he said, finally, rolling over on his side, and little more than whispering, 'I'm leaving a world that I did not appreciate. I am going to — where I belong.'

"He lapsed into silence again and what I thought was a sleep came over him. Two hours passed and he suddenly awakened with a shriek and sank back in bed.

"In a few minutes he gave another scream and straightened up in bed. Then in a voice you would think came from a good strong man, he said:

"'See here, boys, my name is Tascott. I'm Tascott. Do you understand? I'm Tascott that they have been hunting like a wolf for years. I cannot run any more. I'm getting paid for what I did. I know I'm dying and I know where I'll go. Tell the boys when they come back that I'm Tascott and you can tell the world too, for the world has hunted me for a long time.'

"About 3 in the morning I heard a noise like a man expelling all the air from his lungs. I rushed over to the bed and felt the man's pulse and heart. He was dead.

"The next day his partners got back and I told them what happened. They were the strangest fellows I've met in the North. They did not say who they were. They did not even thank me for staying with their dead. They did not even ask me to join them at their meal, but they buried the man and, rolling up their things in a blanket pack, they started across the country in the direction of the Koyukuk.

"Before going one of them come to me abruptly. 'See here,' he said, 'you've seen and heard what you've heard. You can't make anything by talking about it. He's dead and that's all there is to it.'

"Before I could ask him anything, he had struck the trail and that was the last I saw of him. I have never told about this until now, but that dead man asked me to make his story public and so I do so. I solemnly believe that he was tortured to death by thinking of his own life and the belief that he was always the object of pursuit, and I assuredly believe that he told the truth in saying he was Tascott. It's my opinion that his partners knew it too.

Chicago, June 1.—Amos J. Snell, wealthy holder of much property on the west side of Chicago, was murdered at his home in Washington boulevard on the night of Feb. 8, 1895, and robbery was declared to be the motive, although by many it then was and still is believed that the burglary was concocted. However, after many arrests, the police hit upon the Willie Tascott clew. Tascott had been an elevator boy at the Palmer house. It was represented that he had been employed by days and committed robberies at night.

Heavy rewards, one for $10,000, which was subsequently raised to $20,000, were offered for Tascott and for two or three years Tascott was turning up, dead or alive, in all parts of North and South America. Eventually Mrs. Snell withdrew the reward for Tascott. Civil suits and other scandals followed among members of the family and today the Snell millions are supposed to have been dissipated in part and passed into other hands.

POLITICIANS DISCUSS SUCCESSOR FOR QUAY.

Pittsburg, June 1.—With the large gathering of politicians from state and country here yesterday after the burial of Senator Quay, it was inevitable that much talk of his successor should be indulged in. While there was no formal conference of the leaders, it was informally understood that nothing definite would be done in this direction until the return to Philadelphia of Israel Durham. He is expected to reach that city on Saturday from the West, and shortly afterward a conference will be held and decisive action taken.

Quite a number of men have been mentioned as worthy to succeed Senator Quay, the more prominent among them being John P. Elkin, William Flynn, George T. Oliver and H. C. Frick, but Joseph C. Sibley, the present congressman from Venango county, up to the present time is the only avowed candidate. His candidacy was announced yesterday by his fellow-townsman, Gen. Charles Miller, of Franklin.

CONTINUES TO SAG

Another Slight Falling Off In Price of Copper.

Copper continues to sag slightly in price, says George L. Walker in his last letter. There is little business being done and consumers are bearing the price. He also reports no activity in copper shares but is no less confident that it is to come later. He says:

"Copper quotations are sagging slightly. Lake is now 13 to 13 1-8 cents and electrolytic is about 12¾ to 13 cents. There is very little business doing, and consumers are taking advantage of the dullness to mark down prices whenever a small producer offers to sell. All of the large producers are understood to be sold out, some of them pretty well in advance. One who sells about 2,000,000 pounds monthly states that he has sold fully half of the June output of his mines for delivery in July. It is understood that the Bigelow mines have recently received an unusually large order for copper. Some of the leading consumers say frankly that they do not expect to see copper sell materially below 13 cents for a long time to come.

"London quotations have remained practically unchanged during the week and each slight weakness in the market has been followed by a rally on an increased volume of buying. The exports of copper are holding up remarkably well, the prospect now being that May shipments will exceed 14,000 tons. Foreign metal selling agents are as a rule bullish on the outlook for copper.

COPPER SHARES.

"There has been very little increase in the activity of copper stocks. The movement in Amalgamated has stimulated but very little new buying of other coppers; in fact the strength of the stock has been counterbalanced by the heaviness of two or three others. A slight weakening in the price of Shannon caused timid holders to press their stock for sale and force it down further. Victoria was sold on the announcement that someone had started a suit for control of a portion of its lands, basing his claim on an alleged defect in a title given forty years ago. If Victoria should lose all its lands the cash it has on hand and the sale of its machinery would return the stockholders more than the stock is now selling for. The same is true of Adventure and some other companies. Nearly all of the coppers are selling at ridiculously low prices.

"The situation in the copper share market is in some respects similar to that which prevailed at a New York auction one day recently. A broker passing heard the auctioneer offering a lot of real estate stocks for sale and noted that there was not a bidder in sight. He took advantage of the situation, bidding a small amount and then raising his bid to make it legal. As a result of the absence of buyers a lot of securities that really had a market value of $18,000 were knocked down to him for $850, giving him a profit of $17,150. The present weakness of copper stocks is due to the fact that buyers are away from the market. I believe that there are some opportunities to make nearly as good bargains as the New York broker made at the auction. It is well known that much better bargains have been made in coppers by those who bought in some of the past periods of depression.

"Of course, much depends upon the business situation. Just now almost everybody is trying to figure it out that we are running into a period of industrial depression. They are satisfied that crops will be small, that railroad earnings will continue to decline, and that factories will close down. In my opinion, they are all overlooking the most vital factor in the situation—I mean the unprecedented increase in gold production, and the result which it is bound to have on business in general.

"Walter H. Barnard, an English statistician, has compiled some very interesting figures on gold production. They show that during the five years from 1851 to 1855, the average yearly gold production of the world was $145,977,000. For the five years from 1891 to 1895, forty years later, the average yearly production was $166,980,000. So, as is seen, it took forty-five years to show an increase of only $21,000,000. The tale told during the succeeding eight years, that is from 1895 to 1903, is a very different one. During those eight years the world's production increased $170,600,800, the production for the year 1903 being $337,584,000; in other words, it more than doubled itself during the past eight years.

"It is important to know that there is no check for this increase in gold production in sight. This year's output of the yellow metal will greatly exceed the big total of 1903. There can come but one effect from this tremendous increase in the gold supply. It will cheapen gold and in so doing will enhance the selling prices of all other commodities. This means continued rising prices. Business cannot be curtailed in the face of increasing gold production and advancing prices—no more than can loss of confidence prevent the rise of ocean tides.

"The labor employed in gold production is not in competition with any other labor. Its product is not marketed, but is turned into money, new money, at the mints. It purchases supplies for the miner, and thus makes a new market for manufactured commodities. The next step the gold takes is in supplying work and wages for mechanics, factory and farm employes, etc., and it creates new business every time it is turned over that could not be made in any other way.

"Increasing gold production will keep the world busy and prosperous, and it will surely drive the pessimists and croakers to the woods. If prices go down temporarily, they must quickly go up again. The public will soon learn that it has lost its confidence at the wrong time, and it will want to speculate again. The last boom was in railroad and industrial consolidations. The next will be in manufacturing, and in the application of labor-saving devices to production; in mining and in the development of our national natural resources. It will get its impetus from rising prices for commodities in general, including copper. This is my view of the situation, and I believe that the bucking reaction has about spent itself. Good securities, and this means the best of the copper stocks, are low enough to buy for a long pull."

MILLIONAIRE AND A WIDOW

New Yorker Declares That He Was Only Indiscreet.

New York, June 1.—Through his attorney, George Gordon Battle, a statement was issued by William H. Barnard, the millionaire silk importer and member of the Union League club, who has been sued by Mrs. Viola Livingston, of Ossining, N. Y., for $25,000 damages. Mrs. Livingston is a widow, aged 18, and she sues, through David J. Goldstone, guardian ad litem, under the appointment of Justice Dugro.

"Mr. Barnard," said Mr. Battle, "was indiscreet enough to answer a personal advertisement. His motives were beyond question. From the wording of the advertisement he assumed that a worthy person might be in need of aid, and he answered it. When he met the young woman he assumed the name of W. H. Bailey for personal reasons. He did not know the character of the the person he met and did not care to give his real name. The assumption of the name of Bailey was not made because Mr. Barnard knew that Mr. Bailey was a member of the Union League club. He did not know Mr. Bailey and took the name as he would have taken the name of John Smith, or William Jones, or Henry Brown, or even John Doe.

"It is true that he had dinner with the young woman, and it is true that he took her for a ride in a cab. During the dinner and the ride he became convinced that she was not the worthy person he had thought she might have been, and he decided not to advance her aid in her desire to achieve a career on the stage. It is also true that she followed Mr. Barnard to Aiken, S. C., and that he saw her there and gave her money to pay her way back to New York. This was doubtless an indiscreet thing to do, but he thought it best under the circumstances. The allegations of ill-treatment made against Mr. Barnard are absolutely without foundation. This case will be fought to the last ditch."

William H. Bailey, who has been a member of the Union League club for thirty-five years, did not seem greatly impressed when told of the accidental use of his name by Barnard.

"Accident, bosh!" he exclaimed in a snort. "I don't go to the club much, and it may have been possible for this man Barnard to get mail there under my name. I shall report this matter of using a fellow-members's name in answering a personal and have Mr. Barnard fired out of the Union League club."

A careful search through Ossining, N. Y., today failed to reveal, even among the oldest inhabitants, any trace of the residence here, at any time in the past eighteen years, of a person of the name of Viola Livingston.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

For State to Hold Meeting In Duluth.

St. Paul, June 1.—When the Democratic state delegate convention meets at Duluth, June 22, the state central committee will meet at the same time to issue the call for the state nominating convention. The prospects are that the convention will be called for a date late in August or early in September. Consensus of opinion among the leaders of the state Democracy appears to be that the convention should not be called until after the national Democratic convention meets and makes nominations of president and vice president and declares its platform.

It is believed that the action of the national convention will in some measure influence the state convention in its choice of a candidate, and Minnesota Democrats apparently want to be certain of their ground in nominating a candidate for governor and formulating the platform on which he will make the canvass of the state. The convention at Duluth will bring practically every member of the state committee to that city, and it is believed that the time is opportune for holding the meeting of the committee at the same time that the state delegate convention is in session.

PRESIDENT NOT TO INTERFERE

Declines to Mix Up In the Wisconsin Contest.

Washington, June 1.—President Roosevelt yesterday again made it clear that he will not permit himself to be drawn into local political contests. A delegation of Wisconsin Republicans, consisting of W. D. Connor, chairman of the state committee; W. D. Houser, secretary of state; Irvin L. Lenroot, speaker of the Wisconsin assembly; C. P. Gitting and H. P. Myrick, editor of the Milwaukee Free Press, called on the president to discuss Wisconsin politics. They are supporters of Governor La Follette. Their visit was prompted by the recent call on the president of Senator Spooner, who presented to him the anti-La Follette side of the Wisconsin situation. The president has listened to the statements of both sides, but he informed both he would not have anything to do with the contest in any way.

Later Messrs. Myrick, Gitting and Conner were closeted with Postmaster General Payne, the acting chairman of the Republican national committee.

The delegation filed with Mr. Payne what was practically a notice of contest in behalf of the four delegates-at-large elected by the La Follette faction to the national Republican convention, claiming that they are the rightfully elected representatives-at-large of the state.

HOW THOUGHTS ARE MADE

A battery must have vitriol to act upon the other things and produce electricity.

A Brain is made of Water, Fat, Albumen and Phosphate of Potash.

It must have Phosphate of Potash to act on the other things to make thinking possible.

A normal Brain shows 6 per cent of Phosphates while the brain of an insane person shows less, in one case only 2¼ per cent. This proves Brain-power and Nerve-force depend upon the quantity of Phosphate of Potash the system assimilates from food.

Certain parts of Wheat and Barley contain these elements in their most effective form, but many cannot digest enough to feed a busy Brain up to its full working capacity, nor can they digest the dead Phosphate of Potash taken from the drug store. (Note—White Flour does not contain these Phosphates, because they grow in the dark parts of wheat which the miller leaves out because of its color. This explains why white flour is useless to restore Brain and Nerves.)

In GRAPE-NUTS food these elements are presented in the most liberal proportion and in such form any one can digest and assimilate them.

Government analysis proves GRAPE-NUTS thirteen times readier for assimilation than oatmeal, and three times more digestible than the average wheat food. This proves the valuable food elements of GRAPE-NUTS are ready to change into Brain-power and Nerve-force with least delay and least tax on Liver and other organs.

Also it explains why GRAPE-NUTS is acknowledged the most scientific Brain and Nerve food in existence, which can be proved by trial.

WISCONSIN FIGHT

Democratic Aspirants For Governorship Promise to Be Many.

Much Depends Upon Outcome of the Republican Contest.

Milwaukee, June 1.—There will be no lack of candidates for governor on the Democratic ticket, from present appearances. Prominent Democrats in all parts of the state are being presented, each as just the man to head the state ticket this fall. Friends of Colonel George W. Bird of Madison are said to be preparing to push him to the front. In case the anti-LaFollette men should win out in the courts, State Senator Merton of Waukesha will be given support on the ground that owing to his affiliations with the LaFollette men he would be able to secure their votes.

There is talk still of Neal Brown, but each time his name is mentioned Mr. Brown comes out with a new and stronger denial of any intention to make the run. By this time Democrats begin to see he is in earnest.

The latest possibility spoken of is Judge Alden Jenks of Dodgeville, county judge of Iowa county, and very popular in the southwestern part of the state. There was talk of nominating him for Congress but T. L. Cleary was first on the track and the friends of Judge Jenks thought he would do better as a gubernatorial candidate than as a candidate against Congressman Babcock.

It will not do for the Democrats to count too strongly on carrying Wisconsin this fall, in spite of the split in the Republican party. The reason for this is clear to anyone who will take the trouble to consult the political history of the state.

In the presidential election of 1900 the vote of the state in round numbers was: Republican, 265,000; Democrats, 160,000. It is seen that it will be necessary, first, for the Republican vote to be divided almost equally, and second, for the Democrats to hold their vote solidly. Neither of these conditions is likely to occur. One wing or the other of the Republicans will have a preponderance, and it will take a good man to hold the Democratic vote together and prevent any percentage getting away to LaFollette.

The Democrats are looking upon the state as theirs, and some are talking of a division of the spoils. Overconfidence may be their undoing. In spite of the division among the Republicans, it will need a very thoroughly conducted campaign to turn the state administration over to the other party. It is possible that with a strong ticket and a vigorous campaign the party may be held together in such manner as to assure Democratic success, but it will mean hard work and plenty of it.

What the Democrats may do is to take two or possibly more of the congressmen in addition to the one they now have. The two Milwaukee districts are likely to elect Democratic congressmen. This would be so whether there had been a split in the Republican party or not. It would not be due in either case to this party fight, but to the fact that in each district the Social Democrats are strong and will draw away enough Republican votes to almost insure the election of Democrats in place of Congressmen Otjen and Stafford.

Two years ago Congressman Otjen's plurality in his district, the fourth, was 1,638. Congressman Stafford's plurality at the same time in the fifth was 4,000. In the last spring election the Social Democrats cast over 8,000 votes in the fourth district. In the Milwaukee county end of the fifth district they cast about 6,000. Of these 14,000 at the lowest estimate 10,000 were former Republicans. This is sufficient to show the peril in which the congressmen stand. The Social Democrats are claiming the fifth district for themselves, but the probabilities are all against their making good their claim.

In the other districts of the state the Social Democrats will not enter the scale, but there are one or two that will be close if the present bitterness increases, and the indications are that it will. In 1902 the pluralities of the congressmen in the state districts were: First district, Congressman Cooper, 8315; Second district, Congressman Adams, 3056; Third district, Congressman Babcock, 8250; Seventh district, Congressman Esch, 9951; Eighth district, Congressman Davidson, 6892; Ninth district, Congressman Minor, 4479; Tenth district, Congressman Brown, 4911; Eleventh district, Congressman Jenkins, 11,098. However bitter the fight may become, there is little likelihood of the election of Congressmen Cooper, Babcock, Esch, Davidson and Jenkins being endangered. Congressman Adams, however, is well within the danger zone and Congressmen Brown and Minor are on the edge.

The peril to the Republicans lies in the fact that as feeling between the two wings intensifies, there is a disposition shown to make the congressmen line up on one side or the other. It is already reported that the La Follette men will have independent candidates in Babcock's and Minor's districts, as these two congressmen are the only ones out of the ten Republicans who have come out openly against the governor.

The remaining eight have so far successfully dodged taking sides. That they can do so much longer is doubtful. The feel among the Cook men is that whoever is not with them is against them, and if any congressman does not come out into the open and fight they will follow the example of the La Follette men in the cases of Babcock and Minor and put independent candidates into the field. This would, as stated and for the reasons given, do them little good in any district but those of Congressmen Adams and Brown.

Not only will this retaliatory process be carried into the congressional districts, but it will go all along the line, both sides putting up independent candidates in the senate and assembly districts where the other has the regular nominee, in which case nothing would be more probable than that the Democrats should control the next legislature whether they elect the state officers or not. This would mean the loss of a United States senator, as one is to be elected next winter in place of Senator Quarles.

The last legislature was made up as follows: Senate, Republicans, 29; Democrats, 5. Assembly, Republicans, 75; Democrats, 25. This gave the Republicans 105 to 28 for the Democrats, enabling them to fight among themselves as much as they pleased so far as party danger went. The total vote in joint session is 133, of which 67 is necessary for a majority. If the cut and thrust tactics toward which both sides are at present strongly inclined are followed, the Democrats might capture forty more members of the two houses and elect a Democratic senator in place of Senator Quarles. This is made more probable as with the feeling either side in the Republican controversy would prefer to see a Democratic senator than to have its opponent triumph.

No one outside the state can appreciate the intensity of feeling between the two factions, and there is no sign of its moderating any before the election. On the contrary, it is certain to increase. It is a finish fight and will not be settled until some power with a big club comes in or one or the other faction is completely wiped out of existence. Any one spoiling for a fight can have all his inclinations satisfied to the full by coming to Wisconsin.

OLD DIFFICULTY SETTLED.

St. Petersburg, May 31.—The long standing difficulty between Great Britain and Russia arising from the seizure by the later of Canadian sealers in the Behring sea in 1892, has been settled, Russia agreeing to pay $44,701 indemnity to the Carmelite and the Vancouver Belle, two out of the six vessels seized. The claim amounted to $933,097.

SUMMER RHEUMATISM

The idea that Rheumatism is strictly a winter disease, that comes from exposure or cold, is wrong; a spell of indigestion, torpidity of the liver, inactive state of the kidneys, or sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, being frequent causes of an attack. Rheumatism is due to an over-acid condition of the blood and bad circulation. As it flows through the body the blood deposits an acrid corrosive sediment in the joints and muscles, and the circulation grows sluggish because of the constant accumulation of acid impurities, and when the system is in such condition Rheumatism is liable to come out at any time, winter or summer. It is hastened and provoked by exposure to cold, damp air, sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, a bad spell of indigestion, or anything that is calculated to further derange and depress the system; but these are only exciting and not the real cause of Rheumatism. It is in the blood, and when this vital fluid becomes overcharged with the acid impurities and is running riot in the veins, an attack is sure to come, whether in summer time or the cold, bleak days of winter. You are a slave to pain as long as the blood is tainted with acid. Liniments and plasters are helpful and useful, but it takes something more than rubbing and blistering to drive away this demon of pain.

SSS

S. S. S. goes to the seat of the trouble, enters the circulation, neutralizes and filters out of the blood the acid poisons. It enriches and strengthens the weak, diseased blood; the general health improves under its tonic effect, and when rich, pure blood begins to circulate through the stiff joints and sore, tender muscles, pains and aches vanish, and the longed-for relief comes to the nervous, pain-tortured sufferers. S. S. S. contains no minerals, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Write us if in need of medical advice, which is given without charge. Our book on Rheumatism, telling of the different forms and varieties of this pain-racking disease, is mailed free.

NO USE FOR CRUTCHES.

I had an attack of Sciatic Rheumatism in its worst form. The pain was so intense I became completely prostrated. Having heard S. S. S. recommended for Rheumatism, I decided to give it a trial, and after I had taken a few bottles I was able to hobble around on crutches, and very soon had no use for them at all., S. S. S. having cured me sound and well. All the distressing pains have left me, my appetite has returned, and I am happy to be again restored to perfect health.

IMMENSE ESTATE

W. C. Greene Is Now Greatest Landowner In North America.

The Multimillionaire Copper King Buys San Rafael Ranch.

Phoenix, Ariz., June 1.—W. C. Greene, the multimillionaire copper king, has bought the noted San Rafael de la Zanja ranch, in Southeastern Arizona, paying $1,200,000 for its 300,000 acres and the cattle upon them This purchase establishes Greene as the greatest land owner of the North American continent, for hitherto, by purchase of land grants, he owned about 200,000 acres eastward from his latest acquisition, as well as fully 1,000,000 acres in the northern part of the Mexican state of Sonora, secured in the shape of Spanish land grants or through direct deed from the Mexican government. Within his Mexican domain is included the Ganannea range of mountains, wherein lie the great copper mines that bear his name, and whence have come his riches. On the north these holdings join his possessions within the United States, the international line running for fifty miles or more across the Greene cattle range. All the upper San Pedro valley is his, and his are the ranges all around the towering Huachuca mountains. By his latest purchase, this princely domain has been extended westward beyond the border town of Nogales. All this is one grand cattle range, where barbed wire fencing is bought by the trainload and where the cowboys employed could form a regiment of rough riders. It is held as the property of the Greene Cattle company, of which Greene has about all the stock. And it embraces a little ranch on the San Pedro where the same "Bill" Greene plowed and dug, an unsuccessful farmer, not ten years ago. An old business associate, B. A. Packard, has been placed in charge and under his direction thousands of steers are already being driven to the alfalfa fields of the Salt River valley, around Phoenix, to be fattened for market. It is expected Greene will next invade the field of the packer, that he may the better dispose of his enormous beef crop.

The San Rafael ranch, just acquired, is an old Spanish land grant, bought twenty-one years ago and since held by Senator Don Cameron, of Pennsylvania, Colin and Brewster Cameron, W. C. Whitney, of New York, and a couple of St. Louis capitalists. The Camerons' interest has been the largest and in their name the sale to Greene was made. Two years ago they were confirmed in their possession of the grant by a decision of the United States court of private land claims, though the 300,000 awarded was less than half they had claimed under the elastic boundary definitions of the Spanish records of grants.

The Camerons made of the great ranch a veritable Scottish estate, with the baronial castle at Lochiel, the headquarters station, where the travel-wearied pilgrim found broad hospitality and unwonted and strange luxury. The region round about is a hunter's paradise, with natural preserves of wild animals and game birds and with streams and artificial lakes abounding in fish, with rugged mountains and grassy savannas. And these in a climate of rare excellence. Like their Scottish progenitors of old, the Camerons, however, most particularly were devoted to the care of their cattle. At Lochiel is maintained one of the finest herds of thoroughbred Herefords known in the world.

But not without a plenty of stirring affrays have the Camerons kept the border these many years past. Almost wars have they had with border cattle thieves and with settlers, who, sometimes in the night, have cut down miles upon miles of the Cameron fences. And litigaion there was always till the settlement in the land court.

Now the task has been passed over to Greene. He has fought the Apaches of the Southwest. He has more than made his way against the bulls and bears of Wall street. It is believed he is fully capable of assuming the wardenship of the border marches.

FIRST AID TO MATRIMONY

Salvation Army Embarks In an Important New Enterprise.

New York, June 1.—The most remarkable of all innovations yet introduced by the Salvation Army is one which is in effect a "first aid to matrimony" bureau. Through this bureau couples that wish to marry can get furniture for a four-room flat for $10, the bridegroom can get a wedding suit for $1 and the bride obtain a "trousseau" for the same amount.

The "first aid to matrimony" bureau is an important part of the regularly organized work of the army's industrial home. It is there that cupid's assaults on the heart are robbed of terror by placing within the reach of the poorest of wounded ones a means of living together. And what is true of the institution located in Hell's Kitchen is also true of the two Salvation Army industrial homes in Brooklyn, and the fifty others scattered throughout the country.

The work of fitting out brides and bridegrooms is made possible by the Salvation Army's system of collecting cast-off clothing, furniture and household goods from the homes of wealthy and well-to-do. These collections fall within the province of the industrial homes. At the one in Hell's Kitchen a large furniture van and large single horse wagons are maintained for the purpose of collecting all the clothing thus obtained. It is disposed of at the home, most of it being sold at auctions, which are held twice a day. But the furniture and household goods are placed on sale at definitely fixed prices in two stores, which have been opened for this object.

At the homes and at both of the stores brides and bridegrooms are favored customers. They do not have to attend the auctions to obtain clothing and at the stores they get the pick of such furniture as there is on hand.

One dollar entitles the bridegroom to a presentable suit of clothes, a stout pair of shoes, a decent hat, and all the white shirts and underclothing he needs. For $1 the bride usually gets a silk or satin dress that once graced the form of some woman in high life, and is little the worse for wear, shoes and a hat or bonnet that is carefully selected as most becoming, and all the underclothing that she needs. Then comes the payment of $10 and a visit to one of the stores, where the young couple apply themselves with enthusiasm to the task of fitting up their home.

A parlor suit, a bedroom suit, and a dining room suit, kitchen utensils, bedding dishes, carpets and a few pictures are included in the price, $10.

LANDMARK TO BE REMOVED

The Van Ness Mansion In Washington to Be Razed.

Washington, June 1.—In a short time work will be commenced tearing down the old historic Van Ness mansion, and in its place will arise the buildings for the George Washington university, which has acquired the large square of land surrounding the house, once the ornament of the national capital and long since a pile of moldering walls with a tumble-down roof. The property is situated on lower Fifteenth street, for many years a neglected quarter of the city, but of late a locality of more than ordinary interest. Within five or six years the spirit of progress has extended all around the Van Ness house. Near it is the magnificent Corcoran art gallery, and just completed, the new driveway extending for miles along the banks of the Potomac. Just south of it rises the Washington monument, and within half a square the big ellipse in the rear of the White House, and scarcely more than a square away, the government fish ponds.

The history of the old Van Ness mansion has been so often written in the newspapers that it is unnecessary to repeat it. President Washington was a visitor here; for a long time the owner entertained the haute monde of the capital, and during the civil war it was a center of interest because a number of Southern sympathizers, and on one occasion a daring Confederate spy, lay concealed in the house for a matter of weeks, gathering important inforamtion which was transmitted to Richmond regularly. A large wall, now in a state of decay, surrounds the house. There was a large gate at one side between two little houses for the gatekeeper, and in its heyday no uninvited visitor could enter without permission of the host. In late years the grounds which surround it have been used for athletic purposes. In the coprse of a few years more the entire place will be converted into a huge campus of which the center will be the new buildings of the George Washington university. This institution is one of the oldest universities in the country. Under its present name it is well known in the West and is attended by a large number of students from all sections of the country, from Maine to California. The faculty of Columbian university includes Justice Brewer, Justice Harlan, Professor Charles E. Munroe, the inventor of the smokeless powder, and several others well known in scientific and literary circles. The acquisition by the university of the Van Ness property is in line with the rapid development of Washington within the past few years, which includes the $6,000,000 union railway station, the expenditure of nearly $9,000,000 more for public buildings for the government's use, and many private enterprises for the improvemenut of the capital.

COTTON ON TREES

A Success In Mexico and to Be Tried In Texas.

An Expert Declares It to Be Commercially Profitable.

Austin, Tex., June 1.—In a supplemental report which Senor Don Hilario Cuevas, a wealthy planter of San Luis Soyatlan, state of Jalisco, has just made to the Mexican government on the cotton tree which he is successfully cultivating upon his plantation, he says that he has demonstrated that the industry is a practical commercial proposition. It is asserted that this wonderful tree is adapted to the soil and climate of Southwest Texas and the experiment of growing it here is to be tried. A number of persons who became interested in Senor Cuevas's success have obtained seeds of the tree from him and these have germinated nicely and the trees give promise of a rapid growth. If the trees can be successfully grown in Texas it will mean the solution of the boll weevil problem, as tests show the cotton tree to be immune from the attacks of this pest. The recent official report of United States Consular Agent Light of Guadalajara, Mexico, to the United States Agricultural department, on the commercial possibilities of the cotton tree, was not altogether favorable, his chief objection being that the expense of picking the cotton from the tree would be too great to make its cultivation a practical success. Senor Cuevas has answered this objection. He says:

"There is no difficulty whatever in gathering the crop of the larger trees. When the trees are half-grown the higher branches are pulled downward so that the cotton can be easily picked; but when they are full grown the branches are thick and strong enough to allow a boy to climb the tree and walk along the branches and so gather the fruit.

"In fertile ground and good climate, with no frost, you may estimate that each tree will yield from twenty to twenty-five pounds, including the seed. When planted so as to be irrigated, say for instance in June, this plant or tree will produce its first crop of cotton in the month of January next. To my mind there is no objection to dwarfing the tree, as undoubtedly the lower branches would yield a better crop and so compensate for the loss of the upper ones.

"I have just seen the cotton tree growing very finely on the rancho La Cofradia, near the town of Tuxcueca, state of Jalisco. The ground consists entirely of rocks and sand, covered with a vegetable subsoil of only a few inches in depth."

Senor Cuevas says that the cotton trees can be planted at a distance of about ten feet apart. More than 400 trees to the acre can be cultivated, and at an average yield of twenty pounds of cotton each the yield per acre would be 8000 pounds, or sixteen bales. This is said to be a conservative estimate of the average yield. Continuing, Senor Cuevas says in his report:

"The expense of planting the cotton is no greater than the expense of planting corn. The cotton tree is able to withstand droughts during eight months of the year. It is not attacked by boll weevil, the great enemy of the ordinary cotton plant, which causes so much damage among the cotton plantations in the northern portion of the republic.

"It is planted once in from twenty-five to thirty years. A short time ago a tree was cut down on account of it being in the way. It was planted in the time of Maximilian; it never failed in its production, nor was it attacked by any insect or suffered any other accident.

"The seed is planted at the beginning of the rainy season; at four months old it is about four feet high and begins to blossom, and at the age of two years it is about ten feet high and the harvest then begins to be remunerative. During the rigors of the dry season its foliage is always deep green, where grown in very dry lands; if the lands were irrigated and the necessary care taken, the crop obtained would be considerably increased. Completely abandoned, without irigation or cultivation, and without any care whatever, I know of trees that produce fifteen pounds, not taking into account the losses from the birds or what is carried away by the wind.

"If planted in fertile soil and the proper distance apart, at the end of the third year, and sometimes before the shade of the tree covers the ground, preventing the ground from becoming dry and parched, and likewise preventing a too abundant growth of weeds that would otherwise spring up, saving the expense of keeping the fields clean from weeds and grasses."

Senor Cuevas says that the expense of harvesting the crop is only about one cent per pound.

HOWARD GOULD

Has Cornered the Market on Ducks.

New York, June 1.—Howard Gould, whose father once cornered Erie railroad stock, has cornered the duck market. For years he has made a specialty of raising ducks at Sands Point, L. I., for the high-class demand in New York. It brings the highest price of any domestic fowl in the market, sometimes 35 cents a pound, and, it is said, no other grade of duck is used at the Waldorf, Sherry's, Delmonico's and the Holland house.

When the supply of duck is small at Sands Point it is small at these uptown dinner rooms and the price is high. When the Gould farm incubator is in good working order the supply increases and the price on the bill of fare goes down accordingly.

The cause of the corner is the quality of the duck. There are now over 1000 ducks housed near the unfinished foundations of Castle Gould in over twenty separate stone houses. In one open house there are 300 goslings that look like an animated Easter card, and run around in the sun like yellow silk balls in a country road whirlwind. They are only six days old. Then they are graded up to lots of six months of age and one year, at the end of which time most of them have found eternal rest at the hands of a French chef.

'Tisn't safe to be a day without Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the house. Never can tell what moment an accident is going to happen.

BEGIN CAMPAIGN TO REACH MASSES

Mr. and Mrs. Asher Hold Services In Bowery Saloon.

Large Crowd Hear Them Respectfully and Join In Service.

The first meeting of a peculiar religious campaign, instituted in Duluth by Mr. and Mrs. William Asher, of the Duluth Bethel society, was held on the Bowery last night, in Roy McKenzie's saloon, 612 West Superior street. Mr. Asher, superintendent of the society, Mrs. Asher, Rev. Thomas H. Cleland, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. G. H. Turner, recently arrived from London, England, were present.

Probably 125 bowery loungers were in attendance. They listened with close attention throughout the simple services. Not a disrespectful word was uttered. Smoking stopped, many removed their hats, and most of the men joined in the choruses of several of the songs.

"I believe these meetings solve the problem of how to reach the masses," said Mr. Asher last evening. "The plan has been tried with great success in Chicago and other large cities. I myself assisted in the meetings. We visited the toughest places in the city. Even in the saloons with the blackest reputations we were given respectful attention. We heard not a word while in them not fit for the ears of the women who were with us. I think it will be the same in Duluth.

"We propose to carry on the good work through the summer. Last night's meeting was the first of a series. Others will be held in different saloons, on street corners, at public gathering places, on circus grounds and in the ball park at the Sunday games. I believe that we will be given permission to head services in the ball park. Of course we will not attempt it unless permission is granted. We try to hold meetings at no place where we have not permission to do so. We don't want or intend to interfere with anybody's business. We want to preach the gospel to the masses, and we are going to do it. This is the only way we can do it. In no other way can hundreds of men and boys be reached.

"Mr. McKenzie did not hesitate in allowing us the use of his place of business this evening. He says we can come here again when we desire. He has treated us courteously and with the utmost consideration. I believe that other saloon men will be just as courteous."

It was an interesting study to observe the actions of the rough men gathered in front of the bar to listen to the speakers and the singing. Mrs. Asher possesses a strong and rather pleasant voice. The men appeared to like her singing better than anything else. At times they vigorously applauded her, contrary to established church rules. She was pleased at this sign of appreciation. Mr. Asher smiled, and said he was glad to see them thus express their pleasure.

It was made known early in the evening at different places along the bowery that the meeting was to be held. At 7:30, when the party from the mission appeared, quite a crowd of men were on hand. Others, attracted to the spot by the odd sight of a woman and three clerical looking men entering a saloon, approached and followed into the place.

The party proceeded at once to the rear of the saloon. Mr. Turner is a kindly-looking old gentleman, a venerable patriarch in appearance. He has a long, flowing white beard, and white hair. He appeared in striking contrast to the other men gathered in the saloon. He said not a word throughout the evening, except once in offering prayer, being there as a listener, not as a talker, but he attracted much attention, nevertheless, and more than one man thought of his aged father, as he looked with softened eyes at the old minister. His very presence commanded respect and attention.

Rev. Dr. Cleland was also present more as an observer of what was going on than as a speaker. He became so greatly interested in the proceedings, however, when he saw how really interested the men were, that, at the conclusion of Mr. Asher's talk, he stepped upon the chair provided as a speaker's stand, and himself delivered a few remarks. He told two or three interesting incidents, happening in the lives of workingmen, which had brought them to see and embrace religion in its true light.

Neither of the men delivered what might be called a sermon. It was better, considering the circumstances and surroundings, that they did not do so. The men felt this, and appreciated it. They liked it better than the ministers should talk to them as man to man, and that no particular cult or religion should be forced upon them. They seemed to want to listen, but they did not want to be raved at, and threatened with the most terrible things after death if they did not change their mode of living. Their wishes were observed. The talks delivered from the rude chair were plain, but earnest. There were no flights of rhetoric, or high-sounding words.

Mr. Asher had with him one of the Towner organs, a compact little instrument which may be carried about in the hand. It answers the purpose of an organ very well. This was set up near the back door of the building, and the Bethel party stood grouped about it. The "congregation" formed a semi-circle in front, but did not approach closely, except at the side, where an old counter offered a fairly comfortable seat. A line of men leaned with their backs against the bar. The remainder of the crowd was packed from the center of the room to the door. No seats were offered, even by the several tipsy woodsmen who were present. Those who were dizzy from the effects of liquor gazed in a stupid fashion at what was going on, but made no disturbance. When it came time to sing they were the ones who joined most heartily in the chorus. The services lasted a full hour, and when the tipsy ones left the saloon at their conclusion, they seemed partly sobered.

Only three or four white collars were in evidence in the audience. Most of them were roughly dressed, of the types to be seen on the Bowery every day. Some of them were hard-working men; some mere boys, who had perhaps run away from home, recently arriving in the city from a winter's work in the woods. Others were the ordinary Bowery loafers, belonging to that class of transients commonly called hoboes. Several work on the docks unloading boats, and not a few, in spite of their rough clothes and working shirts, presented a neat and clean appearance. Still others were as dirty as the law allows. The majority looked as though they had not seen the interior of a church since they were children, and probably many hadn't.

Mr. Asher did not tire his hearers with a long address. After thanking Mr. McKenzie for the use of the building, he told the object of the meeting, and said that he was making an effort to reach the masses who never attended church. He said he wanted to talk to the men who were under the mistaken impression that, in their rough working clothes, they were not welcome in the leading churches of the city. He said that God was not one who stood over them with a club to knock them down when they sinned.

"God hates sin, but he loves the sinner," he said.

"Precious Name" was the first hymn sung, and "It's Just Like Him" the second. Several others were sung, and Mrs. Asher rendered several solos, "A Mother's Prayer," "Wandering Boy," "Welcome For Me," "Just Like Him," etc. The men joined with vigor in the choruses. Instead of getting restless as the meeting proceeded, they seemed to give all the closer attention. Those who smoked at the beginning of the services soon threw aside their cigars, and several took off their hats, although they were not asked to do so. Only one glass of beer was sold during the hour that services were in progress, and that was to a thirsty outsider who had just entered the door. Neither did the men appear to be in a mood for drinking after the services, for most of them immediately left the saloon with sober faces.

When Mr. Asher asked those who thought the meetings were productive of good, and wished them to continue, to hold up their hands, nearly every man in the room raised his right hand. A few of the men lingered in the saloon and talked the meeting over soberly, but none was caught jesting about it. One was heard to express wonder that he had not been asked to "swear off" drinking, and said that if the meetings were to continue in such a reasonable way he might come again.

Beautiful Memorial Pillow.

Miss Alice Hoyt has received from a sister one of the most unique pillows even seen in the city, which will be sold in Crookston, says the Crookston Times. It is a memorial pillow and the cover is a fine piece of blue silk on which is printed a fac simile of the announcement of the death of President McKinley as published on the front page of the Duluth Evening Herald. There were but very few of the covers printed, and this makes the souvenir a very valuable one. The border is in black and the effect is very striking.

DYNAMITE USED

Have Thus Far Been Able to Elude Game Wardens.

Deputy Game Warden Green says the game authorities have been cognizant of the practice and have been using every endeavor to locate the guilty parties with a view of punishing them to the fullest extent of the law, but up to the present time they have been unable to catch any one in the vicinity who has the appearance of being connected with the dynamiting.

News of the practice was first brought to Mr. Green by a man who lives in the vicinity of Fond du Lac and who claimed to have seen a large number of dead fish floating in the river.

Mr. Green investigated and became satisfied that some person or persons were using dynamite right along and that the pike fishing possibilities at Fond du Lac this coming season were being rapidly dissipated. He says that were it not for the dynamiting there would likely be good fishing at the rapids now.

According to the game warden, the dynamiting is all done after dark, the parties interested in the wholesale killing of the fish slipping up to a point just above the rapids after nightfall, where they explode a stick or two of dynamite in the river and then gather the dead fish up in dip nets as they are thrown up by the water in the rapids.

Mr. Green was in the vicinity of the rapids a few nights ago and heard three explosions, but when he hastened to the scene of the probable dynamiting, the miscreants had disappeared.

It is claimed that even after dynamiting pike do not rise to the top readily so as to be seen where the water is smooth, and the rapids afford every facility to the lawbreakers for the reason that the tumbling water causes the dead fish to come to the top. A person standing in the water with a dip net is able to swoop up the dead pike when he sees the flash of the white bellies in the moonlight.

The local sportsmen who have been in the habit of catching pike with a hook and line, during the fishing season, at Fond du Lac, are very much incensed over the dynamiting practice, which is ruining the rapids for a fishing ground and some of them declare they would visit summary vengeance on any person they could catch in the river with explosives in their possession.

Those fishermen who abide by the game laws of the state feel that the use of dynamite to kill fish is a most contemptible practice, and they desire to see persons engaged in it punished to the full extent of the law.

Many of the fishermen are in favor of creating a fund, by subscription among the local anglers, which shall be available as a reward for the detection of any person using dynamite in the St. Louis or any other stream. It is believed that the prospect of a reward would, if it was large enough, stimulate several persons to be on the watch for the lawbreakers, and evidence could be collected that would result in the penalty parties being landed behind the bars.

One irate fisherman declares that hanging would be too good for any person that will dynamite fish.

Several weeks ago the fish and game commission seined the river at the falls to collect spawn, and at that time the game authorities predicted an excellent fishing season, for the reason that the pike were in the river in large numbers, and of a good size. It is said that only a few charges of dynamite are necessary to completely ruin the fishing for a whole season in the locality where it is used.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles. Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

CON GAME FAILS

With a Denver Boniface But a Clever Swindler Escapes.

Five Bricks In Suit Case Covered With Foreign Labels.

Denver, Col., June 1.—"Never judge a man by the clothes he wears" is an adage adhered to by some old sages who have at one time during their lives been preyed upon by well-dressed, smooth-tongued individuals. The same holds good in the experience of the hotel clerk who has often been deceived in guests by drawing conclusions from the kind of baggage they carry.

The test was put to Col. Clerk, clerk at the Oxford, last night. He had his choice between exposing an alleged swindler and turning him over to the police, or seizing that same swindler's baggage in payment of five days' lodging. He chose the latter. As a consequence he was rewarded with an ancient and dilapidated looking object that at one time may have been called a dress suit case, five bricks, four soiled collars and a pair of pajamas.

Before confiscation this elegant assortment constituted the worldly goods and chattels of one Percy Randolph Goodwin, occupying room 113 of the Oxford, and in relieving this same Goodwin of his possessions Col. Lord laid bare a clever hotel swindle which bid fair to cost the management $500 in legal tender.

Percy Randolph Goodwin came to the hotel five days ago. He registered from New York, and claimed to be "looking after father's mining interests in Central City." Percy made himself popular around the hotel office and was careful to tell the different clerks of his father's vast wealth, and cultivated the acquaintance of the bell-boys and porters. Three days ago Percy went around the loop and then to Central City to look at the mines. He returned yesterday morning and, after making his presence known, left the hotel. Half an hour later the telephone rang. Col. Lord answered.

"Hello," said a voice, "this is the Adams Express company. We have a money package here containing $2000, which is addressed to one of your guests, P. R. Goodwin. All our drivers are out now, so please tell him to come and get it."

Col. Lord did not reply whether he would or not. His wits began working overtime, and he smiled. It was an old game, and he had been "through the mill." He scanned over his books to find out how much Percy owed. "Yes, I'll take the chance," he mused.

Then he instructed a "bellhop" to make a search of Percy's room and get an approximate value of his luggage. Five minutes later the boy returned.

"One dress suit case," the bellboy reported, "but the guy must be pretty well fixed, 'cause it's all pasted up with foreign labels."

Col. Lord evidently concluded that its contents would be sufficient to cover the amount of Percy's lodgings, and he instructed the boy to lock the room.

About this time Percy Randolph appeared. He approached the desk as if he expected to be told something. He was not disappointed. Col. Lord broke the sad news of the $2000 awaiting him at the express office, and his voice choked with sobs. Percy's plans were working well, and he thanked him.

"But I won't have time to go for it just now," began Percy Randolph, just as if he were in the habit of having $2000 brought to him every day, "so if it's just the same to you, I wish you'd let me take about $600 for a couple of hours, and after I drop into the express office I'll hand it back to you."

Percy's estimate of $600 was a mere bagatelle, judging from the careless manner in which he made his request. The colonel was more particular. His plans were also working well, and the affair was terminating just as he had expected. He looked at Percy, who awaited his answer with bowed head. It was a touching scene. The answer finally came.

"Young man," began the colonel, starting from behind the desk, "I want you to——"

He didn't finish. Percy Randolph made a "shot-foot" across the hotel office, through the door, and disappeared around the corner. He has not been seen since.

"I thought so," mused the colonel, as he returned to his desk. Then he ordered the baggage brought into his presence. "Go to 113 and take everything in sight," he instructed the porter. The porter started forth with the air of a constable on his way to seize a millionaire's piano for failing to pay his monthly installment. The "bellhops" gathered about and looked with envy upon the man who performed this important duty. It was an exciting moment. Five minutes later the porter reappeared, grip in hand.

"Break it open," commanded the colonel in the voice of a real colonel on the field of battle. It was opened. The five bricks and other articles were overturned upon the floor. A crowd of curious guests formed a circle about the grip and wondered what it was all about, anyway. Then they turned to look for the colonel to see if he could give them any information. But the colonel had vanished.

"Now, that's a good sign," muttered a bellboy, as he walked away. "Any time you see a grip that's covered with them labels from China, Germany and France, why you can bank on it that the owner was never there before, and is trying to make a 'four-flush.'"

Grand Forks, June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The third game with Duluth was played here today, and it was a very poor exhibition of the national game. Duluth had the little sphere and the pitcher up in the air from the fourth inning on. Carriveau was on the firing line for the Tigers and failed to make good. A couple of three-baggers a two-bagger, and ten singles is all that the White Sox took. They left the rest for some other time.

Gehring was on the delivery table for the White Sox. Three little scattered hits is all the Tigers could do with him. The first hit was made in the fourth inning when Cole reached for a two-bagger. The other two came in the ninth from Martin and Cole. Gehring issued one pass and struck out eleven men, the greatest number of strike outs for any pitcher on the local diamond this year. In the second inning Gehring warmed up and struck out the Tigers i one, two, three order.

Hanrahan was hurt in the seventh inning, and Brown was put in his place. Nagel went to center and Brown took Nagel's place in right. Duluth made her first score in the fourth inning, on an error by Hutchinson. The first score in twenty innings. Then it was all day with the Tigers, their goal was no longer sacred and the White Sox crossed it with impunity.

Grand Forks got a double in the seventh. Quillan lead off with a hit. Ball went out to Nagel and Zink hit a grounder to Sharnweber, who touched second and then doubled it down to first, retiring Zink.

SUPERIOR RALLIES.

Pulls Out Victory In the Ninth Inning.

Crookston, June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—By a desperate batting rally in the ninth inning, Don Cameron's "swamp jumpers" pulled today's game out of the hole and won by a score of 6 to 2. It was another hard game for Crookston to lose. For eight innings both teams played beautiful ball, with Simmonds and Martin dividing honors in the box. Crookston had one run to the good when Superior went to bat in the ninth. A hit and errors by Schils and Novacek filled the bases, and then Simmonds won his own game by slamming the ball over the fence for a home run. One more was added before the side was retired.

The home team made a game effort to tie the score, and succeeded in getting men on bases, but Simmonds took a brace and retired the side.

POOR OLD WINNIPEG.

Fargo Takes Another Fall Out of Canucks.

Fargo, N. D., June 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo bunched hits on Bemis in the fifth yesterday and won the game in one inning. Rose, who was first man up in the fourth, made a homer, and in the fifth, with two men down, Demontreville beat out a bunt. This seemed to put Bemis up in the air, and he allowed both Furlong and Rose to walk. Werden made good with a single, scoring Demont, and Furlong and Lynch followed with two-baggers, scoring Rose and Werden. Treager made a safe hit, scoring Lynch.

Winnipeg scored in the first half of the fifth. Mankie let Clark's grounder get away. Hillock allowed Howard free transportation to the first corner, and after Green went out on a bunt strike and Wagner on a popup to Demont, Bemis hit safely, scoring Clark, and Avery lined out a two-bagger, scoring Howard.

Werden and Howard each hit three safe ones, while Demont and Avery accumulated a pair each. A sensational catch by Rose in the sixth robbed Kelly of a three-bagger. The game was an interesting contest except for the ragged umpiring of Hamilton, whose work seemed to be equally coarse on both sides.

Outfielder Hughes, of Chicago, will join Winnipeg at Duluth Thursday. Pitcher Bartos, of last year's Winnipeg team, and Third Baseman Wagner, of the Kansas City team, were brought to Fargo yesterday morning by President Lamb. The score:

Off the Bat.

Home tomorrow.

* * *

Alone at the top.

* * *

An even break with the Forks?

* * *

Koukalik will pitch today in the last game with the Tigers.

* * *

"Hank" Gehring has yet to lose his first game. Martin saved his scalp once, however, in that Crookston game.

* * *

Gehring has won three games, Martin one, Owens one, Shaw one and Koukalik one. Shaw has lost two, Owens one and Koukalik one.

* * *

In Simmonds and Noldin, Superior has a great pair of pitchers. Noldin has won three games for Bugville, while Simmonds has won three and lost one.

* * *

Boys under twelve will be admitted for 10 cents. Now watch the "kids" "scrooch down" when they come to pass the man at the gate.

* * *

Where are the "knockers" now that Duluth is coming home from a road trip in first place, while the other teams, with the exception of Superior, have been playing at home?

* * *

Poor old Winnipeg has taken another drop. But keep your eye on the Canucks. Bartos of last year's team will rejoin them here. Wagner, a third baseman from Kansas City and Hughes, an outfielder from Chicago, joined the "Champs" in Fargo.

* * *

President Lamb, of Winnipeg, has made good his promise to strengthen the "Champs." A pitcher was badly needed by the team, and Bartos was secured. He was third in the league last year. Hughes and Wagner are said to be fast and the rejuvenated "Champs" should give Duluth a run for the money tomorrow.

* * *

And what's the matter with Superior? Coming home in third place with all games played abroad is a record that ought to arouse the loyalty and enthusiasm of all the fans across the bay and make them support the team properly on its home grounds.

"Kids" to Be Admitted For Ten Cents—Regular Ladies' Day.

The management of the Duluth Baseball club has decided that it is a better plan to get the small boys inside the grounds than to have them lined up along the top of the fence, and it will give the "kids" a show to see the games this year. All boys under 12 years of age will be admitted to the grounds for 10 cents throughout the coming season.

The plan was decided upon yesterday and it will be in force for the opening game tomorrow afternoon.

Four policemen will be on guard outside the fence tomorrow and any person found climbing over will be prosecuted. The management intends to make an example of the first person caught.

The management was willing to meet the "kids" half way in the matter and when it was decided to take vigorous steps to do away with the grand stand on the outfield fence, it was also decided to let the "kids" in for a dime. The men who have been using the fence as an entrance will have to produce their quarter or miss the game.

A special "Ladies' Day" will also be observed during the coming summer. Every Friday afternoon ladies will be admitted to the grounds and the grand stand without charge.

The team will arrive in Duluth tomorrow morning for the opening game of the season. Winnipeg will be the opposing team and the White Sox are planning to make the opening an auspicious occasion by repeating the dose given the "Champs" in the three games at Winnipeg. Owens will be in the box for Duluth, and Bemis will probably oppose him. Koukalik is pitching today, and both Shaw and Gehring will be available for the Winnipeg series.

The game tomorrow will be called at 3:30 o'clock. The two teams will leave the city hall at 2 o'clock and march to Eighth avenue west, headed by a band. At Eighth avenue cabs will be awaiting them and they will be driven to the grounds.

The mayor and aldermen have been invited to attend, and carriages will be provided for them, leaving the city hall at 2 o'clock.

The team will come home in first place. Even though the game today at Grand Forks should be lost, the two teams will be tied for the leadership, and when the White Sox hit the ties for home tonight, they will be at the top of the heap. It will be a welcome change from last season when they arrived home at the bottom or not far from it.

CLOSE CALL FROM DEATH

Frank Dove Saves Sick Woman From Suffocation.

The brave act of Frank Dove, a young carpenter living on Park Point, probably saved the life of Mrs. James McCauley in a fire which broke out in the Zenith lodging house on Lake avenue south last evening, about 10 o'clock.

Mrs. McCauley was confined to her bed with an attack of rheumatism, and when the fire broke out she was unable to make a move to save herself. Dove was passing along Lake avenue when he saw the lodgers fleeing only partially clothed from the burning building. He suspected that there might be others in the building who had not escaped, and ran up the flight of stairs to ascertain whether or not he could render any assistance. He heard a faint call for help from the room occupied by Mrs. McCauley, and groping around through the dense smoke, succeeded in finding her room. He picked her up in his arms and carried her down the stairs, taking her into a confectionery store three doors below.

The frame building burned fiercely at first, but the flames were quickly extinguished when the department reached the scene.

Harold England, truckman on hook and ladder truck number 3, sustained a bad cut on his head by falling through a skylight. Chief Black assisted the wounded man to his carriage and immediately drove him to a doctor to have the wound dressed.

The damage done by the fire was small. Albert Ramsey rented the second story of the building for a lodging house and carried insurance to the amount of $1000. The loss will probably not exceed $200.

WORST OF ALL EXPERIENCES.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles, Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by all druggists.

DIVORCE GRANTED.

Mrs. Thompson Gets Legal Separation From Husband.

After hearing all the testimony in the case of Charlotte Thompson against Thomas M. Thompson, Judge Ensign, yesterday afternoon, granted Mrs. Thompson the decree of divorce she desired. She gave her side of the case yesterday morning, claiming she had been deserted and abused, and that her husband was unreasonably jealous of the hired man.

During the afternoon Mr. Thompson admitted that he had a fiery temper and often did things he was sorry for afterward. He claimed that he was never so angry as to be violent. He caused some amusement by his description of the property and its value, claiming the house was worth not a cent more than $25 and that the other property consisted of a wagon, a cow and a heifer. He said there used to be a roof on the house, but now that one could see daylight through it.

Besides the decree of divorce, Mrs. Thompson was given custody of the child and a proportionate share in the property when that shall have been determined.

ISSUE NOT LEGAL

Council Cannot Issue $40,000 Water Bonds Remaining Unsold.

Opposition to Purchase of Portable Rock Crusher Develops.

The council last evening:
Laid over for one week plan to purchase portable rock crusher.
Received opinion of city attorney that $40,000 bond issue is not legal.
Asked city attorney for opinion as to whether expenditure of more than $200 for roads can be made without contract.

The council was considering a plan to issue the remaining $40,000 of the $100,000 authorized by the election of March 9, 1903. City Attorney Bert Fesler was asked whether this could be legally done. In his written opinion to the council last evening, he stated that the council had exhausted its power under that election and that no more bonds could be issued until another election had been held. He also stated that a change of mayors had taken place since the issue was voted and that this reason would also render the bonds unsaleable.

The sinking fund commission is not in a position to buy the bonds with the expectation of carrying them to their maturity, and the plan to raise money by this issue will have to be abandoned. This will mean that the construction of the supplementary reservoir will have to be laid over for another year, as there are no other funds available for the purpose.

The recommendation of the board of public works that a portable rock crusher be purchased to be used in the repair work on the streets, caused a rather heated discussion.

"I do not think the expenditure advisable in the present condition of the city's finances," said Alderman Barnes. "With the different funds in the condition they are at present, all expenditures should be cut down."

"I agree with Alderman Barnes," said Alderman Sang. "The purchase may be justifiable at some future time, but I do not think the funds warrant it now."

"This crusher is not solely for the use of Lakeside people," said Alderman Wilson, in reply to an intimation by Alderman Sang that the crusher was being purchased solely for the repair work on the Lakeside streets. "There never was or never will be a time when we need it more than we do now. Half of the cost of the crusher can be saved to the city in the expenditure for the improvement of London road. The cost of hauling gravel is so high that in the expenditure of the $5000 for the improvement of London road, we could save half the cost of the crusher by having it there to work with."

"The intimation that any one part of the city is getting more than its share of the city's funds comes with bad grace from any of the West Duluth aldermen," said Alderman McEwen. "The recommendation of the board of public works should have some weight with this body, and I move that this matter be laid over for a week since there are so many of the aldermen absent this evening."

Alderman McEwen's motion carried.

Alderman Sang wanted the work now being done on the Fond du Lac road discontinued. He claimed that the board of public works was expending a sum of over $200 on the work without contract. He claimed that better satisfaction could be secured by contract work and he asked the city attorney for a written opinion as to whether or not an expenditure of over $200 could be made without the awarding of a contract under the provisions of the city charter.

President Holgate of the board of public works stated that the money was being expended out of the regular maintenance fund of the board, and that it had been authorized by the council last fall, with the understanding that the county was to spend $1000 after the city had expended $2000.

Alderman Sang claimed that the least important work on the road was being done first, while Alderman Chesney maintained that this was not the case. The matter was finally referred to the city attorney.

An invitation was received from the Duluth Baseball club, asking the aldermen to be present at the opening game of the season, tomorrow afternoon. The club will furnish carriages for the aldermen, leaving the city hall at 2 o'clock.

THIRD SET OF TEETH

Owingsville, Ky., June 1.—Sixty-year-old Miss Maria Williamson, of this town, is attracting much attention because of a third set of teeth she is cutting. Two teeth have already made their appearance. She lost her second set of teeth several years ago and has since used false ones.

Recently on adjusting the plate she found that the new teeth interfered with the plate. Her grandfather, who died many years ago, cut a third set of teeth after he had passed his 60th year, and it is said that other members of the family had similar experiences.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Sharp Bulge In Market With Scarcely a Set-Back.

Bradstreet's Report Bullish and Better Milling Situation.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 1.—The wheat market advanced this morning and at a strong pace and the question during most of the morning was as to what was putting it up. There were a number of causes to which it could be attributed and all contributed more or less to it. The Southwest is getting too much rain. It was rumored that Minneapolis mills are to start up and millers were better buyers of wheat. This was noticeable in the Duluth market, the mills being after wheat. The Bradstreet report was also bullish showing a decrease in the world's visible supply of 5,534,000 bus. East of the Rockies the decrease was 4,934,000 bus., and in Europe and afloat 600,000 bus.

In the Duluth market the July option advanced 1¼c, in Chicago 1⅝-¾c, in Minneapolis 1⅝c and in New York, 1½c. The September option in Duluth was 1c higher and in Minneapolis 1¼c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 231,000 bus., last year 249,000 bus. Shipments 924,000 bus., last year 385,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 52,-421 bus.

Corn in Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed 1⅞c higher. July oats closed ¾c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 1,183,000 bus, last year 1,160,000 bus. Shipments 635,000 bus, last year 355,000 bus. Clearances were 84,423 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was light. The July option opened ¼c higher at 92¾c and the market went upward steadily to 94c, which point it touched just before the close. The closing price was 93⅞c, an advance of 1¼c. The September option closed 1c higher at 87¾c.

Cash offerings were growing a little, though not yet large.

Flax was dull and unchanged in price throughout the morning.

Oats made an advance of ½c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Rains Bring Out a Commission House Demand.

Chicago, June 1.—Additional rains in Kansas and other sections of the Southwest brought out a general commission house demand for wheat today, resulting in a strong market. Offerings were light and prices advanced readily. July opened ⅛c lower to ¼c higher at 85¼c to 85⅝c and quickly sold up to 86c, where the price held firm. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 274 cars, against 129 cars last week and 263 cars a year ago.

The market increased in strength as the day advanced. A heavy decrease in the world's visible supply was the principal strengthening influence during the latter part of the session, although the decided strength of corn had an important bearing on the situation. After selling up to 87⅛c, July closed at 87@87¼c, a net gain for the day of 1¾c.

There was considerable demand for corn, due to the weekly weather bureau report claiming much corn was being replanted, and in consequence the market was strong. The firmness of wheat was an added bull factor. July opened unchanged to ¼c up, at 47¾c to 48c, and advanced gradually to 48c. Local receipts were 694 cars, with 113 of contract grade.

Reports of poor germination had a tendency to increase demand. The prices continued to advance and the market closed at the high point. Final figures on July were up 1⅞c at 49¾c.

Oats were affected by the strength of wheat and corn, holding firm at a fair advance. There was a good demand from pit traders with selling scattered. July opened a shade higher at 38⅜c and advanced to 39@39¼c. Local receipts were 267 cars.

The sharp advance in provisions yesterday brought out liberal realizing sales today, causing an easier tone throughout the entire list. July pork opened 7½@10c to 12½@15c lower, at $11.60 to $11.65, and sold off to $11.55. July lard was down 2½c, opening at $6.57½. A decline to $6.55 followed. Ribs were unchanged to 5c lower at $6.70 to $6.75. The price held within the opening range.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—The bulls had things all their own way in all the grain pits. Corn was followed later by wheat. The interest was more general and activity greater than for several weeks past. Shorts were made uneasy by the actions of yesterday, and nothing in the day's action tended to allay their anxiety. The markets all closed at approximately high figures. Broader markets will mean higher prices, and we are moderately bullish. Wheat gave the impression of being an oversold market. Those who supplied the wheat for the covering of the St. Louis line were nervous and easily frightened. The cash wheat was in demand and the June option ranged from ⅛c a bus higher. Duluth loaded out close to 1,000,000 bus for shipment to Buffalo. An all rail agreement effective July 1 promises material assistance to the miller and may possibly forward a speedy settlement of the lake strike. An all-rail rate is made meeting the lake and rail rate and millers will be able to move their stocks at lake ports and it is expected Northwestern mills will be run close to the full capacity. The 5,500,000 bus decrease in Bradstreet's compared with a decrease of 2,000,000 bus last year was unexpected and met an instant response. Rain was pretty general over both wheat belts and a few unfavorable reports were at hand. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

Corn—Shorts were as eager to cover at the opening as yesterday, and a reconsideration of the existing conditions had converted many bears over night. The buying was general and was compelled to by any one group of speculators. The weather was considered too cool for best growth. Statistics showed local stocks to have been cut in two since May, and big reductions were made at the principal outside points. Perhaps the most effective items were the various indications that the increased movement was over and the present rate would soon be cut. St. Louis and Kansas City followed the advance here. The cash market was surprisingly strong, ranging from ⅛c to 1½c higher. The situation depends largely on the weather. If the weekly report by the country will be the signal for bulls to unload. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 270 cars.

Oats—All options from the cash to the September future were strong, with the July the leader. Receipts were well under a year ago and estimated for tomorrow are less than 100 cars. The sample market was steady and the shipping demand much improved at higher prices. The tone of the other pits was a help. Cash oats are on a legitimate basis, but we have not much faith in the September, while crop conditions continue as promising as at present.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was a strong market throughout on light offerings. The firmness in corn gave it early strength and later the covering of shorts contributed to the upward movement. There is nothing new in the crop situation and advices are favorable except in southeast Europe. Foreign markets exhibit only dullness. Receipts continue to show an increasing tendency and today are somewhat in excess of a year ago. There is nothing in sight in the way of export demand and the cash markets are dul. The prevailing speculative sentiment, however, seems bullish. The small stocks of contract stuff are held off the market to moderate extent and the market is without any material selling pressure. Our advices are that harvesting will begin in the southwest in about ten days.

Corn—The firmness came largely from further rains in the west and southwest and from a bullish construction of the weekly government report. Further rains are also predicted for the corn belt. The talk also is that country offerings have dropped off to some extent. The shipping demand seems nowhere urgent. The market has been so universally oversold but the shorts have covered freely on the two days advance.

Oats—There was no great activity and the strength was in sympathy with the advance in corn and wheat. There has also been a unanimously bearish sentiment in oats and a good deal of short selling on the large acreage and the fine crop prospects.

Provisions—There was quite a change in the tone of the market from yesterday. The buying force seemed to have expended itself which rather indicates that it was largely in the way of covering shorts. Packers seemed disposed also to sell provisions on the hard spots. The shipments of meats were larger than last year. We would like to feel bullish but the property does not seem to be properly placed.

McQuiston, Chicago: The following is the total visible supply of wheat both in Canada and the United States. You will see that almost half of the visible supply of wheat is held in Minneapolis, which undoubtedly will be used there for milling purposes. Of the three and one-quarter millions of wheat in Duluth, over one-half of this amount has already been sold. Less Canada, Duluth and Minneapolis, we have about four and three-quarter million bushels for speculation and milling purposes in the East and Southwest. The tabic is:

PAPER MAKERS STRIKE.

Unexpected Break In Strained Relations at Appleton.

Milwaukee, June 1.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Appleton, Wis., says: Relations between paper mill employers and employes, which have been strained to the utmost, unexpectedly broke today.

The Combined Locks mill employes today refused to go to work. Other mills' employes are to follow before Saturday. Today's action was taken after a statement by the mill owners in which they asserted that two and one-half years of dealing through the union had proved to them that the union cannot be relied upon to carry out its contracts.

COULD NOT RIDE WHEEL, SO HE SHOT HIMSELF.

Cleveland, June 1.—William F. Curtis, a park policeman, shot himself today and later died at the hospital. Curtis was recently assigned to the police bicycle squadron. He could not ride a wheel, and it is supposed, fearing that he would lose his position, committed suicide. An hour after Curtis' death a letter was received at his home from police headquarters saying that his name would be continued on the roll.

North Dakota report: The past week was generally cool until the last two days, when there was a decided rise in temperature. Light showers fell in some sections, but as a general thing there was not enough rain to be of benefit. Wheat seeding is nearly completed; oats, millet and barley are nearly all sown; flax seeding is general in all sections, and is nearly half finished; corn planting is well advanced everywhere, and about completed in the southern and central portions. Early-sown grain, especially wheat, is up with a good stand, and the plant looks strong and healthy; late-sown grain is not coming up well; it is generally thin and quite uneven, and except in a very few sections would be greatly improved by rain, the top of the ground being too dry to germinate seed well. Farmers are getting a good start on low land, and in some plames are getting ahead of the grain. Early planted corn is up, but needs warmer weather for growth.

Minnesota report:

The weather was generally dry during the week in Northern portions, but farther South there were rains on the 24th and 25th, but unevenly distributed as to amount, the heaviest being in the Southeastern counties where the soil was thoroughly cooked and some corn fields were somewhat washed. In the early and middle portions of the week the temperatures were low for the season, the frost point being approached in many places on the morning of the 26th, but in the latter part of the week the temperatures were higher. In the Red River valley wheat and oat seeding is finished; a good deal of Barley has been seeded during the week, and flax, potatoes and fodder crops are being seeded. The early seeded wheat and oats are growing well, but are much needed for the late sown grains and for pastures and hay fields on the drier lands. In the Central and Southern portions wheat, oats and barley are growing well and stooling satisfactorily. Much of the early planted corn had insufficient vitality to withstand the coldness of the weather and soil, and considerable replanting is being done.

THE EARLY LOSSES

In Stocks Practically Made Up and the Close Steady.

Dealings Small and Dullness Ruled Most of the Day.

New York, June 1.—The stock market today opened with a dull and sagging tone. Linseed preferred dropped 5½, but the greatest decline in the active stocks was ⅜ in Missouri Pacific, Rock Island and Brooklyn Transit. Pennsylvania and Coppers were exceptions with small gains.

Low-priced stocks continued on their recent downward course on small offerings, causing sympathetic depression in the usual favorites. Colorado & Southern first preferred yielded 2 and the common, the second preferred, the Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, Kansas & Texas preferred, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and Locomotive 1 to 1½. The last named was sold on the announcement of the death of the president of the company. Continental Tobacco preferred rose 1½, and American Tobacco preferred 4.

The Eries showed a slight hardening tendency, which steadied the market somewhat, but prices did not recover to last night's level. Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis preferred dropped 2⅜. Consolidated Gas 1⅝ and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred and Pump about a point. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Recoveries in prices became more general after midday, and the forenoon losses in the prominent stocks were practically made up. Consolidated Gas rallied to 204 and Smelting and Realty preferred improved nearly a point. Reading was also quite firm. Hocking Valley fell 1¾. Dealing continued very small.

Sugar was brought into prominence and hardened 1⅝. D. & H. sold a point higher and Colorado & Southern second preferred recovered its opening loss. Chicago Union Traction preferred lost 1 and American Telephone and Telegraph advanced 1¾.

The United States Steel stocks reduced a sharp fraction and the general list was little changed: Chicago Union Traction rose ⅞ and Hocking Valley 1½. Hocking Coal fell 2¾, Virginia-Carolina Chemical 1¼ and Chicago Great Western preferred A. 1. The Detroit Southern fours sold at a decline of 35 from the preceding sale and the Southern division fours of the same company dropped 1. St. Louis Southwestern recovered its loss and Colorado & Southern first preferred rallied a point. Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred fell 1½. The closing was dull and about steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: No change and no news. There is not much selling pressure and very few stocks wanted. Yesterday's action, in view of the favorable bank statement, was a disappointment to the street, but this has not increased liquidation. Owing to the ruling prices of sterling exchange, further exports of gold seem likely. The tendency towards stagnation in general business and almost uniformly decreasing earnings of properties is a fundamental wet blanket. We hardly think a bull market is possible at this time.

• • •

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The outlook has improved somewhat recently and it is possible we may not get the break this summer that I predicted some weeks ago. At present the market is in a deadlock and I cannot see much chance of a pronounced movement immediately. We are due to get a moderate advance of 5 points or so, before the Republican convention. It may start from a slightly lower level, but I do not look for much break until after the convention. It looks like a narrow traders' market for the moment.

• • •

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: We think Wabash B's are a good investment for a long pull. We hear nothing new in regard to them. The decline in S. S. securities was partly caused on talk of friction among Gould interests.

• • •

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: Atchison declared 2½ per cent on preferred stock, regular semi-annual dividend payable August 1. Frisco declared regular quarterly 1 per cent dividend on 1st preferred, payable July 1. Lehigh Valley earnings quarter ending March 31, net decreased, $38,696, surplus, $36,231; decrease, $370.03.

Bar silver, 65c. Mexican dollars, 44½c. Government bonds, strong; railroad bonds, irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 1.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 4 to 5 points on the old crop while the new crop months were one point higher to 2 points lower. The advices were irresponsive to cables a shade better than expected and covering after the decline of yesterday while the new crop was depressed by the continued good weather over the South. Following the call the market was active and easier on renewed liquidation and bear pressure, with July in New Orleans leading the declining tendency which developed into a sharp break under stop loss orders with July selling down here to 12.15, a net decline of 34 points, while October reached 10.46, a loss of 13 points, after which there was a slight rally on covering.

Spot cotton closed quiet; 35 points lower; middling uplands, 12.40; middling gulf, 12.65; sales 1025 bales. Futures closed barely steady. June, 11.80; July, 11.96; August, 11.59; September, 11.79; October, 10.44; November, 10.34; December, 10.33; January, 10.34.

INDIAN EXHIBITS

At the World's Fair Are Formally Opened.

St. Louis, June 31.—The Indian government school exhibits were formally opened today. Fifteen hundred invitations were issued to exposition officials, foreign and state commissioners and officials of Indian government affairs, and an elaborate program of Indian games and sports was carried out under the direction of S. M. McComan and Ernest Mattoe. The games were played on the older Indians and were a delicating exposition of aboriginal sports. The school is now in full running order.

Covers for 250 guests were laid at the noon breakfast given at the New York building by Mrs. Norman E. Mack in honor of Miss Alice Roosevelt today. The breakfast was given in the large assembly hall and the decorations were green and white.

Frederick J. V. Skiff, director of the division of exhibits, has placed a ban on the sale of whisky at any issuing orders that no one employed by exhibitors or concessionaries will be allowed to work with his coat off.

LARGE GIFT

For Columbia University From Adolph Lewisohn.

New York, June 1.—A large sum of money will be donated in the near future to Columbia university by Adolph Lewisohn, the well known capitalist. The exact sum is not yet known but it has been learned that the fund is to be used for the education of those without opportunity to secure learning for which they have shown themselves fitted.

Mr. Lewisohn has been much interested in the efforts of the youths of the Hebrew quarters on the East side to gain education and it is said his gift is designed primarily to aid those of that section of the city, who have natural talent and have not had the opportunity to develop it. The gift, however, will not be made for the use of any one race.

NOT MUCH CHANGE

Vessel Situation Developes Little With Past 24 Hours.

Ore Boats to Move Soon —Slow In Grain Quarters.

No developments of special importance are reported locally today regarding the deadlock between the Masters' and Pilots' association and Carriers' association. The steamer Hawgood, with a "non-union" arrived in the local harbor this morning and proceeded to the Lehigh Valley dock in Superior, where she is now unloading her cargo of 7000 tons of coal.

Occasionally a telegram of encouragement is received from Cleveland at the Duluth headquarters of the Masters' and Pilots 'association, announcing that the different harbors along the lakes are standing pat. One this morning stated that Chicago still stood firm. Local members of the association are still strong in their assertions that everything looks favorable to their winning out. They are doing all in their power, without using force, to prevail upon captains from taking out boats belonging to the Carriers' association, and claim to be meeting with excellent success.

The local harbor has been notified that it has full power to dispose of the case of Capt. Craine, of the Saxona, for taking a boat out during the strike. His case is being heard today by a committee from the local harbor. It is expected that a moderate fine will be imposed.

The steamers J. H. Reed and D. G. Kerr, which were to have departed yesterday with wheat, have not yet sailed. The masters received word that there might be important developments today, and were asked to postpone sailing a day on that account. The local harbor claims that the captains will not take out the vessels until the trouble is satisfactorily adjusted, but there is reason to doubt that.

CONSIDER STATEMENTS.

Civic Federation Committee In Executive Session.

Cleveland, June 1.—The special committee of the Civic federation appointed to investigated the shipping deadlock, was in executive session here throughout the day. The time was devoted to considering the statements made yesterday by both sides to the controversy.

Judge J. G. Hutchinson, chairman of the committee, stated that there was nothing to be given out for publication.

No vessels belonging to the Lake Carriers' association cleared from this port today.

President Livingstone, of the Lake Carriers' association, has been called to Detroit, owing to the death of a relative.

ORE BOAT TO MOVE.

Shipper Gets Word That Cargo Will Go.

One of the leading ore producers of the Duluth district has received word that one of the vessels now at the head of the lakes will be ready to go down the lakes as soon as he gets his cargo aboard her. This is a special instance of an ore shipment under an agreement made last fall, and is not told as indicating the anxiety of ore men to ship, but as an instance of the strike being abandoned by at least one boat.

The ore in question was late on the docks last fall and the owner of it was anxious to get it stored somewhere where it would not freeze, and asked the vessel owner if, in his vessel, agreeing to stand for any necessary storage charges and finish making a cargo as soon as the lakes began to send ore down this season. He will now finish the cargo and the boat will leave, probably, within a day or two.

In this connection, the very fact of navigation being crippled has to some extent assisted ore owners. As a general proposition there is plenty of ore down below to run mills until September 1, if necessary, and the ore producers believe there will be more than enough boats to take down what might be needed after that time. But in the case of certain brands of ore left over last year by one contracting party who failed to pay for and take ore agreed on, these ores have been disposed of to others who happened to run short of these certain brands at much better prices than could have obtained when navigation was in normal condition.

Those who have had opportunities to sell ore contingent upon the breaking of the strike, are said in some instances to have declined to make a price owing to their fear of high freight rates when the boats begin to move. They cannot from the present situation tell on what sort of freight rates to base the selling price of ores.

Private advices from ore men in Cleveland are to the effect that they very soon expect the lake situation to clear.

LITTLE DOING IN GRAIN.

Shippers Claim Unsatisfactory Offers Are Made.

No charters have been made for grain within the past day or two as far as can be learned. The boats belonging to the Lake Carriers' association, will give no guaranty of time of sailing, because of the uncertainty they have as to getting men. It is easy to be seen that they cannot do it. They want about 3 cents a bushel for shipping wheat and shippers claim they cannot pay that without giving some definite date for delivery to the shipper.

The non-association boats or those not concerned in the fight can give a guaranty of sailing, but they want a high freight. One offer to take a small lot of grain at 4 cents was made today, but shippers claim they can sell no grain on a basis of a 4-cent rate to get it down the lakes.

OLD OWNER DIES.

Elias Cohen of Cleveland Well Known on Lakes.

Word has been received in Duluth of the death, at Cleveland, of Elias Cohen, at the age of 80 years. Mr. Cohen, well known along the lakes, particularly in marine circles, entered the vessel business in 1860, and his boat, "The Lady Franklin," was the first passenger steamer that crossed Lake Erie directly from Cleveland to Canada. In addition to this boat he owned several freighters which ran from Buffalo to Duluth. Mr. Cohen was in Duluth last summer, and has a number of warm friends here. The deceased was born in Germany, January 28, 1824, and went to Cleveland in 1846. Cleveland has since been his established place of residence.

A dispatch received from Detroit states that

BIG RUSH TO PAY

The Treasurer's Office Swamped By Crowd of Realty Taxpayers.

Larger Number Than Ever Pay Only Half of Amount.

Yesterday was the last day for the payment of the first half of the realty taxes for 1903, without the 10 per cent penalty attaching. In consequence, the county treasurer's office was crowded all day, people even standing in the halls awaiting their turn to pay taxes.

Deputy County Treasurer S. S. Williamson says that is is the first time in years that the office force has been completely swamped with people anxious to pay taxes, but such was the case yesterday.

No estimate has yet been made of the total amount paid into the county treasury, nor of the receipts of yesterday, but they are known to be very heavy, made up largely of small amounts.

Mr. Williamson says that by far the larger percentage of taxpayers are this year paying the first half year's taxes instead of the whole amount. The taxpayers, he says, are becoming better acquainted with the new system of tax paying and the idea of paying half their taxes at once is greatly in favor. It is claimed that the plan is resulting in the collection of a larger percentage of the taxes than under the old plan of collecting the whole of the realty tax at once.

It is said that some of the taxpayers, if they were called on to pay the whole tax at once, could not do so, and would become delinquent, whereas they have only to pay half the tax and can, usually, by making an extra effort, raise that amount when they could not pay the whole tax at once.

It will be weeks before the treasurer's office cleans up the tax receipts by mail. Every day during the past few weeks the mail containing tax certificates with checks in payment has been coming in on every train, and nothing has yet been done to look after the receipts. The office force has been busy looking after trose people who presented themselves with the tax payments.

The letters with their checks have been filed away as fast as received, and these will be taken up in their order, and the receipts forwarded by mail.

Although only the first half of the realty taxes becomes delinquent with yesterday, the taxpayer who has not paid up must stand the 10 per cent penalty on the total amount of the tax. There are always a few who either forget the last date for the payment of taxes without the penalty attached, or else they are unable to pay up at that time.

Not Right Office.

In the political matter which appeared in The Herald last Saturday it was made to appear that R. D. Haven's name was being pushed as a candidate for treasurer of St. Louis county, and in a card in yesterday's Herald Mr. Haven denied that he had any idea of going after the office now or at any future time.

The original matter published connected Mr. Haven's name with the wrong office, as it should have stated that he was being suggested by his friends for the nomination for sheriff.

MATTER OF TEMPER.

Albert Gustafson Not Anxious to Have Wife Divorced.

In the divorce case of Christina Gustafson against Albert Gustafson, which was on trial before Judge Dibell today, Gustafson, when questioned by the court as to whether he would be willing that his wife should have a decree of divorce if she would go away and leave him in undisputed possession of the farm, reluctantly admitted that he would be satisfied.

Even though he said he would be satisfied under those circumstances, Gustafson shortly afterward expressed a desire that his wife would come back and live with him, in fact, he was loath to give her up.

Mrs. Gustafson has charged bad treatment along with other things as grounds for a divorce and Gustafson admitted that he sometimes gets angry but he claims that it does not last long. He said that his wife had a habit of scolding him for nearly every thing he did and that was usually at the bottom of their family troubles. The case has not been settled.

RECORD OF PORT.

Small Amount of Business Done In May.

The report of the receipts and shipments in the Duluth harbor for the month of May, as compiled by Frank Spurbeck, deputy collector and inspector of customs, materially shows a very great falling off in port business as compared with May of last year. During the month just closed there were only 89 arrivals and 87 departures of lake vessels from Duluth, as compared to 302 arrivals and 309 clearances for May, 1903.

The coal receipts during the month just closed amounted to 4613 tons, as compared to 211,000 tons last year. Thus far this year no ore or grain has been shipped from Duluth. For May, 1903, the wheat shipments amounted to 654,000 bushels, and the ore shipments to 576,000 tons.

During the month just passed there were 19,856 barrels of salt received, 3879 tons of stone, 1040 barrels of cement and 8780 barrels of fish. The unclassified merchandise amounted to 545 tons.

There were shipped 6730 barrels of flour, 3,000,000 lath, 28,311,000 feet of lumber, 1000 barrels of lime, 5500 ties and 995 tons of unclassified merchandise. The lumber shipments last May amounted to 44,609,000 feet.

FREIGHT ON DOCKS.

Amount at Buffalo Enormous, Says E. Y. Slocum.

E. Y. Slocum, contracting agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, has returned from Buffalo, with Mrs. Slocum. The Bison City is Mr. Slocum's former home and he was called there by the illness of his mother, whom he reports is much improved.

"Everything was green when I left New York state," said Mr. Slocum, "and the country looked very attractive with the approaching summer, lending such a bright appearance to everything. But Buffalo is feeling the lake strike, and there is an air of quietness noticeable nearly everywhere in the city, especially around the shipping quarters.

"I was down on the docks there a day or so before I left and noticed the enormous tonnage of freight that is awaiting shipment. It does not come out by rail because the people think the strike is going to be over from day to day. The interested ones are holding meetings nearly every day to discuss the situation and are hoping that the lake traffic will soon be in full blast.

"It looks as though the fruit crop down in that country would be very good, for the trees are all in bloom and look very beautiful. The probability is that the grape crop will be good, especially in western New York, which is one of the best grape districts in the United States."

MICHIGAN DEMOCRATS.

Detroit, June 1.—Shotly before the openng today of the Democratic state convention to elect delegates to the national convention at St. Louis, it was stated by a prominent anti-Hearst leader that a canvass had been made of the counties with the result that 80 per cent of the delegates were found to be against instructions of the state delegation. The same tabulation showed, according to the informant, a predominating sentiment in favor of the unit rule and 75 per cent of the delegates to be anti-Hearst.

Lewis G. Stevenson, a Hearst leader in this state, stated on the other hand, that six of the twelve congressional districts were solidly in the Hearst column, and that there was little doubt of the Hearst people being able to carry another district, making seven for instructions for Hearst.

William F. McNight, of Grand Rapids, made the claim that the Hearst sympathizers would elect fourteen out of the twenty-four district delegates, and at least two of the four delegates-at-large—Charles R. Sligh, of Grand Rapids, and Rush Culver, of Marquette.

It was generally conceded that National Committeeman Daniel J. Campau, of Detroit, would be chosen one of the delegates-at-large, and that Chairman Thomas Barkworth of the state central committee would be another.

The convention was called to order in Light Guard Armory at noon by State Chairman Barkworth. He introduced Representative Lawton T. Hemens of Mason, Ingham county, as temporary chairman.

MAJ. EVA GETS MEDAL

Awarded One For Fifteen Years National Guard Service.

General orders issued from the office of Adjt. Gen. E. D. Libbey advise the awarding of a medal for fifteen years' faithful service in the National Guard of the state to Hubert V. Eva, major in the Third regiment. Maj. Eva's fifteen years of service ended on April 26.

James A. Monfort, signal officer of the naval reserve, has been awarded the rank of ensign.

Arrangements for the transportation of the local contingent of the National Guard to Lake City for the guard encampment are expected soon from St. Paul, and as soon as Adjt. Gen. Libbey issues the printed instructions, which are believed to be nearly ready, they will be posted in the Armory for the instruction of the members.

The encampment will be held on the edge of Lake Pepin, on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, one of the most beautiful spots in the state.

Companies A and C of the Third regiment, and the regimental band, will attend from Duluth, and are expected to start June 13, which is a week from next Monday. The encampment is slated to take place from June 14 to 24. The strength of the Duluth troops and band at the camp will probably be 150 men. In dull times it is possible to get more men from their ordinary civil duties for encampments, and if the lake strike is not soon out of the road, an unusual number of men may be able to attend.

It is impossible, however, to ever get the entire strength as there are some of the men who are never able to get away for the event, and some employers who will not grant leave.

Most of the inspections will take place here, and reports be made on these, but the competitive inspections of foot movements and other details will be taken at the field. This puts all competing organizations on an equal footing rather than on the local advantages of their individual armories, large and small, and permits the men to see one another's work.

NEBRASKA DEMOCRATS.

Omaha, Neb., June 1.—Nearly all of the 1059 delegates to the Democratic state convention arrived on the early morning trains and caucuses, district conventions and other ante-convention business began at once.

W. J. Bryan, to whom everybody looked as the central figure of the convention, did not arrive until noon, althought the Lancaster delegation came in earlier.

Former Supreme Court Justice Sullivan announced that his recent endorsement for the vice-presidential nomination by his party in Nebraska was unauthorized by him, and stated that he would be forced to withdraw his name if it were presented in the convention. The convention was hardly expected to divide on any question, the contest being for delegates at large, three of whom—Mr. Bryan himself, C. J. Smith of Omaha, and W. H. Thompson of Grand Island, the last Democratic candidate for governor—were practically settled upon before the convention was called to order. Former Congressman Shallenberger of the Sixth district announced his candidacy for district delegate, but stated that he was not in the field for delegate at large.

Up to the time of convening the fourth candidate at large had not been decided upon definitely.

The convention was called to order at 2 o'clock by Dr. Hall, of Lincoln, chairman of the state central committee. He made a brief address and introduced H. H. Hanks, of Nebraska City, as temporary chairman. Mr. Hanks in his address spoke in part as follows:

In all the history of the country there never was a time of greater need for the application of true Democratic principles; a time when the commercial spirit knows no bounds, a time when the Republican party is dazed and drunken with power, a time when the producer is robbed and the consumer feels the hand of oppression, a time when the doors of opportunity are being closed to individual enterprise, a time when a people are being led by party spirit to betray the vital principles of their government, a time when the people need protection and not the trusts, a time when Republican presidents feign prosecution of trusts, a time when a Roosevelt should be replaced by an Andrew Jackson, chosen from the ranks of the Democratic party, a time when the Democratic party should be brave enough to reaffirm the principles of the Kansas City platform.

Our government today does not exist as our forefathers had planned. The captains of industry, who corner the markets of the world, have been honored and praised by a Republican president, but has he had a word of tribute for the self-sacrificing producers of our country? I would sing the praises of the great army of people who both in time of war and peace will defend the basic principles of our government. I would sing the praises of the farmers, who raise the corn and the wheat and the vegetables and sell them at another man's price, and seldom possess a dishonest dollar.

There is no Lincoln Republican party in this state. The name of Lincoln has been dropped from the vocabulary of the Republican speaker, and is obsolete in the literature of the Republican party. The Republican party of Nebraska is of the railroad for the railroad, and by the railroad. Democracy must be the synonym for liberty, justice and equality, or the "Star Spangled Banner" will not continue " to wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave." President Roosevelt would prosecute one trust to fool the American people and leave the rest alone to hold the captains of industry. A secretary of state who worships at the shrine of a foreign aristocracy does not represent the sentiment of the American people.

"Trusts are a menace to individual prosperity. They stand as barriers across the pathway of progress. They destroy the opportunities of the young men of our country. They increase the wealth of the few and make dependent the masses of the people. Let the principles of Democracy be applied and the avenues of success will be open to all.

"A Democratic platform should mean something, and should handle the trust question openly and fearlessly. There should be no imitation of Republican platforms; no meaningless or vague planks, and the man looking for truth and something definite should find it in the St. Louis platform. Such a platform should demand the united support of our party and deserve the support of the Republicans who place the welfare of their country above party.

THE LOSS TO RUSSIANS IN THE KIN CHOU ENGAGEMENT SAID TO BE 830 KILLED OR WOUNDED

All the Guns Abandoned By Russians Were Rendered Useless.

Japanese Outposts Are Now Within Three Miles of Vifangow.

The Wijou Railway Will Be Finished to Ping Yang In December.

St. Petersburg, June 2.—A semi-official telegram from Mukden, dated today, says the Russian losses at the battle of Kin Chou May 26, were thirty officers and 800 men killed or wounded. The guns abandoned by the Russians were rendered useless.

Dashichae, (On the railroad between Hai Cheng and Kai Chou), Wednesday, June 1.—The Japanese outposts are now three miles from Vifangow. There is no news from Port Arthur. The Japanese are stopping Chinese runners and searching junks.

SHOULD RISK ENGAGEMENT.

St.Petersburg Believes That Kuropatkin Ought to Fight.

London, June 2.—No confirmation has yet been received of the reported heavy fighting near Port Arthur or with Kuropatkin's army, although the latter is not regarded as improbable. Rumors persist that court influence at St. Petersburg is being actively exercised to induce Gen. Kuropatkin to assume the offensive in an endeavor by a victory to retrieve the Russian military reputation.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent says: "A recent council of war decided that Kuropatkin should risk an engagement. The emperor ratified this judgment, even going so far as to authorize the dispatch of troops from the German frontier to the far East on the ground that as Germany was benevolent, she might be trusted safely. All hopes are centered now in Kuropatkin, who will make desperate efforts to save Port Arthur."

Against these statements must be placed the official contradiction communicated to the Associated Press and already cabled that Gen. Kuropatkin would move southward.

The correspondent of the Standard at Tokio announces that non-combatants are quitting Gensan owing to the incursions of small parties of Russians into Northwestern Korea. The situation there is not deemed a serious one.

The Morning Post's correspondent, in Vienna, learns that the Stabilinento Teonico, at Trieste, has engaged to deliver five armored cruisers to Russia, the first two within a year, the others subsequently at intervals of ten months.

THE WIJU RAILWAY

Will Be Finished to Ping Yang In December.

Seoul, Korea, June 2.—General Yamane, head of the construction department of the Wiju railway, has removed his main office to Chemulpo for convenience in the superintendence of the disembarkation and reshipment of materials to the various northern points where work is progressing. Grading has been finished for a distance of 25 miles from Seoul, with all necessary bridges constructed for 15 miles out. Tracks will be laid along this stretch of the road upon the completion of a long cutting near Yen Han which will enable the transport by rail of heavy timbers and materials instead of the present difficult method of carrying them in by bullock carts over rough roads. Work on the branch now under construction, north from Song Do, is progressing in a satisfactory manner and it is expected that Ping Yang will be reached by the beginning of December. The majority of the railway battalions, heretofore stationed in temporary barracks at Yung San will shortly be sent further north.

USED LANCES.

Russian Cossacks Speared Japs Through and Through.

Liao Yang, Monday, May 30.—(Delayed in Transmission).—The Japanese lost 200 killed and a number of horses in the fight at Vagenfuchu today. The Russians opened fire at 8 o'clock in the morning, and after two hours and a half long range firing the Japanese, under Gen. Akiama, prepared to charge and crush the force which had been harrassing them for twenty-one days. In the meantime, Gen. Samsonoff was approaching Vagenfuchu with a strong force of cavalry. It was a sight worth seeing when, at the word of command, the Russian squadrons formed and rushed like a whirlwind across the terribly cut up country, clearing away all obstacles, the batteries, at the same time, trotting along the frightful roads. Having passed the railroad station, the troops came under the fire of the Japanese machine guns, but withdrew without suffering much loss. The Fourth and Sixth companies of the Eighth Siberian Cossacks furiously charged the Japanese cavalry with lances, attacking both flanks.

In a few moments they literally cut the whole squadron into pieces. This was the first time lances were used, and they struck terror into the enemy. In some cases the lances pierced the riders through and wounded their horses. Some of the lances could not be withdrawn from the bodies into which they had entered. The Japanese infantry, numbering four battalions of 300 men to a company, and eight squadrons of cavalry, attempted to advance, but the Russian batteries opened, and soon the slope up which the enemy was advancing was covered with black spots, and the enemy was forced to scatter and retire. Some of the Japanese cavalry were wonderfully dashing, charging with shouts upon the Russians, who met and scattered them.

A Cossack who had lost his lance and sword wrenched a sword from a Japanese officer and cut off the officer's head.

The Cossacks picked up boots which had been taken off by the Japanese in order to facilitate their flight and flourished them on their lances as trophies. The Japanese used the Boer trick of displaying dummies, but the Cossacks did not waste a shot on them.

Gen. Samsonoff highly praised the practice of the Russian gunners.

GOURGO AT MUKDEN.

Mukden, Wednesday, June 1.—Lieut. Col. Gourgo has arrived here from Port Arthur after safely crossing the Japanese lines.

CRUISERS FOR RUSSIA.

New York, June 2.—Commenting on the report that the Stabilimento Tecnico, of Trieste, will shortly be commissioned by the Russian government to build five armored cruisers, each of 8000 tons displacement and having a speed of twenty-one knots, the Vienna correspondent of the London Times says it is argued that the building of the cruisers will not constitute a breach of neutrality on the part of Austria, since their guns and ammunition will be shipped in Russian ports. If the contract for the building of the vessels is signed, it will involve the sum of $12,500,000.

THE BODY OF A MAN FOUND IN MARSH BURNED TO A CRISP

Detectives Trying to Unravel a Mystery on Darby Creek Just Below Philadelphia In Which Man Was Murdered on Decoration Day.

Philadelphia, June 2.—Detectives of Delaware county and this city are working hard in an endeavor to unravel the mystery connected with the finding of the body of a man on Decoration day in the marsh, close to the banks of Darby creek. The place where the charred body was found is in a treacherous marsh, lying between the Delaware river and Darby creek, and is ten miles south of Philadelphia. On the banks of Darby creek are scores of boat houses, many of them being the rendezvous of dissolute men and women, who spend nearly every Sunday during the summer months in drinking and carousing.

Detective Berry of Delaware county does not believe the man was murdered where the body was found, but is of the opinion that he met death in one of the boat houses during a quarrel, and that the body was then carried into the marsh. It is evident an attempt had been made to destroy all evidences of identification by burning the body, and the murderer or murderers covered their tracks well.

Within a few hundred yards of the spot where the body was found is the farm house of William Horne. On the night of Sunday, May 23, a rope and two pieces of chain were stolen from Horne's barn. This chain was found close to the body of the murdered man. It had been fastened to fence posts by staples and, after close investigation, the detectives arrived at the conclusion that the man had become involved in a quarrel over a game of cards in one of the boat houses, and had been murdered; that his body was chained to the posts, saturated with oil, and then set on fire.

A two-gallon oil can, comparatively new, and which had been stolen from the Horne residence, was lying close to the charred trunk, which would seem to bear out this theory. Two suspender buckles, half of a hand and the toe of a shoe are the only means by which the detectives can hope to identify the murdered man. A report was current last night to the effect that the body of a woman had been found close to where the man's body was discovered, but the detectives have thus far been unable to locate the persons who, it is claimed, made the discovery.

NATIONAL HONOR

Is a Question Coming Within the Scope of Arbitration.

International Council to Enforce Laws May Be Reality.

Mohonk Lake, N. Y., June 2.—The second day's session of the arbitration conference was opened with an address by District Commissioner H. B. F. McFarland of Washington on the subject of an arbitration treaty with Great Britain and also with other nations.

Professor John Bassett Moore, of Columbia university, said he hoped that our arbitration treaties with other powers would be more comprehensive than the one recently concluded between France and Great Britain. Such a treaty between the United States and England would be in his judgment a step backward. He strongly objected to an exception being made of questions of national honor, as questions not coming within the scope of arbitration.

Referring to the decision of The Hague court in the Venezuelan case, the speaker said that as a lawyer, and in view of evidence submitted, he was unable to see how any other decision could have been rendered. The great need, he said, was for the creation of a system whereby force might be applied in such cases without a resort to war. The idea of an international council to enforce laws of nations might seem like a dream, the speaker said, but all great agencies for the betterment of humanity had existed first as dreams. The Hague court itself was only a vision a few years ago, but now it was a splendid reality.

Rev. Dr. Phillip Moxom said that one of the chief forces making for the abandonment of war was the growing sense of national kinship between all men of all races.

An appeal to the sense of justice was more effective than argument based on the cost of war. When the war passion is aroused men never stop to count the cost.

CRISIS TO COME SOON.

Soldiers Will Take Into Custody a Union Man.

Hanging Rock, O., June 2.—A crisis in the strike situation here will be reached soon. The soldiers will take into custody a union man and striker, who is said to be a leader of the forces which the troops have been sent here to quell. More drastic than this is an action under contemplation to place a number of men under guard. It was reported to Major Corn today that women of the village were jeering the soldiers and attempting to incite men to violence.

SHOT HIMSELF AND SET BED ON FIRE.

Cleveland, June 2.—August Schmitt, a prominent florist of Glenville, a suburb, 63 years old, while lying in bed last night, committed suicide by shooting through the head. The revolver's flash set the bedding on fire and it quickly fired the building. The fire was extinguished with much difficulty. Schmitt's body was badly burned.

A tornado struck ten miles southeast of Dodge City, doing heavy damage to farm property and crops. So far no casualties are reported.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN VICTIMIZED FOR $3000 ON ANCIENT GAME

Minneapolis, June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—F. C. Schuler, a capitalist of Minneapolis, was victimized to the tune of $3600 yesterday on a very ancient confidence game. He was on his way down town when accosted by a young man, who represented himself to be from the Northwestern National bank. The man said he had a couple of tickets in a lottery for the benefit of the old settlers and the holder of the lucky number would be given $3000.

Schuler, who is an old settler, became interested. The strange youth magnanimously handed the old man one of the tickets and told him to come with him to the place of drawing.

Without going into details when the darwing was made, Schuler was found, as a matter of course, to hold the fortunate paper.

Before the money could be paid over proof of his identity and financial integrity must be forthcoming. This would be easy. Schuler hurried off to the bank and brought back $3000 in crisp notes. The manager produced a like amount and all the money, $6000, was placed in a tin box, so Schuler thought. The box was given Schuler with instructions to hold it until 6 o'clock. Failing to appear at the appointed time, Schuler opened the box and found a penciled note, but no money. The note briefly related that Schuler was a fool and that if he did not want to be regarded as the laughing stock he was to hold his tongue.

CHIEFS APPEAL TO BANDIT RAISULI

Tangier, Morocco, June 2.—The Italian third class cruiser, Dogali, arrived here today.

A delegation of chiefs of the Angerra tribe has left here to make a personal appeal to Raisuli, the bandit chief, to release Messrs. Perdicaris and Varley, "in order to prevent the debarkment and permanent occupation of Morocco by foreigners opposing the Mosiem faith and the expulsion of native Mohammedans."

This mission is considered important, as the Mohammedan chiefs unite in appealing to Raisuli not to endanger their religious supremacy in Morocco. The French government relies much upon the appeal to Mohammedan sentiment.

The natives are greatly excited by the arrival of so many foreign warships. They call foreigners "Roumis," meaning infidels, and they fear the "Roumis" are about to make a united effort to drive out those who are of the Mohammedan faith.

Rear Admiral Jewell, and United States Consul General Gummere visited the representative of the sultan, Mohammed El Torres, at noon and was saluted by the town battery. Mohammed returned the visit of the consul, the flagship Olympia firing a salute in his honor.

Admiral Jewell subsequently called on the British minister.

CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR AT THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION RELEASE THEIR FOLLOWERS

A SOLDIER SHOT

Was Attempting to Get Away From Fort Snelling.

Tried to Throw Guard Over Bridge, Who Shot Him.

Minneapolis, June 2.—Two military prisoners at Fort Snelling this morning, made an attempt to escape and one of them, a military convict, Wisch, was shot dead by Private Kennedy, Twenty-first infantry. Wisch is an incorrigible, who has seven times been convicted of violation of the rules. He belongs to the Thirtieth battery of field artillery. Along with Private Reilly, who is awaiting trial for desertion, he was employed in cleaning up the grounds, under charge of Kennedy. Suddenly the pair attacked Kennedy, who succeeded in beating them off. They then broke for liberty.

The dead man's name was Tony G. Wisch. He, with Reilly, had escaped from the sentinels while at work and had crossed the bridge leading to St. Paul. Reilly was retaken and led the way to a saloon, where Wisch was found. The party started back across the bridge to the fort and when in the center the prisoners tried to throw Kennedy over the railing into the river below. He thereupon shot Wisch, who lived but two minutes. Reilly belonged to the Nineteenth infantry.

IS MERELY A DEGENERATE

St. Louis Man Who Wanted to Kill Chicago Officials.

Chicago, June 2.—Abel Gabiniska, under arrest as an anarchistic plotter, with designs against the lives of Mayor Harrison, Honore Palmer and other notables, was today declared by Police Inspector Shippy to be merely a half-crazed junk dealer from St. Louis. The prisoner, unkempt, under-sized and apparently half-witted, was given a searching examination by the inspector. As a result the inspector said Gabiniska would be sent to the detention hospital for mental examination. "He's no anarchist," said the inspector. "He's probably a degenerate. I am satisfied that he was not sent by any society or order to kill the mayor or anyone else. The fellow acts like an idiot."

According to Inspector Shippy, the prisoner was born in Bielostow, Poland, and came to this country four years ago. Some scrawling, impossible to decipher, was found on the back of a letter which is written in Yiddish. The letter is from the man's mother. The police said the scrawling bears no resemblance to Mayor Harrison's name.

REJECTED SUITOR

Shoots Girl at Chicago and Then Himself.

Chicago, June 2.—With a pistol Frank Sessler, a rejected suitor shot himself and Miss Estella Roney, daughter of the assistant superintendent of the South Chicago Ship yards. The girl fell unconscious in the street. Sessler hurried around a corner and fired a bullet into his head, inflicting a fatal wound. Miss Roney will recover.

SELLING STOLEN GOODS.

Michael Donovan Had Many In Chicago Store.

Chicago, June 2.—In the arrest of Michael Donovan, the police believe they have begun the disruption of an organized band of car thieves whose depredations in recent years have cost the railroads nearly $1,000,000.

The police say that while questioning the man's wife she told them that her husband, who is a property owner and considered wealthy by his neighbors, was selling only stolen goods in a big store which he had been operating for a number of years.

When Donovan was arrested and held for investigation of his wife's story, the police say that in the presence of railroad detectives he confessed to having received stolen goods from the car thieves during the last fifteen years.

RESULT OF TIE-UP.

Iroquois Furnace at South Chicago Shuts Down.

Chicago, June 2.—Iroquis furnace at South Chicago has shut down, throwing more than 600 men out of work. The closing of the plant is the direct result of the tieing up of the boats. The company manufactures pig iron and for some time has been unable to get any raw iron ore. As soon as the stock on hand was exhausted the plant was forced to suspend operations.

Action Was Reported Unanimously By Resolutions Committee.

Was Endorsed By Convention After Candidates' Speeches.

Sixty-Seventh and Eighth Ballots Show But Little Change.

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—Before the Republican state convention met today, an agreement was reached by adherents of Governor Yates and Charles Deneen not to oppose a pending resolution releasing delegates from instructions. It was generally assumed that the result would be the adoption of the resolution by the convention.

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—On motion of C. J. Doyle, Yates representative, the committee on resolutions, by unanimous vote, ordered reported favorably the Stewart resolution releasing the delegates from their instructions.

JAMES GAYLEY PERFECTS NEW PROCESS FOR MAKING STEEL

New York, June 2.—Steel and iron men throughout the world will be interested to learn, according to the Herald, that James Gayley, vice president of the United States Steel corporation, after a long series of experiments, has practically perfected a new process for making steel, which he believes will greatly reduce the cost of manufacture.

For years Mr. Gayley has been working upon the process and has now informed his friends that his experiments conducted at the Isabella furnaces, in the Pittsburg district, have indicated that the new method will prove a practical success. It is understood that they have resulted in reducing the moisture of the air applied in the converting of the ore to pig iron and steel. Other new features have also been introduced. Briefly stated, the Gayley process is a modification of the Bessemer process, which revolutionized the iron and steel industry. The process will be applied in the manufacture of pig iron as well as steel. It is understood the process will greatly cheapen the cost of production.

SULLY LOSES HIS SEAT IN CHURCH

New York, June 2.—An unexpected echo has been heard of the Sully failure. It arose over a pew in St. Bartholomew's church, which was bought some time before the collapse of his firm. The deed for the pew reached his office after the receivers took charge and fell into the hands of these officials. Finally, Mr. Sully made inquiries and demanded the document, which he said was exempt. The receivers retained it, however, until advice could be secured as to whether the pew was an asset of the cotton merchant. Upon the advice of their counsel the deed has been held among the assets, pending the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy. Mr. Sully complained bitterly over the action.

MONEY SAVED

There are several ways of making money. One is by speculation, pure and simple, another by grasping opportunities, but the best way is by saving 50c every day, if your income is $2.00. We believe that it is better business to sell a man a piano and then help him save to pay for it, than it is to sell him one and have our collection department working overtime to get the monthly payments.

HOW THE CLOCK SAVINGS BANK HELPS

You know that there is not a day passes but what each member of your family spends some money carelessly for something they do not really need. Supposing that each penny, nickel or dime had been dropped into one of our Clock Savings Banks, do you not see how quickly you would have enough to make your first payment on a piano? Is it not worth trying? Come in and get a Clock Bank—they are FREE!

The report was given by Miss Mary Shannon who was in attendance at the convention. Mrs. H. C. Helm, president of the society, presided at the meeting.

WOMEN'S WORK.

Should Do Something Different From Others.

In the hasty scramble among women for something to do, the most important considerations are often forgotten. The woman who secures employment must be able to do some one thing better than most women, and her method of doing must be new and original. Let a woman remember that it is in the untrodden fields that flowers grow; if she climbs the fence first she may gather the most fragrant of the blossoms.

But women do not remember this. A young woman finds that she must suddenly become self-supporting; she looks about to see what other girls are doing. Because there are hundreds of girls engaged at stenography, that occupation is one good reason why she should not attempt to enter it. There is little chance for a woman in a profession already full.

Let the woman who is searching for a position look nearer to herself. What is she fitted for? What has she done in her own home, in better days, that was pleasant to those about her? Surely in her home there was some little duty in the perfomance of which she excelled.

Can she darn stockings, sew on buttons, care for the clean laundry? Can she mend nicely?If so, she need not look further. She is prepared for this work. Why borrow money to go to business college? Can she embroider dainty initials. Then she can find scores of handkerchiefs to embroider, and many women wish their initial upon every garment. Is she original in planning parties, especially for children? There is a great demand for women who are skilled in arranging something new, novel and entertaining for small children, large children and grown-ups.

Perhaps this woman, who was more fortunate, can pack trunks daintily and well. Could she not secure permission from the manager of some large hotel, frequented by wealthy travelers, to send out cards among his patrons There are hundreds of women who hate trunk-packing as they hate toothache.

Some young women have a natural talent for hanging pictures and for rearranging furniture to make it look like new. There are hundreds of women in all large cities who would not only willingly but gladly pay well to have their homes occasionally rejuvenated.

Caterers are extravagant luxuries. Women who have turned luncheons or dinners over into their hands have been shocked to find everything done just like a neighbor's luncheon. Those hostesses and hundreds of others would be glad to pay a clever, original woman twice what they paid the caterer if they could find a woman who could plan the function with careful regard to originality and harmony to details, which most caterers hold in contempt.

If it is necessary to earn one's own living it cannot be done successfully where the ranks are filled. But a woman with an idea can make that idea pay her. Something new, something original, something unique is the cry of the society woman of today. The self-supporting woman who can meet this demand has made her fortune. Get out of the beaten paths, enter new fields, and quick recognition will meet the efforts. But whatever she does, the woman must herself be convinced of the worth of her ideas, and must not be afraid to tell others that they are worth while. Then when she gets the opportunity of demonstrating her originality she must be careful to live up to the reputation which she gave herself. Up to the reputation and even beyond if she would succeed.

One In Every Seven.

More people are troubled with weak kidneys than any other form of disease. Doctors say that one person in every seven is thus afflicted.

The kidneys are the sewers of the system. In the summer they are subjected to the greatest strain—have the most work to do. When they are unsound the waste matter which they should carry off remains in the body to shatter the health, dull the brain and weaken the nerves.

There never was but one way by which the kidneys could be kept in good working order—that is by the use of Warner's Safe Cure.

Ask for it—Warner's Safe Cure—at all drug stores.

THE EVENING STORY.

CIRCLE G. AND CIRCLE J.

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Seth Hopkins, master of the bay schooner Alert, stooped, meditatively, over two boxes on either side of him.

"The one on the left to Parson George the Manunky riverd the skipper called Pete, the deck hand, aft.

"How are these two boxes marked, Pete?" he asked.

"Carcle G an' carcle J," replied Pete, who could read.

"Good; now borrow a wheelbarrow from the store and take the box marked circle J to Deacon Jobe's. Tell him I sent it. Then go on up the road and take the other box to Parson George's, and tell him I sent it. See you don't get 'em mixed."

"Yessah."

It was about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and the skipper was looking for Pete's return, when Deacon Jobe drove up to the landing in his gig, and that lean and mortified-looking gentleman climbed over the rail of the Alert. Disappointment was proclaimed in every wrinkle in his face, and there were many of them.

"Seth," he said, sourly, "I guess you've made a mistake in my box."

"I hope not," said the skipper, anxiously.

"Thar warn't no bottle of hoss med'cine I told you to get," snarled the deacon, "but this hyar thing was thar," and he held up to view a somewhat warmly-tinted pair of pajajmas.

If the deacon had not been so sorely put out over his hoss med'cine he would have probably rebuked the captain for his remarks when he beheld the sleeping garment waving before his eyes.

"It's that blasted nigger," roared the skipper. "By Gum, deacon, the parson has got your box."

The wrinkles in the deacon's face now expressed alarm.

"I wouldn't have 'im smell that thar bottle for all the county," he groaned "It'll ruin me."

"And I wouldn't have him know I was smuggling whisky to his deacon for the Alert and her cargo," snapped the skipper. "It's an awful mess."

The county was local option and no liquors were allowed brought into it. The chief advocate of this temperance measure was Rev. Mr. George, ably seconded by Deacon Jobe, and as Capt. Hopkins had hopes of the parson consenting to his union with his daughter Annie, he felt that the discovery of his treachery in smuggling whisky to his trusted coadjutor must inevitably blast his hopes forever and aye.

"What's to be done?" asked the deacon, swallowing with difficulty.

"Why," said the skipper, "there's only one chance, and that's a tight one. You've got the box with you; put in the pajamy and nail 'er up. Then we'll drive as fast as we can to the parson's and try exchange boxes before he's opened his. The nigger is just about there now."

To the skipper's consternation the box was rightly marked:

"It's my mistake," said he, with forcible adjectives. "I marked 'em wrong."

The gig flew over the road, the two occupants too absorbed to talk, and when the parson's house was reached, finding the porch deserted, Capt. Hopkins slid the box under a chair, preparatory to slipping it into the house and making a quick exchange if the parson had not inspected his package.

Miss Annie opened the door and informed them that her father had been absent all day visiting his sheepfold and had not returned.

"A box just came for him from you, captain," she said; "You are very kind."

"I suppose you haven't opened it yet?" remarked the skipper, with labored carelessness.

"No; it's in the dining room," replied the young lady.

"You attract her attention," said the skipper in a fierce whisper to the deacon, "and I'll try to slip in with the box and get the other one."

This was self-sacrifice on the captain's part, for he was gritting his teeth at the wasted chance of a half hour alone with his sweetheart, but the emergency was great.

The deacon, racking his mind for a subject, gazed stonily at Miss George while the skipper glowered at him.

Spurred by these baleful glances, the deacon began a rambling discourse about church matters, crops, cattle and oysters, in a melange, while Miss Annie looked in evident wonder at her sweetheart, standing silent and perturbed.

Finally Miss Annie suggested the deacon's examination of a favorite rose, and they walked down the porch. Instantly the skipper snatched up the fateful box and rushed into the dining room. The room was dark, but he could discern the other box on the floor, and was just about to seize it when he heard the two returning to the front door.

He rushed out on the porch, appearing not unlike a burglar interrupted at his calling, and scowled horribly at the miserable deacon.

Miss Annie, turning her back on her recreant lover, invited the deacon to have a glassful of milk.

At that moment the deacon's palate did not crave milk, but the fiery shaft from the skipper's eye made him assent at once.

Miss Annie walked through the dining room to the pantry, followed by the deacon, and he, stealthily, by the skipper. No sooner had the young lady disappeared in the pantry than the skipper snatched up the box and flew through the hall to the gig, barely escaping Miss Annie, who was returning with the milk. The deacon swallowed a pint of milk, hastened after him, and with a hurried farewell the two conspirators drove away, leaving a very indignant lady behind.

"Now," said the deacon, when they had reached his house, "I'll give my hoss a dose of med'cine."

"Seth," wailed the deacon, "you've brought back the same box. Hyar's that thar pesky garment."

"By Gum," groaned the skipper, "it was so dark and I was in such a hurry I picked up the same box I brought."

"Ef he smells it I'm ruined," moaned the deacon.

"Oh, he'll smell it, and he'll smell a hypocrite, too," assented the skipper; "but it kills my chances."

"Best Maryland rye," lamented the deacon, "emptied on the cold, unfeeling clay."

"Best girl on the eastern shore lost by your blessed love o' whisky," growled the skipper.

Morosely the deacon drove the captain back to his schooner, and sleepless was the mariner's night. Unavailingly he threshed over every chance for explanation, with only chaff as a result, and went on deck in the morning sulky as a hungry bear. At noon a letter was brought him.

"Capt. Hopkins: Rev. George asks me to thank you for your present of a pair of pajamas, and will much appreciate them this winter. It seems odd that the giver of a present should find it necessary to act like a wild animal.

"ANNIE GEORGE."

"Did anyone ever see such a knot?" gasped the mystified skipper.

"Lettah, sah," said Pete, bringing another epistle to the cabin.

The captain read: "Dear Captain: By an oversight the bottle of 'medicine' was left out of Deacon Jobe's package and a pair of pajamas packed instead. We have forwarded the bottle securely packed by express, and apologize for our mistake.

"BUNDLE & BALES."

"Pete," vociferated the skipper, "borrow Mr. Gile's gig. I'm going to drive over to Parson George's this afternoon."

MANY MEN IDLE.

Winnipeg Overrun By Laborers From the East.

Winnipeg, Man., June 2.—"The way the immigration department and the Manufacturers' association are bringing skilled mechanics to this country is a disgrace," said a prominent member of the Trades and Labor council today.

"We estimate that there are at least five men for every job in Winnipeg today. By deceiving literature with which Great Britain is flooded, mechanics are induced to throw up good jobs there and come to the Canadian northwest.

"There are thousands of men unemployed walking the streets of Winnipeg with small chance of getting employment. Bricklayers, plumbers and printers are most numerous.

"Every train from the east brings in a number of skilled workmen despite the fact that there is no work for those now here."

Many of these new comers will have a hard time, as but few of them have money and are unaccustomed to the country.

WILL TALK SITE

County Board Meeting Tuesday Will Have Citizens Present.

Will Urge Upon Board New Location For Courthouse.

Next Tuesday the June meeting of the board of county commissioners will be held and a great deal of interest will center in it, from the fact that committees representing commercial and professional organizations are to meet with the commissioners and urge the selection for the new court house that will be nearer the business part of the city.

A committee representing the local members of the bar and another from the West Duluth Commercial club have already been selected to confer with the commissioners and it is likely that there will be with these several business men who will make a plea individually for the selection of another courthouse site.

The courthouse question will be one of the most important to come up at the meeting and many of those interested, outside of the committees are expected to be present.

Whther the board will take any action toward fixing the definite location of the new courthouse at the meeting of this month is rather doubtful. The general impression is that the commissioners have already fixed on the old courthouse site by directing the county attorney to begin condemnation proceedings, but some of the members of the board claim such is not the case. They say that such steps as have already been taken were for the purpose of getting an expression of public sentiment as to the proper location for the new building.

The apportionment of the county road fund will also be made at the meeting. The division of the fund by road districts is usually made earlier in the season, but one of the commissioners was absent at the May meeting and the matter was put over for a month.

There is usually a warm, though friendly contest on between the commissioners to get as large a slice as possible of the road appropriation for their respective districts and it will be so this time especially as the amount that will be available is about a quarter or a third as large as the county really needs for the improvement of its old roads and for the construction of new ones.

FRAUD LAID AT BANKER'S DOOR

Contest Is Started at Fort Benton For an Estate.

Fort Benton, Mon., June 2.—Sensational charges of fraud and undue influence upon an aged man of unsound mind by a San Francisco banker were filed in the district court by attorneys representing Mrs. Charles N. Pray, of Fort Benton, and W. J. Mosselhelder, of San Diego, Cal.

A few months ago G. F. Deletraz, an old-time resident of Fort Benton, died in California, leaving a will dated Nov. 7, 1903, by which he left his estate, valued at about $10,000, to Mrs. Pray, and named Mosselhelder as executor. The will was filed for probate at Fort Benton, and later A. Ruef, a lawyer, of San Francisco, filed a protest and contest, accompanied by an instrument, dated Jan. 8 last, which he represented to be the last will. This purports to revoke the November will and to leave the entire estate to Louis Michau, a San Francisco banker.

In the document just filed in an answer to the Ruef protest, it is charged that Deletraz was of unsound mind on Jan. 8 last, and for many months before. It is alleged that Michau was an utter stranger to Deletraz, and that Lawyer Ruef was also a stranger to him.

It is further charged that Ruef and Michau falsely represented to Deletraz that it was necessary for him to sign the instrument they presented to him, which, it is asserted, is the document represented to be the January will. It is contended that Deletraz was wholly ignorant of the nature of the instrument that he signed.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Clifton Springs, N. Y., June 2.—The first hour of today's session of the International Missionary union was given up to a memorial service for members who died during the last year. The second hour was devoted to a devotional and praise service after which came the election of officers and organization of committees.

WHY IT IS SO.

When it is known that its power to strengthen the system and build up the body is why Father John's Medicine cures colds and all throat and lung troubles, it will be understood why it is so valuable as a tonic and for driving the impurities out of the blood. It feeds the tissues and makes strength. All disease is due to a run down condition of the body, unhealthy tissue, blood poisoned with impurities, and general weakness. While we recommend Father John's Medicine for a number of ailments—in the cure of which it has always been successful, as those who endorse it tell you—you must understand and remember that all these ills are of the same kindred or family; that they all come from the same source or cause, as stated above. The principle of this medicine is simple. It furnishes the food that the body requires, and strengthens each organ so that it can do its work—that is, how the system is cleared of the impurities and poisonous waste matter; and it supplies bodily warmth and vitality. Its ingredients are the same kind of food and nourishment that blood and tissue are made of—pure and wholesome. Father John's Medicine is for sale by L. W. Leithhead Drug Co., Duluth.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION— PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

MRS. EVA BARTHO, 133 East 12th St., New York City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am today in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Mrs. Senator Roach, of Larimore, N. Dak.; Mrs. Senator Warren, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Belva Lockwood and Mrs. General Longstreet, of Washington, D. C., are among the prominent ladies who indorse Peruna.

Miss Helen Rolof, Kaukauna, Wis., writes:

"Several times during the past two years or more my system has been greatly in need of a tonic, and at those times Peruna has been of great help in building up the system, restoring my appetite and securing restful sleep."—Helen Rolof.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman today."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Miss Lucy M. Riley, 33 Davenport St., Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

"I wish to add my indorsement to thousands of other women who have been cured through the use of Peruna. I suffered for five years with severe backache, and when weary or worried in the least I had prolonged headache. I am now in perfect health, enjoy life and have neither an ache nor pain, thanks to Peruna."—Lucy M. Riley.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Bits of Iron Are Thrown About From Smashed Engine.

Escanaba—The two hundred horsepower engine of the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company's plant at Escanaba "went through itself" the other morning, breaking several of the castings about the engine and throwing bits of iron in all directions. Although there were several employes near the engine at the time and many had narrow escapes, no one was injured. Because of the damage the plant has been shut down and it is thought it will require a week to make repairs so that work can be resumed. The accident is supposed to have been caused by a defective casting, and coming suddenly, without a hint of the impending danger, the swinging piston, as it was driven back and forth before the steam could be turned off, threatened everything that came in its path.

Menominee—A gang of 100 Italian laborers has arrived by boat at Menominee. This is the first of a large force which will be brought north to work on the railroads and streets. The Wisconsin & Michigan road will employ several hundred on the extension from Nathan to the Holmes headquarters, and the Bird & Wells Lumber company will employ a like number in building an extension of its logging road from Phillips to the Peshtigo river. Contractor John Cox Jones will use some Italians on the streets in Menominee, while John Striffler will employ a number in Marinette.

Dntonagon — John Jamison, of Ontonagon county is dead, the result of a peculiar accident. He was riding on the reach of a lumber wagon from town to his homestead out on the Norwich road. In going down a pitch the horses started on a trot and Jamison lost his balance and fell forward. He put out his right hand to check the fall and clutched onto a spoke, which jammed his elbow back against the bolster, breaking his arm in four places. The bones in his hand were crushed and disarranged, a number of them protruding through the flesh. Amputation at the shoulder was necessary, but the wounded man did not rally and died two days later. He was 74 years old.

Munising—When ex-Marshal J. T. Thornton, of Munising, retired the other evening he hung his vest on a chair in the sitting room. In one of the pockets was a pocketbook containing $92 in currency and some valuable papers. When he arose the next morning, vest, money and all were missing. There is no suspicion as to who the thief is, although Mr. Thornton's daughter is positive she saw a man in the house shortly before the family, who had been out during the evening, retired. At that time, however, a search of the house proved unsuccessful in locating an intruder, who is now believed to have found a hiding place off Mr. Thornton's bedroom.

Sault Ste. Marie—The case of Bartley McElvoy vs. the city of Sault Ste. Marie is on trial in the Chippewa circuit court. The plaintiff sues for $5000 for alleged injuries in being thrown from a rig that struck a stone in the street. The city officials claim the people should not be made to pay this amount of money, because, they allege, the occupants of the rig were careless in their driving, and it was through no fault of the city that the accident happened. The court is having hard work holding jurymen at the present time. A large number are farmers, and whenever the sun begins to shine they want to go home and get to work. They are contented as long as it rains.

F. H. Clergue says two industries to use 5000 horse power from the big Michigan canal will be erected this summer. The resumption of work in all the plants and allied industries is expected in a few days.

Manistique—A trip to St. Louis by gasoline launch will be made this summer by William Bebeau and wife, of this city. The craft has been especially fitted for the voyage, which will begin early in June.

THE WOMAN HE BURIED

Was Not His Wife and Valente Sues the Hospital.

New York, June 2.—Ignacio Valento, of 301 East Forty-fifth street, is seeking through the courts to recover $250 he spent in burying and holding fitting funeral services over the body of a woman he believed to be his wife. His misconception was due to the error of the officers of the Metropolitan hospital. He sued the city to recover the money, and Justice Joseph, while holding that his claim was good, decided that as the hospital was a state institution, the state and not the city must be the defendant in the action.

The most remarkable feature of the strange episode revealed in the suit is that while Valento, his friends and relatives were attending the funeral services of the supposed Mrs. Valento, she was weeping bitterly in the hospital over her husband's neglect in not calling upon her and sending her the little delicacies she craved.

Mrs. Conchetta Valento became ill last June and was taken to the Metropolitan hospital. She was in a serious condition, hovering between life and death for many weeks. Her husband was a constant caller at the hospital, though he was rarely allowed to see the sick woman, because of her dangerous condition.

Just as he was about to start for the hospital, Aug. 2, he received a printed notice, signed by Superintendent E. P. Merwin of the institution, notifying him that his wife had died at the hospital, and requesting that he make arrangements for the burial of her body.

He found on calling at the hospital that the body had been taken to the morgue. He went there, but was not permitted to see the body, and when the official red tape involving the removal of the body to a burial place had been unwound, he still had not viewed the remains of what he believed was his dead wife.

A few days after the burial had taken place, and the husband and near relatives of Mrs. Valento had put on mourning, the grief-stricken man was shocked when a man he met on the street charged him with neglecting his wife.

"It is a shame that you do not go and see your wife at the hospital," said the friend.

"What?" asked the astonished "widower."

"I say that it is an outrage that you neglect your wife so, just as she is recovering from a dangerous illness."

"My wife is dead," stuttered the amazed man.

"She is not dead," advised the friend. "I saw her in the hospital yesterday, and she was weeping bitterly over your neglect. She said you had not been near the hospital even to inquire after her for a week."

Valento then hurried to the hospital and found that the statement was true. His wife had passed the crisis and was making rapid strides toward recovery. In a few days she was well enough to be taken to her home.

A TICKLISH POSITION,

That of Ambassador McCormick at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, June 2—Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States embassy here, has gone to Paris on a three-weeks' visit to his mother, who recently recovered from a severe illness. Shortly after his return, if the conditions permit, Ambassador McCormick and Mrs. McCormick will go to Carlsbad for a month's sojourn. The ambassador is greatly in need of rest. For many months preceding the outbreak of war he had the greatest responsibility on his shoulders, and since the opening of hostilities he has had the double duty of representing the interests of both the United States and Japan. This has been a specially delicate task, in consequence of the irritation here against America immediately following the outbreak of war, but which fortunately has been allayed, largely through the ambassador's unremitting efforts. At the same time, the excellent relations the ambassador enjoys with the emperor's ministers have enabled him to act in behalf of Japan without creating friction. Upon the ambassador's return to St. Petersburg, Mrs. McCormick will probably proceed to America.

Excess fat is a disease. It is caused by imperfect assimilation of food. My new Obesity Food, taken at mealtime, compels perfect assimilation of the food and sends the food nutriment where it belongs. It requires no dieting or starvation process. You can eat all you want. It makes muscle, bone, sinew, nerve and brain tissue out of excess fat, and quickly reduces your weight to normal. It takes off the big stomach and relieves the compressed condition and enables the heart to act freely and the lungs to expand naturally and the kidneys and liver to perform their functions in a natural manner.

No dieting, exercise or exertion is necessary. My natural, scientific Obesity Food does all the work. You will feel a hundred times better the first day you try this wonderful home food.

Mr. Arthur K. Wallace, of Abingdon, who tried this treatment says: "The effect of your food for reducing flesh is one that I can sincerely commend to 'fat' people. I weighed 302, couldn't get up a flight of stairs without blowing like a porpoise, was miserable from morn till night and might have dropped dead any minute. I used your food diligently for seven days and was thunderstruck to find that I could breathe naturally; in fourteen days I tipped the scales at 287; in thirty days I weighed 269; in eight weeks was reduced to 212 pounds, which Dr. Jones, my physician, said was normal. I am six feet two high and of large frame, and first down nearly 100 pounds is remarkable. Dr. Jones says you are a genius; I say you are the wonder of the age, and I heartily endorse your treatment as the best life-saving device ever invented. Am glad to write you, and will try to be of as much service to you as you have to me."

FLOODWOOD DEVELOPING

To Have Bank and Buildings Are Increasing Rapidly.

The village of Floodwood, St. Louis county, is fast assuming metropolitan airs.

The latest business institution to be started in the village is a bank, to be known as the First State Bank of Floodwood, with a capitalization of $10,000, and incorporated under the state laws by M. H. Schussler, of Floodwood, R. M. Weyerhaueser and Frank B. Poole, of Cloquet, G. H. Prince, of St. Paul; J. B. Mayer, of Floodwood, and C. L. Dixon, of Cloquet. Messrs. Weyerhaueser, Prince, Mayer and Dixon possess 20 shares each of the capital stock while the others own each ten shares of the remaining stock. The articles of incorporation call for an increase of the capital from time to time to an amount not exceeding $25,000.

The bank will open its doors for business some time between June 15 and 20 with J. B. Mayer as cashier. Most of the men financing the new banking institution are stockholders in the First National bank at Cloquet, Minn.

C. D. Rutherford, a prominent resident of Floodwood, who was in the city today, and a visitor at the county courthouse to see about some tax matters, says that the village of Floodwood is making a great advance this season. He says that at least 25 new buildings have gone up in the village, and settlers are coming into that country in large numbers and picking up the farming lands. He predicts a great future for the Floodwood agricultural district in the next five or ten years.

"The season starts a little later in the spring with us than with the farmers in the southern part of the state," said Mr. Rutherford this morning, "but late in the fall, when everything is dried up down below, the farmers come up here land-looking and find the grass green and crops in good condition. Such a state of affairs appeals strongly to them and the result is that they commence to buy land up here with a view of settling on and developing it."

Mr. Rutherford says that politics is a dead issue so far as Floodwood is concerned. The people are too busy in looking after their own welfare to stop and inquire into the troubles of others. Even in local affairs politics cut no figure.

HE PREFERS DULUTH

Dr. Long Would Rather Be Here Than at Los Angeles.

Home From the Conference — Watson S. Moore's Speech.

"Los Angeles is a fine city with delightful people in every way, but you may put me down as saying that the young man who is looking for a good opportunity to get along can find it just as well in Duluth as anywhere else. Duluth is all right, and certainly good enough for anybody."

Such is the verdict of Rev. S. P. Long, D. D., pastor of the First Methodist church, who has just returned from the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Los Angeles, after a six-weeks' trip.

"My trip to Los Angeles, and speaking of good places to live, reminds me very much of a certain minister whom I used to know down East, where I was located before I came to Duluth.

"This preacher was a good, earnest man and was well liked. He had at one time held a pastorate in Jamestown, N. Y., from where he went to take a church at Franklin, Pa. He had evidently been very successful at Jamestown, or the town must have been an unusually bright and beautiful place, for he was always talking about Jamestown.

"'Yes, Franklin is a nice place,' he would say, 'but you just ought to see Jamestown. There's a nice place to live.'

"This comparison got to be quite well known, and there was one devout old lady in his congregation who had been a classmate of his. One time, in speaking about her faith to the minister, she said she had tried to be a good Christian for a number of years, but did not know whether she would get to heaven or not. But she hoped she would.

"But at any rate, she said, if she did not get to heaven, she would like at least to get as far as Jamestown.

"I think that's something of the way all the Los Angeles people speak of their city. They think that if all the people from elsewhere should not get to heaven they ought at least to get as far as Los Angeles. There is no question about the charm and beauty of Los Angeles, however, as it is a veritable flower garden and a city of exquisite beauty, with the very finest street car service I have ever seen anywhere.

"The people there swear by their climate, too. We were there between the rainy season however and saw the city at what I must assume is its best. There is an enormous amount of building going on there, and the number of houses going up is astonishing. Thus it was that the city impressed me as being exceedingly prosperous, and while I heard somewhere that there were a large number of idle men in the city, I did not see any direct evidence of it, and people I asked about this point told me they believed the reports were exaggerated.

"Speaking about the climate and the rains reminds me of Portland. I met a woman there who used to be in my congregation and asked her if it was true, as reported, that the city had rain nine months of the year.

"'No, only six,' she answered.

"But the treatment accorded the delegates to the conference was delightful in every way and the hospitality of the people seemed endless. Every morning at the conference there was a flower in the seat of each delegate, a rose or carnation, and as there were 750 delegates to the meeting you can see the floral supply was bountiful. It had to be to keep pace with the sessions. And in the annex to the main room there was always lemonade in abundance for the delegates and oranges in profusion. They must have brought oranges there by the carload, literally.

"The Minnesota delegation fared exceptionally well at the conference in the honors that were distributed. Of the Northern Minnesota delegation Dr. J. B. Hingeley was made secretary of the general conference and made an excellent record with his duties.

"Dr. Robert Forbes, who got a complimentary vote for bishop, was made assistant secretary of the board of church extension, and this was against the candidacy of three strong men, who commanded no small number of votes. The doctor was prominent in the fight against the consolidation of the various benevolences, which was to consolidate the various missionary and other boards of aid. He created a fine impression and had the deep respect of the body.

"Our own townsman, Watson S. Moore, made the hit of the conference in his speech against the return to the time limit for the ministers. He made a talk on this subject that roused everyone to an unusual pitch of interest and I am sorry that you could not have an adequate report of what he said.

"Dr. H. C. Jennings, who received rather a heavy vote for bishop, was reappointed publishing agent of the Western book concern. He is from the Minnesota delegation, as was Dr. G. H. Bridgman, elected chairman of the educational committee. This last was an especially important post for the reason that the committee had to hear the heresy cases. But while the heresy cases were pretty interesting there was really nothing to them and everything wound up peacefully as you could wish. It seemed to be a case of the ones that were said to be heretics not understanding the other fellows and vice versa.

"But I am glad to be home again, for I was not altogther well all the time I was away. California is a delightful state, of course, but I must say there's no place like home."

Dr. Long says he will speak on the work of the conference at the regular church congregational meeting next Sunday evening. He will preside at prayer meeting at the church tonight.

* * *

The Los Angeles Times has the following about Alderman Moore's address to the conference:

"When a little man took the rostrum and quavered, 'Now that I have the floor I don't know that I want it,' a murmur of deep sympathy arose from the conference, followed by deafening applause and laughter.

"'We have been there,' said a delegate on the front seat.

"However, 'Mr. Moore of Minnesota' made good in his speech and established a reputation as a humorist. His most forceful gem of thought was as follows:

"'I would rather be in the royal line of Methodism than be a king with a ful set of teeth.'"

"After that the speaker had the conference at his mercy."

Mr. Moore has also returned from the conference.

OVER TWENTY WERE INJURED

By a Fierce Tornado Which Struck Tekamah, Neb.

Omaha, Neb., June 2.—Additional reports from Tekamah, which was struck last night by a tornado, indicate that about twenty persons were injured, some of them seriously hurt. There were no fatalities. Those seriously injured were: Kip Hamblin, Miss Gertrude Denny, Prof. J. S. Barnes, Miss Gray, Mamie Remington, John Brune, Jesse Spillman. The storm wrecked most of the buildings in its path which was a block in width and several blocks long. The opera house, two general stores, a blacksmith shop and several residences were destroyed. A high school commencement rehearsal was in progress in the opera house when the storm struck the building, carrying away the roof and partially wrecking the walls. A number of pupils were injured, the most serious being young Hamblin and Miss Denny.

The people of the town had little warning of the coming storm and many had narrow escapes. The property loss is estimated at $50,000.

ANNIVERSARY SALE.

Gray-Tallant Company Having Tremendous Success.

The Gray-Tallant Co.'s store was a particularly interesting and busy place yesterday and today. Extraordinary efforts have been made to break their record in the way of sales, and the management report that the opening days have been far more successful than the first days of any previous anniversary sale. Some of the offerings went so fast the first day that the supply was exhausted, but they were quickly replaced with other values, better is anything, so that later shoppers were not disappointed. This company, though the youngest of the dry goods houses in Duluth, has built up a remarkable business in the short space of four years—a business that usually comes only after double the period of energetic merchandising. The reputation of this firm with the shoppers of the city could only have been attained by a consistently honest policy and a wide-awake attention to the interests of customers. The personnel of the company is so favorably known that it has been a guarantee of a high standard of business methods, and has probably contributed much to their success.

GOES TO EVELETH.

Sheriff and Deputies Go to Strike Scene.

Sheriff William Butchart, accompanied by several of his deputies, left this morning for Eveleth. At the sheriff's office it was not known what word Mr. Butchart had received from Eveleth that caused him to go there, but it is surmised that he went at the request of the Drake & Stratton company whose men struck yesterday. It is not believed that there has been any trouble resulting from the strike, but that precautions have been taken to protect the company's property should a disposition be shown on the part of the strikers to cause damage.

Yesterday afternoon a request reached the sheriff's office to send some men to Eveleth, but he refused to do so, unless the request would be made by the officials of the stripping company direct.

MANY ENLIST.

Recruits In Month of May Numbered Ninety.

In May there were 90 enlistments at the local recruiting office, compared with 102 in April. The work keeps up much better than usual at this time of the year and for 1904 there have so far been over 400 hundred soldiers taken at this point. The average age runs about 23 or 24 years and very few of the men offering themselves are anywhere near the maximum, 35 years.

Ninety-five per cent of the men who apply, if they get a far as a physical examination by the station doctor, are acceptances. The principal bar to applicants is their failure to read, write and speak English, as very few have physical blemishes sufficient to disbar them.

THE FOLDING BED

Responsible For a Fatal Accident In Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. A. M. Woodward, wife of the president of the South Side State bank, died this afternoon as the result of a folding bed accident. While some of their household goods were being moved, Mr. and Mrs. Woodward occupied an old folding bed. It closed on them in the night. Mr. Woodward contrived to get one arm out of the bed and pounded on the floor until help came. Three of Mrs. Woodward's cervical vertebrae were broken, and an operation has been necessary to remove bone fragments on the spinal cord.

VALUE OF HORSE

L. R. Martin Begins Proceedings to Recover on Valuable Animal.

Killed For Glanders—Experts Found Was Not Diseased.

L. R. Martin, of this city, has started proceedings in which he will endeavor to recover the value of a horse which the health authorities condemned as having the glanders last fall and killed.

Through his attorney, H. B. Fryberger, Mr. Martin this morning filed in district court a petition for a writ of mandamus to be issued against the health authorities, commanding them to either appoint an appraiser to appraise the value of the horse that was killed, or appear before the court and show cause why they should not do so.

The facts in the case, as Mr. Martin recites them in his petition, are as follows: He was the owner, Oct. 28, of "a chestnut gelding of great value and registered," which he kept in his stable near Thirty-sixth avenue east, in this city. Sept. 10 last the horse was adjudged to be infected with glanders, a contagious disease, by the health authorities, and was ordered killed, a notice being served on the owner that the animal had an infectious disease and was to be killed inside of twenty-four hours from the date of notice. The order was given by the state livery stock sanitary board and was served on Mr. Martin by Dr. J. M. Robinson, who was then health commissioner for the city of Duluth.

Mr. Martin says that he filed a protest against the killing of the horse, on the ground that to the best of his belief it did not have the glanders, or an infectious disease, but the animal was killed Oct. 28, 1903, notwithstanding his protest.

Mr. Martin claims that after the animal was killed a post mortem examination was held by three experts, one of whom he selected. The third was chosen by the live stock sanitary board, and these two selected the third expert. The men conducting the examination were Dr. J. G. Harris, Dr. F. E. Burnham and Dr. John McaKy.

It is further alleged by Mr. Martin that after the examination a report signed by two of the experts was filed with the secretary of the city board of health, in which it was stated that the horse did not have the glanders. He claims that two of the experts who signed the report presented it to the third expert, but he refused to sign it, or to make any report.

As soon as the report was filed Mr. Martin claims that he secured an appraiser to fix the value of the horse, before it was killed, and requested the health authorities, particularly the State Live Stock Sanitary board to appoint another appraiser, but the board refused to do so, in fact, disclaimed any and all liability for the killing of the horse, and refused to reimburse the owner.

Mr. Martin petitions the court to issue a writ of mandamus directing the health authorities to select and appoint a disinterested person to act as an appraiser, and to perform all the duties that are required of them by law.

The proceedings are filed in the name of the state of Minnesota, ex rel L. R. Martin, relator, against the State Live Stock Sanitary board, J. J. Furlong as president, Forest Henry as vice president; M. H. Reynolds, C. E. Cotton and W. W. P. McConnell, as members of the board, A. H. Donald, Henry Folz, N. O. Nelson and W. B. Getchell, as members of the board of health of Duluth, Dr. D. D. Murray, health commissioner, and J. W. Miller, secretary of the board of health, as respondents.

Dropped a $1000 Bill.

The party who recently dropped a $1000 bill in the cabin of a feryboat had considerable difficulty in recovering it because he could not remember its number or date. Persons with a weak stomach also have considerable difficulty in trying to regain health and strength. Their meals cause them so much distress, such as heartburn, gas of the stomach, nausea and sick headaches that they are completely discouraged. Then dieting is suggested. This is also a mistake, for nature intended you to eat heartily and the stomach to properly digest the food. If yours is weak and unable to do its work properly a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will soon restore it to its normal condition. It also cures insomnia, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and malaria, fever and ague. Be sure and try it.

Railroad Changes.

George E. Pratt, for some time contracting agent of the Wisconsin Central, has left that road's local office to take the traveling freight and passenger agency of the White Line Transportation company. He is succeeded by Isaac N. Powers.

John B. Rayn, traveling freight agent of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, from Minneapolis, and L. K. McConnell, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, were here todya.

Suit Transferred.

The personal injury suit of Anton F. Claus against the Northern Pacific Railroad company, in which judgment for $5000 is asked, has been transferred from the state to the federal court. The papers were filed with the clerk of the local United States court today. While working in the Northern Pacific shops at Brainerd, on August 18, 1903, Mr. Claus sustained a fracture of the left arm, while removing a belt from a pulley, it is claimed. It is alleged that the accident was due to the negligence of the defendant company. Claus is a man 32 years of age.

Golf Scores.

In the championship match at the North Land club course yesterday I. J. Hopkins defeated Carl A. Luster. This was the only match played. The weather has been the source of regret to the golfers, who are much disinclined to risk their skill when the elements are so unfavorable.

Among the Duluth players in the western handicap association are the following, with the handicaps shown: A. W. Taussig, 10; G. G. Hartley, 10; T. W. Hoopes, 10; S. J. Hopkins, 10; E. P. Towne, 10; W. W. Walker, 10.

COUNTY ATTORNEY

Of Marshall County Removed by the Governor.

St. Paul, June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant today ordered the removal of Greely E. Carr from the office of county attorney of Marshall county. He was charged with malfeasance in office. Carr is the official against whom complaint was made of being a party in a combine which secured from the commissioners of Marshall county a drainage contract through fraudulent manipulations.

Governor Van Sant in ordering Carr's removal from office says he finds the charges borne out by the hearing which was held a week ago.

SILBERSTEIN & BONDY COMPANY.

The June White Sale

Seldom does a sale arouse such interest as our WHITE SALE now in progress. The unusual values on the highest class of staple merchandise are thoroughly appreciated by people who recognize trustworthy goods sold at a saving to them. All day long our white goods section has been crowded with appreciative buyers, amongst whom were several of the prominent caterers of the city.

The lines of white materials from the Sweetser, Pembroke sale created much interest. New fabrics that are shown for the first time at such economical prices find many buyers, as the numbers of purchasers today who took advantage of the sale can testify.

Not alone among our patrons has the White Sale been of interest. The prompt and energetic efforts and foresight of the S. & B. Co., in buying and shipping the lines now on sale have resulted in disaster to a less progressive competitor, consequently he, in his unprogressive style, wails his lament to the public in the newspapers.

The Silberstein & Bondy Company pay little attention to the gnashing of teeth outside the door of success, but occasionally even the lion will reach forth and deal intruders their due. According to this sorely wounded merchant he can't understand how goods could be gotten from New York in 10 or 12 days. Rip Van Winkle like, he has not awakened to the fact that express trains bring goods from New York to Duluth in 2 days. Too bad that the slow merchant is obliged to learn by dearly-bought experience. His little toy balloon, which he made in secret, was burst by bumping against the air of publicity given it by the S. & B. Co.

Our New York buyer, who was on the ground, had, according to our instructions, sized up the situation before the sale. He bought white goods only, advising us that all other lines were either undesirable or held at too high a figure—in fact, we have it from very good authority that this selfsame unfortunate merchant, on his return from the East, remarked to a friend that he was disgusted with the sale, as some of the goods brought higher prices than they could be bought for regularly—and it's a question whether he bought the less desirable lines and paid too dearly for them, therefore his "squeal." However, we secured our goods, had them shipped promptly, and the people of Duluth will judge according to values whether the lines now on sale are worthy or not.

The Silberstein & Bondy Co. have enough to do to attend to their own business, which we do, and do well, as this little happening can testify.

The sale goes on—there's values here that will interest you. You're welcome to your share. Come.

PRICES ARE LOWER

For Pig Iron and a Number of Finished Products.

There Are Signs of Preparation For a Quiet Summer.

Cleveland, June 2.—The Iron Trade Review says: Lower prices for pig iron and a number of finished products have come in the past week and the iron market gives distinct evidence of the shrinking of demand into narrower channels. There are signs of preparation for a quiet summer in the banking or blowing out of a number of blast furnaces in the Central West, the Chicago district and in Pennsylvania, though as yet the United States Steel corporation has not participated in this movement apart from the stopping of several stacks of the Illinois Steel company.

There is no lack of ore in the yards of the Steel corporation at South Chicago, but other furnaces in that district may have to curtail further if the lake strike lasts many weeks longer.

Crop prospects show improvement, acording to official reports of the week, and the supply of money is abundant. But hesitancy is dominant in manufacturing operations and the iron and metal working trades seem to be adjusting themselves to a wait that may be prolonged over several months.

Reports from the pig iron centers show that where any considerable business is inquired on, new low prices come out. While $9.25, Birmingham for Southern No. 2 iron is commonly the price, one or two large orders have been taken at $9. Though gray forge has been relatively scarce and for early delivery has been held firmly, 8 has been done on a good-sized order for the third quarter, while No. 3 and No. 4 foundry sold at $8.75 and $8.50, respectively. A 10,000 ton contract, involving considerable amounts of No. 3 and No. 4, is reported from Cincinnati and a Northern Ohio pipe concern has inquired for 12,000 tons, of which 2000 tons has been placed.

Chicago reports about 8000 tons of bar iron sold at lower prices. Orders for 1350 cars placed in that district accounts for most of the activity in bars.

ANTI-HEARST ELEMENT WINS

The Delegation From Michigan to Vote as a Unit.

Detroit, June 2.—The anti-Hearst element in the Michigan Democracy, headed by Daniel J. Campau, of Detroit, national committeeman from Michigan, triumphed over the Hearst supporters at every stage in the Democratic state convention held here yesterday to select delegates to the national convention and an uninstructed delegation will be sent to the convention. While there are some Hearst men among the district delegates to St. Louis, the delegation was instructed to vote as a unit.

The first test of strength was on the report from the committee on credentials. By a vote of 527 to 250, a minority report of the committee, seating the contesting Hearst delegation from Manistee, the only county from which there was a contesting delegation, was tabled. Following this victory Daniel J. Campau was reelected national committeeman from Michigan, and of the four delegates at large chosen, not one was a member of the Hearst element. The members of the committee on resolutions dissented from the platform prepared by the majority and prepared a minority report, but after the majority report had been read, failed to present their platform.

The following were elected delegates at large to the national convention: Daniel J. Campau, of Detroit; Thomas E. Barkworth, of Jackson; John Power, of Escanaba, and George D. Jackson, of Bay City.

The convention ratified the selection of twenty-four delegates to the national convention made at the district caucuses in the morning.

The resolutions adopted by the convention were unusually brief. Opening with an expression of confidence in the national convention, they say:

"The selection of candidates for president and vice-president of the United States we intrust to that great body, confident that it will name candidates for those high offices who can and will achieve success for the Democratic party and redeem the American nation from the monarchial, extravagant and corrupt political organization which now controls it.

"The Democratic national convention will have its opinions on all the great questions now pressing upon the consideration of the American people. That convention can safely be depended upon to freely and fearlessly declare those opinions. In its own language it will properly denounce the criminally aggressive, despotic, un-American, extravagant and dishonest Republican administration.

"The declaration of the attitude of the Democratic party upon the independence of the people of the Philippines, the just arraignment of trusts, the manifold evils of high tariff taxation, the important questions of finance and all other matters now pending before the American people can and will be clearly elucidated in the Democratic national platform. And on that platform more than 5,000,000 voters will stand under that bright promise of complete and overwhelming victory.

"The Michigan delegation is hereby directed to vote as a unit on all questions arising in the national convention, as directed by a majority of the delegates."

GEORGIA FOR PARKER.

Delegates Instructed to Vote For New Yorker.

Atlanta, Ga., June 2.—After a red hot fight over the question as to whether the word "request" or "instruct" should be used in resolutions favoring the nominating for president of Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, the state Democratic convention at a late hour yesterday afternoon adopted the following resolutions by a vote of 166¼ to 157½, which then was made unanimous by the convention:

"Whereas, we believe that Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, is the choice of an overwhelming majority of the Democracy of this state as the Democratic nominee for president, and

"Whereas, it is the duty of this convention to give force and expression to its wishes;

"Resolved, that the delegates from Georgia to the national convention to be held in St. Louis be and they are hereby instructed to cast the vote of this state for Judge Alton B. Parker as the nominee of the Democratic party for president so long as in the opinion of a majority of the delegates there is a reasonable probability of his nomination and that said delegates shall vote as a unit on all questions as a majority may determine."

"Georgia's big four" is composed of Congressman John D. Maddox, Hon. James M. Smith, James B. Gray, editor of the Atlanta Journal; Charles R. Pendleton, editor of the Macon Telegraph. The four named will go to the St. Louis convention as delegates at large.

STRIPPERS QUIT WORK.

Object to a Reduction of Their Wages.

An Eveleth dispatch reports that 450 employes of the Drake-Stratton company, employed on stripping work at the Fayal mine, went on strike yesterday owing to a reduction of wages which became effective June 1. The strike was confined to the dumpmen, brakemen and laborers, the shovel workers not being affected by the reduction, from $1.75 to $1.60 a day. The strikers marched through the streets of Eveleth last night but committed no acts of violence. They have about fifty pickets stationed at the mine to prevent other men taking their places.

About 40 of the 200 shippers at the Stevens mine near Hibbing walked out for the same reason as at Eveleth, and a few left the works at the Leonard mine at Chisholm, but in both cases the places of the strikers were filled and the work proceeded as usual.

ENORMOUS WORK

Building of Superior Entry Pier Going Ahead Rapidly.

More Than Million Pounds of Concrete Is Laid Daily.

The concrete substructure of the new south pier at Superior entry is now being laid at the rate of 200 cubic yards a day, or to give the figures in weight, about 1,500,000 pounds of material is being placed under water at the entry each day to form the big monolithic blocks on which the superstructure will rest.

The work of laying the concrete under water began the first of this week and operations have been going on very smoothly, without a hitch in the machinery that has been assembled to manufacture, transport and place the concrete.

Assistant United States Engineer Clarance Coleman, who is in charge of the work, under the direction of Capt. Charles L. Potter, government engineer for this district, says that it is going ahead with even greater facility and speed than he had anticipated.

All of the machinery that was built at home for the work is working especially good, no trouble having been encountered from its very first operation. A few changes have been made in the imported machinery in order to put it in condition to meet the exigencies.

Only fifty-two men are employed on the whole work and the record of over a million pounds of concrete laid daily gives some idea of the extent of the labor saving devices, in fact the machinery does the work and the men are employed to look after the machinery.

Every two and three-tenths minutes the big concrete mixer turns out 5500 pounds of concrete ready to be carried out to the channel and placed by the steel traveler derrick.

In about five minutes from the time that the sand, gravel and cement which is hauled by machinery to the top of the mixing plant is dumped into the machine, it is on its way, as concrete, over the trestle work to be placed in the molds.

The work done by the mixer in less than three minutes is by far more than could be done by 20 men in 10 or 15 minutes.

Of the concrete placed the mold has been removed from just one of the big monolithic blocks, while another will be removed today. Is takes less than half an hour for the mold traveler to pick up and place in position one of the 40-ton molds, ready to receive concrete.

About four days are being allowed at the present time for the concrete to harden in the molds, but as the temperature of the water rises with the advancing summer season, the time will be cut down to three days and even to two days.

About 99 of the big monolithic blocks will be manufactured under water. If the blocks were laid at the speed they are now being put in it would take but 45 days to complete the work under water, which represents about three-fourths of all the concrete work. As the work goes on, however, the concrete will be laid faster and it is possible that as high as three molds will be set and filled in a day. The superstructure will consist of about 120 concrete blocks.

A number of the contractors at the head of the lakes have been visitors at the entry work this week to witness operation of the concrete making plant, this being the first time that one was ever operated in the country on so large a scale.

NEW FEATURES AT Y. M. C. A.

System of Registering Rooms — Employment Agency Doing Well.

The local Y. M. C. A. has just installed a new cabinet system in the department devoted to keeping tab on the rooms in different parts of the city which private families wish to rent to a desirable class of boarders. The facilities for doing this work in the past have been rather limited, but of late the department has become such an important one, with so many demands made upon it, that it was found necessary to arrange the work in it more conveniently.

This work is designed to assist young men coming into the city from outside points in readily finding good homes. Before the rooms for rent are placed on record at the Y. M. C. A. they are examined by a committee from that institution, and unless they are desirable are not placed on the books. If it is decided that the room is of the right class its description, together with necessary details as to price and location, are placed on a card. Several score of these cards are always on record, so that the applicant for a room has quite a variety to select from, and may obtain a location in almost any part of the city at little trouble, and at no expense.

Another department at the local Y. M. C. A. which is steadily becoming into greater prominence and use is that of the employment agency. Many business men in the city apply to the Y. M. C. A. whenever in need of help, and are generally able to find the man or boy desired by going through the lists of "work wanted" at the Y. M. C. A. A record of the young men seeking employment is kept, together with their qualifications. The secretary testifies as to their character. During the month of May there were twenty-seven calls upon this department for men and boys to fill a variety of positions. This is not a record-breaking month by any means.

The local association is in receipt of No. I, Vol. I, of the Association News, a paper published by the Buenos Ayres Y. M. C. A., under direction of B. A. Shuman. The paper is just what its name implies, and gives the news of the association, also presenting its needs to the general public. The first issue sets forth the need of a new building, erected especially to meet the needs of the association, to be owned by it. It is stated that several members have recently made contributions as a starter for a building fund. The paper will be published monthly, except in December and January.

ALDERMAN M'GINNIS

Of the Village of Nymore Is Missing.

Bemidji, Minn., June 2.—Alderman John McGinnis, of the village of Nymore, has been missing from his home in that village for three weeks past and is believed to have been drowned in the Mississippi river while going from Bemidji to the Schoolcraft river drive of the Brainerd Lumber company.

McGinnis was elected on the village council at the late spring election. About three weeks ago he left his home in Nymore, where he has a wife and children, to go to the Schoolcraft to work on the drive. He reached the drive and worked for several days when he came in to Bemidji and spent several days around this city. When last seen he had started back to the drive. Since that time nothing has been seen or heard of him. He did not return to the wangan and his disappearance was not discovered until his wife came to the offices of the Brainerd Lumber company in this city to make some inquiries regarding him. She found that he had not returned to draw his pay check and steps were at once taken to ascertain his whereabouts. Up to the present time nothing has been developed.

PETITION TURNED DOWN.

Little Fork County Residents Denied Their Prayer.

The petition of residents of the Little Fork country, asking that all timber and stone applications in that district be disallowed, because the land is purely suitable for agricultural purposes, has been turned down by a decision of Commissioner Richards, of the general land office. The petitions asked that all pending timber and stone applications in townships 157-25, 69-26 and 69-27, be disallowed and other lands in that locality withdrawn from such entry. The decision of the Washington office states that the petitions do not warrant the action requested.

Duluth Women Die.

Probate Judge Middlecoff received word yesterday, from the state insane asylum at Fergus Falls, of the death in that institution of Matilda Gustafson and Mary Melvin, both of whom were committed from this county.

Matilda Gustafson, who was 53 years old, was sent to the asylum last August. Mary Melvin, aged 70 years, has been at the asylum since the first of May last.

It is said that considerable sickness has existed among the patients at the hospital this season and numerous deaths have resulted. These were mostly from pulmonary troubles and heart disease.

Gets a Divorce.

Mrs. Christiana Gustafson has been granted a divorce from Albert Gustafson, the proceedings for the decree having been completed in Judge Dibell's room in district court yesterday afternoon.

In the case of Rial Bedard against Taylor & Ahearn, appealed from municipal court at Eveleth, Judge Dibell, yesterday, made finding for Bedard, setting aside the verdict of $42 and costs for Taylor & Ahearn, rendered by Judge Prince. The defendants in the actions were the garnishees of Nick Berzovich and by the verdict of yesterday the garnishment proceedings are dismissed.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

It is reported at Harrisburg, Pa., that John P. Elkin, Republican candidate for supreme court judge, will become a candidate for United States senator to succeed Mr. Quay, on condition that Insurance Commissioner Durham, the Republican leader of Philadelphia, will support him.

Arthur Thompson, a negro, shot and instantly killed M. Dudley, a young white man, at Arlington, Ga., early Wednesday evening. A crowd of white men captured the negro, lynched him, and riddled the body with bullets before midnight. Dudley was manager of the city electric lighting plant, and Thompson was a fireman at the same place.

A head-on collision of freight trains occurred on the Cumberland Valley railroad Wednesday, six miles east of here. Elmer Walck, aged 40 years, an engineer, was instantly killed and William Conklin, a trainman, is believed to be fatally hurt. Five other trainmen sustained injuries. The two engines and fourteen cars were wrecked.

The case of the state of Texas against the J. M. Guffey Petroleum company, of which Col. J. M. Guffey, of Pittsburg, is president, for penalties in the sum of $1,500,000 for violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas, was completed Wednesday in a complete victory for the defendant.

Advices from Weisburg, Ind., are to the effect that a race war is imminent at the labor camps along the big Four railway. This state of affairs is due to the depredations of several negroes who within the past week robbed and maltreated whites employed at the camps.

ANOTHER LYNCHING ATTEMPTED

Springfield, O., June 2.—Another lynching was attempted here last night. A crowd of negroes surrounded the jail at midnight to lynch Walter Fisher, colored, under arrest for killing Edward Boone, colored. Sheriff Routzahn had just returned from Dayton, where he took Fisher for safe keeping and so advised the crowd which yelled back that they would get Fisher when he was brought back for trial.

Eddy Denounces Campaign Methods of Dunn and Collins.

Public Examiner Johnson Not Frightened By Dunn's Threats.

St. Paul, June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank M. Eddy, of Glenwood, who manages to turn up at St. Paul about the time something sensational happens in the political line, believes that the campaign methods of R. C. Dunn and Judge Loren W. Collins, if they become a precedent for future governors, will mean the loss of Minnesota from the Republican ranks. Incidentally Mr. Eddy believes also that in view of the attacks of Dunn and Collins on each other he has an excellent show for the nomination.

"It has been stated to me by leading and influential Republicans," said Mr. Eddy yesterday, "that if either Mr. Dunn or Judge Collins be nominated it will be impossible in the future for any Republican to receive a nomination the first time, unless he is able to back his campaign with a large sum of money, or permit others to do it for him. They contend that if either Mr. Dunn or Judge Collins prevail, the foundation will be laid for conditions that now exist in Wisconsin and Illinois. They firmly believe that if this precedent is ever established, it will mean the loss of Minnesota to the Republican party."

Speaking of his chances for the gubernatorial nomination, Mr. Eddy said:

"I have traveled through practically every county in the state and I am satisfied that there will be very few instructed delegations at the convention. The talk that either Dun or Collins has a majority of the delegates cinched is all nonsense. The people of the state have not tied up to any candidate; they feel that either of the three candidates would make a good governor, but they object to the campaign methods of Dunn and Collins."

* * *

Public Examiner S. T. Johnson appears not to be frightened by the threats of R. C. Dunn that the former state auditor will have the public examiner indicted by the grand jury on a charge of malfeasance in office. He stated yesterday emphatically that his investigation of the state auditor's office would cease only with his term of office, and that neither the threats of Mr. Dunn, nor the criticisms of the newspapers will induce him to discontinue the investigation.

"This investigation of the state timber department, as far as I am concerned, will only stop with the expiration of my term of office," said Mr. Johnson. "It is not a job of a few weeks. Every record in the state auditor's office will be examined and the results will be filed with the governor. Attacks have been made on my character in order to frighten me, but I have been commissioned to do this work and it will be done."

* * *

The Dunn men say they are not worried over the results of Mr. Johnson's report. They contend that the portion of the report that is true relates only to technicalities, and that Mr. Iverson, the present state auditor, is doing exactly the same as Mr. Dunn did. Governor Van Sant says he has requested Mr. Johnson to look into Mr. Iverson's record, and the public examiner says that he will do so, but the Dunn men are willing to wager almost anything that nothing will be said derogatory of Mr. Iverson, since he is a Collins man.

* * *

S. E. Aitkins, chief land clerk under State Auditor S. G. Iverson, who left the office yesterday, said regarding the section of Mr. Johnson's report referring to the recording of timber trespasses and the requirement of bark marks on the logs:

"Mr. Johnson charges Mr. Dunn with not recording the permits until after one logging season, whereas the law requires that they be recorded immediately. As a matter of fact it is practically impossible for the state auditor to record them immediately. Very often the firm receiving the permit does not begin to cut timber until one or two seasons afterward. The state auditor may send letter after letter to the firm asking that the permit be signed and returned with the bond for registration, but it is usually several months after the land sales that the auditor hears from the firms.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Iverson has been compelled to do exactly the same as Mr. Dunn did. He records the permits as soon as possible. Out of more than 100 sales made in the state auditor's office last October, I will venture to say that at least two-thirds were not recorded with Mr. Iverson until February of 1904 and I know that some of the permits are not recorded yet. The recording of permits with the state auditor means practically nothing anyway. It is merely a notice to the public. Before the firms can cut a stick of timber, they have to record the permits in the surveyor general's office.

"Mr. Johnson's charges that Mr. Dunn did not record the bark marks are equally ridiculous. I had charge of the land department under Mr. Iverson and I will venture to say two-thirds of the permits contain no reference to the bark mark. Every stick of timber must be stamped on the end with the letters "Min" before it is placed in the skidway, and the placing of the bark mark on the side of the log is largely a matter of form.

"Mr. Johnson also charges that Mr. Dunn issued permits where some member of the firm was one of the bondsmen. It was only a short time ago that I heard Mr. Iverson telephone a member of a lumber firm that he did not construe the law to prohibit a stockholder from going on the bond of the firm which seeks the permit.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Johnson and everyone who has had anything to do with the examination of the auditor's office knows that the irregularities which he refers to are merely technicalities and that the reason why Mr. Dunn did not comply with the law regarding these insignificant details is because it was practically impossible for him, as it has been for Mr. Iverson, to do so."

WOULD INJURE UNITED STATES

An Anglo-Russian Alliance Which Now Seems Probable.

St. Petersburg, June 2.—The comment here on the settlement of the Russo-Canadian fishery dispute is very significant. The agreement is welcomed by the Russian press as evidence of the increasing probability of an Anglo-Russian alliance, the papers pointing out that public opinion in Great Britain, France and Russia is becoming more favorable, the war instead of proving an obstacle to an alliance, serving as one of the arguments in its favor.

More significant still is a strong intimation of the Novosti foreshadowing that a commercial treaty between the two countries will pave the way to a purely commercial approachment. The Novosti adds:

"The realization of this is easier, as both Russia and Great Britain are bound by enormous commercial dealings. It is true that Russia is further from Great Britain than France, but she is nearer India, whose railroads could be joined with Russia's."

The paper makes the further point that without such a commercial treaty, any political agreement would be very frail. Although it is impossible to learn at this time whether the question of such a commercial treaty has actually been taken up, the possibility of its being the next step in the program towards a political agreement arouses the keenest interest in diplomatic circles, where it is considered fraught with most far-reaching importance.

The United States probably will be the chief loser by such a treaty. America has already suffered from the differential duties levied against her in retaliation for the imposition of a countervailing duty on Russian sugar, imports of American agricultural machinery, etc., which a few years ago were very large having fallen almost to nothing. With tariff concessions Great Britain is bound to succeed to all this trade with its big potentialities for the future. The impression is growing that Great Britain is playing a shrewd game, for big stakes commercially as well as politically, and that while a complete agreement would be mutually advantageous to both Russia and Great Britain, it would be at the expense of the United States in both these directions.

The Chinese legation denies the report of an uprising in Mongolia, saying that recent advices show the people are calm.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—An even break was the best the Tigers were able to do with the Duluth White Sox, in spite of taking the first two games of the series. Steady pitching by Koukalik and good fielding on the part of the visitors enabled them to take the fourth game of the series yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 to 1.

Morton and Koukalik were the opposing pitchers. Morton probably had a little the better of the argument, but poor support lost him the game. The Forks men could do nothing with "Coke" until the seventa when, with two men out, Dunn, Cole and Hanrahan got hits in quick succession, and the former crossed the plate.

The first score made by the White Sox was made in the second inning. Quillan led off with a hit, a two-bagger, and Ball went out to Cole on a foul fly. Zink sent a warm one through Cole and Dunn, and scored Quillan. Hughes struck out and Koukalik went out on a foul fly to Hutchinson.

In the fifth inning another score was chalked up to the credit of the White Sox. Hughes got a life on an error, and Koukalik fanned. Corrigan went out on a grounder to Cole. Then "Rusty" Owens found a hit and sent Hughes home. He was caught trying to steal second.

The visitors took another score in the sixth inning by an error on the part of Martin. Another score in the eighth was all that the visitors cared for, and it was got by Martin throwing the ball to the wrong base. A long field drive from Quillan's willow to Martin, and after the ball had been caught the fielder threw it to second instead of home, and Owens took advantage of this and stole in, making the last score of the game.

Frank Martin, the second baseman and captain of the Duluth team, was put out of the game in the second inning. He was not satisfied with the way things were going and the umpire thought he needed a rest and so sent him to the bench. Owens was put in his place.

The star playing of the day was done by Quillan on the third corner. Four put outs and five assists was his record. It was in the fifth inning the Tigers thought to find a hole on the third corner through which they could send the ball. Cole was the first man up. He sent a liner to the little third baseman, who handled it like a toy. Then Hanrahan tried the same thing, but he too met the same fate. Then Hutchinson sent the third one there, but a quick run and a one-handed stop, a quick recovery and speedy but accurate throw to first retired the side. The fans applauded the efforts of Quillan for his plucky work.

"Iron Man" Morton was in the box for the Tigers and played a pretty game. The support he got was terrible, but he never gave up, and smiled through it all.

This is the last game of the first series at home. The Tigers play the remainder of the week at Superior and thence to Duluth for the first three days of next week.

ANOTHER POUNDING.

Fargo Makes Terrific Assault on Bartos—Shut Out.

Fargo, N. D., June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Bartos, recently released to Winnipeg from St. Paul, was a picnic for Fargo yesterday afternoon. He was wild, giving four bases on balls and hitting two men. When he did get them over the plate Fargo swatted the ball.

Milton pitched sensational ball for Fargo and allowed only one hit up to the ninth inning, when two more were made. Only one Pegger got as far as third. Fargo scored in the second on three bases on balls and a long fly to the outfield.

In the fifth, two singles, two two-baggers and a three-sacker, with one base on balls andtwo errors gave Fargo five scores. Two more were secured in the sixth on a hit by pitcher, an error and a pair of singles. In the eight a trio of runs were added on a base on balls, two errors, a single and a double.

Avery got two of the three safe hits secured off Milton but did some raw work in center. He looks like a farmer.

Every one of Winnipeg's errors figured in the score and all the bases on balls came at bad times for Bartos. Clark was slow in throwing to second and four stolen bases were credited to Fargo.

President Lamb has released First Baseman Clayton because of his poor fielding at first. Left Fielder Wachtel for poor stickwork, and one pitcher will be let out, probably Dahlquist or Converse.

Rain at Crookston.

Crookston, June 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The game between Superior and Crookston scheduled for yesterday afternoon was postponed on account of rain. The Superior team left last night for home.

Off the Bat.

Home today.

* * *

An even break with the Forks.

* * *

Not a series lost this season.

* * *

Duluth and Superior at the top. See paper of this date last year.

* * *

If you heard a "whiz" at 3:20, it was that first ball pitched by the mayor.

* * *

Winnipeg is a different team from the one which dropped three straights to the Sox last week.

* * *

Martin got too familiar with a man named Hogan at the Forks yesterday and Frank came out $5 short.

* * *

"Coke" pitched good ball yesterday, but he was lucky to win against Morton.

* * *

How many fans, do you suppose, scanned the sky this morning to note the weather prospects? Guess.

* * *

Just stop a minute and watch that Superior bunch. Don Cameron's colts won't be far from the top when the season ends, from present indications.

* * *

A howl of glee went up yesterday afternoon when the "kids" read in The Herald that only 10 cents was to be charged for their admission to the grounds during the coming summer.

* * *

Winnipeg dropped still another game yesterday and fell another notch in the percentage table. The "Champs" must know how Duluth felt last year.

* * *

The series between Superior and Grand Forks should be an interesting one. It will leave one team in possession of the second place.

FINDS HER MOTHER

After Being Separated From Her Many Years.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, June 2.—Abducted when 5 years old and finally finding her mother in this county is the strange yet truthful life story of Mrs. Tannler, who is now visiting her mother at Ackley, from which place she was abducted by the father years ago.

Years ago there lived at Ackley in this county a family by the name of Ibnes. Domestic trouble arose and in a fit of anger the father and husband left home, his whereabouts for a long time being a mystery. Let alone the mother undertook the stern duty of rearing her family. Unknown to any one in town, the father returned one day, and stealing the 5-year-old daughter, as mysteriously disappeared. The father and daughter were traced to Marshalltown, where all trace of them was lost. Years rolled by and the bereaved mother married, her present name being Mrs. F. Hayunga. It remained for a deathbed confession to right the wrong done the family, and far away on the Pacific coast, the father, realizing that his final end was near, confesed to his grown daughter that years ago he had stolen her from her mother. The daughter had grown to womanhood, the secret of her mother's identity being closely guarded by the father. The daughter finally married, and when the deathbed forced from the lips of the father the secret of the woman's early life she undertook to learn if possible the whereabouts of the mother she faintly remembered.

A year or so ago officials at Ackley received letters of inquiry, the writer asking if people by the name of Ibnes still resided there, as the writer recalled the name of "Ackley" as the trading place of the family of which she was a member when a mere child. Older residents recalled the family and the quarrel and the resultant abduction of the child. Correspondence followed and the mother and daughter fearing that there might be a possible mistake decided on a meeting that put an end to all doubts and they were reunited after years of cruel separation.

The present reunion at the home of Mrs. Hayunga, in which Mrs. Tannler and her several children are happy participants follows as a sequence to the restoration of the long lost child to her mother.

UPHEAVAL IS ON

President Lamb Rattling the Winnipeg Team in Lively Fashion.

Duluth Carrying Too Many Men and Some Must Go.

"Occasional showers is the best I can do in the line of weather for the opening of the baseball season," said H. W. Richardson, the local forecaster, this morning. "I am sorry I can't truthfully predict fine and warm weather, but it is possible that we will escape with cloudy weather and the team may be able to dodge between the showers and pull off the game all right."

The game was scheduled to start at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Bemis was to be in the box for Winnipeg and Owens for Duluth.

* * *

A shaking-up is taking place in at least two of the Northern league teams.

Prisedint Lamb of the Winnipeg club, is tearing his team to pieces in his endeavors to stop the long losing streak which has sent the "Champs" on the toboggan slide from first place to fifth within a week. Claytor, the first baseman, has been released on account of his poor fielding. Claytor is an old veteran, who is claimed to have passed his baseball days and there was much talk in Winnipeg when he was signed that he would not prove to be fast enough for the work. Wachtel, the left fielder, has been dropped for poor stick work. His place will be taken by Hughes, the Chicago player secured by President Lamb.

Either Dahlquist or Converse will be released from the pitching staff today. Converse was the man that Van Praagh passed up for Koukalik. "Van" was given his choice by Watkins, of the Minneapolis team between Koukalik and Converse, and chose the former. "Coke" has won two out of three games pitched and is proving a valuable substitute fielder.

Wagner, a new third baseman from the Kansas City club, was in the game yesterday wearing a Maroon uniform. He made a very fair impression and should make good.

Bartos, one of the trio of star twirlers of last year's pennant winning team, has been returned to Winnipeg by the St. Paul club. He was third in the league last year, coming after Corbett and Sessions with a record of twenty-three games won and ten lost. Bemis was fourth and the Winnipeg club now has the two best men of last year's list that remain in the league. Bartos got his bumps in good shape yesterday, however. If he expected to have an easy time of it coming from the American association to the Northern league he was rudely awakened yesterday, when Fargo touched him up for ten hits and eleven runs.

Grand Forks is also contemplating some changes. Pitcher Carriveau has been dropped for serving up bounders that were too easy for the Northern league batsmen. Manager Cooper is looking for another good twirler.

* * *

One or two changes are not unlikely in the Duluth team. The club is at present carrying more men than are needed, but it is difficult to determine just which ones to release. The club has one more fielder than it needs, since either Koukalik or Gehring can play an excellent game in the outfield, and Owens proved his ability as an infielder yesterday, taking Martin's place at second base.

Four pitchers is also too many for the club to carry, unless one of them is used as a substitute fielder. The club is also carrying two catchers, because there is not another man on the team who could go behind the bat in case of emergency. After the first week at home, one or two of the men will probably be released, cutting down the list to twelve or thirteen men. The club now has probably the largest pay roll of any team in the league.

* * *

All credit is due to the Superior club for the showing made on the trip just closed. The team comes home tied for second place with Grand Forks, after winning seven out of the thirteen games played away from home. After the disheartening difficulties which the team had to face early in the season, the record it has made is an excellent one, and the fans across the bay should give Manager Cameron's aggregation the heartiest kind of support.

BOOK CONCERNS

Charged With Defrauding the State of Montana.

Helena, Mont., June 2.—Two prominent Eastern school book publishing houses, which secured contracts from the state last June, stand formally charged with flagrant violations of these contracts and the state text books commission has been called to meet here July 5, at which time there will be a readoption by the commission of such books as are furnished by the alleged contract berakers in the event that the charges made against them are held sufficient to terminate the contracts and forfeit bonds filed by the companies.

Charges against two houses, Ginn & Co., Boston, and D. J. Heath & Co., of Chicago, are made by State Superintendent Welch in a letter to Governor Toole.

Mr. Welch has secured certified copies of contracts entered into between these companies and the states of Indiana and Georgia and declares he has discovered discrepancies in the rates made for those states and those made for Montana that convince him of the open violation of the contracts made with Montana last year.

In some instances the rates charged Montana are reported by Welch to be 30 and 40 per cent higher.

HAS GOOD REASONS.

John Lind has good reasons for refusing to support William R. Hearst for the Democratic presidential nomination. Fair-minded man that he is, he gives Mr. Hearst all credit for the splendid work he has done in opposition to the predatory trusts, but in answer to a point blank question why he would not support Hearst for president, he replied: "Hearst is an imperialist. I am an anti-imperialist. Hearst advocates a large increase in the navy in order to carry out the imperialistic plan. I do not believe in building another battleship."

The rank and file of the Democratic party of the state of Minnesota will easily agree that John Lind's is a better brand of Democracy than that of William R. Hearst in these respects and that he has a perfect right and legitimate reasons for preferring some other man as the presidential nominee.

Of course it would be possible to nominate Hearst and build a platform on these points in direct opposition to his views, but it would seem to be better policy to nominate a man whose private views are in harmony with the platform, otherwise he would be the object of successful attack on the part of the opposition forces.

The Hearst club, of Duluth, at its recent meeting, renewed its allegiance to the Democracy of William Jennings Bryan, and it is the purpose of its members, if successful at the primaries, to instruct its delegates to vote for William R. Hearst, whose views on the money question and imperialism are in direct antagonism to those of Mr. Bryan.

It will be noticed, also, that the state convention of Nebraska, which was dominated by Mr. Bryan and his associates, which also passed a resolution unanimously endorsing Mr. Bryan's Democracy, failed to instruct its delegates to the national convention for any particular candidate. These Bryan Democrats evidently did not consider Mr. Hearst just the man for the office of president.

Considered from the standpoint of radical Democracy their move was a sensible one. Outside of the reaffirmation of the platform of 1900 they adopted a very satisfactory and able declaration of principles, which was written by Mr. Bryan himself. It would seem that the Democracy of Minnesota would act wisely in following the lead of the Democrats of Nebraska and send a delegation to the national convention unhampered by instructions for any particular condidate. It is evident that Mr. Bryan is better posted on Mr. Hearst than some of his professed followers.

MORE THAN FAIR.

It is a fact perhaps not generally understood that the Chinese government does not blame the United States for prohibiting the entrance of Chinese laborers to this country. The better classes of that country realize that it is an injustice to the American workingmen to allow an unlimited number of their unskilled and low-priced workingmen to come into competition with Americans. This point was made plain in an address by Wong Kai Kah, Chinese commissioner to the St. Louis exposition, before the Buffalo chamber of commerce on Saturday evening last, the occasion being a dinner given in honor of Prince Pu Lun. He said:

"We do not ask that you admit our laboring classes. In the first place, we need them ourselves. We know also that it is not right that they should be permitted to come here and compete with your highly-paid labor, and besides we do not want them here, because they are not representative of our people. We agree with you that they should be excluded."

While there is some selfishness in this it is hardly probable that the Chinese nation would greatly miss all the workingmen that might come to this country were our doors thrown open to them. While all the European nations would no doube prefer to keep their bone and sinew at home there is not one of them but would consider it an affront were the United States to bar its doors to the entry of its workingmen. Consequently the position of the Chinese government on this matter is more than fair—it is liberal.

Considering this fact, it is evident that the Chinese have a just grievance against our Chinese exclusion law because it is too rigid with respect to other classes of that nation besides its workingmen. This complaint was uttered by Kong Kai Kah in these words:

"What we want is the chance to come here and see what you have to sell. Our merchants would like to be permitted to make the trip to this country and look over your products, but, unfortunately, they are practically prohibited from entering this country. If the Chinese merchants were permitted to come here with their goods and look over what you have you would need no agents or commercial travelers in China, for the reason that our merchants would quickly learn that America is the place to buy."

It will readily be seen that our exclusion law works to our own disadvantage in this respect and indicates that American opposition is based more upon racial dislike than upon fear of competition of Chinese labor. It may be said that the law does not contemplate the exclusion of merchants and travelers, but it has that practical effect. What American merchant would care to go to China to buy goods if he were compelled to comply with a system of photography and Bretillion measurements, such as the Chinese business man is compelled to undergo before he is permitted to travel in this country? Furthermore he runs the risk of being arrested without warrant by any petty official who might chance to see him traveling about.

For a country that desires to build up an outside trade with the world at large the United States hedges itself about with a lot of foolish restrictions, and none is more foolish and unreasonable than a portion of the Chinese exclusion law.

These Chinese emissaries have taught Americans a number of valuable lessons and it is hoped that our nation's lawmakers will have the good sense to profit by this latest lesson from the lips of Wong Kai Kah, even if his eyes are cut on the bias and his skin of a yellow hue.

THE "BIG STICK" ARGUMENT.

The superiority of American civilization over that of the eifete East was recently shown in the police court of Bayonne, N. Y., when Recorder Lazarus fined a man $5 for failure to take the law into his own hands and wipe up the floor with a man who had slandered his wife. John Vizgas has a young and comely wife, Kate, and she and her husband add to their income by keeping boarders, one of whom was Kimosky. The latter, according to Vizgas, told him that Mrs. Vizgas was keeping company with another man. Vizgas spoke to his wife about the charge and she denied it. Then he had her haled to the police court. When the recorder learned the facts he said to Vizgas:

"When the boarder carried stories about your wife to you what did you do to him?"

"I did not do anything to him," replied Vizgas.

"Why didn't you knock his teeth down his throat or wipe up the floor with him?"

"Why should I?" Vizgas asked.

"Because a man ought to protect his wife against such a scoundrel as the meddlesome boarder. Instead of coming to court you should have first knocked his head off and then come here and we would greet you as a hero. You are as bad as the boarder—a poor specimen of a man. Your wife is a good woman and you know it. You will pay a fine of $5 for not protecting her name."

The boarder was fined $15 for causing the trouble and advised to get a new boarding-house.

This is in line with the "big-stick" idea of President Roosevelt: "Shoot first and explain afterwards." It also agrees with the act of a New York jury which recently acquitted a man who shot his wife's paramour even after she admitted on the witness stand that she chased after the dead man.

It may be that Vizgas was entitled to a fine for doubting his wife's fidelity and bringing her into court, but when a man is fined for failure to break the law it is about time to withdraw all objections to lynchings and let every man be a law unto himself.

It is certainly a peculiar state of mind that is given expression by this justice.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

"No church and no man has a right to ask any man to believe in that which he cannot construe into thought," said one of the bishops of the Methodist church at Los Angeles. That he was not rebuked is another evidence of the growing liberality of religious thought among the best learned men of the churches.

* * *

It is noticeable that President Roosevelt did not forget to mention the name of Gen. George B. McClellan in his address at Gettysburg on Memorial day. It is evident that he learns some things as he passes along.

* * *

A report comes from Eastern Oregon to the effect that a professor in a Normal school was rotten egged because he was guilty of the assertion that no one but a hobo would be found working in a brickyard. It is alleged in this instance that the professor objected to one of the young lady teachers receiving attention from one of the employes at the yard, and in the course of criticising her conduct gave voice to the sentiment. It is a waste of words to argue with a man like that. Even bad eggs might have been put to more profitable use.

To lay the blame for present business conditions on the strike of the masters and pilots on the great lakes is neither fair nor just. The strike is rather a result of the conditions, and the masters and pilots were somewhat stupid that they did not forsee that such a struggle would be welcomed by the vessel-owners at this time. It is noticeable that the Lumber Carriers' association quickly came to terms with their masters and mates because there was lumber to be moved. The Lake Carriers' association and the masters and pilots will reach an agreement as soon as there is a desire to move ore, never fear. The chances are that if there had been no strike but few ore carriers would have been put into commission until July, for the reason that there was nothing for them to do.

Speaking of the suicide of Nick Schafer, an employe of the S. C. Jackson mill, the Tenstrike Tribune says: "The reason for his rash act is unaccounted for," and follows this with the sentence: "He had been on a spree for several days and was trying to sober up." What kind of evidence does the Tribune want as to the cause of a suicide?

James E. Roderick, chief of the department of mines of Pennsylvania, wants the age limit lowered so that boys can work before they are 16 years old as the present limit works a hardship to thousands of children and their mothers. It is presumed that most of the mothers and children spoken of are those who have been deprived of the support of fathers and husbands through the criminal carelessness of the coal mining companies in failing to provide sufficient safeguards against accidents. If there is a demand on the part of these to send children into the mines it certainly indicates a sorry condition of affairs. If people cannot live in the Pennsylvania mining regions without sending youths of tender years into the mines then it is the duty of the state to provide for them.

The heat from a dreadfully warm summer that was predicted by certain weather-wise gentlemen has not been particularly oppressive in Duluth up to date.

The Ely Miner says that the Vermilion range has not had a county officer in several years and that it is "entitled to representation." The officers who represent the people in county affairs are the commissioners. The Vermilion range has one of these. The other officers do not represent anybody but themselves. If the Vermilion range has a better man for county treasurer than any other section of the county, let him get it if he can, and let the Miner exploit his virtues. The people have the say, not the politicians. But he is not entitled to the office because the Vermilion range should have "representation."

Professor Henderson of Yale college, assailing the police department of New Haven, says the department is "doing its ineffectual best," and adds "if the culprit had left his card the police would not have found it." The first part of this criticism aptly applies to many departments of city government as well as to police. The Herald knows some in Duluth that are doing their "ineffectual best" right now. The American people will be thankful to this Yale professor for his apt definition.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Los Angeles is a very nice city," said L. E. Cooke, of the Barnum & Bailey circus. Mr. Cooke is one of the best known people in the show business in the United States, being the right hand man for Mr. Bailey, owner of the circus, and has been getting to and fro over the United States for a couple of decades.

"Yes, that California climate is very mild in the neighborhood of Los Angeles and Pasadena, but I would not want to live there. There is no question as to its beauty and general attractiveness, but the mildness of such a climate has the effect on people from other parts of the country of making them desultory, at least so far as my observation goes.

"You take a person from the North and such a person in the South or in such a mild climate and if they had any particular energy to start with it tends to put the brakes on it to keep them there long enough. I have lived through both seasons in the warm climate and I know the effect it had on me."

Mr. Cooke completed arrangements while here for the Barnum & Bailey circus to exhibit on the fair grounds in August, as by taking down a few fences and other obstructions sufficient ground can be had to lay out the show. The ground is optioned and the date withheld until the rest of the proposed dates in this territory can be ratified. Owing to the condition of things at Sault Ste. Marie, with the failure of the Clergue plants there, the dullness in the copper country and the lake strike interfering with the head of the lakes, Mr. Cooke says the show people debated some time before deciding to come up into this neighborhood.

There is a pretty good one told on a bride and groom who recently stopped at the Spalding. They registered from Philadelphia, the groom's home, and had been married in Superior.

The morning after the wedding, the Superior friends of the couple telephoned to the hotel to ask a friend there to arrange to have some boiled rice furnished the groom for breakfast. The friend was accomodating and endeavored to have the rice sent up to the room, where the happy couple were expected to eat. When the rice went up the folks had left the room. They were not in the dining room. A hasty search revealed them in the cafe. They had been too cute to parade through the lobby of the hotel for the benefit of any who wished to observe them with curious eyes, and had gone around by Fifth avenue and Superior street. So the rice was sent to them in the cafe.

Col. Bryan's Joke.

Commoner: A subscriber writes at length to give his reasons for believing that the reorganizers will capture the St. Louis convention. He is earnestly advised to search for the moarl in the following story: A resident of a Minnesota swamp district heard that frogs' legs were commanding a high price in Chicago. "How much will you pay for frog saddles?" was the question he wrote to a Chicago commission house. "We'll pay $1.50 per dozen; how many can you furnish?" replied the commission house. "Ten thousand dozen," replied the resident. A week later the commission house received the following: "I ship today three dozen frog legs, all I could get. I was misled by their hollering."

Tried to Rutte.

There once was a fellow in Butte,
Who, sad to relate, was a mutte;
He saw a ball game
And blew up at the same,
Because of his efforts to rutte.

Advanced to the refrigerator
With a view to relieving the hunger of her emaciated poodle, to which at that moment a mere bone would have seemed a toothsome morsel.
But when she arrived at her destination
Nothing but empty refrigerator shelves greeted her distracted gaze.
As a consequence of which lamentable fact the famished animal was obliged to retire without nourishment.

A Scientific Zealot.

Senator William A. Clark, a short time before he sailed for Europe, attended a dinner of scientists. In the course of this dinner the senator said:

"Science in an admirable thing. In these latter days, indeed, it is a thing as interesting and marvelous as a fairy tale. I have only one fault to find withit. It imbues some of its votaries with too profound a zeal.

"I have in mind when I say this a scientific zealot of Scotland—a professor whose especial delight was insects and bugs.

"There once visited this Scottish professor a younger scientist. The visitor remained over night, and in the morning his host said to him:

"'And how did ye sleep the nicht?'

"'Not very well,' the visitor answered. 'It was the strange bed, perhaps, but,' he ventured, 'I must confess—'

"'Ah,' said the professor, encouragingly, 'ye were just bitten by something, er?'

"'Well, to tell the truth, professor, I was,' the visitor admitted.

"'Just think of that!' cried the professor. 'Bitten, war ye? Noo, man, can ye say it was anything at all noteworthy that bit ye?'

"'Fleas, I think,' said the other. 'But such fleas for biting I never met in my life before.'

"'I should think so, indeed!' said the professor, in great glee. 'They're Sicilian fleas. I imported them myself.'"

Bein' Sick.

When I am really sick abed
It isn't ever any fun,
I feel all achy in my head
An' hate to take my medisun.
Th' sheets get stickyish an' hot,
But I am not allowed to kick
'Em off, or read, or talk a lot
When I am sick.

I hate for all the folks about
To come an' pat me on th' face
An' say, "Poor child, you'll soon be out,"
An' tiptoe all around th' place.
They go when I pretend to be Asleep—I do it for a trick;
I don't like folks to pity me
When I am sick.

My mother's dif'runt—I don't care
If she sits by me once 'er twice
An' says, "Poor boy," an' smoothes my hair;
She ain't tryin' to be nice.
They bring warm squashy things to me
For meals, an' make me eat 'em quick.
I'm mis'ruble as I can be
When I am sick.

Routine Only.

"It is embarrassing sometimes to pursue a direct line of questioning," said President Eliot, of Harvard, in telling about a recent visit to New York, says the New York Press. He just had dined at a hotel in Fifth avenue, where the man who takes care of the hats at the dining room door is celebrated for his memory about the ownership of headgear.

"How do you know that is my hat?" the collegian asked as his silk tile was presented to him.

"I don't know it, suh," said the doorman.

"Then why did you give it to me?" insisted President Eliot.

"Because you gave it to me, suh," replied the darky.

He got his quarter of a dollar.

Woman's Home Companion: "You dance the two-step beautifully. Who taught it to you?"

"My two sisters."

"I've read this joke in a newspaper, and thought it a good one. "O'll have to sprig it on some wan," he chuckled.

Shortly afterward Pat went to a dance. During the evening one of his partners said: "How beautifully you waltz! Who taught you?"

"My two step-sisters," quickly replied Pat, with a broad grin upon his face.

No Limit to the Game.

Here is another "war story"—attributed to the Chinese minister, Sir Chen Tung—says the New York Mail. He was being entertained in Washington recently and the conversation turned upon the called expression of Russian opinion that the farther Kuropatkin gets away from Kuroki, the harder it will be for Kuroki to reach him.

Sir Chen Tung, with the prudence of his race, did not so much as smile, but made the following contribution:

"When I was at Phillips Andover I went strolling one day in the fields with a young woman I admired. We encountered a very vicious bull, which undertook a flank movement. The farmer, who saw the situation, shouted: 'Fall back, fall back!' We fell back. But the creature came on. 'Fall back, fall back!' he cried again. 'I can't fall back any farther!' replied. 'We have reached the limit!' 'Limit!' limit!' screamed the farmer. 'Gosh blame your durn fool eyes! There ain't no limit to a game with a bull!'"

"Marriage For Fools."

Here are some of the maxims of the "Spirit Fruit" cult which has made considerable progress in Chicago:

"Marriage laws are for fools."

"Parents have no more responsibility in connection with their own children than with their neighbors' children."

"Man is free. He has no right to be limited to one woman or to one family of children. His neighbors' children are his children and his children are his neighbors'."

"Woman has a right to more than one man and man to more than one woman. Whatever 'Spirit' manifests a disposition to do is right."

"Love is universal. It is not limited to one woman or one man."

"Empty yourself of all personal desires and the desire of the universal spirit will manifest itself through you."

THE FUNNY FELLOWS.

Cincinnati Enquirer: "Say," remarked the village lawyer, as he entered the general store, "I want a ribbon for my typewriter."

"All right, sir," answered the new clerk. "Do you want one for her or for it?"

Washington Star: "The taste for classical music is something that comes with time and cultivation."

"That's right," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "I've noticed that some of these grand operas don't sound near as bad as they did at first."

Chicago Tribune: Teacher—Thomas, mention a few of the proofs that the earth is round, like an orange.

Tommy Tucker (who has been playing truant)—I didn't know we had to have any proofs, ma'am. I thought everybody admitted it.

Tit-Bits: "But, papa," wailed the young woman, "you can have no idea of how he loves me. He is willing to die for me this very minute."

"Well," said the old man, scratching his head, thoughtfully, "I don't know as I have any objection to that. I was afraid he wanted to marry you."

Cincinnati Enquirer: Miss Elderleigh—I suppose smokeless powder will reveal the horrors of war?

Mr. Knox—Yes; but it will never be able to conceal the ravages of time.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: Mack—What on earth did you go to that clairvoyant woman for?

Kate—I wanted to find out why I never can get any shirt waists made to fit.

Little Chronicle: Francis' mother had sent him to the butcher's one day to find whether he had "pig's feet." Francis soon returned with this statement: "I could not see. He had his shoes on."

Washington Star: "Why do men never gossip?" asked the woman who regards her husband as a great and good man.

"Because," answered Miss Cayenne, "they are too indolent. They insist on sending their wives out to get the news for them."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Le Sueur News: Sometimes in passing along the street I meet a man who, in the left lapel of his coat, wears a little, plain, modest, unassuming bronze button. The coat is often old and rusty; the face above seamed and furrowed by the toil and suffering of adverse years; perhaps beside it hangs an empty sleeve, and below it stumps a wooden peg. But when I meet the man who wears that button, I doff my hat and stand uncovered in the presence—yea! to me the very dust his weary feet have pressed his holy ground; for I know that man, in the dark hour of the nation's peril, bared his breast to the storm of battle to keep the flag of our country in the Union sky.

Le Sueur Sentinel: The British find that they must fight the natives all the way to the capital of Thibet. It is quite likely that a foreign force would have to fight us all the way to our capital and it is not strange that even the semi-barbarous Thibetans feel the same way.

St. Cloud Times: Col. Bryan says "Trusts are to be the paramount issue." A good idea; farmers have discovered that the steel trust has added $1 to the price of every plow, that the wire trust has put the price so high that he can hardly afford to fence his fields, that the lumber trust has increased by 50 per cent the cost of the barn he builds, that the twine trust is taking robber toll from his wheat crop, and that the labor trust has made help a rare and ruinous delicacy and so on through all the articles he has to buy. But then didn't Mr. Roosevelt in a speech at the New York Wool Exchange in October, 1896, say "Mr. Bryan and his adherents have appealed to the basest set in the land, the farmers."

From Mother to Teacher.

Louisville Herald: A man who sells text books, and who is not without a sense of humor, was in Louisville last night. This man—John L. Young of Roanoke, Va.—has collected for the entertainment of his customers a long list of "letters from mothers to teachers."

The letters redound in humor and odd sayings. A few of them follow:

"Dear Miss Baker: Please excuse Rachel for being away those two days. Her grandmother died, to please her mother."

"Miss ——: Frank could not come those three weeks because he had amonia and information of the vowels."

"Teacher: John says you want to see me. I have a beer saloon and nine children. Business is good in morning and afternoon. How can I come?"

"Miss ——: Please let Willie come home at 2 o'clock. I take him for out a little pleasure to see his grandfather's grave."

That Duluth Train.

Houghton Gazatte: Now there's that night train again. We have had it started and stopped more times than you can count. Everybody who ever uses it wants it. Everybody is glad the coal supply is big enough once more to warrant running the train and everybody is happy to read the last announcement of the time set for resumption of operations on the through sleeping care route between Calumet and Duluth. But nobody will believe that the train is actually going to run again until the cars can be seen whizzing by. But we all hope it is true this time.

The Boy Quay as a Trader.

New York World: As a boy, the late Senator M. S. Quay was always looking for a dicker or trade. His old schoolmates say he never traded a knife, marbles or any other trifle that he did not best the boy with whom he traded. Young Quay's knife trade with Harry White, now presiding judge of Indiana county, Penn., is historic about Dillsburg. Quay owned a pocketknife, the envy of every youngster in Dillsburg. Harry White made offer after offer for a trade, but his offers were declined.

Finally Quay met White and told him he thought they might arrange a trade. "I haven't got that knife with me, though," said Matt, "and if we do trade you'll have to go after it."

"All right," young White answered. "What boot do you want?"

"If you'll give me your knife, a dozen marbles, your tin squirt gun and that horsehair fish-line I'll trade," young Quay answered.

"I'll do it," White agreed, handing him all the articles. "Where'll I go after your knife?"

Matt stored the knife, marbles and fish line in his pocket and said: "Go up to the tannery. I was fooling around there this morning and dropped my knife in the vat. I and some of the boys fished for it for more'n two hours and couldn't find it. But it's in there. Go up and maybe you can get it."

Young White protested, but it was no use. He fished in the vat for days, but without finding the knife.

SICK OF ALBERTA.

Perham Enterprise: John Schmidt, who owns 160 acres in section 8, town of Corliss, came home Tuesday from Alberta, Canada, a little poorer but much wiser than when he went there three weeks ago. He went up to Alberta last June and took a claim east of Edmonton, of feed out of sight. He said there was very anxious to sell his farm in Corliss and move to Canada.

When he went back this spring, however, he found things different. Board was high, provisions scarce and the price of feed out of sight. He said there was a heavy snow storm in that country last August which ruined the wheat crop. A man who operated a thrashing machine told him that he visited thirty-six farms after the storm and found only two in which there was any grain that could be threshed. A half dozen large elevators built on the line running through Northern a few years ago have never had a bushel of grain in them yet. He said he encountered a storm of snow and sleet in Alberta last Friday which fully convinced him that the country was too near the North Pole to suit him. His claim was near a new railroad, but he says someone else can have it, that Otter Tail county is good enough for him in the future.

Mr. Schmidt predicts that the farmers from this vicinity who went to Alberta this spring will be glad to come back in a year or two. The only ones who are prosperous on this Canadian land boom, he says, are the real estate men, hotel men and railroad companies.

Love's Young Dream.

Tit-Bits: The wind swept a cloud of dust about them as they turned the corner of the street.

"Did you get any dust in your eyes, darling?" he asked fondly, holding her closely to him as though to keep the too eager wind away.

"Yes," she murmured, searching for her handkerchief.

"Which eye, dearest?"

"The right one, love. Did you get anything in yours?" she asked anxiously, seeing his handkerchief appear.

"Yes, darling."

"The right one, love."

"How sweet!" she exclaimed, with a glad light glowing in her well eye. "Do you suppose, dearest heart, that it could have been part of the same piece of dust that got in our eyes?"

"I hope it was," he said, beaming with one eye and wiping the other.

"Wouldn't it be sweet, dear?"

"Wouldn't it, love?"

And the wind howled round the corner as though it was in pain, and from the house three doors below a dentist's sign fell off into the street.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman has clothes enough when she has more than anybody else in her set.

The man who says that the only thing in women that interests him is their necks is always peeking at their ankles.

A woman thinks her husband is distinguished looking when she can't find anything else about him to brag of.

Adam never had to give over his morning paper to his wife to see if there were any bargain sale advertisements; yet he thought he had troubles.

A girl sometimes has hard work to make a man think she isn't interested in him when she is; it is no work at all to make him think she is when she isn't.

PROMINENT IN CHURCH

Rev. Hakan Olson of Swedish Lutheran Dies at Port Wing.

Word has been received in Duluth of the death of Rev. Hakan Olson at Port Wing, Wis. It occurred yesterday afternoon of heart failure with no previous illness. Rev. Olson is well known in Duluth where he served as pastor for a short time for the Swedish Lutheran church during 1903. He has been prominent in the work of the Augustana synod of Lutheran workers and his career is interesting.

Rev. Olson was born at Janshog, Blekinge, Sweden, July 11, 1831, and came to America in 1852. He settled in Illinois where he worked as a blacksmith and in 1855 began the study of theology. In 1857 he was called to the Swedish Lutheran church at New Sweden, Iowa. He was ordained as a minister at the Augustana synod meeting in June 1860. He served as pastor at churches at Swedsburg, Iowa, Mariedahl, Kas., Henderson Grove, Ill., and at Port Wing, Wis. He was the oldest member prominent in the work of the synod. He is survived by five children, two daughters reside in California and one daughter and a son in Wisconsin. No details have reached Duluth concerning the funeral ceremonies.

SUPPORTS THE FAMILY

Woman Sustains Eight Children While the Father Drinks.

"If it wasn't for the fact that your wife would be left to take care of the children, I would send you to the rock pil for three months," said Judge Windom to Andrew Slachzich, a Pole, who lives at the corner of Twelfth street and First avenue west. "You will have to learn that wife-beating isn't tolerated in this country at least. If you ever come in here again on this charge you will be given the limit of the law, and the county will take charge of the children."

Slachzich was arrested on the charge of illtreating his wife, and failing to provide for his family, which consists of eight small children. The woman was unable to speak English and gave her evidence through an interpreter. She stated that her husband turned over but a small part of his wages to his family.

"We get what is left after he buys all the whisky he wants," said his wife through the medium of the interpreter.

"Does he give you any money?" asked the court.

"A little."

"How do you live?"

"We have a cow and a garden where we raise some potatoes and other vegetables."

"Are any of the children old enough to work?"

"No, sir. The older ones are going to school," replied the mother.

The woman was neatly dressed in spite of the fact that she is compelled to support a family of eight small children.

The immediate cause of the arrest was a threatening note, which is claimed to have been left by Slachzick for his wife, in which he is alleged to have threatened her life.

This is not the first time that the police have been compelled to interfere in the interests of the wife. Capt. of Police Rosche testified that on several occasions officers had been sent to the house to prevent Slachzick from abusing his family.

Judge Wondom fined the prisoner $30 and costs and in default of payment committed him to the county jail for a period of forty days. In the meantime, should the woman need help, the county will take charge of the children. She stated, however, that she thought she could get along just as well without her husband as with him.

JUDSON GETS THE LIMIT

Pleads Guilty to Stealing From Pittsburg Steamship Company.

The maximum penalty of the law was given to Rufus K. Judson by Judge Windom, in the municipal court this morning.

Judson had been arraigned on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, to which he had entered a plea of not guilty. His hearing was set for this morning, but on a motion by C. E. Adams, the acting county attorney, the charge of grand larceny in the second degree was withdrawn and a charge of petty larceny substituted. Judson pleaded guilty to the latter charge, and Judge Windom sentenced his to pay a fine of $100 and costs or spend ninety days in the county jail, which is the maximum sentence which can be imposed by the municipal court.

Judson was employed by the Pittsburg Steamship company to act as steward on one of its boats which was lying in winter quarters here. He is claimed to have confiscated a number of rugs, blankets and other supplies and to have disposed of them to second-hand dealers for a small sum of money.

His attorney, J. H. Norton, made a strong plea for mercy on the ground that it was the young man's first offense, and that the boats would soon be running, and if given a long sentence he would lose his summer's employment.

"I think all possible leniency has already been shown in allowing the charge of grand larceny to be withdrawn and the lesser charge substituted. The offense might have meant a term in the state prison for him," said Judge Windom, in passing sentence.

"I would have more sympathy with a man who entered a stranger's house and stole some goods than for a man who steals from an employer by whom he has been placed in a position of trust. The former merely commits a theft, while the latter is guilty of that and also of breaking the trust which his employer places in him. I do not see how the prisoner can expect any further leniency from the court."

LOST MAN

Kills Himself When Injured By a Fall.

Butte, Mont., June 2.—Word from Grangerville, Idaho, says that searching parties have found the body of Samuel Benton, a miner, who was lost in the mountains in the Salmon river country over a week ago. An ugly bullet hole in the head told the cause of death.

The searchers followed Benton's trail and found where he had fallen over a bluff near the river. In falling he broke his leg and dragged himself to the river's edge and back into the brush where he ended his life rather than face pain and starvation. The body was buried in the hills where found.

LIMIT FOR MINES.

England Has Said Nothing to Russia or Japan.

London, June 2.—Earl Percy, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, replying to questions in the house of commons today, said that no representations had been made to Russia or Japan regarding placing naval mines in the far East outside of territorial limits. The subject, he added, was engaging the careful attention of the government. Asked if, in view of the increased range of modern projectiles, the government was prepared to recognize any extension of the three-mile limit, Earl Percy answered in the negative.

FIND HIM DEAD

Charles Clark, Sawmill Worker, Dies Suddenly on Sidewalk.

Complained of Not Feeling Well—Nothing Is Known of Family.

Charles Clark, an employe of the Red Cliff Lumber company, was found lying dead on the sidewalk on Thirty-ninth avenue west, early this morning.

Clark was boarding with Mrs. Hancock of 108 Thirty-ninth avenue west. He had complained of not feeling well the previous night. He retired early, and that was the last seen of him until this morning when the members of the family opened the door and found him lying dead on the sidewalk.

It is the supposition that he suffered from suffocation or nausea during the night and arose to go outside, hoping the fresh air would revive him. He dropped dead between numbers 108 and 110 Thirty-ninth avenue, where he was found this morning.

Coroner Boyer was notified, and the body was taken to the undertaking rooms of M. J. Fillatrault in West Duluth. An autopsy was held there by Dr. Boyer and Dr. Payette and it was found that death had been due to heart failure.

Clark was a man of about 34 years of age. He had been employed for some time previous to his death by the Red Cliff Lumber company and was very well known through the West End and West Duluth. Little was known of his family or relatives, however. As far as could be ascertined today, he was unmarried and the authorities could not learn of any relatives of the deceased at the head of the lakes.

The body will be held for a few days while further investigations are made, to discover, if possible, some friends of the man, and learn their wishes in regard to the disposition of the body.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Kennedy Stock company in "Another Man's Wife."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, with matinee Saturday, "Rogers Bros. in London."

KENNEDY COMPANY.

The Kennedy Stock company returned to the Metropolitan last evening and played "Another Man's Wife," one of Bartley Campbell's best plays. John J. Kennedy had a pleasing part, the role of Muggs giving him an opportunity to make the most of his fun-making proclivities. The company throughout was well balanced and the play was given a production that pleased everyone.

The specialties also were of a good order. Baby Dot, the Flamme sisters and Willard Dyer appeared.

ROGERS BROS.

"Rogers Bros. in London" will be at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday and Saturday afternoon. The play is full of bright songs and there are many opportunities for specialties away from the hackneyed line. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the performance, judging from its popularity in other cities, is the "American Beauty" flower song. Three revolving wheels are fixed above the stage, and from these depend scores of floral ropes which are grasped by as many girls as there are strands and are interwoven as the singing continues, after the fashion of a Maypole dance. The costumes in this scene are superb. Calcium lights in all the colors of the rainbow are constantly playing upon the scenes, and one can easily fancy one's self in fairyland.

WEST DULUTH DIRECTORS MEET

Finnish National College Board In Session at School.

Suggestion That Circuses Should Be Barred on Fourth.

The board of directors of the Finnish National College and Theological seminary, consisting of nine members, is holding its annual meeting today at the seminary, located at Smithville, on Spirit Lake. Most of the directors arrived in the city yesterday and proceeded at once to Smithville, where they remained over night.

The busines meeting started at 9:30 o'clock this morning. Considerable business of importance was scheduled to come up for consideration, the most important of which was the question of a new building for the school. The present quarters are found to be too small for the demands made upon it. It is hoped that the financial condition of the institution will allow the construction of a handsome brick and stone structure, with all the facilities of the modern American college. An up-to-date gymnasium is also planned for.

Exercises marking the close of the schol year at the college will be held tomorrow, commencing at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. The school opened so recently that there will be no graduating class.

The attendance from Duluth at the exercises will be large. The several numbers on the program will be in Finnish. Rev. E. C. Wuari, president of the college, will deliver an address, and a lecture on general history will be delivered by Rev. E. C. Saaranen, also of the college. Some of the pupils will deliver recitations, and several musical selections will be rendered by the college choral club.

WOULD STOP IT.

West Duluthians Would Bar Circuses on July 4.

The matter of whether or not there will be a Fourth of July celebration held in West Duluth this year will probably be definitely decided at a meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club tonight. Because Ringling Bros.'s circus is to exhibit in Duluth on July 4 it is thought likely that the celebration will be called off, the committee members having the affair in charge fearing that it would not be a success if run in opposition to the circus in question.

There is talk of having one of the West Duluth aldermen introduce a resolution at Monday night's council meeting, providing that no circus shall exhibit in Duluth on July 4 or Labor day. Such a resolution, if passed, would prevent the circus showing here July 4, unless a contract for a license has already been issued by City Clerk Cheadle. Mr. Cheadle is now out of the city, and will not return till Sunday. It was announced at the city hall this morning that no license had yet been issued, but it was thought likely that Mr. Cheadle had issued a contract for a license, which would mean practically the same as a license.

NEVER THOUGHT OF IT.

Raise of Longshoremen's Initiation Fee All Rumor.

"The rumor to the effect that the Longshoremen's union of Duluth had raised the initiation fee for members to $100 has no foundation," said a West Duluth member this morning. "I have heard of no such action being taken, and do not believe that the move was ever even contemplated. The regular admission fee is $25, and as far as I know there is no branch of the association that charges more. Our membership is limited, necessarily, for if we allowed anyone to come into the union that wanted to the result would be disastrous to everybody concerned. There are oftentimes now that there are not enough union members to perform all the work of loading boats that there is to be done, but no great inconvenience results to the vessel owners, for in such an emergency we call in outsiders to assist us. There are always enough men looking for such work to make up the desired working crew."

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Arthur La Voy has returned from Stillwater, Minn.

John Patterson and Peter Antille left yesterday for Split Rock.

Rev. K. E. Forsell will leave for Southern Minnesota points this week on a two-weeks' vacation.

A pleasant social dance was given last night at Gilley's hall by the A. O. U. W. lodge.

Fred Howe returned yesterday from a trip into the Big Fork country, where he secured a claim. He selected a piece of land more for its agricultural value than for the timber on it.

W. H. Padeehe has arrived from Chicago to inspect the work going on at the blast furnace in the construction of the gas plant.

The Merrill & Ring tenement row was slightly damaged by fire this morning. The fire department extinguished the blaze before serious damage was done.

Mis Maud Elliott, of Two Harbors, was the guest of Miss Helen Bartley Monday.

Mrs. Robert Bartley is seriously ill at her home on Fifty-second avenue west.

Freimuth's Friday Bulletin!

A FEW FACTS WORTH KNOWING!

In view that a local house sees fit to advertise a sale of goods, representing such goods to come from the auction sale of the liquidating dry goods jobbing house of Sweetser, Penbrook & Co., New York, the following statement may be of interest to the people of Duluth:

The auction sale began a week ago Monday, May 23rd, at 1 p. m., Monday and Tuesday. The sale for most of the time consisted of the selling of prints, ginghams, shirtings, and the like; late in the afternoon the white goods were started and the sale occupied all day Wednesday, Thursday, and part of Friday (when dress goods and silks were offered) which sale was only partly finished that week, as Saturday afternoon was a holiday.

The goods were to be shipped and delivered in rotation as sold. Up to Thursday none of them, even the prints and ginghams which were sold the first day, were delivered—in fact, it is doubtful whether any of the goods were delivered last week, as the numbers of lots consisted of several thousands and it required considerable time and labor to assort and invoice them to the several hundreds of buyers—White goods were positively not reached for shipment last week.

We were the only house personally and directly represented at the sale through our Mr. Freimuth and our resident buyer, Mr. Davies. We bought goods the first, second, and third day of the sale, and up to today we have not received advice of the shipment of any of the goods purchased on either of the above days—and even if the goods had been shipped the following day of the sale they could not have reached Duluth yet, as the usual length of time from New York to Duluth is 10 to 12 days. We will further state that to our best knowledge and belief no Duluth house except ourselves bought any goods at this sale.

Without any further comments we leave it to every reasonable man and woman to make their own conclusions as to the value of the statement which appeared in an advertisement Tuesday last that goods were received from the auction sale by a local firm.

We have purchased liberally and largely and will tell you what bargains we have to give you, as soon as the goods are received. In the meantime do not be misled by any advertisement pretending to have goods from the sale, none have been received here by any house up to the present time.

REA BROS.' CASCARIN,

The Mild Liquid Laxative for Both Adults and Children.

All mothers know the difficulty in trying to make children take medicine. It is a black day for the little ones when their stomach is out of order and they have to take those nasty remedies which stick in the throat and leave a bad taste in the mouth all day long, for when these medicines are taken into the little one's stomach they gripe terribly and cause much annoyance. A friend told me what Cascarin had done for her children, and I have tried it to my satisfaction. I can honestly say that Cascarin has no equal. It is a pleasure in taking and after taking. My advice to mothers is to keep Cascarin, as I do, always on hand. It solves the problem of treating children's ailments and will save you a great deal of anxiety as well as worry many a time."

No need of your going to a doctor and paying big doctor bills when you can be cured by the best prescription that the world has ever known. There is only one genuine Cascarin. It is a liquid laxative and pleasant to the taste and does not interfere with the most delicate stomach. At all leading druggists, one size, 50 cents.

VIEWS OF BRYAN

Adopted By the Democratic State Convention of Nebraska.

Is Chosen to Head the Delegation to St. Louis.

Omaha, Neb., June 2.—The Nebraska Democratic state convention yesterday unanimously selected W. J. Bryan to head the Nebraska delegation to the national gathering at St. Louis and adopted a platform which reaffirms the Kansas City platform of 1900 and places before the public Mr. Bryan's views of what should be embodied in the platform of the coming national convention. Mr. Bryan was himself chairman of the committee on resolutions and wrote the platform. He had associated with him men who have been his most loyal supporters.

There was no opposition to the adoption of the platform as read, although one delegate attempted to secure the adoption of an additional plank pledging Nebraska Democracy to the support of the nominees of the St. Louis convention, regardless of whom they might be. He was ruled out of order, however, after reading his resolution.

There was a hot handful of delegates who had not been pledged to the support of a reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform and they came from Lancaster, Mr. Bryan's own county.

They did not, however, attempt to secure recognition, and Mr. Bryan sat with the Lancaster delegation while he was on the floor of the convention.

The proceedings were characterized by harmony and the delegates at all times appeared anxious to outdo each other in their support of the leaders and the principles they represented.

Several speeches were delivered, among them being addresses by Mr. Bryan in support of the platform, by Congressman Cochran and the delegates selected to the national convention.

"We, the Democrats of the state of Nebraska, in convention assembled, reaffirm our faith in Democratic principles as those principles were set forth in the last national platform of the party, adopted at Kansas City, in 1900.

"Democracy means the rule of the people, a government resting upon the consent of the governed and administered according to the will and in the interest of the people.

"With an increasing love for the principles of Democracy and an increasing confidence in their final triumph we look upon the present time as opportune for their earnest and courageous promulgation.

"With a chief executive who has disregarded constitutional limitations, stirred up antagonism between the races, employed all the powers of his office to secure a renomination and purchased political support by turning the treasury department over to the financiers and putting the law department into the hands of the trusts—with such a chief executive and with Republican leaders openly and arrogantly in league with organized wealth, the country imperatively needs a return of the government to positive and clearly defined Democratic principles. Democracy as taught by Jefferson and exemplified by Jackson is the support of the republic and offers the only relief from the plutocracy which now dominates the Republican party and through that party, the country.

"Democracy would oppose as inimicable to the welfare of the people all private monopolies and would exterminate them by the enforcement of the remedies suggested in the Kansas City platform. The failure of the present administration to enforce existing laws, or to suggest more effective laws, is conclusive proof that it lacks the desire, the intelligence or the moral courage to attack the conscienceless combinations of capital that have flourished during recent years.

"Democracy would relive the country of the menace of militarism and imperialism by following the example set by this country in its dealing with Cuba and giving the Filipinos an immediate promise of ultimate independence. The administration of a colonial system, according to monarchial principles, is repugnant to our theory of government and cannot be depended upon without the assertion of doctrines, which, if carried out, will undermine free government in the United States.

"Democracy would restore the tariff to a revenue basis and administer it for revenue only, thus demolishing the legal bulwarks behind which the predatory trusts have found refuge. Protection for protection's sake is an ingenious device for the exploitation of the masses by the privileged classes; it has brought great injustice to the consumers and has been the fruitful source of widespread political corruption.

"Democracy would administer the treasury department in behalf of the public, not, as now, in the interest of Wall street; it would prevent the recoinage of legal tender silver dollars into limited legal tender subsidiary coin. It would secure to the people a volume of standard money sufficient to keep pace with the demand for money. It would favor paper money issued by the government without the intervention of national banks. It would resist the attempt to establish an asset currency and branch banks, and it would oppose the loaning of government money to private banks, a scheme by which the people's money is employed to lay a foundation for a campaign fund and to bribe the financial interests to oppose any reduction of taxation. The present administration of the treasury department is progressively beneficial to the capitalistic class and progressively harmful to the producers of wealth.

"Democracy would make taxation more equitable by collecting a part of the revenue from an income tax, secured by a constitutional amendment, and would bring the government nearer to the people by the popular election of United States senators and direct legislation.

"Democracy would strictly regulate the railroads, thus protecting farmers and merchants from excessive rates and discriminations.

"Democracy would safeguard the interests of the wage earner and the artisan by providing for an eight hour day; by substituting arbitration for strikes and lockouts and by restoring the right of trial by jury, now suspended by government injunction.

"Democracy would secure to the surviving soldiers and sailors and their dependents generous pensions, not by an arbitrary order, but by legislation, which a grateful people stand ready to enact.

"Democracy would construct an isthmian canal without a violation of treaty obligations and without exciting suspicion among our sister republics of Central and South America.

"Democracy would regard public office as a public trust, provide for an honest and economical administration of government and punish with severity any betrayal of official duty."

A resolution was later adopted unanimously, as follows:

"The Democracy of Nebraska heralds to the Democracy of the nation, its steadfast respect for, confidence in, and loyalty to, Nebraska's great champion of pure Democratic principles and bids him God speed in his splendid efforts to prevent the national organization from falling under the baneful control of the enemies of the real Democracy."

The election of delegates at large was then taken up and the following were chosen by acclamation:

W. J. Bryan, C. J. Smythe, Omaha; W. H. Thompson, Grand Island, and Walter Philipps, of Columbus.

DASTARDLY CRIME.

Seven Minneapolis Boys Assault a Deaf Mute.

Minneapolis, June 2.—"Criminal assault" is the charge preferred against five young men now under arrest at the central station. Their victim was Mary C. Weier, a deaf mute, and the crime was the most atrocious of its kind ever perpetrated in the state.

Miss Weier was out walking last Thursday night with Joseph Despaelais, to whom she is to be married, and who, also is deaf and dumb. When they reached the corner of Monroe and Marshall streets, in Northeast Minneapolis, they met a gang of seven young toughs, one of whom struck Despaelais a heavy blow in the face, felling him to the ground. At once two men threw themselves upon him and held him fast, while the others attacked his fiance.

The girl fought as well as she could, but the brutes easily overpowered her, while her own affliction and that of her escort prevetned them from calling for help.

With two men holding him fast, Despaelais was compelled to remain and witness the crime. Then the gang fled and left him to care for the unfortuate girl.

Early Tuesday morning the police arrested Albert Berlau, a boy of 16, and Phillip Neuman, 18. Both were promptly identied by Miss Weier and Mr. Despaelais, and both subsequently confessed and gave the officers information which resulted later in the arrest of Jacob Olson, 16 years of age; Will Clark, 22 years old, and John Romachik, who is 18.

When placed under arrest the last three also confessed to their share in the crime. The police have the names of the remaining two boys who were implicated in the dastardly affair.

Dear Sirs: A year ago last February I was taken with a most severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism, so that it was impossible for me to help myself. Columbus, Ohio, June 2.—Within a few hours after the time the order for the troops to proceed to Hanging Rock was issued, four companies of militia from Ironton, Portsmouth, Gallipolis and Manchester were on the scene and the strikers had been dispersed. Col.. O. D. Thompson, in command of the troops, reported last night that perfect order had been restored and that there was no sight of further trouble.

Secretary John D. Bishop, of the state board of arbitration, left last night to offer his services in an endeavor to bring about a settlement of the strike.

FUNERAL OF MAYOR McLANE.

Baltimore, June 2.—The funeral of the late Mayor Robert McLane, who shot and instantly killed himself last Monday, took place yesterday. The interment was at Greenmound cemetery. There was no honorary pallbearers, the family of Mr. McLane preferring to have a private funeral. The body bearers included city officials and college friends of the dead mayor. Thousands of friends and admirers of the lamented chief magistrate of the city filled the sidewalks, with bared heads as the funeral cortege passed en route to the cemetery.

RAINFALL BEHIND

Precipitation to Date Far Below That of Last Year.

May Mean More Later—May Slightly Warmer Than Average.

The weather report for the month of May, as compiled by H. W. Richardson, of the Duluth United States weather bureau, shows that at the head of the lakes there has been a deficiency of 4.05 inches in precipitation since January 1. This explains in a measure why forset fires have been so prevalent in this region for the past few weeks, and as the yearly average precipitation varies little from year to year, it also probably means an unusually heavy rain fall for a period later in the season.

This is not a long range forecast made by Mr. Richardson, however, but merely an assumption from past records. The weather man is liable to a sever calling down from headquarters at Washington if he forecasts more than two or three days ahead.

The average temperature for the month just passed is shown by the report to have been 49 degrees, .4 above the normal for thirty-four years. The average temperature for May for this length of time is shown to be 48.6 degrees.

The warmest day recorded last month was 78 degrees above on May 20, and the lowest temperature recorded was 29 on May 16. The prevailing direction of the wind was from the northeast, and the total movement was 9392 miles for the month, considered unusually large. The maximum velocity was 43 miles an hour on the eleventh.

The precipitation was 1.48 inches, while the average is 3.45 inches, showing a deficiency for the month of 1.97 inches. The least precipitation for May on record was in 1900, when it came to only .62 inches.

There were ten clear days, seven partly cloudy and fourteen cloudy days during the month.

LITTLE SISTERS ROBBED.

Pittsburg, June 2.—The Little Sisters of the Poor were robbed yesterday of $3000 by a man who represented himself as a plumber. The man went to the institution, on Pennsylvania avenue, where an addition to the home for the aged is being erected by the sisters, and represented himself as the sub-contractor for the plumbing work in the building. While the inmates of the home had all gone to the chapel for prayers the fellow made his way to the office and carried away the $3000 which represented the collections made by the sisters to pay for the new building.

NAVY WILL CONTROL

Government to Own Seacoast Wireless Telegraph Systems.

Will Be For the Free Use of the Public.

Washington, June 1.—The navy department, as an initial step to the acquisition and the control by the government of all wireless telegraph systems in operation on the sea coasts of the United States, will shortly place its coast wireless telegraph stations at the disposal of the general public, newspapers, marine exchanges and telegraph companies for the transmission of commercial and news messages. No charges will probably be made for the transmission of these messages, but the government will not assume any responsibility in handling them. The details of the scheme are being perfected by the bureau of equipment, navy department, under the directions of its chief, Rear Admiral Henry N. Manney, and will, at the proper time, be communicated to the public.

Twenty-three wireless telegraph stations have been or are being established under the control of the navy department, and negotiations are in progress for obtaining sites for about as many more. Of the stations completed, or partially so, sixteen are on the Atlantic and gulf coasts, two on the Pacific and two in the West Indian possessions of the United States.

In taking this important action the navy department contemplates acquiring the exclusive right to use wireless telegraph on the sea coasts of the United States, and will recommend to congress, through the president, that the appropriate legislation to enable the government to control all coast wireless telegraph business be enacted without delay. In a communication to the secretary of the navy, sent through the naval general board, Rear Admiral Manney agreed that the control of coast wireless telegraphy apparatus by the government, exclusive of the private concerns, was necessary to the proper defense of the coast, and unless exclusive control were given to the government there would be constant interference with the naval wireless stations by instruments of private companies. Already complaints have been received that there had been such interference, thus making the transmission of wireless telegraph messages exceedingly difficult to all concerned.

At the instance of the navy department, the lighthouse board, which is under the department of commerce and labor, has directed a private wireless telegraph company to vacate the south shoal lightship off the Rhode Island coast, and when the order has been carried out the navy department will establish a wireless telegraph station there. In many respects this will be the most important station under the control of the department, for it is here that communication by wireless telegraph is first established with coast incoming trans-Atlantic steamers, and the last wireless messages are exchanged with vessels leaving New York for European ports. It is the desire of the navy department to have this station send its messages to and receive them from Newport, where they can be best handled by the land telegraph lines.

The land stations may, however, be established elsewhere, perhaps at Montauk Point, although Newport is preferable as it is only thirty-five miles from the South Shoal lightship, while Montauk is 110 miles distant. It be found that transmission over this distance is not satisfactory a land station will be established at Nantucket only forty miles from the lightship, but less desirable on account of the more limited telegraph and press facilities there. At whatever land station selected for the communication with the shoal lightship, the naval wireless operator in charge will deliver to the agents of the telegraph companies, press associations, individual newspapers and maritime exchanges reports of passing ships and news items sent from them. Ordinary commercial messages sent from these ships will be delivered to the agents of the telegraph companies for transmission, and such messages addressed to persons aboard passing ships will be handed to the naval operators at the land station, to be sent to the South Shoal lightship by wireless, and thence by wireless to the persons on the passing vessels. As a result of this arrangement the private monopoly that has existed in reports will be terminated from the South Shoal lightship. Similar arrangements will apply to all land wireless telegraph stations of the navy department.

Owing to a lack of trained operators some time may elapse before the navy department's scheme can be carried out in its entirety, but there will probably be little delay in starting operations at most of the stations. Enlisted men of the navy will operate the wireless instruments. Some of them, rated as electricians, are now competent to do the work, and others are being instructed. The decision of the government to assume control of all wireless telegraph stations on the coast of the United States was the outgrowth of a discussion of the subject at a recent cabinet meeting. It was there determined that the matter of devising plans for the governmental supervision over the use of wireless telegraphy should be referred to the joint army and navy board, composed of members of the general staff of the army and the general board of the navy. From this board the matter went to the naval bureau of equipment, whose chief, Rear Admiral Manney, produced arguments showing the necessity of control by the navy department, which convinced the administration of the desirability of taking coast wireless telegraphy operations out of private hands. There can be no interference, however, with private stations until congress passes the law or laws necessary to governmental acquisition of wireless systems on the coast.

OPPOSED TO CORTELYOU

United States Senators Want Dryden to Run Campaign.

New York, June 2.—President Roosevelt's selection of Secretary Cortelyou to be Republican national chairman has aroused antagonism where it was unexpected. It was learned last night that the recent visit of Senator Boice Penrose of Pennsylvania to New York city was for the purpose of consulting with Republicans about an effort to concentrate on some candidate for national chairman to defeat Secretary Cortelyou, and that the opposition has selected John Fairchild Dryden, junior Republican United States senator for New Jersey.

It is learned that the senior United States senator for New Jersey, John Kean, is not at all unfavorably impressed with the suggestion that his colleague, Senator Dryden, would be the man to elect national chairman, and that in this matter he and Senator Penrose and their friends have the powerful support of United States Senator Eugene Hale of Maine.

It was said that the United States senators who favor Mr. Dryden do so, first, because they are nettled at the idea that President Roosevelt should have selected Mr. Cortelyou without consultation with any of them, or with any of the leaders of the party; second, because Mr. Cortelyou, in their opinion, is not the man for the substantial responsibilities of the place, being little known to the great financial interests, whose aid must be sought in the coming battle; and third, because Senator Dryden is a millionaire a score of times over, and is a good producer himself, besides having the confidence of the financial and commercial interests in all the great centers of the country.

Those in the movement to defeat the president's selection of Mr. Cortelyou declared that they would be successful in supplanting him with Senator Dryden at Chicago. They added that the opposition to the president's selection was growing, and that more United States senators than have been named believed that Senator Dryden should have the place.

President Roosevelt's friends at the Union League club said last night that the United States senators could howl all they liked, that the president had selected Mr. Cortelyou to be national chairman, and national chairman he would be.

CANNON IS LIKELY

To Have Second Place on Republican National Ticket.

The Booms of Fairbanks and Hitt Have Declined.

Washington, June 2.—The vice presidential pendulum, which was for several months fitfully suspended over the head of Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, recently swung out of its orbit and brought Speaker Cannon beneath its point. It then went still further out of plumb until it touched the venerable head of Congressman Hitt of Illinois, where, apparently, it was ready to stop. Now it has swung back, and it looks as if, after all, Uncle Joe would have to pay the forfeit.

When Mr. Cannon gave out his now famous interview in which he said, as emphatically as a statesman and politician can say anything, that he did not want the nomination and would not take it, he thought that he had pushed the pendulum aside for good. But as he was gayly taking leave of Washington, firm in the belief that he had no more serious business on his hands for the coming summer than to write the brief speech which he will deliver as permanent chairman of the Republican national convention, a colleague came up behind him in a spirit of fun, held his hand over him, and said:

"Heavy, heavy hangs the pendulum over thy poor head." Fine or superfine?"

"Fine," quickly responded the speaker.

"You're it," promptly said his tormentor "and you must pay the forfeit"

Now, according to all the indications, Mr. Cannon must accept the decision.

The Fairbanks movement seems to have run its course, the pendulum has swung back from Hitt, and apparently it is going to remain suspended over the blond head of the speaker. During the present week President Roosevelt has had many conferences with influential senators and other Republicans, and as a result there is a firm conviction in the minds of those who are most closely identified with the preparations for the coming convention and the fall campaign that Mr. Cannon will be nominated on the ticket with Roosevelt and that he will not be able to decline.

The Hitt boom was spontaneous and popular for a time, but it began to decline when Mr. Hitt's age was taken into account and the fact became generally known that he is not sufficiently vigorous, mentally and physically, to be put in direct line for succession to the presidency. Mr. Hitt is only two years older than Mr. Cannon, it is true, but practically he is at least ten years his senior. He will be 71 in January, and has the appearance of a man nearer 80, while Mr. Cannon, who is 69, is in all respects as young as most men of 55.

Mr. Hitt has all his life been a student and dreamer, while Mr. Cannon has been an active, hard working man of affairs and has managed to mix politics and play with his work to such an extenpt that the duties of his office have had little or no effect upon his mental and bodily strength. He has always taken a very prominent part in the social life of Washington, has attended stag dinners and card parties, and has been known even to cut a pigeon wing occasionally at some of the informal dances which he has attended at the homes of his friends, while Mr. Hitt has remained almost secluded in his study or in the drawing room of his own residence. Mr. Hitt is looked upon as an old man, while Mr. Cannon is in as good trim to start in for a political campaign as he has been at any time during the last fifteen or twenty years.

It is conceded that Illinois will be one of the pivotal states this year, as much so as Indiana, and Mr. Cannon's popularity with Republicans throughout the country, his tight grasp on the political situation in his own state and the prominence he has gained as speaker of the house are all elements of strength to such a degree that the Republican leaders think his nomination would strengthen the ticket.

The Republican leaders do not hope to get the consent of Mr. Cannon in advance, but it is the general opinion here among Republicans who have been giving much thought to the subject during the past few weeks that when the convention meets it will be found that the desire for his nomination is so general that it would be the part of wisdom to nominate him and that he will have no valid excuse for declining.

Among the Washington politicians the belief has therefore become fixed that the ticket which will be nominated at Chicago in June will be that of Theodore Roosevelt of New York and Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois.

WAS MISSING MANY YEARS

Jay Skinner Back In Kalamazoo For Father's Estate.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 2.—Sixteen years ago J. Jay Skinner, who at that time was residing on his farm in Cooper township, disappeared so mysteriously and completely that nothing was ever heard of him, until a few days ago. He left behind a wife and four children.

After Skinner had been missing for 12 years, his father, Henry V. Skinner, died, leaving an extensive estate to be divided among his widow and the children.

Some months ago the heirs of Henry V. Skinner asked for a partition of the estate, which included among other holdings, about $15,000 in real estate. The division was made in the circuit court, the property which would otherwise have been inherited by J. Jay Skinner being divided among his children as his heirs, he being dead from a legal standpoint.

Everything would have been satisfactory, were it not for the fact that last week J. Jay Skinner appeared at the home of his mother, alive and well, and wants his share of his father's estate.

Skinner says in explanation of his strange disappearance: "I simply went away. If they did not know where I was, it was because they did not follow me. I did not run away. I will admit that I grew a trifle careless about my correspondence with my folks," this with a peculiar smile, "but you know a fellow will grow careless about such things sometimes. I do not know where my wife is. I have not yet taken the trouble to look her up. You can see that since I left here, I have been everywhere. I have been in hell. I have been in South Africa, Egypt, Macedonia, across the Sahara desert, in Alaska, in Mexico, South America, in all the British possessions, in the Alberta country, in the Philippine islands, and I guess everywhere, with the exception of Germany and Ireland.

"I have seen the time when a dollar looked as big as a cartwheel and again I had wealth to spare. The old adage that 'a rolling stone gathers no moss' has been a proven fallacy to me, for in my rovings I have accumulated much. I have no friends and I want none. The sole reason for my returning, even now, is the fact that my mother is fast getting old and I wanted to see her again. When I started for home I did not know then that she was alive. I expect to leave again shortly, but as to my destination it is no more the affairs of the public than was my other departure. As for disappearing, I have every day seen more and been seen by more people than are in Kalamazoo county. As for being dead, I am 50 years old and still as active as any man in the country half my age.

"If you want to know any more, go to my wife; she is a better liar than I am. Good night."

RAISES ONIONS AND CELERY

Professor Steere, Great Michigan Scientist, Turns Humble Farmer.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 2.—Two miles from the campus of the university of Michigan lives a farmer professor, eminent among Michigan's scientists, who has given up his scholar's chair to plant seeds and raise crops.

Ask any of Michigan's 4000 students of today the question, "Who is Professor Joseph Beal Steere?" and he will not know. Put the same question to a European scientist, and he will need an hour to tell of Professor Steere's exploits.

Professor Steere holds a place among the world's master minds in zoology, and he has diverted the learning of a lifetime to raising onions and celery. For his achievements he is famous in Europe, and because of his present occupation his own university, two miles away, has forgotten him.

Professor Steere lives on a filled up lake, one of Michigan's curious geological formations. It is a tract of land in the hills, but level as a mirror, with a face of ink-black muck and loam. This place fascinated the great scientist, with its possibilities for money in onions and celery.

Here, in farm clothes and cowhide boots, labors the man who collected for the Buffalo exposition exhibits from South America, and was one of the first scientists to give the United States government definite information about the Philippines; the man who has increased the world's knowledge of animals by discovering 100 new species, and a new genus.

His first scientific trip was from 1871 to 1876, in South America, Formosa and Australia; the second in 1879 at the mouth of the Amazon. He went to the Philippine islands in 1887 to 1888, and in 1900 the Smithsonian institute sent him to study the debatable land in South America between Peru and Bolivia.

The most signal success of his work was the discovery in the Philippines of a new species of animal, the anao or tamarou. This animal is a dangerous beast of the island of Mindano, with a pair of horns so formed that when its head is lowered they set like bayonets at charge. The beast plunges straight through the jungle thickets at any object which aproaches. In the Philippines Professor Steere is also credited with the discovery of fifty new species of birds and insects. Most scientists are satisfied to study for years in order to discover even one new species.

From observation of birds and insects he has been able to show that the Philippines were never a part of the mainland of Asia, but that the islands were at some time connected with each other, and that the separated seas may become land again.

The new theory of bird life, that only one species of a kind can exist in the same place, was promulgated by Professor Steere. In seabound islands all over the world the farmer-professor first observed this fact. Professor Steere has studied in person cannibal tribes never visited by other white men.

Yet the learned man turned aside from all this to focus his powers of observation and hig attainments upon the possibilities of American marsh soil. Here, as in the wild forests, he is studying in this case the laws by which nature produces profitable crops of onions, celery and lettuce. On the farm he will kneel for hours to pull weeds with his fingers, and then will slip away to sit in a corner on the field with a scientific book. Even the old sheds on the professor's onion patch are filled with the same contrasts between learning and hard labor. The most weather-beaten shed in miles around is filled with the rarest reptiles and birds of the Amazon.

Any day the government may ask him to leave farm drudgery to cross the ocean on some great quest, or he may hit upon a new development of the American onion.

WHEAT IS STRONG

Northwestern Markets Up Sharply on Unfavorable Weather News.

Liverpool Market Also Higher—Flax Dull and Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 2.—The wheat market started out stronger this morning and made a good advance in the first few minutes of the session. It eased off somewhat later but held fairly strong during the morning. Northwestern markets were strongest and this was due to reports of unfavorable weather in the spring wheat territory, too much rain and cold being reported. The Liverpool market closed 1/4@5/8d higher and this was a source of strength. Paris was unchanged to 1/4c higher.

In the Duluth market the July option closed 3/4c higher, in Minneapolis 3/4c higher, in Chicago 1/2c higher and in New York 1/2c higher. The September option in Duluth was up 1/2c and in Minneapolis 1/8@1/4c.

Car receipts at Duluth were 18 against 9 a year ago and at Minneapolis, 108 against 170 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 126 against 179 last year. Chicago reported 35 against 28 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 573,000 bus., last year, 599,000 bus. Shipments, 223,000 bus., last year, 118,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 22,679 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed 1/2@5/8d higher, in the Chicago market July corn closed 1/2c higher. July oats closed 1/4@3/8c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 1,168,000 bus, last year, 664,000. Shipments, 72,000 bus last year, 313,000 bus. Clearances were 31,480 bus.

Wheat started up with a rush on the Duluth board this morning, and trading was active. July opened 3/8c higher at 94 3/4@3/4c and sold at 95c at 9:42. It fell off to 94 3/8c at 10:05, sold at 94 5/8c at 10:25 and then fell off to 94 3/8c at 12:25. It worked up to 94 3/4c at 1 o'clock and closed at that price, an advance of 3/4c. September advanced to 92 5/8@92 3/4c.

Cash offerings were very light. The price paid for No. 1 northern ranges from 1 to 2 cents over July with No. 2 northern 2 3/4c and No. 3 1c.

Flax was dead and prices of all options closed unchanged.

Oats made an advance of 1c for on track and 1/2c for to arrive. Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 northern, 95 1/4c; No. 2 northern, 93 3/4c; to arrive, No. 1 northern, 95 3/4c; No. 2 northern, 94 1/4c; on track, 1 northern, 96 1/4c; No. 2 northern, 94 1/4c; macaroni, No. 1, 89c; No. 2, 87c. Shipments—Wheat, 69,356; oats, 12,755.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Sentiment In the Wheat Pit Was Bullish.

Chicago, June 2.—Sentiment in wheat today was bullish, due to cool, wet weather in the Northwest and to higher Liverpool cables. Shorts were active bidders for the July delivery, but offerings were very light. The fact that the Missouri crop report showed no improvement in condition of the crop helped to create a mere urgent demand. July opened 3/4@1/2c to 5/8@3/4c higher at 87 1/2c to 87 3/4c, and eased off to 87 1/8c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 143 cars, against 132 cars last week and 198 cars a year ago.

An urgent demand due to bullish crop news forced the price of July up to 87 1/4c. Late in the day much of the advance was lost on selling of September wheat by provision interests, other deliveries being affected by the weakness of that month. July closed with a gain of 1c at 87 1/8@87 1/4c.

Unfavorable weather, smaller receipts than expected and higher cables caused strength in corn. Trading was active, with shorts buying freely. July opened 1/2c to 1c higher at 49@49 1/2c, sold up to 50c and steadied at 50@50 1/4c. Local receipts were 264 cars, with 22 of contract grade.

During the latter part of the day much of the bullish sentiment disappeared, the market reacting considerably on liberal realizing sales. Final figures on July showed a gain of 1/4c at 49 3/8c.

Strength of wheat and corn was the dominating influence in trading in oats, the market ruling firm at a slight advance. July opened a shade to 1/4@1/2c higher at 29 1/8@29 1/4c, sold up to 29 3/8@29 1/2c but reacted to 29 1/4c. Local receipts were 96 cars.

An increase in the world's visible supply of lard caused moderate selling of that product. In consequence, the entire list made slight declines, but the strength of grains caused a rally. July pork opened down 12 1/2c at $11.45, and advanced to $11.57 1/2. July lyard was off 5c to 7 1/2c at $6.45 to $6.47 1/2. Ribs were down 2 1/2c at $6.65.

Close: Wheat—July, 87 1/8@87 1/4c; old, 88 3/4@89 1/4c; Sept. 89 1/4@89 3/8c; old, 89 3/4@89 5/8c; Dec. 89@89 1/4c. Corn—June, 49c; July, 49 3/8c; Sept. 48 3/4c; Dec. 44@44 1/4c; May, 43 3/8. Oats—June, 29 1/4c; July, 29 3/4c; Sept. 31 3/8c; Dec. 31 3/4c. Pork—July, $11.37 1/2@11.40; Sept. $11.50. Lard—July, $6.40; Sept. $6.55@6.57 1/2; Jan. $6.50. Ribs—July, $6.60; Sept. $6.75@6.77 1/2; Jan. $6.50. Rye—July, 67c; Sept. 63c; June, 66c. Flax—cash, N. W., $1.08 1/2; S. W. $1.06; Sept. $1.06; June, $1.00. Timothy—June, $3.00; Sept. $3.15. Clover—June, $10.75. Barley—cash, 39@55c. Cash wheat—2 red, $1.04@1.07; 3 red, $1.06@1.05; 2 hard, 92@93 3/4c; 3 hard, 86@95c; 1 nor. 98@$1.00; 2 nor. 94@98c; 3 spring, 85@96c. Corn—2, 50@50 1/4c; 3, 49 1/2@50c. Oats—2, 40c; 3, 29c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan: Wheat—There was a little flurry of strength early, a continuation of yesterday's bullish feeling, after which the market became dull and prices had a dragging tendency. Cables only partially followed our advance. There was a rather slow cash market everywhere, although cash prices are well maintained. Crop advices are favorable. It is a narrow market and by reason of the small stocks and recent experiences, what little short interest there is from time to time is nervous and runs quickly. We are within a few weeks of a movement of new wheat. Whether it is large or small with an export demand out of the question and a slow milling situation everywhere, it will soon be not an impertinent question to ask what are we going to do with it.

Corn—The market opened up rather sharply but met with free offerings and the improvement was pretty much lost. The market has been heavily oversold and this has covered freely the past two days. The cash demand is no better than fair and primary receipts are considerably in excess of a year ago and the estimate for tomorrow is liberal. The weather at the moment is the most important factor.

Oats—Like corn it has been largely oversold and probably is so to some extent now. There is a fair cash demand and receipts are only moderate.

Provisions—It was a heavy market with a continued absence of good support. There were liberal shipments of meats and of lard. The statement of stocks shows no change practically in the pork stocks, a small decrease in ribs and quite a large increase in lard. We are still unable to see a buying for accumulated holdings of an encouraging character.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co.: Wheat—A further advance of a cent a bushel, marking nearly 2 cents this week is sufficient inducemnt to holders to take profits on enough long wheat to cause the loss of a portion of the advance. There begins to be some anxiety regarding the crops in Southern Europe. Should this become intensified it is difficult to say how high wheat might sell, as the sole bear argument that we know of is the present indifference of foreign buying.

Corn—This market was again higher, selling over 50c for July and closing within a fraction of that price. There seems no doubt that the present movement in market will soon be over, in which event there seems nothing to prevent a further advance.

Oats—There was a further advance of 1/4 cent in both July and Sept and the close is at top. Receipts are moderate and the stock light, while all our advices point to very small reserves in farmers hands, which seems to us to mean a very bullish situation.

* * *

Cincinnati Price Current: Winter wheat advancing favorably but less decidedly than in previous weeks. Late corn planting delayed affecting moderately acreage intended. More replanting than usual. Warmer weather desirable. Oats progressing favorably.

NEW INFORMATION.

Grand Jury Has Some Concerning Schafer Murder.

Bedford, Ind., June 2.—The grand jury investigating the murder of Sarah Schafer, Jan. 21, is said to be in possession of valuable information not heretofore brought out. Suspicion has been directed to a Bedford citizen, who is said to have been out the night of the murder with a stranger who was found the same night by the night watchman in the boiler room of the Brooks & Carter stone mill, drying his clothing. The same man, it is said, was the purchaser of the empty whisky flask found in the alley near the shed where the body was found.

PARKER MEN CONFIDENT.

Managers Believe Judge's Nomination a Certainty.

Albany, N. Y., June 2.—Never were the managers of Judge Parker's canvass more confident of securing his nomination at St. Louis than they are today. One of his closest friends and advisers said to night:

"Nothing can prevent Parker's nomination. I make this statement on reliable information received from all parts of the country."

It is said here that negotiations are on with National Committeeman Guffey of Pennsylvania for swinging that state to Parker.

TEMPORARY WRIT

Issued In Case of Raleigh Newspaper Man.

Washington, June 2.—Judge J. C. Pritchard, of the Fourth United States circuit court, today granted a temporary writ of habeas corpus, ordering the release on bail of Josephus Daniels, president of the Raleigh, N. C. News and Observer, who has been held in contempt of court by Judge Purnell of the federal court. Judge Pritchard, accompanied by attorneys, went to Alexandria, Va., where the writ was signed. He will hear arguments in the case at Raleigh, N. C., tomorrow and will then give final decision.

STEAM CHEST BLEW OUT.

Half a Dozen People Injured in Akron Plant.

Akron, O., June 2.—In an explosion at the plant of the B. F. Goodrich company today half a dozen people were injured, some seriously. The door of steam chest weighing about a ton was blown off and it struck a pillar supporting the floor above. A portion of the upper floor fell with a number of employes. None was fatally injured.

ALASKAN OFFICERS

Are to Be Investigated by Federation Authorities.

Washington, June 2.—President Roosevelt today appointed James S. Young, United States district attorney at Pittsburg, a special assistant attorney general to investigate charges against a number of federal officers in Alaska. The principal investigation will be into matters affecting Judge M. C. Brown of the first division; Judge J. S. Wickersham of the third division and John Brady, the governor of the territory.

BRITISH CRUISER ARRIVES.

The Indefatigable Is in Dominican Watters.

Washington, June 2.—United States Minister Powell today cabled the state department from Port au Prince that the British cruiser Indefatigable, of the West Indian squadron, had arrived there. Its presence is attributed to the existing revolutionary troubles in that section. The commander of the gunboat Bancroft has advised the navy department by cable of his sailing from Guantanamo for Santo Domingo. With the arrival of this vessel there will be three United States warships in Dominican waters, the Newport, the Detroit and the Bancroft, with Commander Dillingham as the superior officer.

HUNTING FOR KINGSLEY.

New York Man Believed to Be In Utah.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 2.—Henry Baxter Kingsley, a wealthy resident of New York, who disappeared from his home in that city last November, is believed to be in the vicinity of Salt Lake City, and the police are now conducting a vigorous search for him. A man answering Kingsley's description stopped at a hotel at Provo, Utah, Monday night. He told the clerk that he was a business man of New York and had lost two fortunes.

The man said he was 80 years old, but he did not look to be more than 60 or 70.

LISTLESS MARKET

Trading In Stocks Very Dull, With a Sagging Tendency.

Early Declines Partially Recovered and the Close Irregular.

New York, June 2.—Only slight changes from last nights prices were made in the opening quotations in the stock market today, and the market was very dull. Some of the southwesterns were weak yesterday, made sharp fractional recoveries, Wabash rising a 1/2, and St. Louis Southwestern preferred 3/4.

Stock fluctuated feverishly for a time within small fractional limits. St. Paul, Reading, Erie, the Pacifics and Brooklyn Transit improved, while Copper, U. S. Steel and Pennsylvania fell off. Near 11 o'clock the movement upwards became more uniform.

Prices rose slightly above last night and then receded. The only important movements were in specialties. Virginia-Carolina Chemical fell 1, D. & H. 1 3/4, Consolidated Gas, 3 and American Express, allowing for the dividend, . Bonds were irregular at noon.

Additional declines were made in the early afternoon in the specialties, D. & H. dropping to 151 1/4 and General Electric and Smelting losing 1 and 1 1/2 respectively. Copper, United States Steel preferred, Sugar, Brooklyn Transit, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were also under moderate pdessure. D. & H. subsequently rallied 1 1/4.

Railway Steel preferred advanced 3/8 and United States Rubber preferred declined 1/8. Elsewhere the movement was without significance.

Consolidated Gas rallied 1 3/4 and prices generally recovered almost imperceptibly. Chicago & Alton and Toledo, St. Louis & Western rose a point, and Hide and Leather preferred 2 1/2. Chicago Great Western B, Sloss-Sheffield and Lump lost 1. Northwestern 1 3/4 and Lackawanna dropped 4 5/8. The closing was dull and rather irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: It looks as if all attempts to advance the market by a run in of the shorts had been abandoned. Liquidation has started up in a great many of the minor railroad issues. Business conditions grow steadily worse, and railroad earnings reflect these conditions. It is probable that before a great while cuts in dividends by the railroads of the United States will be in order. As soon as holders of stocks begin to realize that such cuts are probable, liquidation will break out again. I do not believe that such liquidation will be deferred very much longer, and think that the selling which has been noted in the smaller railroads will soon extend to the standard issues. The condition of the iron trade is about as poor as could be. I think that stocks are a sale on all rallies. The Pennsylvania makes another poor showing for the month of April.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co.: Market continues dull and listless with trade entirely professional. Conditions seem to remain about the same and we continue to look for lower prices. Liquidation in the stocks which are held by various pools seems to be imperative, and will necessarily force prices lower. We cannot help but feel that sales upon every little bulge will show profits.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is killing time. If it has any tendency it is a dragging one. Some of our correspondents think there is an increasing scattered liquidation by holders, but the market does not show it to any appreciable degree. There is no interest on the buying side at all events. It is just a dull, hopeless, helpless market. If anything so improbable as a rally should come, we think stocks should be sold on it.

* * *

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.: There is not enough activity to furnish any line at all on the market, and the big men are simply waiting. Just as soon as something definite is indicated I will let you know. The chances would appear to favor a moderate advance before much decline and a fair break in July.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The advance in Royale was the only feature of the market. It is understood to be based on the prospect of finding the Baltic lode in Isle Royale lands as a result of its location on section 15. Amalgamated Copper is dull and inclined to heaviness, but it refuses to be sold down. We think all the coppers are in good shape for a rise. A little courage and buying would bring about a wonderful change in quotations.

* * *

Hayden, Stone & Co. to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Coppers very dull again today with practically no change in prices and little feature to what little trading we have had. The metal market also continues very dull with the price 13 to 18 cents for Lake and foreigners doing most of the business. Everything points for this kind of a market to continue.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 2.—There was a sensational break in July cotton today. The change for the better in weather conditions recently and the continued light spot demand in connection with the persistent hammering of the bears seemed to have demoralized the bulls and since the market opened on last Tuesday there has been a steady and increasingly heavy outpour of long cotton. On last Friday July closed at 12.80. It reached 11.55 during this morning. A decline for a little over two business days of 125 points or on a pound one-quarter cents. July opened at 11.90 sold to 11.85 on the call, and broke 3 or 4 points at a clip until it reached 11.55. Following this offerings subsided somewhat and the bears started covering causing a slight rally but the undertone of the market remained nervous and excited.

Spot closed quiet, 40 points lower. Middling uplands, 12.00; ditto gulf, 12.25. Sales 979 bales. Futures closed steady; June, 11.30; July, 11.46; August, 11.25; September, 10.65; October, 10.31; November, 10.23; December, 10.23; January, 10.24.

STOLE BICYCLES.

Tom Jeanette, Twelve Years Old, In Police Court.

The charge of larceny is hanging over the head of Tom Jeannette, a 12-year-old Italian lad, who was arrested yesterday by Detective Fritz on the charge of having stolen two bicycles from in front of The Herald building.

The wheels were the property of two employes of The Herald. They were stolen last week. The police were notified of the theft and have been on the lookout for the culprits. The lad left one of the wheels to be repaired, and the owner of the shop, knowing the lad, asked him where he stole the wheel. The boy is claimed to have turned and run out of the store without answering.

The police were notified, and yesterday afternoon Detective Fritz dropped into The Herald circulating rooms and discovered the lad among the newsboys waiting for their papers. The case has been turned over to Humane Officer Withrow and it is not unlikely that some action will be taken to send the boy to Red Wing, as he is claimed to have been in trouble with the police before.

Boston, June 2.—Senator Gallinger, chairman of the congressional marine commission of inquiry, announced today that the hearings of the commission will be closed with today's session until after the Republican national convention, when they will be resumed at Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

SUED BY HIS DOCTOR.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

MARINE NEWS

HOLDS THE RECORD

G. A. Tomlinson Gets His Entire Fleet In Commission.

Several Association Boats Leave For Lower Lakes.

The steamer Sonora, of the G. A. Tomlinson fleet, left Two Harbors last night for lower lake ports. With the departure of this boat, every one of the six Tomlinson vessels is in operation along the lakes. The Saxona, one of the Tomlinson boats, was the first of the Lake Carriers' association steamers to go into service this season. One after another the boats of the fleet followed the Saxona's example, until now the Duluth man has them all in commission.

The Tomlinson boats are named as follows.: Saxona, Sultana, Sonora, Sonoma, Yosemite and Sinaloa. The Yosemite arrived in the local harbor this morning, light for grain. The Sianola started on her first trip down the lakes yesterday, with a cargo of grain for Buffalo.

The record of Mr. Tomlinson in getting all his boats in commission in spite of the difficulties with the Masters' and Pilots' association is one unequaled by any other individual member of the Lake Carriers' association.

HOWELL PLEASED

With Conference Before Civic Federation Committee.

Cleveland, June 2.—The special committee of the civic federation held a long conference with members of the advisory board of the Masters' and Pilots' association.

District Captain Howell, of the Masters' and Pilots 'association, who attended the conference was evidently pleased and intimated that some progress towards a settlement had been made.

"There is a better feeling on both sides. That is all I can say now," he said.

FOUR BOATS LEAVE.

Association Vessels Go Out of Duluth.

Yesterday afternoon four Lake Carrier association boats left the local harbor for lower lake ports. As reported in yesterday's Herald the steamer Robert Wallace, of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation company, left early in the afternoon with a cargo of flour for Buffalo. Later in the day the J. H. Reed and D. G. Kerr, each with 275,000 bus of wheat on board, and in command of Capt. Fred P. Houghton and Capt. E. D. Ballentine, respectively. The other steamer was the Shaloa, of the Tomlinson fleet, loaded with flax for Buffalo, and in command of Capt. Allan Fick. Hers was the first cargo of flax to leave the local harbor this season.

These three captains are prominent vessel masters. They have been holding off for some time in the hope that a truce could be between the carriers and masters and pilots could be adjusted, but when it became apparent that it might yet be some time before a settlement was reached they wired their withdrawals from the Masters' and Pilots' association.

A meeting of Duluth Harbor, No. 44, of the Masters' and Pilots' association was held last night, the regular meeting night. Members say that nothing of interest was done. Nothing new is reported at marine headquarters today. The members of the association show no signs of discouragement at the actions of the four captains in yesterday taking out boats belonging to the Lake Carriers' association. They say that in any strike there are bound to be some who will withdraw from their union and return to work, but say that this is not to be taken as a sign that the union will not win out.

The Wisconsin proceeded to the Great Northern elevators this morning to take on a cargo of grain. This will be her first cargo of any sort. She belongs to the Hawgood line and George Robarge is her master.

YOUNG CRAINE'S LETTER

On Exhibition at Local Harbor's Rooms.

A letter addressed to E. C. Maytham, harbor captain of the Masters' and Pilots' association branch at Buffalo, alleged to have been written by E. W. Craine, who, as mate, came up the lakes on the Saxona, with his father, Capt. D. P. Craine, was on exhibition at the local association headquarters this morning. In it young Craine expressed his regret at having gone out on the boat. He said he was very sorry that he had taken such action, and further stated that he would not again act in any capacity on one of the Carriers' association boats until the present difficulty with the masters and pilots was adjusted. The letter credits him with saying that he would not have gone out on the Saxona in the first place, but for the fact that his father was in command and wished him to do so.

The New Sweeps.

New sweeps for the Duluth Boat club eight are expected today, having been shipped by the makers in Philadelphia on Tuesday, by express. The nightly practice continues and the eight is doing good uniform work, with no change in positions since last report. It is understood that they are being coached particularly with regard to the use of their legs in the stroke, as strength is said to be economized effectively by the using of the lower limbs to push the body at each sweep. The weather is a continual source of discontent to the oarsmen, however.

OPENING OF BASEBALL

The mortality among the grandmothers in the city of Duluth today was tremndous. Along about 2 o'clock this afternoon, when the procession started from the city hall to the ball grounds, the average office boy got a "hunch" that his grandmother or his cousin or his aunt needed his immediate attention.

Down at the city hall the "hunch" was working at its best. Mayor Cullum decided his small boy had to be taken to the first baseball game of the year, and practically all of the aldermen thought that the city council should be well represented, and they were on hand to take their seats in the carriages provided by the management of the baseball club.

The procession was headed by the Third Regiment band. The band was followed by the aldermen, mayor and baseball managers in carriages, and the two teams following in tally-hos.

It marched to Eighth avenue west, where the band dropped out and the carriages continued to the ball park.

PARTNER TO BE HIS BRIDE

Prosaic Practice of the Law Develops Pretty Romance.

New York, June 2.—Pretty Lillian S. Newmark continues to make romance.

When this young woman studied at the New York University Law School, her beauty irresistibly impelled a fellow student to write her a note asking for an introduction.

George Goldstein, charged with the prank by the indignant young woman, refused to be barred from the lecture room, and served a mandamus upon Dean Ashley, compelling him to reinstate him.

At the November term of the Appellate division Miss Newmark was given her sheepskin by Justice Van Brunt and departed happy in her ability to prefix the word "attorney" before her name.

Miss Newmark became the partner of Attorney George H. Bruce, at No. 320 Broadway, and what happened after that is best told in a brief engagement notice published in today's papers. Next fall the business partnership of Bruce & Newmark is to be bound more firmly by matrimony.

It is said that Miss Newmark is the fairest Portia of the New York bar. When Attorney Bruce was confessing the prank Cupid had played him, his fiancee shyly took her place by his side. Like a corporation lawyer of great acumen, she refused to be interviewed other than on plain facts. "She has been my law partner since her graduation," said Attorney Bruce, "and will continue to be my partner for many years."

Miss Newmark is the daughter of Mrs. Ida Newmark of 506 162d street. She was educated in the public schools and studied for three years at the New York university.

"I am enthusiastic over the study of law," said Miss Newmark, "and there is not a branch of general practice that does not exercise a potent fascination over me. While I am particularly fond of real estate, I do not expect to devote all of my time to this alone."

"Would you take a divorce case?" she was asked.

"I do not see why I should refuse it," she answered, smiling. "If a man or woman shows me they have been imposed upon I will take up their case, although I will not look for this kind of practice."

"How about defending a man or woman accused of murder?"

"I would gladly do it," she declared with interesting spirit. "Perhaps I may have opportunity to do so some day. Who knows?"

YOUNG ATHLETES

To Put an End to Street Car Rowdies.

New York, June 2.—Seventy-five husky youths have been engaged by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company to suppress rowdyism upon their cars. In the number are about twenty men who have played football upon teams of minor colleges. They have taken the job for the vacation period, and will do plain clothes duty on the cars. The rest of the force is made up of men who have appeared in the prize ring, trained athletes, and fellows who are fond of a fight.

About half the men are to be uniformed, and others will go about as ordinary travelers.

It is the plan of the railroad company to have the men travel in pairs, well dressed, and looking as nearly as possible like young business men out for pleasure.

As soon as an obstreperous gang boards a car and begins to make things lively the athletes are to protest, and then get busy.

BURNED PAINTING

New York, June 2.—After having paid $500 for an oil painting of her late husband, Mrs. Andrew Reasoner, of East Orange, had the painting taken into her garden and burned. The painting was the work of the late Thomas Nast, cartoonist and artist, who died in South America while serving as an American consul.

Mr. Reasoner for many years was superintendent of the Morris and Essex division of the Lackawanna railroad, and lived in Morristown, where he and Mrs. Reasoner knew Mr. Nast. When Mr. Reasoner died Mrs. Reasoner went to Nast and commissioned him to copy a photograph of Reasoner.

Nast was just getting ready to go to South America, but told Mrs. Reasoner he would do the work there. While preparing to return to this country he was stricken with yellow fever and died, but had previously sent Mrs. Reasoner the painting at Morristown. When Mrs. Reasoner saw the painting she was dissatisfied. She declared the expression was poor, the face not natural, the hands too large, and almost every detail faulty. Mrs. Nast thought $1500 would be a proper compensation for the work, but Mrs. Reasoner offered $500. This was accepted, and the picture sent to East Orange. Then Mrs. Reasoner took it out and burned it.

You can't argue politics or religion with a man who has a cinder in his eye, because he is so deeply interested in getting out the cinder. Not but that politics and religion interest him more than cinders—but not while the cinder is in his eye. So it is with a woman who has just lost a servant—until a prompt Herald "want ad" brings her another you can't interest her in anything else.

"Hitch your wagon to a star," as Emerson advised; but if "your wagon" is full of troubles, hitch it to a Herald want ad, which is easier.

A good batsman will not strike at every ball a pitcher throws; but if he fails to strike at any of them his batting average will be small. In business life, "your turn at the bat" comes with the "business chances" advertised in these columns. They are not all "your kind," but some of them are—and in the game of life the old pitcher, "Opportunity," gives very few "bases on balls."

PERSISTENT RUMORS OF A GREAT BATTLE NEAR PORT ARTHUR

Continuous Cannonading Has Been Heard From South.

Steamers Arriving at Che Foo Also Report Firing.

Japanese Defeat Russians In Engagement Near Li Chaton.

Liao Yang, June 3.—There are persistent rumors that another great battle is in progress near Port Arthur. Continuous cannonading has been heard from the south.

An additional force of 15,000 Japanese is reported to have landed at Taku Shan.

Che Foo, June 3.—Steamers which have returned here from Newchwang report that firing in the vicinity of Port Arthur was heard last night.

They only saw two Japanese cruisers. Chinese junks which have reached this port from the Cha river, west of Taku Shan, report the Japanese have captured two Russian officers and forty soldiers disguised as Japanese.

Paris, June 3.—A dispatch to the Temps from St. Petersburg, says: It appears that the Russian relief column of 30,000 men, mobilized for the succor of Port Arthur has abandoned its project owing to the fall of Kin Chou and the landing of Japanese reinforcements."

Tokio, June 3.—A body of Japanese has encountered and defeated a mixed force of Russian cavalry, infantry and artillery near Li Chaton, nine miles north of Polandien on Monday last, May 30. The engagement began at 12:30 p. m., and lasted for two hours, the Russian troops being finally driven northward. The Japanese had twenty-six men killed, including one officer, and thirty-seven wounded, including four officers. The movement of the Russian forces southward indicates a possible effort to relieve Port Arthur. The Russian losses are unknown.

SEVERE FIGHTING

Reported From the Liao Tung Peninsula.

Mukden, June 3.—For two days past rumors have been current of severe fighting on the Liao Tung peninsula. Details are lacking but the fact that fighting has been general throughout the peninsula is officially admitted. The Russians have pushed their outposts south to Wan Fang Tien, on the railroad while the Japanese occupy the country from the shores of Korea bay inland to the vicinity of Siu Yen. The fact that a Japanese army estimated to number 50,000 men is concentrated south of Kin Chou is regarded here as indicating the region where decisive battles will be fought.

JAPS DID NOT APPEAR.

Vafangow, June 1, via Liao Yang, June 2.—A continuation of the fighting was expected here today, but the Japanese did not appear in force. A reconnoitering party, however, exchanged shots with the enemy's scouts, and the latter were driven off, leaving two men dead on the field. Tomorrow probably will determine whether the Japanese are strong enough to take Vafangow.

SUSPECTED OF BEING SPIES.

Seoul, Korea, June 2.—A Korean major and an adjutant, suspected of being Russian spies, have been arrested on Japanese representations, and are now in prison at Seoul. The Korean authorities refuse to take further action, claiming that the evidence against the army officers is insufficient definitely to convict.

The Russians in the province of Mamgyung are said to be using roubie notes in payment for goods taken. Beeves and grain command fair prices. The above statement hardly corresponds with the continual tales of looting, yet the Japanese report that Korean fugitives bring Russian paper money to Gensan. Twenty thousand dollars' worth has been sent to Shanghai, via Nagasaki, for settlement by the Russo-Chinese bank.

THE BALTIC FLET.

New York, June 3.—Russian naval contractors have been advised that final preparations for the Baltic fleet must be completed by the first week of August, says a Times dispatch from Paris.

This information is supplemented by another dispatch from St. Petersburg, suggesting that the fleet may perhaps not start at all, if Port Arthur falls into the hands of the Japanese.

Another St. Petersburg telegram says two submarines will be started for the far East today, two others will start within a fortnight, and two more within a month.

DISPUTE REFERRED TO CZAR.

Paris, June 3.—The correspondent of the Echo de Paris at St. Petersburg telegraphs:

"Viceroy Alexieff and General Kuropatkin having asked the emperor to settle their dispute, his majesty summoned a council of war, including Minister of War Sakharoff, Marine Minister Avellan, and Minister of the Interior Plehve. The council debated for several hours at Tsarskeye Selo.

"I have reason to believe that the necessity of preserving the naval base at Port Arthur and the loss of prestige that the fall of Port Arthur would entail were the arguments which prevailed in the council. General Kuropatkin has therefore been advised to attempt to relieve the fortress, but to act with the greatest prudence. A general whom I interviewed on the subject of the council said:

"'If Kuropatkin is weak enough to advance he will commit a serious blunder. The number of his troops is insufficient, and the conditions under which he would act are unfavorable. He might meet an almost irreparable reverse and Port Arthur be further from relief than ever. If we try to relieve Port Arthur we will be doing exactly what the Japanese hope.'"

TOTAL JAPANESE LOSSES.

Tokio, June 3.—The total of the Japanese casualties at the battle of Nan Shan hill, on May 26, is 4504. They are divided as follows: Thirty-one officers, including one major and five sergeant-majors, and 713 non-commissioned officers and men killed; 100 officers, including one colonel, one major and twelve sergeant-majors and 3460 non-commissioned officers and men wounded.

SIX HUNDRED PERSONS RENDERED HOMELESS

All Tributaries of Kaw Rising Rapidly ---Serious Floods Feared.

Kansas City, June 3.—All tributaries of the Kaw river, in Kansas, are rising rapidly today and a serious flood is threatened. Heavy rains continuing for two days at time have prevailed all over Kansas at various times within the past thirty days. Twice within that time most of the streams have overflowed their banks, washing out railroad tracks and crops, destroying much property and rendering several hundred persons temporarily homeless. But each time there came a lull in the rainfall, the rivers receded and almost normal conditions prevailed. In the past twenty-four hours, however, further heavy rain storms have again swollen the streams, this time beyond the height experienced in the two former rises. Today the rain continues to fall at many points throughout Kansas and the ultimate result must be that the Kaw, already bankful at many places along its source, will overflow its banks at Kansas City. While the conditions are not such as brought on the great June flood of last year, and although no great amount of damage is expected in this city, preparations are being made to meet the situation as it may develop.

Railroad traffic is demoralized and already many through trains, both east and westbound, are stalled. The principal streams affected are the Kaw, the Smoky Hill, the Republican and the Marais Des Cygnes. So far no casualties have been reported.

At Newton, Kans., over 600 persons have been rendered homeless by a sudden rise in Sand creek, which flows through the north and west portions of that town. The flooded district embraces about one-fourth of Newton and in many houses the water stands as high as the second story windows. The rise in the creek was caused by a cloudburst and the water rose so rapidly that hundreds of persons were caught in their homes. Rescuing parties were immediately formed and hundreds of men worked all night rescuing the unfortunates. Morning found all removed to places of safety, but with the water still rising and further heavy damage likely. There were many narrow escapes and much suffering. The homeless have geen taken into the homes of the residents in the upper part of the town and furnished with food and clothing. At Emporia three inches of water fell within a few hours, and the Cottonwood river rose during the night at the rate of six inches an hour, flooding the business portion of the town and causing much damage. Commercial street was converted into a river and boats were used.

At Council Grove, the city is threatened with a flood as serious as that of last year, when the property damage amounted to over $300,000. In the lowland dozens of families have already moved out of their houses.

At Parkville, the water in the Neosho is within two feet of last year's record and still rising, and the merchants are moving their goods to upper stories.

At Ellsworth the main street is flooded.

In the vicinity of Loraine and Sterling, Kas., the rain was accompanied by a heavy wind storm, many small houses were blown down, crops were damaged and much other damage done. Two inches of water fell within ten minutes. It is difficult to estimate the loss, but it will be great.

At Garnett, Humboldt, Lincoln Center, Caldwell, Harper, Wellington, Olathe, Arkansas City, Iola, Pittsburg, Leavenworth and Strong City, Kas., similar reports of damage from flood are received.

In the country west of Strong City a cloudburst caused the Cottonwood river to rise rapidly and today that stream stretches from bluff to bluff for miles.

At Junction City, Manhattan, Salina, north Topeka, and Lawrence, the Smoky Hill and Kaw rivers have risen rapidly since yesterday but as yet are still within their banks. The continued rains will send these streams up and people along their banks are preparing to remove to higher ground. At North Topeka where the terrible flood caused such devastation last year, theresidents are alarmed and are closely watching the river, ready to move.

A MINNEAPOLIS YOUNG MAN PUT TO DEATH AT COLUMBUS

Coumbus, O., June 3.—Carl Berg, sentenced to death for the murder of John Ceuford at Wauseon, O., in July 1903, was electrocuted in the annex of the Ohio penitentiary at 12:05 a. m.

Berg met death bravely. Just four minutes elapsed from the time he left his cell until the physician pronounced him dead. He was very talkative. After being strapped in the chair he said he knew he had been very bad, but he had made his peace with God. He was still talking when the current was turned on.

Carl Berg was condemned to death for the murder of John Ceuford, at Wauseon, Ohio, in July 1903, when Berg and a man named Sam Bannister held up and robbed a carload of tramps.

Berg and Bannister boarded a freight car at Butler, Ind., and as they neared Wauseon, O., drew revolvers and compelled eight other tramps who were in the car to hold up their hands while they were relieved of their money, less than $10 in all.

William McFarland, a Chicago man, did not respond quickly enough to suit Berg who kicked him and in the excitement John Ceuford made a dash for the car door which was partially open. The train was slowing up for Wauseon and Ceuford jumped. While he was in mid air, Berg sent a bullet crashing throug his brain.

Bannister escaped, but Berg was caught at Wauseon.

Berg's stepfather is Carl Lund, of Minneapolis. He is a respectable Norwegian and did all in his power to save Berg.

BATTLESHIP SQUADRON AT LISBON

Lisbon, June 3.—The battleship squadron of the United States North Atlantic fleet, consisting of the Kearsarge, (flagship), Alabama and Maine, under command of Rear Admiral Barker, which arrived here Wednesday from Cuba, by way of Fayal, made no attempt at high speed as the ships have been a long time without docking. The Iowa is expected here at any moment. She remained at Fayal on account of having a sick man on board. On Wednesday the squadron dressed ship and fired a salute in honor of King Carlos' second son, Prince Manuel 14 years old, who is entering the navy as a midshipman. Admiral Barker and other officers called on the cabinet ministers, attended imposing ceremonies at the arsenal and naval school, and were presented to the king, the queen and the queen mother, who welcomed the squadron to Lisbon.

Yesterday the American warships dressed ship and fired salutes, there being a continuation of the ceremonies ashore and the cabinet ministers visited the flagship. Later Admiral Barker, Captain Rodgers and Flag Lieutenant Eberle dined with the king and queen at the palace.

NEW YORK WOMAN GROWS YOUNG AFTER TAKING ELIXIR OF YOUTH

New York, June 3.—Use of some remarkable stimulant, the nature of which has not been learned has caused a strange scene in Sixth avenue. From a bottle, the label of which marked it as containing an elixir of youth, the dose being one teaspoonful every two hours, a woman of evident refinement and about 40 years old, took a long drink while standing on the sidewalk near Fiftieth street. Her peculiar actions attracted the attention of a large crowd which soon grew to such proportions that the police reserves had to be called to clear the street car tracks.

The "elixir" was a wonder worker. Five minutes after drinking the dose the woman began to caper about like a child. She danced to the music of a street piano, played hide and seek, and exhibited antics of a child. When the police arrived she beat one of them and exhibited remarkable strength. It required the combined efforts of seven officers to overcome the woman and she was carried to the hospital where doubts were expressed as to her recovery. No marks of identification were found.

THE AMERICAN GOLF CHAMPION WINS THE GREAT BRITAIN TITLE

Walter J. Travis the Amateur Champion of Great Britain.

Defeated E. O. Blackwell of Royal and Ancient Club.

Beat Englishman By Four Up and Three to Play.

London, June 3.—The American golf champion, Walter Travis, today acquired the title of amateur champion of Great Britain on the links at Sandwich, where he defeated E. D. Blackwell, a representative of the Royal and Ancient club, by four up and three to play. Travis' approach work and putting maintained the wonderful accuracy which characterized his game throughout the tournament.

Walter J. Travis and E. D. Blackwell started to play the final tie of thirty-six holes for the amateur golf championship at Sandwich today in a high wind, which greatly affected the driving. Travis won the first in five to six and running down one of his long puts on the second green became two up. Blackwell missed a yard put for the third, which was halved, and he lost the fourth, where Travis holed out by a long put. The American also won the fifth by getting down a fifteen yards put and then missed a short put for sixth, where he sustained his first loss. The seventh was halved and Travis won the eighth, where Blackwell missed a five-foot put. The Scotchman took the ninth hole, where Travis drove into a bunker. The American was three up at the turn, his outward score approximately being 35 strokes.

The American found the wind very difficult and lost the tenth. The next two were halves and Blackwell ought to have reduced his deficit to one at the thirteenth. His putting, however, was bad and he lost the hole. Thereafter he never looked like drawing level and Travis finished the first round with four up. His score by strokes was eighty, Blackwell taking eighty-three. Travis throughout gave the same remarkable display of putting which has gained him here the reputation of being the finest exponent in the world of the short game. He was never in the slightest danger throughout the round.

TEXAS VISITED BY A TORNADO

Roof of Western Union Office at Dallas Blown Off.

Kansas City, June 3.—A tornado at Dallas, Texas, today blew the roof off the office of the Western Union Telegraph company and caused other damage throughout the city. As far as known no one was hurt. Up to 9:30 the Western Union was still working a wire into its Dallas office.

The storm broke over Dallas at 2 o'clock this morning and continued with great force until 5. Rain had fallen in torrents all night accompanied by a heavy wind which finaly developed into cyclone proportions. The principal damage done aside from that suffered by the Western Union Telegraph company was the wrecking of several small houses in the outskirts. As far as known no one was hurt. When the Western Union building was struck a panic ensued among the force at work in the operating room. Fortunately no one was hurt. All wire communication with the outside was cut off for several hours, and was only partly restored at 9 o'clock. At 9:45 however, the city was again shut off from the outside world. It is believed that more or less damage has been done in the country.

Dallas, Tex., June 3.—At 5 o'clock this morning, during a cloudburst, accompanied by a tornado, water came through the roof and sixth floor of the Western Union Telegraph office here, flooding the dynamos and completely soaking one section of the switchboard. The damage in the Western Union office was practically remedied by 7:30 a. m. Through the city, however, a great many wires were down.

COAST COUNTRY

Is Being Overrun By Wave of Caterpillars.

Seattle, Wash., June 33.—Caterpillars threaten to take Seattle. A massive wave seems to be sweeping over all the Puget sound country. First it appeared near Tacoma, and it has been progressing northward until the trees of half this city are swarming.

Orchardists, horticulturists, fruit inspectors, and even the Seattle park commissioners are so alarmed that they are combining to fight the pest.

The caterpillars are in tents but the fruit men say they will move out in one great army tomorrow, and action must be quick. Just how the campaign will be conducted no one seems to know.

FAYAL STRIKERS ATTACK ITALIANS AND TWO ARE SHOT

Trouble at the Mine Develops Into Violent Form.

Deputies Shoot Two Strikers Who Are In the Hospital.

Feeling Is Running High and Many Threats Made.

Eveleth, Minn., June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trouble at the Drake & Stratton work this morning developed a violent turn, and two men are lying in the hospital here, one with a bullet in his head and another with one in his breast. Both are still alive and may recover, although the injury to the man shot in the breast is a very serious one.

During the morning a number of Italians were proceeding to work where the stripping operations are in progress at the Fayal mine. Sheriff Butchart is on the scene, and deputies were guarding the men as they went to work. The strikers were congregated near and assumed a threatening attitude that finally broke out in an open attack on the men.

The deputies attempted to force the strikers back, but the attack became so fierce and the attacking strikers, all of whom were foreigners and of the reckless order, were apparently so careless as to what might happen, that they were forced to shoot.

When two men, both Finlanders, had been dropped, one with a bullet in his head and another through his breast, the strikers retreated.

Another man was arrested for his part in the affair and is lodged in the jail here. Feeling is running very high and the strikers are threatening all kinds of trouble. They declare that the man in jail must be released or they will get him out forcibly. Sheriff Butchart has the jail well guarded and there will be more trouble if an attempt is made to release the imprisoned striker.

Excitement is running high in Eveleth and there is great fear that there will be trouble, for the strikers are of the kind that do not fear violence and its results.

Manager E. B. Hawkins of the Drake & Stratton company has given orders for the shutting down of all work on the contract for the summer. The dinky engines are being boarded up, and to all appearances the same policy pursued by the Steel corporation at Ely, where the miners struck will be pursued here—to close down everything until the strikers want work badly enough to go back and make no more trouble.

CHARLES S. DENEEN CHOSEN IN ILLINOIS

Governor Yates, Hamlin and Others Withdrew In His Favor.

Springfield, Ill., June 3.—Charles S. Deneen was nominated for governor on the first ballot this afternoon.

Springfield, Ill., June 3.—The indications today were that Charles S. Deneen would be nominated for governor by the Republican state convention late this afternoon. This is now the trend of inside talk among Governor Yates' supporters. Frank O. Lowden is expected to make another effort to stampede the convention. If this gets dangerously near success, the Yates men are expected to go to Deneen.

A Yates conference was held this morning. It was reported on the highest authority later that Yates had finally consented to go to Deneen and that the break would be made this morning.

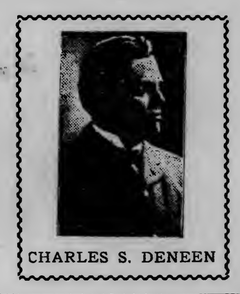
The convention was called to order at 10:15. O. F. Berry, of Hancock, (Sherman man), at once moved a recess until 2 p. m., and demanded a roll call. The motion was seconded by J. H. Burke (Deneen man) and C. E. Snively (Yates man.)

The roll was called on the motion. As it proceeded, it became clear that the motion would have no opposition. Ten minutes later the roll call was suspended, and by consent the convention took a recess until 2 p. m.

After the recess of the convention, it was openly asknowledged that Deneen Yates, Hamlin and Sherman had entered a combination to nominate Deneen on the first ballot this afternoon. Candidates Warner and Pierce were expected to join the combination, the details of which were perfected.

The Yates delegates held a meeting immediately after the recess of the convention. The governor addressed the delegates, saying he understood that some of his delegates had felt they were not being taken into his confidence. He had no secrets, he said, and wanted any of his delegates to feel free to consult him. The meeting then took a recess until 1:45.

The delegates then formed in a line, each carrying a Yates placard and, with



CHARLES S. DENEEN

Yates, Deneen, Hamlin and Sherman were in conference at the executive session since 11:30 arranging the details of the combination. Adams county, it was said, would lead off the roll call this afternon with twenty votes for Deneen.

Lowden, it was also stated, would try to get enough votes in the break-up to defeat the combination.

The Yates delegates concluded their meeting at 2:05 p. m. Governor Yates then made an address to the delegates withdrawing in favor of Deneen.

The convention reconvened at 2:20.

Governor Yates asked permission to make a statement. There was no objection, and the governor took the platform. Governor Yates suggested as the next governor of Illinois the name of Charles S. Deneen—(great cheering)—and withdrew his own name.

Governor Yates closed his address amid great cheering at 2:30, and there were great calls for Hamlin. He appeared on the platform amid cheers. Attorney General Hamlin spoke for four minutes, being frequently interrupted. He withdrew his name in favor of Deneen.

AUSTRALIAN FLEECED FOR $25,000

New York, June 3.—A wealthy Australian who arrived in New York ten days ago from London, was swindled a week ago out of $25,000 by men pretending to be wire tappers. The story has just become public. On account of his large business connections and also because of the fact that he was equally guilty with the swindlers, the Australian made no report of the matter to the police, but sailed on the following day for London.

It appears that the victim met a well known New York swindler in London three weeks ago. The New Yorker urged the Australian to come over here, promising him great results on racing investments. The Australian came and was fleeced. After the coop it appears that the gang paid the decoy only $500 in stead of the $12,500 which should have been his share under the agreement. In a fit of pique the decoy informed the police. During the past week the losses of $5000 have been reported by other victims of swindlers operating in the same manner.

WISCH'S BODY HURLED THROUGH AIR

St. Paul, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Today while Undertaker D. W. Hurley was removing the body of Tony G. Wisch, the soldier who was shot by a guard at Fort Snelling yesterday, from the fort to St. Paul, the wagon was struck from behind by a rapidly moving street car near the Fort Snelling reservation and the whole outfit smashed to pieces. The body of the dead soldier was hurled from the coffin through the air. Undertaker Hurley suffered a dislocated knee and George Sulze, a cousin of the dead man, had his shoulder dislocated. John Devlin, the undertaker's assistant, was also hurt. The body was brought to St. Paul in the street car.

A QUARREL LEADS TO SHOOTING

Minneapolis, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—A quarrel between Alexander Tracy and George Marshall, in the gambling house, 217 Second street south, led to the shooting of Tracy by Marshall. The bullet hit Tracy in the left side, just below the ribs, and lodged in the muscles of the back. Tracy was taken to the city hospital. The wound is declared to be a bad one.

Tracy is an employe of the Milwaukee Asphalt company and Marshall a porter in the gambling house. Tracy lost his money on a game and applied to Marshall for a small loan, which he refused. Tracy grew angry as he pressed his application for the loan, and it is reported drew a knife to use on Marshall, who anticipated by drawing a gun and shooting.

MISSIONARY UNION

Discusses Christianity, Confucianism and Taoism.

Clifton Springs, N. Y., June 3.—At the morning session of the International Missionary union today the subject for discussion was "Christianity in Contact With Confucianism and Taoism." The first speaker was Rev. C. H. Newton, a worker in China, who gave his personal experience as to Taoism. He said that Taoism seemed to be divided into two parts, one a belief for the general people, the other a belief for the priests.

Mrs. Alice M. Williams, who gave her views of the growth of Christianity against these heathen beliefs as seen in her ten years' service in Northern China.

INCREASED TENSION

Observed In the Schafer Case at Bedford.

Bedford, Ind., June 3.—Increased activity and tension was observed in the vicinity of the grand jury room today, and it was reported that important evidence had been discovered in the investigation of the Shafer murder mystery. Several prominent women of Bedford were summoned today, and Sheriff Smith started hastily for Harrodsburg with subpoenas for three women of that place. Their names are not known. Dr. Gullop, a woman physician of Indianapolis, on whom Miss Shafer's roommate, Miss Love, called shortly before the murder, has been subpoenaed.

CONTRACT CONSUMPTION.

New York Street Sweepers Inhale the Germs.

New York, June 3.—As a result of the discovery that a number of the street sweepers have contracted consumption by inhaling germs, Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury has begun a medical exeamination of every employe in his department. Returns thus far indicate that the number afflicted will be about 2000 or considerably less than one-third of the total force.

Plans are being made to send the sick men to the Adirondacks, where the disease has not too far advanced.

REQUISITION HONORED.

Lincoln, Neb., June 3.—Governor Mickey has honored the requisition issued by Governor Cummins of Iowa for the arrest of Tom Dennison, of Omaha, accused of complicity in a diamond robbery in that state.

DESCRIPTION OF SEIZURE

Mrs. Varley Writes of Descent of Bandit Raisuli.

London, June 3.—Mrs. Cromwell Varley has sent her relatives in Norfolk an interesting description of the seizure of Ion Perdicaris and Mr. Varley, her husband, by bandits near Tangier, Morocco. After describing the sudden attack of the bandits and the capture of the outbuildings, she continues:

"Hearing a noise uncle and Cromwell rushed out to see what was the matter. They were immediately surrounded, overpowered and bound. When we reached the scene the bandits threw mother and myself down a flight of steps, warning us not to interfere in any way, so we retired. One of the maids, however, with great pluck and presence of mind, slipped away to the telephone and shouted "Thieves; they are killing us." Before she could say more Raisuli dashed the instrument from her hand and said he would shot us if we called for help.

"We waited ten minutes while uncle, as we thought, was arranging terms with the bandits, when a soldier informed us that Raisuli had carried off uncle and Cromwell."

The letter confirms the receipt of communications from Mr. Perdicaris acknowledging that he is well treated. The captives are lodged in a Moorish hut, with an anteroom in which one of Perdicaris' soldiers sleeps. This soldier voluntarily became a captive so that he might accompany Perdicaris. The letter concludes:

"I have been able to send them clothing and provisions."

LOST LEG IN MID AIR.

WEST DULUTH VALUABLE PATENT

National Iron Company Manufactures New Log Loading Machine.

Invention of a Duluth Man—Nail Factory Proposed.

The National Iron company, of West Duluth, has just completed the manufacture of a steam log loading machine for loading logs onto cars, which was invented by Michael Schmaltz, an employe at the plant, who resides in the West End. The machine, which has been patented in the United States and Canada by the inventor, is claimed to possess many and important advantages over the log loading machines now in use. The West Duluth company has control of the patents, with exclusive rights to manufacture the new apparatus, which is expected to come into great demand.

The machine is not confined to loading logs alone, but may be used in taking up and laying rails, also for skidding logs. It is further claimed that it will pull cars about and do other work which usually falls to the ordinary railway locomotive. It is claimed that it loads logs better than other machines of its kind with its principal features entirely different from others of its class.

The apparatus consists of a car carrying a hoisting engine and other machinery, moved along the track by means of strong chains geared back to the rear shaft. It also has an exterior derrick car, adapted to move on the same track as the engine car. This derrick may be used to suspend the engine car above the track, letting cars pass under it, a very important advantage. The derrick car also carries the lower end of the boom used for hoisting purposes. The whole machine is simple in form and strong in construction, making it admirably adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

NAIL FACTORY.

Plan For One Is to Be Presented.

A man who desires to start a nail factory in West Duluth will be given a hearing at the regular meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club this evening. He will make an appeal for financial assistance, it is understood. It is planned to place the factory in the vicinity of the blast furnace. The institution, if started, will probably be carried along on a small scale at first, gradually increasing in size and force of men employed as circumstances permit. It is argued that this would be an excellent location for such a factory. The West Duluth club has other industries in sight for their end of the city.

While he was driving east on Grand avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh avenue west, last night about 10 o'clock, the rig of Mr. Melborne, of Seventy-first avenue west, was struck by a street car. Mr. Melhorne was thrown to the ground, but beyond a few slight bruises escaped injury. The carriage was badly broken. The car came from behind, it is said, and struck the rig just as it was being turned out from the middle of the track.

MINE FIRE RESULTS IN DEATH OF THREE MINERS.

Prescott, Ariz., June 3.—Fire at the Hackeberry mine in the Big Bug district, has destroyed the hoisting plant and resulted in the probable death of three miners. The hoist house was located directly over the shaft and when the fire occurred the men were at work in the mine and were completely cut off by the fire. Help was summoned from McCabe and Mayer and the fire extinguished. One man in his effort to go down the shaft fell 200 feet and is supposed to be dead. As no communication could be had with the two miners, they are also thought to have perished.

WESTERN RANGE

Heavy Operations of G. G. Hartley and C. A. Congdon.

Millions of Tons of Ore That Must Have Sand Eliminated.

The operations of the Canisteo Mining company on the extreme western end of the Mesaba range are claiming much attention from iron men. The company controls about 1600 acres of land and has already spent about $100,000 in prospecting on the lands and has about 200 men at work at the present time. Drilling is in progress and a most comprehensive plan of work has been mapped out and is being followed.

The company is in reality composed only of Chester A. Congdon and G. G. Hartley of Duluth, two men who have been unusually successful in mining lands on the Mesaba range. They have been very fortunate, and have taken a number of properties that were supposed to have been thoroughly worked and by following their own methods have found large bodies of ore where none were supposed to exist.

Their work on the western Mesaba range is of unusual interest from the fact that it has been generally supposed up to recently that the western range contains little ore of merchantable quality. It has long been known that there is ore there and considerable but the presence of sand in it has prevented its being regarded as of much value. The plans of the two men composing the Canisteo company, however, provide for the screening of the ore to eliminate the free sand, and they will experiment with this process exhaustively to determine its feasibility.

Up to the present time the company is said to have shown up some 100,000,000 tons of ore in township 56-24. It is said that of this about 25,000,000 tons will not need screening, but can be used as it is. The remainder will have to have the sand removed, but when it is out, the ore is said to be of a most desirable quality. The expense of getting the sand out will determine the possibility of using the ore to advantage.

The company has two shafts going down, one on section 21 and another on section 30. One is down 200 feet, and the other 300 feet, and from these drifts will be run and the ground thoroughly tested.

The Oliver Iron Mining company, which is the Steel Corporation's Mining company, is also working in that vicinity. It has taken an option on the Arcturus mine from the St. Cloud stockholders, and also holds one on the Diamond mine.

The T. B. Walker lands were taken under option some two or three years ago by Capt. Harry Roberts, of Duluth, but he relinquished the option, and J. J. Hill has now taken them.

The Canistao company, the Oliver company and Hill now control practically the whole western end of the range.

LOSE THEIR HOME.

Two Families Burned Out During the Night.

Two families are left homeless as the result of a fire which broke out last evening at 1920 East Eighth street.

The building, which was a two-story frame structure, was occupied by the families of Gust J. Docken and Fred Evanson. The fire broke out about 11:45 p. m. It is believed to have been caused by a defective flue.

Mr. Evanson was sleeping with his two sons on the second floor when the fire broke out. He was nearly overcome by the dense smoke before he was awakened. Hastily throwing some articles of clothing out of the window, he took one child under each arm and groped his way to the stairs, awakening his neighbor across the hall as he so. When the kitchen door was opened it created a draft through the house, and the flames, fanned by the heavy wind, soon enveloped the building. There was no fire hydrant within two blocks and the department used the chemical engine, but all that could be done was to keep the flames from spreading.

The house contained seven rooms and was owned by Mrs. M. Wolhart, of 724 East Fifth street. The loss on the building is estimated at $2500. Each of the families sustained a loss of about $1000 in furniture and carried insurance to the amount of about $500.

The families took refuge in the house of a neighbor during the remainder of the night.

NARROW ESCAPE

From Tragedy at Hanging Rock Guard Line.

Cincinnati, June 3.—The Times Star's Ironton, Ohio, special says: A fusillade of revolver shots at midnight within the guard line at Hanging Rock caused instant action by two guard patrols, one under command of Capt. Batterson and the other commanded by Col. Thompson. They each moved without the knowledge of the other, from different points toward the sound of the shooting. Both guards failed to find the man who did the shooting, but when they met in the darkness there was a narrow escape from a tragedy. Col. Thompson, in obedience to a command to halt, made himself known, and the two parties were saved from firing at each other. There was no disorder during the night.

ODELL IN PARIS.

New York's Governor Received By President Loubet.

Paris, June 3.—President Loubet received Governor Odell of New York at the Elysee palace today. Ambassador Porter presented the governor, who was accompanied by his son and secretary, Mr. Manning. The president was most gracious, inviting the party to sit down in the ambassadors' hall, where a quarter of an hour was spent in agreeable social exchange of remarks. M. Loubet asked about President Roosevelt and showed much familiarity with and interest in current American affairs.

Later Gen. Porter took Mr. Odell on a motor trip to Versailles, where the palaces and gardens were visited. Tomorrow the ambassador will give a breakfast in honor of Mr. Odell. The guests will include Gen. Brugere, commander of the French army, and Baron D'Estournelles De Constant.

Floater Found at Menominee Supposed to Be Jackson.

Menominee—A floater, supposed to be Frank Jackson, who has been missing from Niagara for three weeks, was found among the logs in the river. A dispatch from Niagara gave a description of the missing man and the authorities believe it tallies with that of Jackson.

If it is the body of Jackson the question arises, did he commit suicide or was death accidental? Some developments are expected in the next twenty-four hours.

The village of Schaefer, in Delta county, north of Harris, was nearly wiped out by fire. The loss will amount to about $20,000, partly covered by insurance.

Fred Zieman, the Wisconsin man who recently killed his wife at Menominee and then attempted to commit suicide, will be able to leave St. Joseph's hospital, Menominee, this week unless he suffers some relapse. He is improving steadily and is able to take nourishment. The wound in the neck is healing rapidly. The officers will take charge of Zieman as soon as he is released from the hospital. He is being kept under constant surveillance, men watching him night and day for fear that he might do himself some bodily harm or try to escape. He will be arraigned on the charge of willful murder.

Chief of Police A. P. English is now in charge of the Menominee opera house property, he, in his capacity of deputy sheriff, having levied upon the realty. On a judgment taken out in the municipal court some weeks ago and transcribed to the circuit court a levy was made on the property to satisfy a claim for $150 for labor in favor of William Hopper of Marinette. The property will be sold at public auction at the courthouse on the morning of July 25 to satisfy this judgment, unless in the meantime the amount of the claim is paid. Mr. Hopper sued in the municipal court for what was alleged to have been due him as stage foreman and carpenter. He secured a judgment in the sum of $150, the full amount of his claim, the defendants not making appearance.

Masonville—George Needham, a young man who arrived at Masonville, Delta county, from the Soo a short time ago, was arrested at Rapid River for an alleged assault upon the 11-year-old daughter of John Metzker, of Masonville. Needham pleaded guilty to the charge. At that time he gave his name as George Johnson, but later on he told Sheriff Roberts his name was Needham. Owing to the excitement that developed among the citizens of Rapid River and Masonville and fear that an effort to lynch him might be made, the prisoner asked that he be taken to Escanaba. He is now languishing in the county jail, having been bound over to the next term of circuit court. He says he was frightened and did not know what he was doing when he pleaded guilty at Rapid River.

Munising—Recently, at Munising, N. Hajjar bought a meerschaum pipe of R. J. Burrows, a druggist, and resold the pipe to a customer. The customer brought back the pipe and claimed it was broken when it reached his hands. Mr. Burrows was positive the pipe was intact when it left his store and therefore brought suit against Hajjar for its value—about $3. The case was tried and the jury disagreed. Later, the plaintiff submitted to a non-suit. The costs in the case will be about $16.

Mitchell Secures Sousa's Band For Corn Palace In September.

Mitchell—The corn palace committee has secured Sousa's concert band for the corn palace, Sept. 26 to Oct. 1, inclusive. The band comes directly from New York, stopping only at Chicago for Sunday afternoon and evening concerts.

Next Wednesday, June 8, the prohohibitionists of the state will hold a mass convention in this city to nominate a full state ticket, including presidential electors and congressmen. Ladies will have a voice in the nomination of state officers.

Sioux Falls—Canton is making elaborate preparations for the annual encampment of the South Dakota G. A. R., which will be held at that place on June 28, 29 and 30. Invitations to make addresses have been accepted by the governors of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota, and in addition it is expected that Gen. John C. Black, of Illinois, commander of the national G. A. R.; Gen. C. A. Partridge, adjutant general, and Mrs. John A. Logan will be present.

Lead—The Uncle Sam mine is being opened in a thorough manner at the 700-foot level. The full number of stamps, or sixty, is now dropping in the mill and the ore is said to be running a little above the average. This mine has some very rich ore shoots.

A special meeting of the Copper Cliff Mining company has been called for the purpose of changing the name and reducing the capital stock. The company is operating in the Rochford district in the copper range. A sixty-foot ledge of graphite has been opened.

The spearfish company will pay a small dividend very soon. Since the first of January over 3000 feet of new work has been done on the property, the estimate of ore exposed in this working being about 6000 tons of ore a month, and there is ore blocked out for seven years of continuous work.

Yankton—The graduating exercises of the eighth grade were held yesterday afternoon. A class of forty was presented with diplomas. Yankton college will occupy all of next week with commencement exercises.

Aberdeen—Edmond F. English, major general of the U. V. U., has issued general orders fixing Aberdeen as the place and June 7 as the date for the seventh annual encampment of the union for this state.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Dickinson—Benjamin F. Singletary, manager of the L. P. Baker ranch, southeast of Dickinson, committed suicide by shooting himself in the heart with a revolver. It is supposed that losses of stock unbalanced his mind.

Minot—Leslie R. Carroll, mine owner of Donnybrook, and his brother, A. H. Carroll, have been arrested on the charge of stealing ties from the Soo.

WILL MAKE PLANS

Democrats to Make Preliminary Arrangements For Convention.

Commercial Club Aiding In Preparations For Entertainment.

The local Democrats who are interested in the state convention of their party to be held here on June 22, will hold a meeting at Kalamazoo Hall this evening at 7:30, to organize for the detail work that will have to be done preparatory to the convention and the care of the delegates and their friends while here.

The death of Joseph A. Mannheim will necessitate the selection of another chairman of the general committee. Sub-committees will be appointed to look after the reception of the visitors, their entertainment while here, preparing and decorating the armory, and other such matters.

The Commercial club has taken hold of the matter with good spirit and sent every Democratic and most of the Republican and Populist papers of the state notices of the railroad rates and similar pre-convention information, which will be of interest to the delegates. Many of the latter will be accompanied by their wives. The special railroad rates made will also bring an unusually large crowd to the city, probably representative of the state geographically to a greater extent than any gathering heretofore held in Duluth.

The club has also provided for a free excursion "Around the Horn" for the morning after the convention, and other entertainment will be arranged by joint committees of the club and the local Democrats.

The State Central Committee will meet as usual the night before the convention and, in addition to the routine preparations for this convention, will decide on a time and place for the state convention to nominate candidates for the state offices.

It will pay you to examine the W. L. Douglas shoes, and see for yourself that they are just as good in every way as those for which you have been paying $5 to $7. For style, comfort, and service, they cannot be surpassed by custom-made shoes.

GET SMALL SUM

Fourteen Per Cent For Duluth Building Association Shareholders.

Final Account of Receiver Cooley Presented to Court.

The final account of Jerome E. Cooley, receiver for the Duluth Building and Loan association, which ceased to do business in the fall of 1897, shows a balance of $6938.20 on hand to be divided among the stockholders in the association.

At the present time there is some $45,461.11 of outstanding stock owned largely by Duluth people, and these will receive, after the attorney's fees and publication fees are taken out, $6259.96, or a little over 14 per cent on the stock invested.

The hearing on the final account of the receiver came up before Judge Cant at the last Saturday special term of court in the case of George J. Norris against the building and loan association. The action was started in the district court in November, 1897.

The court finds the final account of the receiver as showing the total receipts as being $13,721.39 and total disbursements as being $6783.19.

The court ordered $383.24 allowed to John G. Williams as attorney's fees, $25 to Mr. Cooley for expenses, and the balance disbursed among the stockholders pro rata to the number of shares each held.

The receiver's salary during his occupancy of office was $300 per year.

RAILROAD NEWS

Omaha Rates For Carrying Flour From Head of Lakes.

Officials of Duluth & Iron Range Railroad Are Re-Elected.

In the following extract of a letter writen by E. B. Ober, first assistant general freight agent of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, to the local office the basis of rates for carrying flour and grain products from this district east is shown:

"Effective May 31, the lake and rail basis of rates which were in effect from Minneapolis prior to May 7, will be established all rail from Minneapolis, Minnesota transfer, St. Paul and head of lake points to Eastern territory on flour and grain products. This will make a basis of 23 cents per cwt. to New York on domestic and 20½ cents on export, with the usual differentials to the other points. This will also put on basis of 16½ cents per cwt. to Buffalo and Pittsburg, which will, of course, necessitate the checking of the new basis of rates to practically all of the middle states' territory. Effective today there will also be published a rate of 20½ cents on corn and oats from your station to New York, with the usual differentials to other points."

Re-Elects Officials.

This morning the annual meeting of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad was held in the offices in the Wolvin building. All of the officers were re-elected and routine business transacted.

The officers re-elected are the following: President and general manager, F. E. House; vice president, A. H. Viele; secretary, H. Johnson; treasurer, F. C. Marshall; assistant treasurer, Thomas Murray, New York.

Nos. 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 25, 26 and 29 being on time. Of the time freight trains, No. 225 was on time twenty-eight times, and lost one hour and twenty-two minutes for the month. No. 224 did not lose any time and 219 lost only forty minutes, being on time at Cass Lake every day but two during the month.

ANXIOUS TO KNOW OF HIM

Whereabouts of Walter E. Atwood Wanted By Relatives.

Has Walter E. Atwood perished in the woods of Northern Minnesota?

This is the question which the local police are endeavoring to answer. A letter was received this morning by the police authorities from Arthur E. Atwood, of Donnelley, Minn., asking for information concerning the whereabouts of his brother, Walter.

Walter left Duluth to take up a claim in Northern Minnesota. That was the last heard of him and his family is anxiously awaiting some news concerning him. It is feared that he went into the woods to visit his land and perished from exposure.

The missing man is described as being about five feet, six inches in height, weighing about 130 pounds. He was of a light complexion. He was a prominent member of the K. O. T. M. in Donnelley.

Detective Terry, of the local force, has been conducting inquiries to discover his whereabouts and will examine the records of the land office, to determine, if possible, whether he ever filed on a claim.

PRINCIPLES INVOLVED

In International Arbitration Are Set Forth In Platform.

Adopted By the Conference Held at Mohonk Lake.

Mohonk Lake, N. Y., June 3.—Today's session of the Conference on International Arbitration was opened with the presentation of the platform of principles, which was adopted. This platform is as follows:

"With unabated confidence in the cause of international arbitration, this conference renews its allegiance to the principles involved, and continues its efforts to promote them. Each year marks distinct progress. With great gratification we record the fact that eleven nations, five of them ranking among the great powers, have appeare before the court at The Hague and submitted their controversies to its adjudication. The conference urges all the people to give their influence to the adjudication.

"We confidently rely upon the irresistible power of public opinion to give effectual sanction to the judgments of the arbitral tribunal and to extend the scope of its jurisdiction.

"We rejoice that the increasing developments of commercial communications between countries tends to the advancement of universal peace.

"This conference is more than ever conscious of the profoundly vital and important nature of the work in which it is co-operating. Arbitration is not sought as an end in itself, but as a necessary means to the attainment of the great ends of international justice. It is not intended to be merely an easier and cheaper way of overreaching a rival or getting the better of an enemy. It recognizes the equally sacred rights of all and seeks nothing less than the meeting out of justice to all concerned, as it may appear to an impartial court under recognized rules of law, after hearing the evidence and the arguments of the respective parties.

"To create a demand for a resort to this court, settlement of controversies between nations in a constantly increasing number and range of cases, is the immediate, constant and imperative requirement of the situation. To this end the conference urges all the people to give their influence to the adjudication by The Hague tribunal of all disputes between nations substantially as in disputes between parties in civil cases. It should appeal to all people from motives of justice and right, humanity and peace, regard for human life and happiness. None are so high and none so low, as to be beyond the unhappy effects of war.

"We therefore appeal to all to co-operate in diffusing such a righteous sentiment and feeling toward all classes, conditions and races of men that international arbitration will be resorted to as the best means of securing justice whenever diplomacy fails.

"To such a sentiment and feeling, when awakened, the law-making and trenty-making powers of the government will readily respond. Several nations have already signified their readiness to enter into treaties with the United States, providing for the submission of their controversies to The Hague tribunal. We urge upon the government not only to take early and favorable action in response to these suggestions, but also to take the initiative in negotiating similar treaties with all nations, whereby they shall agree 'to submit to arbitration by the proper court all differences which they fail to adjust by diplomatic negotiations' and by which they shall further 'agree not to resort in any case to hostile measures of an description till an effort has been made to settle any matter in dispute by submitting the same to The Hague tribunal.'

"The conference considers it of great importance that the arbitration treaties signed by the representatives of all the states of the Western hemisphere at the International American conference held at Mexico City in 1901 and 1902 should be ratified at the earliest practicable day.

"We favor the coming together of representatives of all nations disposed to join in the movement, in pursuance of some plan mutually agreed upon for the purpose of conferring together concerning matters of common interest, to the end that the general welfare of all the nations may be promoted. This proposed gathering has already been appropriately designated as an international advisory congress. We recognize such a congress as a natural complement and auxiliary to the cause of international arbitration. It will be but another of the steps sure to be taken in the same general direction, all making for the peace of the world upon the only reliable basis, namely, that of justice and mutual good will."

FEELS THE EFFECT

Lake Tie-Up Affecting the Michigan Street Market.

New Potatoes Take Another Sharp Drop In Price.

"The wet weather and the strike of the masters and pilots have combined to make this a very dull week in our line," said one of the Michigan street produce dealers yesterday afternoon.

"Cold or wet weather always affects our trade, and this, added to the general slump in business caused by the tie-up of the lake fleet, has made the past week a very dull one. The range towns are just about as dull as Duluth, or perhaps worse, and there has been but small demand for produce.

"We do not look for the slump to continue, however. A few days of warm weather and the settlment of these labor troubles would see us in the midst of our regular summer rush of business. It is fortunate for us that we have a few special features in the market at present, such as strawberries and fresh Southern vegetables, or our trade would not amount to anything."

* * *

New potatoes have taken still another drop in price during the past week, and they are now within a few cents per bushel of the cost of the old potatoes. The new Southern crop is selling on the local market at $1.40 per bushel, while the old potatoes are bringing $1.10 and $1.15. Within another week or two the new potatoes will be as cheap as last year's product. The present supply is being received from Arkansas and Texas.

Other Southern vegetables, such as wax beans and green beets, have also fallen somewhat in price.

* * *

There is no change this week in the prices of dairy products. Creamery butter is still selling at 20 cents, while the fancy dairies are worth 14 and 16 cents. Fresh eggs are selling for 15 cents in place of 15½ last week. The dealers have placed all the eggs they require for next winter in storage, and the heavy shipments that have been received during the past week have caused the price to drop somewhat. Had it not been for the cold weather of the past few days the price might have gone still lower.

* * *

Live poultry shipments have been a little heavier during the past week. The demand for poultry is very light at the present time, and the price of chickens has dropped from 15 to 14 cents per pound.

There is no change in meat prices, with the exception of beef, which has risen from 7½ cents to 8 cents per pound. Lard has dropped to 7 cents during the week. The meat dealers also report a quiet week's business, with but a small demand from both the local retailers and the range towns.

FIFTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

Pioneers of Fifty Years Celebrate the Event.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 3.—At Le Sauk, a suburb of St. Cloud, yesterday was celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sartell, the fifty-first anniversary of their marriage, a large company of guests from throughout this region being entertained at the old Sartell homestead, which for nearly fifty years has been a landmark on the Upper Mississippi river. Mr. Sartell is 78 years of age, and Mrs. Sartell has recently reached the age of 70. They were married in Joliet, Ill., in 1853, and in 1855 came to Minnesota, locating the same year in their present home. The sawmill now operated by their sons at Le Sauk is rebuilt from one of the oldest sawmills in the state, which was purchased in 1855 by the elder Mr. Sartell from a man named Jerry Sawyer. Before St. Cloud was settled, and even before there was any settlement at what is now Minneapolis, Le Sauk was the most important place in this whole region, and Mr. and Mrs. Sartell were among its early settlers.

NO MORE ARMY OFFICERS

Are to Be Appointed as Indian Agents.

Washington, June 3.—As a result of the recent conference between the president and the secretary of the interior it was decided that when the appointment of an Indian agent expires he will be supplanted by a bonded superintndent and also that no more regular army officers will be appointed in the Indian service.

Upon the expiration of the four-year detail of those already in service they will be ordered back to their regiments.

This will mean that Maj. Scott, Indian agent at Leech Lake, upon the expiration of his present detail, will be removed from his position.

"AGE LIMIT"

Responsible For Suicide of a Chicago Engineer.

Chicago, June 3.—The "age limit" by regulated is believed to be responsible for the suicide of A. Wermilen, an expert mechanical engineer, who ended his life by opening the arteries of his wrists, and then jumping into the river at Van Buren street.

Hundreds of persons crossing the bridge saw him take the fatal plunge, and, though he was taken from the water quickly afterward, he was dead. Wermilen lived at the Stockholm hotel. He was 45 years old, and had said to the clerk in the hotel:

"I have reached the age limit. Nobody will hire me. What hope is there for a man like myself no matter how hard I try."

He had been out of work several weeks, although he is said to have been sober and industrious. He carried in his pocket a letter from the city engineer, which said that he was sober, industrious, and a first-class engineer. He left the hotel to search for work, and it is thought he became discouraged and decided to kill himself.

BULLOCK RETAINS

His Position In the Black Hills Country.

Washington, June 3.—From the White House, the department of justice and the general land office there are explicit denials today of the report originating in Seattle that Capt. Seth Bullock, of Deadwood, S. D., is going to Nome or any other place in Alaska, as United States marshal or in any other official character.

Within a few days the land office has received mail from Capt. Bullock postmarked Deadwood, and so far as anybody here knows, he is still at that place. He is still holding his position as forest supervisor in the Black Hills, and presumably will continue to hold it.

The term of Marshal Richards at Nome will expire next February and his reappointment will develop between now and then. He was investigated with Col. Grigsby and exonerated, so at present he is in good standing and the question of his successor is not being considered in Washington.

AN AGREEMENT NEVER EXISTED

By Which Russia Should Keep Fleet In Far East.

Berlin, June 3.—A representative of the Associated Press called the attention of the foreign office to the statement made in an English newspaper recently that an alleged agreement between Russia and Germany made last fall, according to which Russia must keep a certain effective fleet in the far East had now lapsed by reason of the successes of the Japanese navy. The foreign office replied that no such agreement exists, and added that the far Eastern situation was not discussed by Chancellor Von Buelow and Foreign Minister Lamsdorff at Wolfgarten in any way. Neither did Emperor William nor Emperor Nicholas enter into any arrangement regarding the far East, though the foreign office admitted that the German emperor may have called Emperor Nicholas' attention to the dangers threatening Russia here as likely to cause trouble soon.

The foreign office further called attention to a London newspaper assertion that the United States is desirous of an international conference to bring about the ending of the war, and that Germany opposed it. Germany, it was asserted at the foreign office wants an early termination of the hostilities as much as any other nation, but she has not taken a position with reference to a conference because she has not been approached on the subject. Germany recognizes that Russia is not yet in a position to begin measures looking to peace.

ROOSEVELTS

Given Legacies By James Gracie's Will.

New York, June 3.—The report of Charles F. Loomis, who was appointed appraiser of the pesornal estate in New York of James King Gracie, who was the uncle of Persident Roosevelt, and who died in New York city, Nov. 23, 1903, has been filed at Mineola, L. I. The will benefits the president and his family to the extent of $35,000. Lewis appraised the estate at $440,672. The following are the bequests to the Roosevelt family: President Theodore Roosevelt, his nephew, $27,239; Kermit Roosevelt, son of the persident and grand nephew of the testator, $4529; Ethel Roosevelt, daughter of the persident, and garnd niece of the testator, $4534.

GOVERNOR TOOLE

Overrules Three Courts and Pardons Convicted Man.

Helena, Mont., June 3.—Governor Toole has stepped between Archie Burrell, a prominent resident of Great Falls, and the penitentiary the last moment. The supreme court of the United States, the supreme court of Montana and the district court of Cascade county, having declared him guilty of securing goods under false pretenses. The governor holds that, while he may be technically guilty, there was no criminal intent on the part of Burrell, who secured credit for some flour on the personal statement that his liabilities, which, however, did not include a note for $8000, executed in favor of his brother, but which was listed by him when a few months later he took advantage of the bankruptcy law.

IMBIBED TOO FREELY.

Ottumwa, Iowa, June 3.—Stricken with remorse and threatening to end his life, Albert Greenwood, Palestine, Texas, assistant attorney general of that state, is being guarded in a hotel in this city by the brother and friends of the girl who refused to marry him.

Greenwood was to have married Miss Maude Utecht. He imbibed too freely and fell down two flights of stairs at the Wapello county courthouse, where he went to get a marriage license.

Miss Utecht flatly refused to allow the arrangements for the wedding to proceed, and recalled the invitations, and announced the wedding indefinitely postponed.

AGAINST ODDS

Oarsmen Preparing For Race Working Under Difficulties.

Weather Does Not Allow Them Proper Kind of Practice.

More time for practice rowing would be a good thing for the Duluth boat club eight. They can have very little opportunity from now until the time of leaving Sunday afternoon, when they will start over the Great Northern for Madison.

The boys have been going out continuously in all sorts of weather, however, last night failing to prevent them, and it was believed that they would go out in tonight's blow and rain the same as they have been.

The wind makes it practically impossible for them to get any proper record of the time they are making, as it frequently blows in such a way as to make the men practically push their boat sideways. The eight bodies sticking up into the wind fairly act as a sail and tend to make the work as difficult as possible. But the men have been working steadily and hard against all the odds.

In the first practice they did not have a shell with which they could get good practice by competition and some individuals interested in the proposition clubbed together and bought one. The season failed to open at a normal time, which was another point which scored heavily against the men. Then the new shell was delayed for two or three weeks by reason of transportation facilities being unobtainable. Lastly the weather has been almost disheartening and the new sweeps have been slow in coming. These were expected to be here, today.

It is not simply the windy and rainy weather that hurts the efforts of the men and forestalls their attaining good speed. The general coolness makes them slow to lose flesh as it is harder to work it off, either in the boat or gymnasium, as long as the sun does not come out hot to help melt it off.

In hot weather an athlete goes out and exercises for a while and when he is through he continues to be very warm for ten or fifteen minutes and perspires freely. This is an important aid to the athlete and does more to get his avordupois reduced than hours of open air hustling in the cold. When the air is chilly a man's warm when he's exercising and as soon as he leaves the boat and goes indoors he cools off almost immediately.

The eight will go to the boathouse Sunday morning to get the boat out and pack it for the trip.

WOMAN AT THE BOTTOM

Fair Lady Said to Be Responsible For Carving Episode.

A fair lady is claimed to have been at the bottom of a dispute between Peter Funk and a negro named Samuel Henry, which resulted in Funk's having his face slashed with a razor.

Funk claims that he was asleep in his room at 714 West Superior street last evening, when he heard a rap at the door about 12:30 a. m. He opened the door and saw Henry standing on the outside. He claims that he told the negro to go away and closed the door, locking it again.

He states that Henry then went around to the window of the room and pushed it up. He went to the window and attempted to shove Henry away and close down the window, when, he asserts, Henry drew a razor and slashed him across the face, making a deep gash on his right cheek.

Funk then summoned Officer Wilcox and told him his story. The officer left to look for Henry, whom he finally located this morning about 5 o'clock. The negro had his clothes packed in a suit case and was waiting for the first car to take him to Superior.

The trouble is claimed to have originated in a dispute over the affections of a certain member of the fair sex, whom Funk is claimed to have won over from the negro.

Funk promised the officer to appear at police headquarters this morning and swear out a complaint against Henry on the charge of assault, but he failed to show up. Henry was arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of drunkenness and pleaded guilty.

Judge Windom withheld sentence, and held the negro for $50 bail until the officers have an opportunity to locate Funk and have him swear to the complaint.

It is feared that Funk has regretted his hastiness in summoning an officer, and fearing to have his troubles aired in court has left the city. The police were unable to find him up to a late hour this afternoon.

THE GOVERNOR OFFERS REWARD FOR SULLIVAN.

NEED NOT SEE IT

Applicant For Chippewa Land Not Compelled to Visit Place.

Provisions Governing the Non-Saline Affidavit In This Case.

Homestead applicants for the Chippewa Indian reservation lands in Northern Minnesota, to be opened to settlement June 15, will not be required to furnish with their applications affidavits stating they had been on and examined the land. They can make their applications without having seen the land in question, according to a communication received at the local land office today from the general land office at Washington, answering an inquiry of the local officials in regard to the matter. There has been some confusion and misunderstanding relative to this feature of the opening, so that the decision of the commissioner is one of unusual interest at this time.

"The lands in question are ceded Chippewa lands, the cession, examination and disposal of which was provided for by act of Jan. 14, 1889. Section 4 of said act, as amended by the act of June 27, 1902, provides for the examination of the lands after survey and their classification into pine and agricultural lands 'shall be disposed of by the United States to actual settlers only, under the homestead law,' with the additional condition that each setter shall pay $1.25 per acre for the land, and the instructions, dated Nov. 14, 1901, provided that all persons thereafter making applications to enter or locate public lands under the homestead or other laws, shall furnish an affidavit showing that the land applied for contains no salt springs or deposits of salt in any form sufficiently to render it chiefly valuable therefor.

"In the case of Minnesota vs. Hitchcock, the supreme court of the United States stated that, 'The words 'public lands' are habitually used in our legislation to describe such as are subject to sale or other disposal under the general laws.' It held further that the Red Lake lands were not public lands, having been ceded by the Chippewa Indians in trust, the lands to be sold for the creation of a fund for the Indians themselves.

"The lands to be opened on June 15, 1904, were ceded by the Indians under the same law and under the same conditions as were the Red Lake lands, a part of which is involved in the prospective opening.

"As stated above, said lands are to be disposed of as pine and agricultural lands and also under the general provisions of the townsite law, and there is no authority for disposing of them under any other laws. I am, therefore, of the opinion that a non-saline affidavit is not required in Chippewa agricultural entries. You will be governed accordingly."

THREE NAMES SUGGESTED

Petitions For Directors Moe, Hendricks and Washburn In.

Only three names have been suggested as candidates for election to the three vacancies on the school board. They are the names of the three old members, Directors Moe, Hendricks and Washburn.

Several petitions have been circulated among the property owners asking that their names be placed upon the ballots at the coming election, which will be held July 16, and from present indications they will be the only ones petitioned for. The board can, however, place other names on the ballots if it is so desired.

The matter will probably be taken up at the next meeting, which was to have been held tonight. It has been postponed until Monday evening, however, on account of the absence of several of the members from the city, and some delay in receiving bids for contracts under consideration.

POSTPONED

MAY LOSE FOOT.

Charles Jamieson Has an Unpleasant Accident.

Charles Jamieson will probably suffer the loss of his right foot as the result of an accident sustained shortly before midnight last night.

Jamieson was crossing Superior street near Eighth avenue west, when he hear dthe clang of a street car gong and looking up to see a car approaching. He attempted to step back, but in some manner caught his foot between the track and the pavement. The car ran over his foot crushing it badly.

He was taken to St. Mary's hospital in the ambulance, and the chances are that amputation of the member will be necessary.

ZIONISTS OF AMERICA.

Cleveland, June 3.—One hundred delegates representing 29 states, were in attendance today when the convention of Zionists of America was called to order. The most important question to be discussed by the convention will be as to whether these delegates are in favor of accepting the offer of England of land in British East Africa for the purpose of opening up a new Judea.

THE AWARD STANDS

Supreme Court Affirms Verdict of St. Louis County Jury.

Mrs. Leduc Will Get Heavy Damages From Northern Pacific.

St. Paul, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The action of a St. Louis county jury in awarding heavy damages to Mrs. Rosie Leduc in her suit against the Northern Pacific Railroad company, for the death of her husband, who was run over by an engine, was affirmed by the supreme court, today.

The opinion is written by Judge Lovely and the court holds that the evidence offered in support of the company's alleged negligence is sufficient to warrant the verdict.

Leduc, a switchman in the employ of the company, was run over while attempting to climb aboard the engine. Defective apparatus and company negligence was alleged as the cause of the accident.

An opinion affirming the judgment of the lower court was handed down today by the supreme court in the case of the state of Minnesota, respondent, against P. and J. Meehan, appellants. The case comes from Red Lake county, and was an appeal from a judgment for personal taxes entered against the Meehans and involved the title to about 13,000,000 feet of logs which they had sold, but not delivered when the assessment was made.

Judge Douglas held that the title to the logs did not pass to the purchaser at the date of making the contract and that they were assessable for taxation against the vendor May 1, 1899.

A SENSATION AT MILWAUKEE

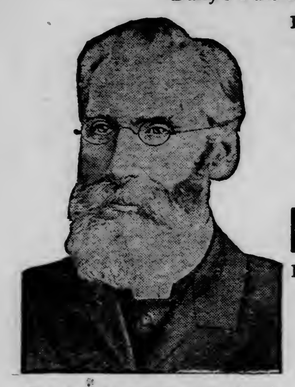
Two Jurors Were Coerced Into Finding Niezoraswski Guilty.

Milwaukee, June 3.—A sensation has developed in the trial of Frank Niezorawski, a member of the Milwaukee board of public works, who was convicted of accepting a bribe of $800 in connection with the awarding of a contract for a school building. Two of the jurors after the trial filed affidavits to the effect that they were coerced in agreeing upon a verdict of guilty. Today affidavits were filed by the same jurors alleging that when they signed the first affidavits they did not know what the documents contained; that they had visited a saloon with the defendant and an attorney and that after becoming intoxicated they were induced to sign the affidavits.

Arguments for a new trial for Niezorawski are being heard this afternoon.

Distinguished Clergymen

And Prominent Temperance Workers Use and Endorse Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.



Rev. A. McLeod, D. D., of the Detroit Presbytery.

Rev. A. McLeod, D. D., the Great Preacher, Was Cured of Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration of Forty Years' Standing by the Wonderful Medicine Whose Virtues He Extols, and to the Curative Qualities of Which He Owes His Renewed Vigor and Perfect Health.

ENDORSE

Honored and Respected Among Men, After More Than 50 Years of Constant Service in the Presbyterian Church, Dr. McLeod Makes the Following Frank and Outspoken Statement of What Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey Has Done For Him:—

"I am now in my 73d year and have served God fearlessly and to the best of my ability in my chosen calling. For more than forty years I have been afflicted with dyspepsia and nervous prostration. At times I would get so run down constitutionally through overwork as to be disqualified entirely from discharging my ministerial duties. The older I grew the more the disease seemed to prey upon me. The most noted physicians failed to prescribe any medicines that benefited me. I could neither eat nor sleep, and for more than two years I had to take sleeping powders every night.

My nervous prostration became well nigh unbearable. But for the grace of God helping me, I would not be in the land of the living. Language fails to express the agony of my mind.

Something over a month ago I began taking your preparation,

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

In the brief period of two days I found that it began to help me. It gave me strength, aided my digestion, settled my nerves and I have gained ten pounds since taking it.

I thank God there is such a medicine to be had, and recommend all people with weak, broken-down constitutions, and nervous people especially to use it. I feel that it will help them. I will be glad to answer any communications in regard to the healing virtue of your preparation. I am a temperance man, and I do not think my position in this matter will be misunderstood."

Rev. Dr. McLeod's endorsement is but the outpouring of a grateful soul. The letter of a man who has been relieved of great suffering and who openly acknowledges the great medicinal value of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Ministers of the gospel, doctors of medicine, nurses and people in every walk of life unite in commending this wonderful medicine—the only perfect tonic-stimulant, the one true, medicinal whiskey. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey cures coughs, colds, worst form of grip, consumption, bronchitis, pneumonia, catarrh, dyspepsia, and all kinds of stomach trouble. It never fails to build up a worn-out system, to soothe the tired nerves, to bring perfect health to the whole being. Every testimonial is published in good faith and guaranteed.

Sold by druggists and grocers or direct, $1.00 per bottle. Medical booklet free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

GAUDY GARTER LED TO PRISON

Arrest of Embezzler Recalls Introduction to French Dancer.

Chicago, June 3.—The denouement of a drama, which began at the Trocadero theater last summer at the climax of a sensational vaudeville turn by Mlle. Millie de Leon, a French danseuse, will be written in the indictment by the June grand jury of Herman E. Haass, former auditor of the Corn Exchange National bank for the embezzlement of nearly $20,000 of his employers' money. Haass was arrested yesterday at San Juan del Rio Querataro, Mexico.

The charming feature of Miss de Leon's turn and the one which endeared her to habitues of the "bald-headed row," was the distribution of several pairs of gaudy garters among her audience. At one performance last summer she was surprised to find one of the garters, which she had thrown far out into the stalls, returned to her like a boomerang, attached to a $500 bill and a courteous invitation to supper.

Haass' novel method of introduction quite captivated the petite dancer and she readily acquiesced to the supper proposition. That was the beginning.

"A most commendable man; an earnest worker and a hard taskmaster, but one, we thought, who had the best interests of the bank at heart. He handled no money, but he kept tab on the other clerks, and so it was not very hard for him to doctor his accounts. He seemed a model man, and we trusted him explicitly."

This is the estimate placed upon Haass by Vice-President Don Moulton of the Corn Exchange bank.

There was one person who could have opened the eyes of the trusting bank officials.

That person is Miss deLeon of the famous garter-$500-note incident. She could have told of gorgeous rooms at the Leland Hotel, where she was kept by Haass. She could have repeated his violent protestations of love and his ardent proposals of marriage. She could have produced glittering diamond rings that weighed down her fingers.

Indeed, she did pay a few visits to the banks. But it was not in a frame of mind conductive to the quiet of the staid institution, and the policeman at the door put her and a long black horsewhip she carried out into the street.

If the bank officials had only invited her into their rooms then she would have revealed things that would have saved them a hunt all over the country for their auditor. The actress had learned that Haass was married, when he vowed to her that he was not; that he either could not or would not marry her; and, besides the whip, she was armed with a paper which, when signed, she hoped would correct the impression that had become current among her friends because of her relations with Haass.

A few weeks after the last futile attempt of Miss de Leon to lash his signature to the paper, Haass asked his superiors for a vacation. The request was granted, and the day before the vacation was to begin Haass suddenly disappeared. He told his friends at the bank that he was ill, and would not be back again that day. He kept his word, and the police have been looking for him since.

BOOKKEEPER GOES WRONG.

Has Disappeared With Stock Worth $17,500.

Washington, June 3.—Willard Myers, general bookkeeper in the banking department of the National Safe Deposit, Savings & Trust company, of this city, has disappeared. He is alleged to have appropriated to his own use the proceeds of forty shares of a certain stock valued at $7,000. Sixty additional shares of the same stock are missing. Myers has been a trusted employe of the institution for twenty-three years. The market value of all the stock he is alleged to have taken is about $17,500. Myers was under bond for $25,000.

TREASURE OF KING

Stones Flashing Brilliant Colors In King Edward's Possession.

Cloak of Feathers Worth Weight of Precious Metals.

London, June 3.—Perhaps no monarch in the world has so large a collection of rich, rare and interesting articles as King Edward.

To mention only a few of these regal treasures, there is at Windsor a single magnificent candelabrum exquisitely wrought in solid gold, and weighing the tenth part of a ton; there is an enormous tiger, large and fierce as life, sheathed in solid plates of gold and with flaming eyes of crystal; and the daintiest bird in all the world with plumage one blaze of precious stones. These treasures—the tiger and the bird—once made the eyes of Tippoo Sahib flash with pride of ownership.

At Windsor, too, is probably the finest gold dinner service in the world, a full table equipment for 140 guests, a single dish of which is sufficient burden for one man, and with gorgeous centerpieces which would tax the strength of three men. There are huge shields of gold, one of which, composed of snuff boxes, is said to be worth $999; large golden tankards and goblets encrusted with gems, cuspidors and candelabra, and other treasures of precious metals and jewels, a mere list of which would fill columns.

But, although the value of these treasures is estimated in seven figures, there are others less splendid, but really more interesting. What fabulous sum would not many a millionaire pay for a tankard made from gold doubloons taken from one of the ships of the—luckily for us—ill-starred Armada, or for that lovely casket of enamel and crystal which was one of the personal treasures Catherine of Braganza brought with her to her English home.

Then there is to be seen at Windsor surely the most wonderful and beautiful cloak in the whole world, made from the red and yellow plumage of rare birds to be found only in a few Pacific islands. It was three-quarters of a century ago one of the most prized possessions of the queen of the Sandwich islands, and its value is estimated at $99,000.

An exquisite little clock of enamel brings back pathetic memories of Queen Anne Boleyn, for it was one of the presents which made her happy on her wedding day; and a pair of spurs are a legacy from the far-off days of Richard III, who once wore them. There is a part of a regimental dinner service used during the black days of the siege of Lucknow, and dented by rebel shot, and two bronze guns presented to Queen Victoria by the last emperor of the French.

King Edward's books none but a millionaire could hope to match, for they number in all over 150,000 volumes, of which two-thirds are at Windsor. Among these volumes are many Caxtons, missals, psalters and other centuries-old volumes, for some of which bibliophiles would gladly pay a few thousand apiece. The king's pictures, too, are valued in hundreds of thousands of pounds, and include some of the finest works of masters old and new, and to these he adds more than 20,000 drawings, engravings and miniatures, largely the collection of his father, the prince consort.

The royal collection of china has scarcely a rival in any palace of Europe. It is the accumulation of centuries and comprises the finest specimens of the world's potteries from China to Dresden and Derby. One exquisite service of "Bleu du Roi," made for Louis XVIII of France is alone said to be worth $50,000.

But these and countless other treasures of equal interest have all come to the king by inheritance. Among his own personal collections are also many things of rare beauty and interest, of which two at least are unique. His collection of silver models of ships is unrivaled, and includes every type that has been seen in our navy from the earliest times, each vessel a microscopically exact reproduction of its original.

The king, too, is very proud of his collection of walking sticks, which numbers several hundreds, and among them a stick made from one of the piles of old London bridge, and another on which a great Australian statesman worked for months while serving a sentence of imprisonment.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

BRIDEGROOM WHO FAILED

At Wedding Would Now Marry Rosannah But For Papa.

New York, June 2.—J. Schaeffer 26 years old, of Long Island City, would marry Miss Rosannah White, of that place, but for the fact that her father owns a shotgun. The couple had been engaged and the ceremony was to have taken place Sunday night in St. Anthony's church, Greenpoint. The bride went to the church with her friends, but Schaeffer did not appear. Miss White wept. Her father did not talk for publication.

Schaeffer came home on Monday and tried to explain, but found every one turned against him.

The family of the bride-that-was-not would not look at him, and he said today that his knock at their door was answered by the muzzle of a gun in the hans of Mr. White.

"Begone! said the irate parent. "Never come back again. My daughter is fortunate in not being your wife. Gee!"

Schaeffer went. He took up a lonely vigil on the front stoop of the Queens county courthouse, from which point of vantage he can see the windows of the White home and at times the form of the bride he lost.

"I love her," he feelingly said today, "and I want to marry her. I would have been there Sunday night only my truck broke through a bridge near Newark and I could not get back."

Schaeffer owns trucks and rents them to an asphalt company. He drove to Newark on Saturday and the accident prevented his return in time for the wedding. He declared that he telegraphed Miss White, of the delay.

"I left $35 at the house to pay for the grub," he declared, "and there was no wedding, but the guests got away with my feed."

Schaeffer moaned. Suppressed emotion shook his form.

"I'd face anything for Rosannah, except that gun," he exclaimed. "I wonder if it would go off if I gave the old man a chance to shoot. Perhaps it's not loaded at all, and it would be great to rush him, get the girl and flee."

Schaeffer meditated a bit and then said that the gun might be loded after all. He decided that a bridegroom should be discreet, so he stuck to the courthouse steps all day. Just how he will capture Rosannah is not quite clear to him as yet, but he is firmly resolved not to give up the fight.

And the most bitter thing that the fair maid would say today about her recreant sweetheart was that he was "real mean."

LYMAN ABBOTT

Would Go Back to Reunion at Terre Haute.

Terre Haute, Ind., June 3.—Nearly every man of prominence in the country today spent some part of his boyhood in Terre Haute. The Old Boys' association, which has been preparing for a reunion for nearly a year, has received letters from most of the great ones. Here is a letter just received from Lyman Abbott, who succeeded Henry Ward Beecher in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, and is the editor of Outlook:

"Mrs. Abbott and I were residents of Terre Haute during the period of the civil war. We went there in the spring preceding Lincoln's first election. We met his funeral cortege as we returned to the East after a five years' pastorate. Two of our children were born to us in that city.

"Out of the friends who welcomed us so heartily and sustained us in our work so loyally while we remained there comparatively few are now alive. But time and distance have done nothing to diminish the affection which binds us to those who still live, nothing to dim the pleasant and sacred memories of those who are gone.

"During the years that have intervened since our departure from Terre Haute the Congregational church has changed in its membership and has moved into a new and beautiful home; and the city has doubled its population. But I hardly need the assurance given me in my last too brief visit to Terre Haute, much less contain that neither the people of the city nor the members of the church have lost anything in the warmth of affections and the cordiality of their friendship."

FISHERMEN BRING IN ABANDONED SCHOONER

St. Johns, N. F., June 3.—The American herring catcher, A. M. Nicholson of Bucksport, Me., adrift in an ice floe all winter, sailed safely into Bonne bay yesterday.

The Nicholson's crew abandoned her January 29, and made their way over the ice to the mainland near Bay of St. George. Five Newfoundland fishermen boarded the vessel April 5th, forty miles from Bonne bay and after a trying experience of fifty-seven days, four of the fishermen brought her into port. The fifth have grown weary of the close confinement, left the vessel May 29, and started across the ice. He has not been heard from since. The fishermen had very little to eat. They lived most of the time on bread and water and flour boiled in a ventilator cover, the only thing left on board that could be utilized for cooking. They arrived in Bonne bay very much exhausted.

HEATWOLE IS READY TO PAY

For Proof of Story About Senatorial Talk.

Dunn Men Say Johnson's Report Helps Them.

St. Paul, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joel P. Heatwole of Northfield, has offered a reward of $100 for every man the Minneapolis Journal or any supporter of Judge Loren W. Collins produces who will make an affidavit that he heard Mr. Heatwole state in the lobby of the Merchants hotel that he intended to be a candidate for the United States senate against Senator Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul.

"The reward is ready for every man the Journal can find that heard me make the statement credited to me recently in the Minneapolis Journal," said Mr. Heatwole, yesterday. "The Journal said that the statement was made in the presence of several men at the hotel and that it was repeated several times. All the gentlemen will have to do is to make an affidavit that I made any such statement and the money will be turned over."

Mr. Heatwole does not think that the story is taken seriously by the politicians of the state, but in view of the fact that the Minneapolis paper has repeated the statement in several issues of the paper and in commenting on it says that the statement was heard by a large number of people in the lobby of the hotel, Mr. Heatwole believes that the Journal should produce some of the gentlemen and has offered the reward of $100 each as an inducement.

Public Examiner S. T. Johnson has confided to some of his friends that in case R. C. Dunn has him indicted by the grand jury on a charge of misappropriating expense money, Mr. Johnson will extend his present investigation of timber trespass settlements to cover Mr. Dunn's expense accounts, and although the public examiner does not say in so many words that he will make it hot for Mr. Dunn on that score he intimates that there may be something doing later on.

It is generally believed that Mr. Dunn will not have Mr. Johnson indicted, at least until after the state convention. In a moment of haste Mr. Dunn said that he would "pay his respects to Mr. Johnson in a few days," but his supporters have prevailed upon him to do nothing of this kind during the campaign. His supporters believe that it would be political suicide to make the same kind of an attack on Mr. Johnson as the public examiner is making on Mr. Dunn.

"I only wish that Mr. Johnson will continue with his investigation and that he will dish the matter out in installments as he has done," said a Dunn supporter yesterday. "If I had the money I would gladly pay Mr Johnson's expenses. I don't think that campaign money could be expended in any better manner as far as Mr. Dunn is concerned."

Mr. Dunn is not talking about the report of Mr. Johnson, believing that it is pretty well understood throughout the state that Mr. Johnson has a political purpose in making the investigation at this time. Mr. Johnson is known to be a bitter personal enemy of Mr. Dunn, and the fact that he is concentrating practically his entire force in an attempt to show up irregularities in the record of his enemy, who is a candidate for governor, in itself, the Dunn men believe, is sufficient to prove that there is political animus back of the investigation. Mr. Johnson claims that the investigation was ordered by the legislative committee, but members of the leislature, who were interested in the appointment of the committee, say that the committee passed on Mr. Dunn's timber trespass settlements finally, and that the only matters referred to Mr. Johnson are certain uncollected timber accounts, which are specified in an exhibit attached to the report.

James A. Martin, Judge Collins' campaign manager, says he does not take much stock in the printed estimates of which way every county in the state is going to vote at the state convention. He said yesterday:

"The estimates which I have seen in one of the St. Paul evening papers mean absolutely nothing. One might just as well put the names of all the counties in a sack and draw them out like a lottery. The result would be just as nearly correct as the estimate in the St. Paul evening paper.

"Why, I see in one of the papers, in which an estimate, purported to come from Mr. Dunn, is printed that the judge is given only 127 delegates in the entire state. I am not a betting man, but if I were I would bet $1000, and stipulate that it go into the fund of the St. Paul public baths, that Judge Collins will get one-half that number of delegates from Mr. Dunn's own congressional district, and that he will have twice that number from Mr. Heatwole's and Mr. Dunn's districts combined."

Senator E. R. Wood of Long Prairie, who is at the Merchants hotel, says that Todd county will probably go for Judge Loren W. Collins. Senator Wood says that the Dunn men are making a hard fight, but he believes that the prevailing sentiment is for the St. Cloud candidate.

A Thinker's Thoughts

If you are a thinker your brain wears away in proportion as you use it and this waste must be rebuilt by food (there's no other way) else the brain grows dull and is a poor instrument.

In Grape-Nuts food all the elements required for this brain building are found in the most liberal proportions, the parts of grains that supply the Phosphate of Potash and Albumen being especially selected in making.

Grape-Nuts

food and trial 10 days will show any brain-weary or nervous wreck a great improvement.

There's a reason, as trial proves.

THE STATE OF TRADE

Shown By Reports to the International Mercantile Agency.

New York, June 3.—Reports to the International Mercantile agency from prominent Western centers reflect fairly active jobbing trade with pronounced hesitancy in manufacturing lines, induced by the growing uncertainty of the presidential campaign. Most branches of dry goods have not recovered from the effects of a backward spring, wholesale business in many sections averaging below a year ago. Lumber, paints and glass are depressed in sections where building operations have been restricted by inclement weather. Drugs have benefited as usual by conditions that oppress other branches of trade.

Retail trade is picking up in many sections, as is evidenced by the better demand for women's apparel. Consumption of necessities is on the increase and country merchants are giving Chicago wholesale houses plenty of orders, indicating a sustained interior demand.

Further serious embarrassment threatens the transportation industry on the great lakes, where the labor difficulties are proving disastrous.

Very little improvement has been noted in the steel industry, which continues exceptionally dull. Coke production is still at maximum, but curtailment is looked for, the outlook in general giving little promise of greater activity in the near future.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Ed. Gaffney and H. Hurst, policemen, fought a duel with pistols on the streets at Carthage, Mo., Thursday. Gaffney was shot in the stomach and will die. Hurst was shot in the head, but may recover.

C. L. Saylor, office manager for the Armour Packing company at South Omaha, committed suicide at Hanson today by shooting himself through the head. The act was committed an hour before the time set for Mr. Taylor's departure for an Ohio sanitarium, where he was going for treatment of his nervous system.

Emery F. Merris, formerly of Iowa Falls, Iowa, at one time prominent in county, committed suicide Thursday in the insane asylum at Independence, Iowa, of which he was an inmate.

A freight train on the Louisville & Nashville railway several miles below Evansville, Ind., struck a handcar on a trestle Thursday. Two men were killed and one was injured by jumping from the track.

Col. C. A. Smith, a millionaire lumber dealer of Minneapolis, who is at Lindsburg, Kan., attended the commencement exercises of Bethany college, announced that he would donate 100,000 feet of lumber to the college.

The dead body of Herman S. Pettibone, 31 years of age, son of former Congressman A. H. Pettibone of Tennessee, was found in a hotel at Washington, Thursday. Some drugs of a mixture of aconite and morphine which were found in a glass on the bureau of the room indicated that the man had committed suicide and the coroner gave a certificate to that effect.

On a track that was heavy and holding, Schulamite backed from 7 to 5 to even money, won the Criterion stakes of $6,000 for two year olds at Gravesend, Thursday. Eight good fillies faced the starter for this race, which was at five furlongs. Hildebrand sent Schulamite to the front and gradually increasing her lead to the finish, won easily by three lengths from Chrysitis, who in turn was six lengths in front of Simplicity.

JOHN GENTRY, JR., aged 14.
OPAL GENTRY, aged 10.
A baby, 2 years old.
Fataly injured: John Gentry, Sr.

The storm swept over a greater portion of Southern Indiana, doing great damage to telegraph and telephone lines, fences an doutbuildings.

PETTIGREW NOT GUILTY.

Jury So Finds Secretary of Mining Company.

Red Lodge, Mont., June 3.—The jury in the case of Attorney General James Donovan vs. Robert Pettigrew, general secretary of the Northwestern Improvement company's mines, has returned a verdict of not guilty. Mr. Pettigrew was charged with the offense of preventing and wilfully obstructing a check weigher in the discharge of his duty. The suit was the outcome of the trouble which caused a strike of 600 men at the local mines of the Northwestern Improvement company on April 10, and caused a suspension of operations for eight days.

The Northwestern Improvement company has in charge the operation of all the coal mines owned by the Northern Pacific Railroad company.

FUNDS ARE MISSING.

Warrant Out For a Miners' Union Treasurer.

Butte, Mont., June 3.—William Bakka, treasurer of the Red Lodge Miners' union, has disappeared, and $1054 of the funds of the union are missing.

Bakka has really been missing since Saturday, but it was not until last evening, however, that suspicion was aroused. Then officials of the union caused a warrant to be issued for his arrest on the charge of absconding. There is absolutely no clue to his whereabouts.

Through what is said to have been negligence on the part of the trustees of the union, a considerable sum had been allowed to accumulate in Bakka's hands, the by-laws providing that only $300 shall be held by the treasurer at one time. Bakka himself had recently called attention to this condition, but it was not remedied.

Most of the money was on deposit in the Red Lodge State bank. Bakka went there Saturday and drew out $600 to pay two checks given in a poker game in J. H. Printz's saloon Friday evening. An odd feature of the alleged embezzlement is the fact that Bakka was not bonded for the reason, it is alleged, that a union boycott is on against the Fidelity and Guaranty Bonding company because George Ramsey, state agent of that company, joined the citizens' alliance in Helena.

SYNOD PROSPEROUS.

President Hanson's Report to Hague Lutheran Conference.

Red Wing, Minn., June 3.—President M. G. Hanson's annual report showed the affairs of the Hague Norwegian Lutheran synod to be in splendid condition, every district reporting substantial increases in membership, new churches and funds. The conference has 108 ministers and 244 conregations. The membership is 33,353. During the year 118 Sunday schools have been conducted. The number of church edifices is 145, and their value approximately $603,000. The synod maintains in China one high school and seven other schools. The synod expended last year nearly $20,000 in China and has a balance on hand for this purpose of about $4500. The synod also maintains a hospital.

This is the third time the conference had met in Red Wing. Since the last meeting about $75,000 has been expended on new buildings and improvements at the Red Wing seminary and the delegates are delighted with the transformation.

Today being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the seminary, the day was set aside for a celebration.

C. W. Landahl, missionary in China, was accepted as a member of the conference. The following were appointed as a committee on elections: Rev. O. F. Johnson, Brainerd, Minn.; Rev. A. M. Mannes, Beresford, S. D.; Rev. J. N. Walsted, Eureka, Kan.; Rev. E. A. Mostue, Winsor, Minn.; Rev. J. K. Lerohl, Lisbon, N. D., and Rev. O. S. Haugland, Clark, S. D.

NO NEGOTIATIONS

For New Treaty Between Russia and Great Britain.

St. Petersburg, June 3.—It is authoritatively stated that no negotiations have yet begun looking to a new commercial treaty between Russia and Great Britain.

The negotiations for a treaty to allow firms in the United States and Russia to sue in the courts of Russia, and the United States respectively, have been completed and the treaty probably will be signed by Foreign Minister Lamsdorff and Ambassador McCormick in a few days.

Under the existing Russian law, United States corporations can be sued but cannot sue in the courts of the empire.

MINISTER

Has His Wife and Her Paramour Arrested.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 3.—Upon information by Rev. George B. Richardson, pastor of the First Baptist church of Wahoo, Neb., Mrs. Richardson and John B. Whitney, city clerk of Wahoo, were arrested while taking a late supper at the Eureka restaurant last night. The two were locked up and a charge of adultery placed against them by the minister.

Mrs. Richarson had visited in New York and met Whitney in Omaha on her way back. Her husband says she was corrupted by a woman of loose morals in his congregation.

The minister sat outside his wif's cell last night watching over her without once closing his eyes, but she says she will never return to him.

Contracts For Extensions.

Contracts for the construction of several of the city water and gas main extensions were awarded yesterday by the board of water and light commissioners to Emil Engle. The contracts carry the stipulation that the city will furnish all the material except the lead packing at the joints.

The extensions were ordered a few weeks ago by the water and light commissioners and were approved by the city council.

ANN ARBOR STUDENTS

Made Mrs. Minnie Madden Fisk Angry.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 3.—Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske is digusted with Ann Arbor, the University of Michigan, both faculty and students. She played "Hedda Gabler" here and ordered the curtain rung down in the middle of the first act because some students in the gallery were eating peanuts.

Her management announced that if peanut eating during the performance was not stopped the performance would cease altogether.

Mrs. Fisk raised the ire of the student body by stating that the faculty was the most provincial and backward concerning high-class drama of any college in the country. Mrs. Fisk declared she will never play here again.

GIRL STILL MISSING.

All Reports of Miss Wiggins' Whereabouts Misleading.

Butte, Mont., June 3.—Pretty Edna Wiggins, who caused a stir in Butte by mysteriously disappearing from her home, is still among the missing, although the police headquarters are flooded with reports concerning her whereabouts. Word came from Helena that she was up there, but when this was sifted down it was found that another girl had been mistaken for the fair Butte clerk.

Not a day passes but what three or four reports come in from as many different quarters, stating that the Butte belle has been located. The last report came from Mrs. J. M. Small, of Walla Walla, Wash. In her letter Mrs. Small wrote that her husband was a car repairer and that he had met a girl answering to the description of Edna Wiggins. Three young men arrested some time ago in connection with the disappearance of Miss Wiggins are still held by the police.

WILL DIGNIFY LABOR.

Yesterday's telegraphic dispatches brought the information that some of Chicago's philanthropists, in connection with Clarence Darrow, the Socialist writer, and Professor Triggs, lately released from Chicago university, are to establish an industrial school on the banks of the St. Clair river, where it is proposed to educate boys to be useful with both hands and heads. It is the intention to make the institution self-supporting as soon as possible by selling the products of farm and workshops.

No doubt the idea originated with Professor Triggs, who some time ago wrote an able article for the Phillistine, advocating the establishment of schools of learning where young men might be taught to use their hands in a practical way. He believes that colleges devote too much of their time to teaching literature and the studies necesary to fit men for professions. He would give the boy with an aptitude for farming, mechanics or sciences an opportunity to glean a practical as well as theoretical education in the particular trade to which he is naturally adapted so that he may become a master thereof. He claims that present-day industrial conditions make it necessary that young men shall receive such practical instruction if they are to make the best of life.

There are few thoughtful people who will deny that the professor is right. The need of such training schools is plainly evident. Many a bright young man wastes his time in college pursuing the studies necessary to fit him for some profession when he might be devoting his attention to the practical study of some trade or occupation for which he is better fitted.

If the different preparatory schools and colleges of the country would add such industrial departments as these Chicago men propose to establish, they would do much to remove the present false notion generally existing even among the laboring classes of this country that only those employments which permit the wearing of a boiled shirt and a starched collar are really genteel. As a result of this foolish sentiment, many of the "genteel" ocupations and professions are already overcrowded by young men poorly paid, who might be working at trades where wages are high and employment steady and sure.

The Herald has a firm belief that children should be taught what they best like to know after they have acquired the rudiments of education and that there should be no hard and just rules in the higher grades or in high schools as to what studies a pupil shall pursue. There should be some means of permitting him to study those things which will best fit him for success in some occupation or trade for which he is by nature adapted.

As at present carried on, the public schools afford opportunity for the boy who desires to enter the professions or a literary career to gain instruction along those lines at public expense, while the boy who desires to learn a trade or other occupation in the industrial world must glean most of the knowledge necessary for his success at his own expense or go without. Many a good blacksmith has been spoiled in an effort to create a poor lawyer or doctor. Only those who are peculiarly fitted by nature to enter the professions or the boiled-shirt employments should be educated along those lines.

There is great need of more industrial and trade schools, and the public should not leave it entirely to private enterprise to provide them. Those Chicago men are to be commended for the move they are about to make, and all citizens who take an interest in education and hope for reform that will best meet the needs for present conditions will earnestly hope that their project may be successfully carried out.

Millionaire philanthropists who desire to expend their wealth for the welfare of humanity would find opportunity for a noble work in the endowment of industrial and trade schools. There are plenty colleges of the old-fashioned kind.

In the more sensible time to come, a man will not be judged by the kind of clothes he wears while engaged in his vocation, nor by the softness of his hands, but by the amount of money he is able to earn.

THE NATIONAL SPIRIT IN CANADA.

In addressing a recent meeting of the Canadian club of Ottawa, J. S. Ewart, K. C., of Winnipeg, declared that "Canada cannot rightly proclaim herself a nation, as she does not enjoy the measure of self-government accorded a nation, but Canada," he added, "is beginning to assert herself, to realize her strength, and the fact that for her there is a leading part to play on the world's stage."

While he complained that in many important points power rested in Westminster instead of Ottawa, and further complained of England's short-sightedness in dealing with Canada, yet he stood for existing relations in preference to Canadian independence or annexation to the United States, hoping that arrangements would soon be made to give Canada more power in dealing with affairs both internal and external.

In all probability Mr. Ewart accurately measures Canadian sentiment. While there is no general desire at this time for absolute independence from England there is a rapid development of national sentiment and a growing demand for less restrictions on the part of the mother country. That this sentiment will soon develop into a demand for actual independence cannot be doubted as the younger element will certainly lean in that direction.

In its dealings with Canada it will be necessary for the United States to take this fact into consideration. No progress will be made in seeking more liberal trade relations with that country if our statesmen and diplomats proceed upon the theory that Canada is always to be a colony and a dependency of Great Britain.

THE FIXING OF RATES.

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Charles A. Prouty, after stating in the columns of the North American Review that the railroads of the United States had raised their rates during the past four years to such an extent that the increased tax amounts to $155,000,000 annually, continues:

"There is but one way to regulate railway charges, and that is to regulate them. If a rate is found unreasonable, a reasonable rate must be put in place of it. This method is legal, as has been affirmed by the courts without number. It is feasible. Every civilized country in the world employs it today except our own. Even the Dominion of Canada, within the past year, has adopted that system. It is just to all parties, and no other system is."

If this method is reasonable, feasible and legal, what is the commission waiting for? Why does it not go ahead and reduce the unreasonable rates? It has been supposed that the commission was created for that purpose.

Speaking of the decision in the Northern Securities case, Commissioner Prouty confirms a conviction that is almost universal when he says: "In all human probability, the Northern Securities decision will not result in the dissolution of a single railroad combination now existing except the Northern Securities company itself, nor seriously interfere with the formation of other combinations. We are confronted with increasing monopoly, with advancing rates and with no relief in sight."

It would seem to be pertinent to again ask why there is no relief in sight? Mr. Prouty's effusion appears to be self-contradictory. If present laws do not give the power to reduce unreasonable rates, how can rate reduction be legal?

It is evident that the fact to be deducted from his argument is that present laws are inefficient to compel reasonable rates, and also that the commission is so hedged about with restrictions by the party in power that it is unwilling even to attempt to bring the railroads to terms. The Herald believes that this explanation is the correct one and bears out its contention that there must first be the will to do before anything can be done. When the will develops, a way can be found.

But it is doubtful if any law for the regulation of railroads can be passed that will be effective as long as railroads remain in private hands, notwithstanding the fact that "every civilized country in the world employs it today except our own." The commissioner speaks of Canada as being one of these countries and yet we know that no section of the American continent suffers more from the effects of excessive railroad rates than the Canadian Northwest. Settlers on the government lands of that territory find it one of the greatest drawbacks to their success.

When the United States government passes a law that will be effective in fixing railroad rates and preventing rate discrimination that law will include a provision for absolute government control, and it is difficult to see how that can be done as long as the railroads are permitted to remain in the hands of private owners. It would seem experience has demonstrated that no law which seeks to prevent a man from doing what he will with his own property can be successfully enforced.

FACTS IN THE CASE.

The report of State Examiner Johnson in the matter of timber trespass on state lands since the organization of the commonwealth is briefly as follows:

"The total amount of money collected on account of trespass settlements during Auditor Dunn's term was $146,633. Prior to 1895, the state realized $62,392, because of timber stealing, and $17,332 on settlements, making a total of $226,328 realized from this account from the beginning of the state up to June 1, 1903.

"The records show that this money was all accounted for and turned into the state treasury.

"The records also show that the same men trespassed in state timber, year after year, sometimes paying nothing at all, and no effort was made to prosecute the violators of the law.

"Out of 313 stumpage permits issued by Auditor Dunn, 286 failed to meet important requirements of law, and timber cut under them was illegally cut.

"Permits were not recorded with the surveyor general until after the timber had been floated away, (286 of 313 permits, the report charges).

"Log marks required by law not included in the permit, 129 of the 313 permits not reporting any log marks at any time, while 60 missed one year."

Former Auditor Dunn made the claim that he collected $180,000 from timber trespassers during his incumbency, while former auditors collected only $12,000. The Johnson report claims that Dunn collected only $146,633, while former auditors collected $62,392.

Whether more or less was collected and whether all was collected that was possible, the fact remains that effort has never been made to punish timber thieves under the criminal laws except in very rare instances, probably when there was some personal spite. It is in this fact that the people are more interested than in the amount of the collections. And it may be safely said that the same policy pursued in the past in this respect will be pursued in the future if the Republican party is returned to power, no matter which contestant is nominated for the governorship. The interests of the party are too closely bound up with those of the men who steal the timber.

THE FIELD SURVEY

"The first duty of any nation," says Mayor Collins of Boston, "is to mind its own business and to allow others the same right. Nations and peoples, large and small, are as much entitled as we are to go right or wrong and to work out their own salvation in their own way." This is the safe and sane position of not only true Democrats, but of all true Americans. If the United States assumes the role of dictator to other nations, there is no reason why other nations should not combine to dictate to us. That would necesitate a return to the old theory that "might is right" and would lead to endless trouble and bloodshed.

What is this nation coming to, anyway, when a circus can drive a Fourth of July celebration out of business?

It is perhaps appropriate that the "Spirit Fruit" cult, which appears to run largely to free love and no responsibility, should have its headquarters in Chicago, the city of divorces and divorcees.

Endorsing the sentiments expressed by President Roosevelt at Gettysburg, the Kansas City Star says: "The balance of power has often been found to rest with corrupt or ignorant men. As a measure of self-protection the cities must find means to limit the privilege of suffrage to men who appreciate their responsibility." Then if we disfranchise the corrupt and the ignorant, and all but those who appreciate the responsibility, how many will there be left to vote? Just those that vote to please the Star or those that vote to please the president? Suppose the corrupt and the ignorant should take it into their heads to say: "We will limit the franchise to ourselves, excluding the rich, the respected and the educated, as we do not believe they vote for our best interests," and suppose they had the power to do it, what would the Star say then?

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Look at that fire." One of the Rogers brothers chuckled this mornig as he stood against the counter at the Spalding and looked at the heat being manufactured in the big fire place.

Straw hats were plentiful among the male contingent of the company, and they were all bundled up in a way that suggested how unexpected the weather conditions of this section were to them.

"I'll certainly have to buy a cap, or something warmer looking than this," said one of them as he took off his stiff mackinaw hat and looked ruefully at it. "I thought we were going to have a few days of summer when I bought this a couple of weeks ago, but from what I've seen of Duluth in the ten minutes since I've been here I think the region is a twin brother to the North Pole. Think I'll go and hire a dog sled this afternoon and have a run over the boulevard."

"Wonder where it is that all my stuff goes to these days, after I leave the room" mused one of the oldest guests as one of the largest hotels. "I wish I could make arrangements to convince the chambermaid that I would like to retain such property as I have collected in my apartment. It is not so bad when stuff is taken from the dresser and put on the table, or left on the chair, but I was looking for a brush this morning and could not find it. Where do you suppose she put it? Behind the heater? If she did she must think I have scalp trouble and need warm brushing when I fix my hair in the morning.

"Nearly every time I go up to that room after it has been 'done up' I feel that I have been 'done up,' too, for I can't find my things. I don't mind one thing or another going and exchanging places, but I do object to things disappearing altogether. I like to have my hair brushed when I come down to breakfast, but if I can't find the brush what am I to do? I am very certain I did not take the brush down to the office with me yesterday. But never mind. I'll buy a new one and if that chambermaid is still on duty when Christmas comes, I'll leave her out of my Christmas tree list."

R. Seidler, of St. Petersburg, Russia, was registered yesterday at the Spalding. He is one of the Russian government metallurgical engineers and is in this country studying mining and metallurgy as carried on in the United States. A reportorial effort to learn whether this visit was in connection with war problems in the far East was unsuccessful. All the visitor would say about the war between the Russians and the Japanese was that he thought Russia would win.

Mr. Seidler says that in his country the government engineers are privileged to do private work in addition to their regular government duties and indicated that he was over here in his private capacity. He says that everywhere he has been the advance of this country strikes him as colossal, especially the production of the Illinois Steel company, 700,000 tons, which he says is twice as much as all Russia's output.

Mr. Seidler has visited all the Eastern cities of prominence since landing in New York a month ago, having left his native country two months since. He intends visiting the mining district here and then the copper country around Hancock, which will complete his investigation in the United States. He regrets that he was unable to find the district in better business condition, as he could have observed the mining industry better if it were in full blast. He speaks Russian, German and French, and very little English, most of the latter being mixed with the French "pour" and the German "von."

They are telling a lot more stories about the economical man—and it is the same man, identically.

He is reported to have taken a young woman to the theater not long ago and they sat in seats that cost at the least calculation 75 cents each. After the performance they came out of the theater, and as they got near a drug store, he said to her:

"What shall it be, dear? Shall we ride home on th street car or have a treat to ice cream soda?"

As she knew him pretty well, she decided to have the ice cream soda, and they walked home.

Another time he is said to have taken a girl (whether it is the same one is not stated) into an ice cream parlor after her assent to his suggestion that they "take something." He is said to have paid 10 cents for his own dish of ice cream and let her pay for hers.

At on other time he took her to a picnic and some of the boys suggested that they take the girls out for a row. They could club togther and hire a boat, according to those who favored the idea. He did not say anything and the other fellows went ahead and completed arrangements.

When it came to the test he did not have the nerve to get into the boat, as it would cost money. He let them take his girl along, but he sat on the bank and watched the boat glide around on the wear while he held his hand over his trousers pocket, so that none of his ducats might escape.

"What would you do, warm it?" asked a friend.

Fluvanna.

Washington Star: Faithful among the faithless stands Fluvanna. This county in Virginia bearing this musical and unusual name is not to be stampeded by the Parker, the Gorman, the Cleveland or any other boom. It wants harmony, and is willing to co-operate to that end, but not to the extent of deriding old issues or abusing old friends. Yesterday the Democrats of Fluvanna met and after selecting delegates to the state convention adopted resolutions declaring the platforms of 1896 and 1900 to have been the clearest enunciation of human rights since the days of Jefferson, and W. J. Bryan the ablest exponent." Now, whether that act be wise or expedient, it cannot be denied that it is brave. It passes into history, and will enable the Democrats of the country in future, when discussing the incertitude or instability of the counties in Virginia in this day of unrest, to point proudly to the fact that Fluvanna was not among those that "flew the coop."

New Yorker: Claude—If I kiss you will you call your father?

Maude—It won't be at all necessary for you to kiss the whole family.

New York Sun: Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard to get her poor doggie a bone.

"Begobs," remarked the cook, "the last lady Oi wurrked fer niver came in the kitchen, an if you don't clear out, Oi'll lave."

Herein we see the true reason why the poor doggie got none.

MURPHY'S MADNESS.

New York World: "Tammany Hall," says a friend on behalf of Charles F. Murphy, the "boss" of that organization, "is absolutely and unqualifiedly opposed to Parker. He cannot carry New York and he cannot be elected."

Let us see about that. In 1892 the Tammany delegates at Chicago divided into a score of strong committees that repeatedly visited the headquarters of the other states, urging and emphasizing the argument: "Cleveland cannot carry New York." The delegation of the Empire State was behind them.

The World assured the convention that Cleveland could carry the state if any Democrat could carry it. He was nominated on the first ballot with New York's vote. He did carry the state. He was elected.

How is it now? This year the Empire State is not in opposition to the Democrats of the country. Its delegates are instructed for Parker under the unit rule. Tammany, which voted against those instructions at Albany said in its proffered minority resolution:

"Alton B. Parker, a Democrat in the prime of life, has been elected by a majority of over 60,000 to the chief position in the judicial system of this state, and during the last six years has discharged the duties of his high office with such unvarying dignity, shining ability and scrupulous fidelity, that if his term were to expire this year he would undoubtedly be chosen to succeed himself by the concurring votes of all his fellow-citizens."

In his oration in support of that resolution Bourke Cockran said:

"The majority asks the nomination as a favor; the minority asks it on Judge Parker's record."

Why does Murphy now repudiate these utterances? Simply as a move in a faction fight against McCarren and the Brooklyn independents. That is all—that and some curious idea of possible patronage.

In 1892 New York's delegattion was against the Democratic current. In 1904 a vulgar fraction of the party machine in a single city is against the current in both the city and the state; and nine-tenths of the subordinate leaders of that fraction, even, are chafing almost to the point of rebellion under the extraordinary action of the "boss."

Again The World warns Democrats of other states not to take Murphy too seriously.

POLITICAL RIGHTS OF VICE.

William Allen White in McClure's Magazine: Classes in civil government in the schools and colleges are studying a theoretical government; they are not classifying the dodo. The government which is set down in books does not exist in fact and in truth, and America is today operating under a new government entirely outside the constitution, save that empty constitutional forms are used. There has been a revolution or an evolution, or whatever one chooses to call it. But there has been many a change. Where in the constitution are the functions of the boss described? Where in the constitution are the relations between the local corporation attorney and the people described? Where in the constitution does the chairman of the state central committee of the dominant party get his authority to sell legislative indulgences to corporations that contribute to his campaign fund? Where in the constitution may one find how the thing we call capital gets into the government at all?

Yet it is here; its charter rights do not give it the ballot, nor do they give it legislative rights nor special judicial privileges; yet, by controlling party nominations and by recruiting judges from its own law offices, the thing we call capital has become a part of this government. So has vice. That class of persons who desire to break the law, whether by running saloons or gambling places or evil resorts, or committing highway robberies, or conducting swindling schemes, forms a distinct political body which is really recognized by all persons practically engaged in governing the people, and the rights of vice are guarded as sacredly as those of law-abiding persons.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A girl can be fooled by almost any man that she wants to fool her.

When a girl is interested in a married woman it is a sign they are interested in a man.

When a man's suit is favored by a girl's mother it is a sign he isn't getting along so well with the girl.

It's mighty queer how a girl will carry on when a miller is fixing around the gas jet and sit perfectly still while a mosquito is chewing down the middle of her back.

The Sun Forestalled.

Washington Post: No doubt the New York Sun imagines a great thing in provoking this controversy about the battle of San Juan, at Santiago, July 1, 1898. No doubt it intends by first asserting that Col. Roosevelt took part in the charge on San Juan Hill, and then carefully showing with the aid of copious quotations from history that he did nothing of the sort, to embarrass the president and convict him of false pretenses. We, however, see the matter in a different light. Mr. Roosevelt has never laid claim to leadership or even participation in that engagement. On page 134 of his "Rough Riders in Cuba," the distinguished author describes the charge as he saw it from the summit of Kettle Hill, a half mile to the rear, giving the credit where it rightfully belongs—to Col. Hawkins, of the regulars—and pretending to nothing more than exceptional advantage as an eyewitness at a distance. Everybody knows that the storming of San Juan Hill ended the affair, that afterward, there was nothing more than some desultory firing from the next line of entrenchments, to which the Spaniards at once fell back. There was a night of constant vigilance, alarm, and hardship; but that was all. Hostilities, as army men understand the term, ceased when Hawkins and his men streamed over the crest of San Juan. Nobody having the slightest acquaintance with the facts has ever imagined otherwise. What end the Sun hopes to promote by this ridiculous agitation we do not endeavor to conjecture. If it hopes to put the president in the position of claiming renown to which he is not properly entitled, that hope is doomed to disappointment for neither as historian nor as soldier has Mr. Roosevelt ever pretended to any glory or achievement in connection with San Juan.

Tawney's Claim to Greatness.

New York American: Friends of Representative Tawney are advocating his nomination to the vice presidency by pointing with pride to his military record. One of them invites attention to the fact that as a Republican little boy he "heard the rattle of musketry on the field of Gettysburg, near which town his parents resided." This is nearly as valid a "claim" as that of Bret Harte's man who "was with Grant—in Illinois, three years before the war."

Twelve hundred enthusiastic fans shivered in the grand stand at Athletic park yesterday afternoon while the White Sox and the Maroons wallowed around in the mud and finally succeeded in completing a full nine-inning game—the first league game played on the home grounds this year.

Preceding the game the two teams, headed by the city officials in carriages and Flaaten's band, marched from the city hall to the grounds. On arriving at the park, Mayor Cullum was presented to the crowd by President Edward Hazen of the ball club. He made a brief and witty little speech.

"There is something wrong with the man who doesn'e care to see a game of baseball," he said. "Throughout the country there are thousands of people in the bleachers today showing their appreciation of the game. It is the great American game, and the men who go to witness it are the right kind of Americans."

A fine mist commenced to fall while the mayor was speaking, and it continued until the seventh inning had been reached. Mayor Cullum did not remove his raincoat when he stepped into the box, and this doubtless interfered with accurate work on his part. The ball might have come within twenty-five feet of the plate, but there would be few people in the grounds who would be willing to swear to it on the witness' stand. Avery, the first Winnipeg batsman, made a desperate swipe at it, however, and the umpire called strike.

At this point the city's chief executive reluctantly abandoned his position and was replaced by "Rusty" Owens, the man with the mysterious curves.

Meanwhile the rain continued to fall, the wind continued to blow, and the fans continued to shiver. The field was slippery. The ball was wet. The players were blue with the cold. But in spite of all these drawbacks the game was a fast one. The White Sox pulled out the victory by their rapid work in the field. Both pitchers were touched up freely, as the ball was so wet they could do little with it. The only thing that saved the White Sox from defeat was the phenomenal work of the infield. Three times did the Maroons get men on bases with only one man out, and three times did the White Sox retire the side with double plays.

The first double came in the fourth. Owens had experienced little difficulty in retiring the side up to that time, but in the fourth, Spooner and Clarke led off with clean singles, and Hughes advanced them both with a sacrifice. With a man on second and one on third, and only one out, it looked like a score, but Howard knocked a little pop fly, which Owen succeeded in capturing after a desperate run. Spooner was half-way to the plate and a toss to Quillan did the trick.

In the sixth after Spooner had been retired, Clarke made a hit and went to second on a wild pitch by Owens. Hughes the next man up slammed a hot one at Quillan. The little third baseman fielded it perfectly and caught the runner at first. Meanwhile Clarke was digging up the mud in a frantic endeavor to reach third when Zink by a quick return to Quillan caught him by three feet.

Once again in the eighth did the team pull Owens out of a hole. Avery, the first man up struck out, and then Annis, the little short stop of the Maroons, dropped one of Rusty's slants over the left field fence for four bags. Kelley, the next man up got a clean single and it looked as if Owens were going up in the air. Spooner waited for four bad ones to go by, and there were two men on bases with one out. Clarke slammed a hot liner at Ball, which the short stop smothered, threw to Martin catching Spooner, and the Duluth captain completed the double by shooting the litle sphere to Zink and catching the batter by half a foot.

There is little doubt but that those three double plays saved the White Sox from defeat. The visitors had just as many hits to their credit, and while they had a couple of extra errors, Dahlquist had a little the better of Owens in the matter of strike-outs.

The game was a pitcher's battle until the seventh when hits by Martin and Lagger, and erros by the visitors, a pass to first and too long outfield flies netted two runs.

Duluth cinched the game in the eighth. After Corrigan and Martin had struck out, Randall drew a base on balls, and O'Leary, who had hitherto failed to connect, slammed one of Dahlquist's benders into the little angle in the centerfield fence. It was good for three bases and Randall scored. O'Leary scored on Lagger's clean single and Lagger was caught a moment later trying to steal second.

With two men on bases in the ninth, Annis who had knocked a home run in the previous inning, came to bat. A repetition of the trick meant that the score would be tied, but the best he could do was a little pop fly to Martin.

Rain at Crookston.

Crookston, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The baseball game between Fargo and Crookston scheduled for yesterday afternoon was postponed on account of rain.

Off the Bat.

Four straight from Winnipeg.

* * *

The Sox are good mud hens.

* * *

The mayor had speed but poor control.

* * *

Annis' home run was a beauty, but there were no men on bases.

* * *

O'Leary's triple was one of the longest hits seen on the home grounds. It went to the center field fence.

* * *

Ball played a beautiful game at short. He had seven assists without a misplay. Quillan had six at third.

* * *

The fans will be sorry to see "Joe" Wilkes leave the team, but he is not far away, and if we can't have the pennant, it would look well in Superior.

* * *

The weather man seems to be the only "hoodoo" Duluth has this season. The weather yesterday was not fit for Esquimaux.

* * *

Both the Superior and Crookston games had to be called off yesterday on account of the rain.

* * *

Ball went after Spooner's two-bagger in the second inning yesterday and all but pulled it down. It was a high drive over second, and Ball just got the tips of his fingers on it.

* * *

Wagner and Hughes, the two new Winnipeg men, were in the game yesterday and showed up in fair form. They should make good.

OPPOSED TO VACATIONS.

Russel Sage Thinks the Habit Is Pernicious.

New York, June 3.—The June number of the Independent publishes the following from the pen of Russell Sage, under the heading, "The Injustice of Vacations:"

"During the 83 years of my career I have not once taken a vacation. A young man said to me the other day, 'Mr. Sage, would you not have taken a vacation if you had worked for some one else?' I replied that I would not. I never have been an advocate of what some persons term the 'vacation habit.'

"When I was a boy the practice was not in vogue. As a matter of fact, I was so glad to get a chance to learn business that the idea of asking my employer to make me a present of two weeks' time that belonged to him because he had paid me for it, would have been preposterous.

"Neither did any of my youthful associates take vacations. I am sure you will agree with me that the fact did not retard their progress, when I say that among them were Thurlow Weed, Horace Greely, Gov. Seward and George Jones.

"I think the vacation habit an outgrowth of abnormal and distorted business methods. Let us assume that an employer and his clerk make an agreement to exchange just remuneration for reasonable services. Each one keeps his part of the agreement. Are they not then quits? If there is any obligation, I think it is on the part of the clerk who avails himself of the credit, skill and organization of the employer.

"Suppose we were to reverse the conventional order of things, and instead of the clerk demanding two weeks' pay gratis, his employer should demand two weeks' work without pay as a condition of retaining the clerk in his employ. What a tremendous howl would go up.

"It is worry, not work, that makes the hair gray. Doctors may recommend a change of air for a man when he is sick. But why be sick? Sickness is an irreparable loss of time. If I had a thousand tongues, I'd preach 'Save time' with them all.

"It is infinitely more valuable than money."

WILKES IS OUT

Popular Outfielder Has Been Released, Superior Getting Him.

Not Hitting Hard Enough —Team Now Has Thirteen Men.

"Joe" Wilkes, the popular little outfielder of the Duluth club, has been released to Superior.

Wilkes was not needed by the Duluth club, and there was no reason why he should be retained. Lagger, Corrigan and Randall make an excellent trio of outfielders, and either Koukalik, Hughes or Genring can play a good outfield if occasion demands it.

The only reason why Wilkes was released was on account of his hitting. He has not been hitting the ball as regularly as Lagger, and the latter was therefore given the preference.

The Northern league clubs have an agreement whereby any club which releases a player must give the other clubs in the league the first chance to secure his services. In this way the weaker clubs have an opportunity to strengthen their nines, and Superior has been enabled to secure both Noldin and Wilkes from the Duluth line-up.

The team, as it now stands, will probably remain intact for some time to come, at least. There are thirteen men in all, including four pitchers and two catchers. One of the catchers and two of the pitchers can be used as utility fielders.

Chandler, of the Superior team, has been released, and Leach, the university of Minnesota man, has reported. The Superior nine should now be in a position to give any of the teams in the league a hard rub and it promises to be Duluth's most dangerous opponent for championship honors.

The Duluth and Winnipeg teams are scheduled to play again this afternoon, but it is doubtful if the grounds will be in condition. The victory yesterday makes the fourth that the White Sox have taken from the Maroons this year, without a defeat at their hands.

DOMESTIC TRADE

Movements In Agricultural Portions of Country Are Lighter.

Due to Smaller Contributions to the Freight Traffic.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Domestic trade movements in the agricultural portions of the country during April are usually lighter on account of the smaller contributions of farming sections to freight traffic. Reports to the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, cover the current year to the end of April. At the North Atlantic seaboard grain receipts show the effects of waiting for the opening of lake and canal navigation, which is unusually late this season. Failure to adjust wages of seamen on the great lakes is tying up three-fourths of the larger vessels on these waters at a time when the entire machinery of lake commerce should be ready for the seasons' business. Ex-rail rates on grain by rail from lower lake ports to the seaboard have been arbitrated without a differential in favor of Philadelpria or Baltimore, pending the decision of the interstate commerce commission, to which the entire question of trunk line differentials has been appealed for hearing localities interested. In the coasting trade the vessel movement improved, combined arrivals at New York and Philadelphia being 18 per cent larger than in March. Coastwise coal moved in somewhat larger quantity to a greater variety of ports than in any earlier month of the year, though Boston's coastwise receipts in April were lighter than those of March, accounting possibly for the lower freight from Philadelphia on this commodity. In Southern territory the naval stores year begins with April. Spirits and rosin receipts at primary ports are consequently light. Cotton came into sight in rapidly diminishing volume. Grain receipts at gulf ports did not reach one-fourth the quantity of a year ago. Citrus fruit shipments in California averaged 1200 cars per week in April. Coal tonnage passing Davis Island dam was nearly twice that of April, 1903. Connellsville coke shipments have averaged nearly a thousand cars per week less than in 1903. Anthracite shipments for this month comprised the largest April movement in the history of the industry, but for the four months it was 14 per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1903.

Live stock supplies during April at the five western markets continue to arrive in unusual numbers, though rains, high water and bad country roads retarded the movement somewhat towards the close of the month. Total arrivals at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis and St. Joseph exceeded 2,500,000—2,529,672 head. In April, 1903, there were 2,461,868 head, and 2,189,634 head in April, 1902. Pasturing conditions at the close of the month were good generally, and the country's capacity to hold its stock for favorable marketing was reported to be ample.

These five markets have thus far in 1904 received 11,414,385 head of stock. In 1903 the total was 10,665,769 head, or nearly a million and a half less, while 10,220,642 head were reported in 1902.

The month of April closed without the opening of the channels connecting the upper and lower lakes at the straits of Mackinac and at the Sault Ste. Marie canals, thus deferring through navigation until the beginning of May. Opening of the straits in May has not occurred since 1888, when navigation was resumed on May 4. In 1899 the United States canal opened May 2, and in 1888 on May 4.

Domestic commerce on the great lakes is reported from forty-nine ports of receipt and fifty-four ports of shipment for the month of April. In spite of unfavorable conditions, owing chiefly to lateness of opening of navigation, 1,140,390 net registered tons of arrivals and 1,245,123 net registered tons of clearances entered into operations during this month. Business has, however, been extremely light, compared with the preceding season. Up to the end of April, this season, only 883,398 tons of freight wer reported as received. Last season by the same date 3,515,769 tons were received and 3,807,630 tons in 1902.

Grain receipts at nine primary seaports of the United States for the last four months were 81,754,979 bushels, including flour reduced to bushels. A year ago the corresponding total was 125,869,692 bushels, showing a decrease of 44,054,713 bushels, or 35.2 per cent. During the month of April 16,342,580 bushels were received, compared with 28,800,011 bushels for April, 1903.

Total receipts of grain, including flour reduced to bushels, at five ports on the North Atlantic seaboard for the month of April, 1904, were 13,921,652 bushels. Last year for the corresponding month receipts were 22,558,648 bushels. For the four months ending April, 61,260,968 bushels were received in 1904 and 89,597,393 bushels in 1903. During April, 1904, receipts at Portland were 235,630 bushels, in contrast with 623,352 bushels for April, 1903.

Receipts at New York reached a total of 7,791,167 bushels in April. Last year the corresponding receipts amounted to 10,877,565 bushels. For the first third of this year New York receipts totaled 27,779,707 bushels and 38,662,626 bushels in 1903. At Philadelphia receipts were 10,131,223 bushels for the four months ending with April, 1904, and 14,422,565 bushels in 1903. At Baltimore 12,021,248 bushels were received, against 20,525,683 bushels a year ago.

Coastwise shipments of coal during the month of April, 1904, from piers at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk and Newport News furnished a combined tonnage of 3,174,421 tons, of which 1,767,219 tons were anthracite and 1,407,202 tons bituminous. For the four months ending with April the total shipments were 9,701,846 tons, of which 5,009,171 tons were anthracite and 4,692,675 tons bituminous. Last year April shipments amounted to 2,561,614 tons, and for the four months ending with April, 9,982,155 tons were shipped.

Coastwise coal receipts at Boston for four months of the current year were 1,482,133 tons. Here, as elsewhere, there has been a decrease in the quantity of coal required for current demand. A year ago 2,178,515 tons were received for the corresponding period. The greatest decrease has been in receipts of foreign coal by sea, less than one-fourth as much having arrived this year as last year. In domestic receipts there has been little change. Out of the total received for the current year 872,768 tons were bituminous and 609,375 tons anthracite. In 1903, out of the total receipts, 1,485,269 tons were bituminous and 693,246 tons anthracite. The change in proportion is probably fully explained by the extraordinary amount of foreign coal received during the earlier months of 1903 on account of the shortness of the domestic anthracite supply.

Sight receipts of cotton for eight months of the current crop year amounted to 5,462,243 bales. Of this quantity 4,891,587 bales comprised port receipts, 883,132 bales net overland shipments, 1,540,000 bales Southern mill takings, and 178,224 bales left-over stocks at interior towns. Exports for the eight months were 5,537,969 bales. Last year exports amounted to 6,268,655 bales, and for the preceding year 5,927,883 bales. Domestic spinners took for the current year 3,558,714 bales, compared with 3,522,737 bales last year and 3,342,020 bales for the preceding year. A progressive increase in domestic requirements is already checked by inordinate speculation and the consequent unsettling of values.

At the two leading grain port of the Gulf the decline in grain receipts is marked. To the end of April, 1904, New Orleans receipts were 7,107,096 bushels, in contrast with 18,553,350 bushels in 1903. If April's business be taken alone, there occurred a still more marked decrease. During April, 1904, only 553,453 bushels, including flour reduced to bushels, were received at New Orleans, as against 3,565,264 bushels in April, 1903.

Orange and lemon shipments averaged 1089 cars per week to Eastern destinations and 113 cars to the coast during April. Since Nov. 1, 5,577 cars have been shipped, compared with 13,426 cars last season and 11,704 cars in the preceding season.

On the Pacific coast, shipments of redwood lumber from Upper California for April were the smallest in four years. In spite of storms and the tie-up of steamschooner tonnage, a total of 20,244,090 feet was shipped. The March total was 14,050,588 feet, compared with 23,525,000 feet in March and 21,588,305 feet in April, 1903. For four months ending with April, shipments were 83,670,277 feet, compared with 87,885,688 feet for the preceding period in 1903.

Arrivals of redwood, pine, and fir at California points for the first four months of the current year were 334,807,264 feet, compared with 439,542,614 feet in 1903 and 268,625,164 feet in 1902.

Oriental shipments of flour from three ports of Portland, Tacoma and Seattle amounted to 74,133 barrels in April, 125,117 barrels in March, 248,079 barrels in February, and 271,078 barrels in January. For four months shipments totaled 2,211,925 barrels, and 1,484,548 barrels in 1903.

Shipments of anthracite coal for April reached a total of 5,407,785 tons, compared with 5,044,998 tons in 1903 and 4,924,830 tons in 1902. For four months ending with April this year's shipments were 18,243,333 tons, compared with 21,292,606 tons in 1903 and 17,022,988 tons in 1902.

The total production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania in the calendar year 1903 was 66,351,713 tons, vauled at $152,606,448. The average price was $2.30 per ton, being an increase of 15 cents in the average value at the mines over that of 1902.

Petroleum shipments from the coast of Texas during April amounted to 747,488 barrels, in thirty-five different cargoes; 23 of these cargoes, carrying 585,906 barrels, sailed from Port Arthur; 8 cargoes, carrying 161,582 barrels, from Sabine Pass; a minor consignment, consisting of 33 barrels, being reported from Galveston. For the four months ending with April, 135 cargoes, containing 3,126,671 barrels of petroleum, were reported. 97 of which sailed from Port Arthur, 31 from Sabine Pass, and 7 from Galveston. Shipments for the first four months of 1903 amounted to 2,008,490 barrels, indicating an increase of 1,187,181 barrels in favor of the first third of the current year.

Flour and grain movements from domestic trade into foreign commerce for the first four months of the current calendar year continue to contrast sharply with those of 1903. The withdrawal of flour and grain by way of the different coasts, for export for the month of April, amounted to about half the quanity shipped out of the country during April of the preceding year. April exports of flour were 545,943 barrels and 1,843,546 barrels in April, 1903. For four months ending with April flour exports were 2,259,620 barrels, in contrast with 6,250,706 barrels in 1903. The longer periods compare more favorably, but still show a decrease of 14.4 per cent.

In the grain trade, April withdrawals were 4,760,868 bushels, in contrast with 17,800,599 bushels in April, 1903. For the period of four months ending April, 1904, 38,692,837 bushels were shipped out of the country. For the corresponding period in 1903, 77,584,315 bushels were reported. Flour and grain shipments combined aggregated 57,268,427 bushels, and 105,735,962 bushels respectively. These figures suggest the increased importance of domestic demands, of which there has been a growing appreciation, especially since the beginning of the calendar year.

GATES AND POLK

Plan a New Road to Profitable Territory.

San Antonio, Tex., June 2.—Lucius J. Polk resigned the vice presidency of the Santa Fe to build a railroad between San Antonio and Velasco, Tex. He is associated with John W. Gates in the enterprise.

More than likely the San Antonio & Gulf road, now operating between this city and Stockdale, will be purchased to form a link in the new road. Col. Polk recently spent four days in San Antonio, and at that time thoroughly investigated the standing of the San Antonio & Gulf. This road is a Southern Pacific property, and it is considered more than likely that it will be disposed of as Col. Polk is determined to get a line into San Antonio. Should the Southern Pacific refuse to sell he will build his own line. It is said that a portion of the Cane Belt road will be acquired near the coast, and if not Col. Polk will also build a line there. It has just now leaked out that the occasion of John W. Gates' recent visit to Texas was in connection with the building of this road.

The new line will be approximately 225 miles in length, and it now remains for the selection of the route to be made. One route would take the new line throuh Yoakum, thence farther over throuh Wharton, down to Columbia, and thence to Velasco. The second route would be through a portion of the original Gulf Shore survey, going through Cuero, then almost in an air line to Bay City and Velasco. A third route, it is said, is under consideration, but has not been given out.

Among the Texas men who are with Col. Polk in the new enterprise, one is said to be W. T. Eldredge, who has been identified with the Cane Belt road as vice president. Mr. Eldredge was also a recent visitor in San Antonio, and he came accompanied by his attorney. Their business here, it is understood, was in connection with the new road.

CARRIE BROWN'S FAME

Is Assured By Gift of Devoted Husband.

Providence, R. I., June 3.—The authorities of Brown university have intimated to Paul Bajnotti, of Turin, Italy, that the name, "The Carrie Tower," does not seem to them sufficiently dignified to be carved on the impressive campanile which he has presented to the university. But Bajnotti, who is now in Liverpool serving as the Italian consul general, has stood his ground, has repeated that he wishes the simple, domestic name of his wife to be forever associated with the memorial and consequently the name, "The Carrie Tower," has just been carved on the shaft.

Paul Bajnotti married Carrie M. Brown, daughter of Nicholas Brown, whose family has done so much for the Providence college. This international alliance of an heiress turned out happily. The wife was a sister of Nicholas Brown II, whose 3-year-old baby is the richest child in the world. Bajnotti gave to the city of Providence a handsome bronze fountain, designed by Enid Yandel, and it now stands in front of the Union station, and he gave this artistic clock tower to Brown. Each year, on the anniversary of his wife's death, the count inserts a memorial notice in the Providence papers.

The authorities of the university found it a trifle delicate matter to inform the count that "The Carrie Tower" might not sound to American ears just as it did to Italian ears, and that it might be the subject of thoughtless jests. President Faunce worded the intimation as politely as possible, but it was futile. Paul Bajonitti wishes the conspicuous companiel to be called "The Carrie," and that settles it.

SWEET GIRL GRADUATES

Louisville, Ky., June 3.—The high school commencements have not been abandoned. As the chapel of the girls' high school was found on inspection to be unsuitable for the six commencements (members of the board called it a fire trap) the exercises were almost abandoned.

"The school board cannot afford to expend the money that would be necessary to defray the cost of renting a theater for the school commencements," said President A. H. Brachey, of the school board.

"Manager Charles A. Shaw has offered the Masonic theater for $50 a night. As there are six commencements to be held, this would necessitate an outlay of $300. Manager John T. Macauley will let us have his theater for an average of $100 a night, which would mean a $600 expenditure.

"The board cannot afford such an outlay, as it is not in good financial condition. We are now building two new school houses and we have not even enough money to pay for these. I see no reason for the outlay of such a big sum for commencements."

But W. R. Belknap offered to defray the entire expense rather than to allow the abandonment and John T. Macauley said the girls might use his theater without charge.

FLOOD OF WORKERS

Overcrowd the Market For Labor at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, June 3.—For the past two weeks the railroad shops have been crowded with machinists looking for work. Most of them have come from the West, especially from the 'Frisco line, where a strike has been on for some time. The men are working their way East, expecting to get work. Last week at the P. & E. shops there were a large number of these machinists each night. At the other shops about town they were also present, but no work was to be had.

Machinists working at the railroad shops about the city report that they never knew the time when work was at such a low tide. The day and night forces have been kept at work, but the men claim they have nothing whatever to do.

The men from the Western lines who are working East will have a hard time securing employment in their line. After this week the Pennsylvania company east of Pittsburg will lay off 11,000 men. It is thought there will be little or no work for any transient machinists working their way East. Nearly all of the lines over the country are laying off men. When the crowd from the Pennsylvania's eastern division are set loose it is thought they will come West, and the shops in this city will be crowded with transients for some time.

On account of the lake strike the railroads have been working overtime in their freight traffic. The Lake Shore and Nickel Plate have been getting the major portion of this trade. They in turn put a great deal of the business over their tributary lines, yet the officials of the railroads complain of a lack of trade, especially in the middle states.

BANISHED LORD

Retains Plate For Which There Is Struggle.

Mansfield, O., June 3.—The spectacle of a plain, private citizen of the United States enjoying the possession of a silver service which an English lord would give his fortune to possess is an unusual one. Yet with Charles Merrell, who lives here with former Deputy Game Warden James Merrill, this condition exists.

About 100 years ago an English lord, having incurred the wrath of the king, was banished from the court, and all his titles forfeited and given to another branch of the family. The deposed lord came to America, where the loss of his title would not lower him, but managed to take with him the family plate, which should have gone with the title to the new lord.

About four years ago the descendants of the titled side learned the whereabouts of the exile's descendants, and the struggle was resumed more bitterly than before. The other side seemed as clever on the defensive, and the holder of the plate, who was the father of the Mansfield young man, separated from his son. The father went to Los Angeles, and the son, taking with him the plate, came to Mansfield. Then the English party lost track of the plate and descendants.

The holder of the plate clings to it tenaciously. He says he is morally entitled to it. Merreli has no chance of ever securing the title unless the holder of it should die without heir, when it would revert to the banished side. Merrell, formerly Reed, cousin to Lord Earlbon Reed, the present holder of the title, is a well-to-do young business man.

OCEAN LINER

New York, June 3.—Kept aboard an ocean liner for a week; held by stewards as a prisoner in port for the sake of his reformation and as a cure for his chronic thirst.

Such was the fate of a second-cabin passenger who arrived on the St. Louis on May 21. The St. Louis sailed again taking away the prisoner.

His name, which headed the passenger list, was Joseph Edward Arthur. The young man was said to belong to a wealthy family in England. His friends had been unable to control him, the stewards said, and, to cure a thirst that had blighted his prospects, it was decided, with his consent, to send him across the ocean on the American liner on condition that he should not go ashore.

It was feared that the attractions of New York might lead to further lapse in the young man's latest set of good resolutions.

Purser Williams had the keeping of the young man's money, and the stewards were instructed to keep him aboard the ship and see that he was supplied with plenty of tobacco and grub.

His family hope that the sea voyage and his enforced restraint will seal his reform.

The new Children's home was a study today in contrasts. Outside a cold, bleak, rainy and windy Duluth northeaster, inside the members of the board of directors as calm gracious hostesses, serene in the feeling of a large effort thoroughly and magnificently accomplished.

Today began the formal opening of the new home at Fifth street and Fifteenth avenue east, for the inspection of the public. It will continue tomorrow so that all interested in the charity may see the work that is being carried on and Monday the little waifs will move in to take possession of the completely furnished home. The house is finely situated and the architecture chosen is beautiful and fits in with the surrounding country. The style is in the Virginian colonial and the home is a model of this stately architecture. To the north and west rise the hills, the view unmarred by modern structures of any kind and to the south the lake in its infinite variety, is always to be seen.

So much for the surroundings and the home itself, with its modern points of beauty and convenience, is a thing that must be seen to be appreciated. Every citizen of Duluth interested in its progress should visit the building today or tomorrow to fully realize what the city owes to the women who have worked so unceasingly for the institution. The building and its furnishings is new from top to bottom.

The main entrance is on Fifteenth avenue. The reception hall is large and long running the length of the building. The woodwork throughout is in weathered oak, and the furnishings of the hall, settees, chairs and a clock are also in the oak. Opposite the door the tribute to the founder of the home is placed. The serene and benign-pictured face of Mrs. Sarah B. Stearns looks down from an oval mahogany frame and under this is placed the founder's plate. The plate is a very artistic and beautiful piece of work of a Duluth artist, Clarence B. Stewart. It is of hammered bronze in size about ten by twelve inches, and bears the inscription "Sarah B. Stearns, founder, Children's Home. 1883-1904." Below the inscription, which is done in antique lettering, is a small design of a heart signifying that out of the fullness of her heart she founded the Children's home. The whole is mounted on a piece of polished mahogany.

The front of the main floor is taken up with the reception room, the office and the matron's room. The finish is in weathered oak and the reception room is furnished in wood of the same in the severe mission style of furniture. A fireplace of dull red brick and walls of green make the room one of great beauty.

The office is to the right of the entrance, furnished in oak, desk and chairs. Leading from this is the matron's room with bath adjoining.

The dining rooms and kitchen take up the back of the building. The furnishings in the dining room are of dark weathered oak. The children's dining-room has four tables and one table for the smaller children with regular high chairs. The chairs are practically all high. The matron's diningroom is a dainty and pretty room in the oak with round dining table and a beautiful built in sideboard and desk.

The kitchen is finely equipped with a double stove and pantries and a large refrigerator conveniently near. A sand oven for baking is a particular feature, with the ovens, completely surrounded as they are by sand, a large amount of baking may be done with the smallest possible amount of heat. The finish in the kitchen and pantries is a bright yellow.

On the second floor are the day and night nurseries, the girls dormitory, lockers and bath. The nurseries occupy the front of the building. The night nurseries have been furnished by the Q. F. D., a club of society young women formed some time ago. The rooms are in memorial of three members who have died, Jessie Stocking, Clara Bull and Mabel White. Each of the two night nurseries are furnished with nine small immaculately clean iron beds. The blankets of the beds are white with dainty blue stripes. Dainty white curtains and a screen complete the furnishings.

The day nursery has been furnished by the King's Daughters, with two beds, small kindergarten chairs, pitchers and cups, and rugs. From this room is a small sun parlor that the toddlers may have a sun bath without the chill wind.

The bathroom in connection with these rooms is a marvel and an attraction to all mothers who have visited the Home. Two small elevated porcelain tubs for the baths of the babies is a convenience that cannot be overestimated and a row of low toilet seats complete the needed equipment of the rooms.

The rooms which have been furnished by societies or individuals bear plain burnished brass plates with the names of the donors and in the necessary cases the word "Memorial."

The girl's dormitory occupies the back of the second floor. The windows of the dormitory face the east and "Good morning merry sunshine" can be lustily sung the first thing in the morning. The only furnishings of the rooms, of course, are the single iron beds, with a small chair beside each. At the end of the hall are the toilet rooms an dlockers. At the other end a bedroom for the help.

On the third floor are the boys' dormitory three bedrooms for the help and the sick ward. A special feature of the boys' toilet room is a foot pool let in the floor. It is about four feet long and a little over a foot wide, and is a blessing when the fondness of boys for going barefoot is concerned. Lockers for the boys are also on this floor.

At the front of the third floor is found the sick ward which may if necessary be cut off completely from the remainder of the building. It consists of a suit of two rooms and a bath which have been furnished by Mrs. Marcus L. Fay, of Virginia, and Mrs. W. G. Agnew, of this city, in memorial of her son, David G. Agnew. The rooms are most completely furnished. The larger room which has been furnished by Mrs. Fay is entirely complete with sick room belongings and luxuries, and this suite is the one of which the board is most proud. From the beds, a small single bed and the smaller one to the tiny Haviland service, the room has been supplied with all its needs; light, airy, dainty and cheerful. The bathroom is large and complete. A small diet kitchen is also a feature of the suite.

In the basement, the furnace room, the janitor's room, the laundry, shower baths, an emergency bath and two large light play rooms with lockers, one for the boys and another for the girls take up the room. Large closets are off every room in the building with the exception of the reception room and the office on the main floor. The completed home is a marvel of modern convenience.

A great deal of credit is due the present board of directors with Mrs. S. R. Holden as president. Mrs. Holden has brought to the position of the executive board an enthusiasm and tireless energy that have worked wonders. The furnishing committee consisting of Mrs. J. H. Crowley and Mrs. J. G. Williams have completed their immense task with the congratulations of all who have seen the Home. The others members of the board have worked hard and long and faithfully.

THE CITY'S RIGHT

Can Report of Inspector as to Dairies Be Published?

Legal Investigation of Question Is Now Being Made.

Whether or not the board of health of the city has the legal right to publish the detailed report of the milk and dairy inspector, showing the manner in which the different dairies are classified as to their sanitary condition, is now under consideration by the city attorney.

Dairy Inspector Langslow recently completed a careful inspection of seventy-one dairies in the city. Out of the seventy-one, twenty were rated as in first-class sanitary condition. Thirty-six were rated second-class and fifteen as third class. Since the summarized report of the inspector was published in The Herald, the board of health has been in receipt of numerous requests to publish the detailed report, giving the names of the different dairymen and the class in which they were placed.

It is very evident that the citizens are anxious to know the names of the first-class dairymen, in order that they may take no chances of catching disease from cows which are not kept in clean and healthful surroundings.

Health Commissioner Murray felt some doubt in regard to his right to publish the list, and fearing to involve the city in law suits if he did so, he laid the matter before the city attorney and asked for his opinion in regard to it. Mr. Fesler now has the matter under consideration, and will give his opinion within a few days.

Dr. Murray has also taken the matter up with Otto Gafvert, the state food inspector. The powers of the state food commissioners are not so limited as those of the municipal board of health and it is possible that their representative in Duluth may be able to accomplish something along this line, if the city attorney's opinion is that the board is not empowered to publish the list. Mr. Gafvert left last evening for St. Paul and while in that city he will consult with the attorney general of the state in regard to the legal rights of the state inspector to make public a list of the dairies and their classification in regard to sanitation.

Mr. Langslow, the dairy inspector, has found a number of cases of tuberculosis among cattle coming into the city during the past winter, and the requests for a list of dairies which are in a perfectly sanitary condition have been numerous. Not long ago a local dairyman was arraigned in the municipal court because his stable and yard had become a nuisance to the entire neighborhood, and some of the dairymen ranked as third class in Inspector Langslow's report are said to keep their stables in but little better condition.

YOUNG MAN ARRESTED.

Accused of Obtaining Shoes Under False Pretenses.

Obtaining goods under false pretenses was the charge brought against William Wheaton, a 19-year-old lad, in the municipal court this morning.

Wheaton was arrested last evening by Officer Gleason on a warrant sworn out by T. C. Phillips, the shoe dealer. Mr. Phillips alleged that Wheaton had entered his store and purchased two pairs of drivers' shoes, valued at $3 per pair, and $1 worth of caulks, ordering them charged to his father, a saloonkeeper on Lake avenue south. He said that his father had authorized him to make the purchase. The father of the boy is claimed to have repudiated any knowledge of the deal, and after giving the boy an opportunity to pay for the goods, Mr. Phillips swore out a warrant for his arrest.

When arraigned before Judge Windom this morning he pleaded guilty and was fined $40 and costs, with the alternative of spending forty days in jail.

FOR STEALING WOOD.

F. C. McGann Is Arrested on That Charge.

The woodpiles of the neighbors of F. C. McGann are claimed to have been disappearing with unpleasant rapidity, and as a result Mr. McGann was arraigned in the municipal court this morning to answer to a charge of petty larceny.

The specific charge alleges that McGann stole an armful of wood valued at 10 cents, but the complaining witness states that the prisoner has been making a practice of securing his firewood in this manner, and wants the court to show him the evil of his ways.

McGann pleaded not guilty to the charge against him, and the hearing was set for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Haven's Close Call.

A god story is going the rounds of the city hall today, which was the outcome of yesterday's ball game.

Mayor Cullum, the members of the council and several of the city officials were seated in the center of the grand stand. One of the Winnipeg batsmen knocked a terrific liner directly at Owens, which nearly took the Duluth pitcher off his feet.

"Haven," said the mayor, turning to the president of the council, "if I had been in the box then, you would have been mayor of Duluth now."

Weather Interferes.

Yesterday and Wednesday were the days appointed by Mayor Cullum as "clean-up" days, but the weather interfered with any attempts on the part of the citizens to remove the garbage piles and ash heaps from their back yards.

As soon as the weather becomes more settled another day will be set aside for the redemption of the back yards and vacant lots from the desolation of the ash pile and the ever-present tin can.

New Haven, Conn., June 3.—The approximate amount of cash embezzled by Douglas M. Smith, teller of the National Tradesmen's bank, is slightly in excess of $50,000, according to a statement by President William T. Fields, of the bank, today.

TWO BUILDINGS DEDICATED.

St. Louis, June 3.—Two state buildings were dedicated today, those of Missouri and Indiana. Missouri being the hostess state for the fair, the dedicatory ceremonies were open to the public, a general invitation haveing been extended to all.

INSURANCE MAN TAKES CYANIDA OF POTASSIUM.

New York, June 3.—Peyton Wyeth, of Philadelphia, an insurance man, said to be temporarily unemployed because of losses incurred in the Baltimore fire by the company for which he was assistant manager, committed suicide in Brooklyn today by taking cyanide of potassium. He had come to Brooklyn for medical treatment for nervous troubles. His wife was with him and tried to prevent him swallowing the poison, but was unable to do so.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

Washington, June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Louis A. Bonne has been appointed postmaster at Centerville, Anoka county, Minn., vice Mary Boseen, resigned.

A postoffice has been established at Bovey, Itasca county, with Ralph J. Sewall as postmaster.

RELEASE IS FORCED

Of Striking Miner Arrested at Eveleth By Deputies.

Mob of Five Hundred Intimidated Policeman at Lockup.

Eveleth, Minn., June 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—At noon today the strikers from the Drake & Stratton stripping work forced the release of Hjalmer Loukenin, who was arrested by the deputies this morning at the time of the wounding of two of the strikers in the trouble that occurred when an effort was being made to put men at work.

Loukenin was confined in the city lockup and one town policeman was guarding the property and the workings of the company there.

A crowd of about five hundred men gathered and paraded the streets and then surrounded the lockup. They had learned that it was the intention of the deputies to take the man to Duluth on the train at 1 o'clock and they proposed to prevent that.

They demanded the surrender to them of the prisoner confined in the jail and declared that if it was not done by 12 o'clock they would force an entrance and take him out.

The single policeman concluded when the noon hour came that prudence was the better part of valor and gave up the man. He walked out of the jail to the great delight of the strikers who continued their parade until driven in doors by a big storm that came up.

About 400 men are out but the accessions that came to them brought the number parading the streets and taking part in the lawlessness up to about 500.

All of the saloons have been ordered closed. There has been some drinking but not enough thus far to cause any danger.

Sheriff Butchart has thus far sworn in 22 deputies besides those he brought with him from Duluth. The Duluth men are Frank Magie, Newton Randall, R. S. Lerch, Sig. Levy and Michael Horgan.

The man who was most dangerously wounded this morning was John Makki. He is 37 years of age and has a wife living in the old country. It cannot be said as yet as to what his fate will be.

When he was picked up after the shooting, there was found near his body a revolver. It was partially loaded and smeared with blood, and appearances were that he had been trying to load the weapon after being shot.

CONFERRING OVER WAGES

Daniel J. Keefe, of Chicago, president of the Longshoremen's union, who, with Edward Hines, chairman of the executive committee of the Lumber Carriers' association, are to arbitrate the wage difference existing between the two bodies, are in the city. Mr. Hines registered last night at the Spalding, and Mr. Keefe came in this morning and took a room at the St. Louis.

President Keefe said that he had an appointment with Mr. Hines for 12:30 o'clock today, and that so far as a third person was concerned for helping settle the wage matter, none had been selected and it might be that none would.

He said that there were no contentions anywhere in the union now, and that the difference existing here that he had come to try to adjust was not a matter of contention, since the men were at work. Mr. Keefe seemed to be sanguine of a happy ending to the matter.

At 3 o'clock today Mr. Hines said no conclusion had been reached in the wage matter.

STEENERSON POSTMASTER.

Washington, June 3—President Roosevelt will not speak at the dinner to be given to the Philippine World's fair commissioners by the New York chamber of commerce on June 17. Secretary Taft will represent the administration on this occasion. This conclusion was reached today at the cabinet meeting.

After a conference with Postmaster General Payne, the president appointed Elias Steenerson to be postmaster at Crookston, Minn.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Battle Creek, Mich., June 3.—Supreme Master Workman William H. Miller, of the Ancient Order United Workmen, died at a sanitarium here last night from kidney trouble, after an illness of several weeks. He was a St. Louis man, but joined the A. O. U. W. twenty years ago in Kansas City when a member of the editorial force of the Kansas City Journal. Several of the supreme lodge officers as well as his wife, who is prominent in the ladies' auxiliary of the A. O. U. W., were with him when he died. He was 61 years of age. The remains will be taken to St. Louis today.

Middletown, N. Y., June 3.—George W. Powers, an aged lawyer, is dead at his home here after having borne during forty years, the disgrace of a dishonorable discharge from the army because he knocked down Gen. Mansfield in a Washington hotel while the general was in command of the district of Columbia under martial law. The intervention of Secretary Stanton saved Powers from court-martial.

HOSPITAL PLANNED

For Inebriate Women By Philanthropist of New York.

On Model of Lady Henry Somerset's Famous Colony.

New York, June 3.—An industrial colony for inebriate women, on the model of Lady Henry Somerset's famous colony at Duxhurst, in the Surrey Hills, England, may soon be established in this country. A site on Long Island is already in view, and within a couple of weeks Mrs. Isabella Charles Davis will sail for England to study Lady Henry's system of treatment and glean whatever other information on the subject the Old World affords.

The need for such an institution, Mrs. Davis asserts, is desperate, and if she has to go on for another year with no facilities for dealing with the cases of inebriacy constantly brought to her attention she does not know what will become of her reason.

"Only the other day," Mrs. Davis said today to a group of interested women at the Home for the Friendless, "a young man came to me for advice about his inebriate wife. He said that they had a child 5 years old, and that his wife was a hopeless drunkard. He was absolutely in despair, and there was absolutely nothing that I could do to help him."

"Why don't you apply to the Magdalen society?" asked one of the listeners.

"The woman is not a Magdalen," said Mrs. Davis.

"But they would take her in any case," replied the second speaker.

"Supposing she was your son's wife would you want her to go there?" asked Mrs. Davis.

"Then try the House of Mercy."

"We have tried it without avail, and she wouldn't go anyway."

"But she ought not to feel that way about it. She has a disease for which she is no more responsible than she would be for enrvous prostration, and she ought to be willing to do anything to have it cured."

"Well, I am glad to hear you say that you don't consider her responsible," said Mrs. Davis, "and, of course, she ought to look at it in the way you suggest; but if she doesn't, what can her poor husband do?"

"Have her committed," was the next suggestion.

"I have thought of that," returned Mrs. Davis, "but it can't be done."

Several of the women were sure it could be done, and Mrs. Davis said she would look into it further, though she had no hope of success.

"There is no solution," she said, "but an industrial colony like Lady Somerset's; for even after an inebriate is 'cured,' there remain weak nerves, weak muscles and a weak will, and the patient needs special care until the normal condition is regained. You may be cured of typhoid fever without being in a fit condition to resume your ordinary life. It is the same way with inebriacy."

For opium eaters, too, Mrs. Davis wants and hopes to make some provision. Their case is even more desperate than that of the victim of alcoholism, for the treatment is more difficult and expensive, requiring constant medical supervision, with trained nurses in attendance night and day.

"Men and women come to me begging on their bended knees for salvation from this habit," said Mrs. Davis, "and I can do nothing for them. There are six women now, to say nothing of the men, whom I have the means to help, if I only had a place to which to send them, but there is no hospital in the land that takes such patients, either free or at any reasonable rate. There are a few private institutions that charge enormous prices, but there is nothing within the reach of the vast majority of those who are victims of this habit, and their name is legion. There are 75,000 opium eaters within a radius of 25 miles from my office."

The principle which Mrs. Davis wishes to see applied is the treatment of the patients entirely by their own sex, even to the exclusion of the male physician. A large number of prominent men and women are interested in the plan. Mrs. Davis is vice-president of the International Order of King's Daughters.

CONSUMED BY A FIRE THAT WATER WILL NOT QUENCH

Eczema drives its victim almost to the verge of distraction by its intolerable itching, stinging and burning. It seems to set the skin on fire, and the tormented sufferer rubs and scratches till the flesh is raw and the skin is torn and bleeds. Nothing applied externally does much good, for the disease is internal; the blood is aflame with acid poisons, that are forcing their way through the glands and pores of the skin, causing it to redden and swell and break out in splotches, pustules and pimples, from which a clear, yellow, watery matter exudes, hardens and dries, and then peels off in scales or fine particles like bran. Eczema kindles a fire that water will not quench, and that lotions, salves, powders and soap cannot smother. As warm weather comes on and the system is reacting and the blood making extra efforts to throw off the accumulated poisons, Eczema attacks with redoubled violence, and the sufferer is almost distracted by the fearful itching and burning. It is the most uncomfortable and aggravating of all skin eruptions and a terror in warm weather.

ECZEMA KEPT SPREADING.

Six years ago my wife had a breaking-out below her knees. At first red bumps appeared, but soon white, husky scabs came, and when these would shed off the place became red again, and would itch and burn so that she found it impossible to sleep. At times a yellow water ran from the bumps, and it kept getting worse and worse. Our family physician pronounced it Eczema, and prescribed ointments and powders; but it kept spreading, breaking out on her body and arms, and almost closed up her ears. The druggist at Garner told me to try S. S. S., which she did, and after taking several bottles was cured, and is well to-day and has been for years.

Garner, N. C. W. A. HOCUTT.

Local remedies give temporary ease, but as Eczema is not due to outside causes, but to a disordered condition of the system and an over-acid and impure blood, the treatment must be constitutional, or internal. Purify the blood and the skin disease will disappear. No better blood remedy can be found than S. S. S. It builds up the sour and acid blood, rids it of all impurities and poison, stimulates the sluggish organs, and invigorates and tones up the entire system; and as all skin eruptions like Eczema are only symptoms or signs of bad blood, they naturally disappear when that vital fluid is again restored to health.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed strictly vegetable. It is not only a blood purifier, but a splendid tonic and appetizer, making it an ideal spring medicine. Treat Eczema through the blood, or you will never get permanently rid of it. Write for our book on the Skin and its Diseases, which is mailed free Medical advice furnished without cost to you.

THE JINGO LETTER

Of President Roosevelt on Cuban Anniversary Is Criticized.

Claimed Such Acts Prove He Is Unsafe For Presidency.

New York, June 2.—In writing to the New York World from Buffalo, Herbert P. Bissel, a member of Cleveland's old law firm, severely criticizes the president's jingo letter written to Secretary Root on the Cuban anniversary. He says:

"It is just such declarations as those contained in the letter to ex-Secretary Root that force thinking men to the conviction that President Roosevelt is a very unsafe man to hold the helm of state. There is no precedent or constitutional authority for the United States assuming the position of moral censor over the government of South America or other countries. As a people we sympathize with the struggles of the people of other nations for liberty and good government, and we should maintain the Monroe Doctrine, which of course, is not at all in harmony with the declaration of the president.

"The best maxim for us to follow is to mind our own business, see that our own country is governed well and economically, and not develop a jingo policy, which will waste our people's money. The last year of Mr. Cleveland's administration, a little over $56,000,000 was expended upon the army and navy. During Roosevelt's last year the army and navy cost over $160,000,000.

"Let us endeavor by peaceful methods to secure good, conservative, sensible and economical methods of government in the nation, in the several states and in our important municipalities. I f we will devote our time carefully to our own affairs on these lines, we will have no time for intervention in the affairs of other nations, nor will we be called upon to intervene in their affairs because of any happenings in those nations that may not agree with our views.

"This declaration of the president shows that he is only waiting for re-election to demonstrate what a great genius he is, and precipitate us into a war of some kind or other, for his policy would keep the sword of war suspended not only over the frequently troubled South American countries, but also over ourselves."

From Buffalo, Mo., Congressman D. A. De Armand wires: "I consider his views both unsound and dangerous, and at variance with the principles and genius of our government and all our traditions. Embodied in deeds, they would make us the bully of the Western Hemisphere, meddling with affairs of other nations of no concern of ours, upon the flimsy pretext that we have a right to strike down any government whenever we choose to decree its fall, however satisfactory it may be to those really concerned. That would appear to be jingoism run mad, or, at least, dangerously strenuous. With such presidential whims and their exploitation, of course, there could be no place for the constitution, forgotten or never in mind."

Ex-Representative John de Witt Warner says: "President Roosevelt's letter might be termed not only patronizing but offensive and insulting to every nation which its writer could be supposed to have had in mind. I hope that none will take it thus seriously, but that this outbreak of our executive will lead more of our citizens seriously to consider the megalomania, that, with nations as well as with individuals, soon develops into frenzy or paresis. It shows a mental and moral attitude entirely beyond and different from mere strenuosity. Thus afflicted, the patient not merely rushes to fight real giants, as may be a Knight Errant's duty, but he sees foes where there are none, hears challenges where only friendly greetings are intended, hears the Lord call 'Samuel' when there is no mission awaiting him, and literally loses his head whenever a fife and drum corps goes past in the street.

"I think that the people, even foreigners, are beginning to understand these performances, and are confident that we are less likely to be harmed than humiliated thereby. I trust we will have assurances by November of relief by March."

ANOTHER SHY AT NEW YORK

To Be Taken By Dowie on His Return Homeward.

New York, June 3.—Old Dr. Dowie will take another shy at the flesh pots of New York city. His agents have engaged Carnegie Music hall for Sunday, June 26, when the self-styled Elijah three times will hold forth morning, afternoon and evening in an effort to explain his recent peppery experiences in Australia and sell some more of his Zion City bonds.

Elijah will be accompanied by his unkissed son, J. Gladstone Dowie, and his wife, Mrs. Jane Dowie. Their arrival in New York from a Cunard liner will be the occasion for the assemblage here of the heads of the Dowie church.

John Alexander Dowie sailed from San Francisco on Jan. 17 last. His wife and son had previously gone to Australia, leaving New York during the dark days of the New York visitation, when Dowie was on exhibition in Madison Square Garden. Cablegrams from Australia has told of Dowie's narrow escape from lynching at Sidney, Auckland and Melbourne, and his final flight to Adelaide, where he sought refuge with his family in the house of his wife's parents.

"The general overseer has been in weekly communication with the faithful at Zion City by cablegram ever since his departure," said Deacon Corlette, in charge of the New York headquarters in the Flatiron building today.

"He will receive a welcome home that will astonish the outside world. There are now 350 members in New York, and it is expected that all of the subordinate overseers and many other church officers will be here to give him a joyful welcome."

Overseer Mason, just in from a ministering tour to this vicinity, says Elijah III still hopes to make another New York visitation in 1905.

"Instead of holding the meetings in Madison Square Garden, it is planned to hire halls in the Bowery, Harlem, Brooklyn and Jersey City, and divide the host of 10,000," said the overseer. "We may have Madison Square Garden for a few meetings, over which the general overseer will preside. But Dr. Dowie hopes to get the best results from the small meetings. Already the converts are arriving from Australia, over 100 having so far passed through New York on their way to Zion City."

Piles Can Be Cured

By Internal Treatment

Without the Aid of Narcotics or the Knife

You who suffer with piles know what a glorious boon it would be to you to be absolutely and painlessly cured. You know from actual experience that salves, ointments and other local applications do not cure. You may get relief, but you keep on suffering.

There is a cause for every human ill. Remove the cause and you cure the complaint. Piles have two distinct causes: First, congestion of the liver; second, constipation resulting from poor digestion.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific

absolutely removes these causes by increasing the flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and relieving the congestion of the liver. It is a tonic for the entire bowel system and helps each particular member of this system to work easily and naturally.

You simply take a teaspoonful of this positive, internal remedy three times a day before each meal. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely free from opium, cocaine or other narcotics. It is not a palliative or temporary remedy; it produces a positive, radical and lasting cure.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under an

to cure any case of blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles, no matter how chronic or aggravated it may be. Out of over 10,000 cases there are only three on record where a positive cure has not been made.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific can be procured of any reliable druggist under an iron-clad agreement to refund your money should you take two $1.00 bottles of the remedy without receiving positive benefit.

Dr. Perrin Medical Co., Helena, Montana.

TELEGRAPHERS ARE SCARCE

The Railroads Cannot Get All That They Want.

Topeka, Kan., June 3.—The ready acceptance by the Santa Fe of the wage scale proposed by the telegraph operators has averted trouble. While the men believe their demands were entirely just, they also say that they were successful because of conditions.

Nearly every road in the country is short of help in this department. It would seem that while the old operators may still be in the work, new ones are not coming on as fastas the business of the roads increases. In many of the smaller places night operators would be put on if competent ones could be found. The block system being put into use on many roads demands first-class men to handle the work.

The reason for this scarcity of new operators cannot be altogether accounted for, according to local operators, but one reason which may be assigned is the lack of students or those learning. Some years ago there was not a small railroad station that did not have its student, who in return for the instruction he received from the agent, was given the duties of seeing that all the baggage was put on the trains, the express stored in the express room, the switch lamps clean and in place, attend to the semaphore lights and keep up the fires, but now this is not common. Late years the average boy is looking for present money rather than future advancement. Another very probable reason for the lack of students is that the operators are coming to realize that it is to their advantage to keep down the supply as they will then be able to command better wages for themselves.

Hitt as a Running Mate For President Roosevelt.

Like Cortelyou, the Congressman Was Once a Stenographer.

Washington, June 2.—Robert R. Hitt comes in a fortunate hour for the vice presidential choice, like the afterthought of a belle, who suddenly awakes to a reasonable suitor. I have known him since 1869, when he was Oliver P. Morton's committee clerk and soon afterward Elliston Washburne's secretary in Paris, where he remained seven years and married Miss Reynolds of Lafayette, Ind., he then near 45. Blaine elected him his assistant secretary of state in 1881, and from the year following he has been in congress, say twenty-two years. Although 70 years old, he is bright and youthful, exactly fitting into the fort-six years of Roosevelt, their average age only 58. They possess reciprocal and alternate qualities. Hitt is a cuassical scholar. liquist and secretary; Roosevelt a modern American scholar, executive and initiative prodigy. Both are patriotic conservative. Hitt is of the German race. When Spotswood, English governor of Virginia, imported German iron-workers in 1723, Mr. Hitt's ancestors arrived in this country. Soon after the earliest Virginians crossed the Blue Ridge mountains and beheld the Shenandoah, Mr. Hitt's people went from Germania, on the Rappahannock, in the Valley of Virginia near Harper's Ferry. About at the same time John Hay Scott's German ancestors moved to the same district, near Martinsburg. Both sets then went on to the West, John Hays to Indiana, the Hitts to Ohio. Hay is nearly four years younger than Hitt, the latter born in Jackson's, Hay in Van Buren's administration. Hitt settled in northern Illinois, Hay in southwestern Illinois.

Hitt was 25 years old when Lincoln debated with Douglas and each had a stenographer, to whom appeals were made. James Sheridan, son of a tailor in Philadelphia, was Douglas' reporter, and when Douglas once appealed to his notes, Lincoln called Sheridan his hireling, so Hitt told me, and Sheridan never forgave him. That debate made the fortunes of several people. I think William D. Howells, the novellst, published the debate in Ohio and was sent to Venice afterward by Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln borrowed $200 to $300 to make the excursion. The Illinois Central railroad gave him no privileges and would not even let him lie down in a burden car, the entire railroad outfit favoring Douglas. The debates brought to the public view forty-five years ago the next vice presidential candidate and this was some two years before Lincoln made use of John Hay.

I recall a breakfast John Hay gave about the time of his marriage at a club in New York. I was present, with the late Henry M. Stanley, Bret Harte, Henry Watterson, Halstead and some others. The effort was to refrain, but finally the refrain was unanimous. In the presence of better people than ourselves, fun and rascality broke forth. We initiated Hay out of the order of benedicts. Hitt always speaks of Hay affectionately as "John." I may say a word about Henry M. Stanley, of the greatest of Americans. I returned from Europe in 1866 and lectured upon "Europe Armed" in St. Louis. Stanley was in the audience, as he told me five years afterward, when I helped get up a dinner or great banquet for him in Washington, presided over by Gen. Sherman. The newspapers have missed the main point about Stanley, which was his method of setting relays of horses, or riders, in his rear during the Piegau Indian war, and thus he sent to his paper the first news. He followed that system in the Abyssinian and the Dahomey wars, and beat the British government's news. It required an affluent employer. The reputation he made brought him such employers in Mrs. Burdett Coutts and King Leopold, and he graduated the greatest employer since Columbus. He was always serious, yet convivial, fierce but gentle, whole-hearted between necessity and ambition, and after his great performances there was a lull in the press somewhat flurried by McGahan's performances in Asia. Stanley belongs to the class of Clive, Stonewall Jackson, Nathaniel Lyon and Sheridan. He sent $400 to help build the Army Correspondents' memorial.

The best advice to the Democratic party is to nominate the very best president, then they will not lose any of the votes which are theirs. They may skip the subject of fish bait, or what to catch votes with. The more they plot amongst vote-getters the more uncertain will be election day. Having had two presidential terms out of eleven, with one man twice going in, the Democracy can afford to do the right thing, and if they lose with a fit candidate, they will be in good character for the next race, and they have a hard man to beat, and one who will not demagogue nor insult his opponent, nor break his neck for too much concern. The Democracy will lose no votes this time by being as polite as the victor. All hearty men want the opposition to be represented and not misrepresented. The last two times it had no policy but to get rid of Cleveland and his coterie. If Bryan is still on the hands of his party, so is Cleveland. They look somewhat alike, as do two hungry dogs in the mirror of some meat. Both of them require to be drawn away by the tail, for meat is magic. There never would have been any Bryan except for Cleveland; the latter's second term so exasperated the socialistic and secession forces that they wanted something terrific. The crown of thorns got them. Then all those who would not go were read out of the party, and that is the way Bryan was again nominated. The first nomination was a casualty and the second a perversity. The young man's virtues rendered him all the more fatal. His supporters are too sincere to be stampeded. He is himself a rara avis, a precocity, of the kind to resent his injuries like Frankenstein. "What for did you make me and make me twice? You cant' put it upon me; you all did it. Can I call myself an impostor? Am I not entitled to my self-respect?"

Bryan, thrown out as a nobody, should speak for Roosevelt. There would be an echo in the clouds. A political party, however, must not be astonished at his love of riding. He has a family and a newspaper and these are the things which give a coward courage.

If the old South means sincerity let them nominate out of their bete noir, New England. Joe Brown, of Georgia, said that no man who did not consult the influence of New England upon America could see modern times. He was about the only politician I ever saw South who was capable of taking a new position. People South have not the luxury of thinking and declaring alone. If the South would come to the support of an upright New England man they would fix their adhesion to modern life. The least thing they have to forgive is New England for being generally right. The question is whether the South can afford a perfectly upright president. The way to carry New England is through New England.

I doubt if there is in the Democratic party a cleverer man than R. Olney. He is of the same type as Cleveland. New York interior, the rurality, is of New England stock, and that is the part of New York which offsets the metropolis. Make gains there and New York is carried. The South nominated Pierce. Fillmore was a New Englander. So was Cass. The South pushed Greeley, of New Hampshire, upon the convention of 1872. McClellan's father was of Connecticut. Seymour was of that stock. Douglas came of Vermont. Tilden came out of New England loins, and New England has had only three presidents in 115 years. The selection of a firm New Englander would affect the New England stock throughout the land. It would, without any other platform, dispose of Mr. Bryan.

As for Cleveland, he has run three times. As for Parker, he is chief justice of New York and ought not to be made commodity for corporations and politics. I do not believe he can carry New York, already disturbed by the decisions of Cleveland's judges on the supreme bench. As for George Gray, an old Whig, a man as good as Olney, he has, as Gen. Wilson, of Delaware, said to me, "the misfortune to have been a secessionist." Is that issue to be raised again? And Gray's mother was a Connecticut school teacher in Delaware. Mr. Hearst's mother was also a school teacher; her name was Apperson; perhaps she was of New England. Mayor McClellan's grandfather, Gen. Marcy, was of Massachusetts.

FORETOLD BY DREAM

Was the Death of Mrs. Ellen Olson's Son.

Salt Lake City, June 3.—Awakened from a dream in which she saw her stepson, Joseph Olson, taking his life by drowning, Mrs. Ellen Olson calmly told her daughter and son-in-law, J. E. Langford, who had called to break the news of Olson's death, that she knew he was dead, and by his own hand.

Mr. Langford received a telegram informing him of his brother-in-law's accidental death on his ranch near Kelton, Utah. No details were given. Mr. Langford and his wife were at Saltair when they received the message, but hastened to return to this city. Immediately upon their return here they hastened to the residence of Mrs. Olson, the mother of the dead man, who resides at 474 West First South street. Mrs. Olson was awakened by her daughter's summons.

"You needn't tell me what has happened," she declared. "Joe's dead. I dreamed he was drowned."

HAS SHARP BULGE

Wheat Very Strong, Chicago Leading In Bullish Sentiment.

Crop Reports Generally Unfavorable — Duluth Cash Wheat Strong.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 3.—Wheat was booming this morning and the bull headquarters was in Chicago. The July in that market advanced 1⅞-2c as compared with 1¼c in Duluth, ⅝c in Minneapolis, and 1⅝c in New York. Minneapolis was the weak market and the opinion was that shorts were covering in Chicago and selling in Minneapolis.

Weather news played a considerable part in formulating the sentiment. The Modern Miller, Snow and Jones' reports were in and all were more or less bullish The Modern Miller said: "Heavy rains have created fears of floods in the West where the rainfall has been heavy. Complaints are received that the wheat harvest in Texas is interfered with, and that the crops are being damaged in Oklahoma and Kansas by continued rains. Otherwise crop conditions are maintained, though the outlook for the Ohio valley is for a yield of not to exceed half an average crop."

Snow's report says: "It seems reasonable to expect an improvement in condition June 1 over May 1 of 2 or 3 points. The last year showing an improvement in condition during May was 1898, and the average yield per acre of that year was the largest ever made. Local returns show that the month of May was favorable to growth of small grain. The month was cooler than normal throughout the central valley, with abundant moisture to help stooling of small grain. Improvement of stand is likely to show an increased rate of yield. Incomplete returns show a spring wheat acreage but little changed from last year with considerable decrease in North Dakota. Acreage of oats will not very much from last year and the crop is in normal condition."

H. V. Jones said: "There is continued heavy rainfall in the Southwest, notably in Kansas. Three inches in some places last night is placing the wheat crop in danger in that state. The wheat will grow rank and hot weather would develop rust, with heavy loss in yield. The situation in general deserves attention. There has been no improvement in winter wheat conditions information since April. All reports sustain our view of the crop made, that a half crop in Texas, a small crop in Oklahoma, a sensational decline in the Ohio valley and a prospect of 50,000,000 bus less winter wheat east of the Rockies. Russia and Roumania are to lessen their spring wheat crop, which will apply on next years's distribution. In Northwest the weather is cool and not giving wheat normal growth; not strictly unfavorable at this date, however, but must warm up if we get best results."

The Ohio state report also stimulated the buying sentiment. It reported a condition of 54 against 53 last month and 89 last year. It also reported considerable land plowed up, and in general was construed as bullish in spite of the very slight improvement in condition.

The Liverpool market closed ¼c lower. Paris was ½@¾c lower.

Some wheat was sold by Duluth shippers to the East, about 100,000 bus.

Car receipts at Duluth were 4 against 36 a year ago and at Minneapolis 195 against 249 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 199 against 285 last year. Chicago received 11 against 21 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 768,000 bus, last year 321,000 bus. Shipments 963,000 bus, last year 140,000 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 1,592,000 bus, against 2,152,000 bus last week and 1,712,000 bus a year ago.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅛c higher. July oats closed ⅝-⅝c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 59,000 bus, last year 385,000 bus. Shipments 531,000 bus, last year 274,000 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 2,007,000 bus against 1,465,000 bus last week and 2,568,000 bus last year.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was very dull. The July option opened ⅝c higher at 95¾c and sold at 95¼c at 9:45. It reacted to 95c at 10:15 and held at that point for some time, after which it fell back to 94⅞c at 11:45. It turned stronger again and sold steadily upward to 96c at which point it closed, an advance over yesterday of 1¼c. September closed ⅞c higher at 89½c.

Cash wheat is strong at Duluth, on track and to arrive grain now selling ½c higher than Minneapolis prices, and when the difference in charges is considered is a full cent higher. Offerings are light though increasing somewhat. For No. 1 northern from 1 to 2c over July is paid.

Flax is dull and unchanged. Argentine shipments of flax were 680,000 bus, this week against 760,000 bus last week and 320,000 bus last year.

Oats to arrive advanced ½c and on track remained unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Sentiment In Wheat Pit Decidedly Bullish.

Chicago, June 3.—Sentiment in the wheat pit today was decidedly bullish, owing to continued reports of damage by floods in the Southwest. Strength of corn and decreased shipments from Argentina also gave encouragement to the bulls. There was a good commission house demand, but offerings were rather light. July opened ⅛@⅜c to ⅛@⅜c higher, at 87⅛c to 87¾c. After selling off to 87⅜c the price steadied around 87½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 206 cars, against 126 cars last week and 305 cars a year ago.

Selling induced by the slight improvement in conditions as shown by the July crop report caused an easier feeling for a time. July selling off to 87⅛@87¼c. Late in the day the market again became extremely strong, the influence being an exceedingly bullish report by a Minneapolis expert in regard to the condition of the crop in the Southwest. Just before the close July sold at 89¾@89¾c. Final figures were at 89¾c, a net gain of 1⅞@2c.

Wet weather throughout the West and smaller receipts than expected caused strength in corn. Shorts were the principal buyers. July opened ¼c higher at 50@⅝c to 50⅜c, reacted to 50c but rallied again to 50¼c. Local receipts 503 cars, with 59 of contract grade.

The market continued strong the entire day. Bullish crop news was the principal feature. The close was at the high point, July being up 1¼c at 51⅜c.

The strength of wheat and corn was reflected ni oats, prices showing a slight advance over yesterday's closing figures. Speculative trading was helped by an improved demand for cash oats. The opening was unchanged to ¼c higher at 39¼ to 39⅜c, July advanced ao 40¼c. Local receipts were 122 cars.

Provisions were firm on smaller receipts of hogs and generally with the strength of grains. Trading was largely in the September option. September pork opened down 2½c at $11.57½, sold up to $11.65, and steadied at $11.60. September lard was a shade lower at $6.55 and advanced to $6.57½. Ribs opened a shade up at $6.77½ and sold up to $6.62½.

Close: Wheat—July, 89¼c; old, 90¾c; September, 87⅝c; old, 88⅝c; December, 82⅜c. Corn—June, 50¼c; July, 51¼c; September, 49⅝c; December, 45c; May, 44⅜c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was dull during early part of the day, but broadened into an active market before the close. Weather and crop news were the controlling factors. The Snow report came early and was bullish. Following it came the Modern Miller which was mildly bullish and this was succeeded by Jones' report which was decidedly bullish. Poor "bleeding Kansas" again has the center of the stage. A few weeks ago we were buying wheat on the long dry spell in that section and now the buying is on excessive rains in the same locality. This feature dominates the market and obscures all other considerations for the time being. Cables so far are dull and the cash situation is slow, although cash premiums are well maintained. There is some discrepancy in reports so far concerning the weekly clearances. The principal strength here is in the July which is easily congested by reason of the small stocks of contract wheat and the premium for the cash stuff. July wheat on the strong market is rather hard to buy.

Corn—There were further rains in the corn belt and were very heavy in the Southwest. More rains are predicted for the next twenty-four hours. This was the controlling influence of the market. There is quite a liberal short interest in corn all the time and the buying is at the moment better than the selling. The cash situation, while it includes a fair demand is not much of a factor.

Oats—The principal strength was in the July. The advance in corn and wheat contributed, but the excessive rains are considered unfavorable for the growing crop, although complaints so far are unimportant. There was a good cash demand and Patten is supposed to be long July oats and adding to his line.

* * *

Walter Fitch, Chicago: Think there is every reason why one should be fi friendly toward the long side of July oats. Stocks of oats here in Chicago are decreasing and arrivals continue to be ridiculously small. Inquiry by the different elevator interests who operate throughout the West and Northwest that their purchases of oats are practically nothing. We all know that the seeding of oats was somewhat late and we are very liable to find again this year that the deliveries of oats on July contracts will have to be made practically from the old crop.

* * *

Ben Bryan, Chicago: The last ten minutes of the session witnessed a very wild and strong wheat closing, wheat selling ¾c over the official prices right after the tap of the bell. I believe there is a very large short interest in both new and old July wheat.

Large takings of Reading and Erie infused a better tone into the market, and the demand became larger with small improvements. High-priced stocks sold considerably higher. Northwestern gaining 7⅛. Delaware & Hudson 1¼ and Lackawanna 2⅞. Hocking Coal also advanced 1. Minneapolis & St. Louis slumped 2½ points to 40, since its last sale on Feb. 18, on a single sale.

The large buying orders which lifted prices were not followed up, but prices were maintained near the top level and the market became dull. Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic fell 1⅜. Bonds were irrfegular at noon.

Transactions in bonds outnumbered those inin stocks during the interval between 12 and 1 o'clock, but in neither department was the movement of importance.

The market during the afternoon was a counterpart of that of recent days. Scarcely any stocks of prominence were dealt in at all, and the price variations rarely exceeded ⅛ either way. Pump lost a point and Consolidated Gas reacted as much from the high price of the morning.

United Fruit fell 1¼ and American Telegraph advanced 1¼. There was no other changes to note. Ontario & Western was steadily absorbed at a fractional advance and the coalers and U. S. Steel preferred rose in company to the best. The closing was dull and firm.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Nothing of very much importance has arisen on either side as yet. We must be on the lookout when anything appears in sight. The developments of the past week or two would appear rather more favorable than otherwise though nothing very pronounced. There are rumors of heavy gold shipments, which though probably correct, will affect the market. For the moment, I think a waiting policy the best, though if there is going to be a move upward at present, it sould start this afternoon.

Coe Commission Co.: Stocks—American stocks in London steady about parity. Our securities opened steady. The initial trading was at about yesterday's close. The market has ruled firm all morning, most of the active issues making fractional gains. Sales to 12 o'clock 125,000. Is nothing new to say regarding the stocks. The market seems to be killing time. We believe they should be bought on all breaks because stocks are cheap, the short interest is large, and there are too many bears.

* * *

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is practically no change in the situation. Liquidation has been in evidence in spots for the last two days, and it promises to continue, as there is no improvement in sight in the business situation. Secretered selling by tired holders accounts for the declines in those stocks which have gone down. The heavy drop in Consolidated Gas is now more or less accounted for by the statement that Mayor McClellan is giving serious consideration to the establishment of a municipal gas plant. I hear that the best stocks to sell are the regular Standard Oil properties such as Missouri Pacific and St. Paul, and if you have plenty of nerve, Consolidated Gas.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 3.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 4@24 points on covering following very bullish Liverpool cables and reports that Manchester spinners would resume on full time. The weather in the South remained favorable, however, and immediately following the call, July, which had opened at 11.70, sold down to 11.57 under continued liquidation that was thought to be for New Orleans account, while the new crop months also showed an easier tendency in response to the good weather accounts. Room shorts, however, were disposed to cover in anticipation of the government report tomorrow and for over Sunday, and after the early weakness the market did better on the continued Liverpool firmness, with prices at the end of the first hour net 6 to 28 points higher, or slightly above the opening figures. Trading was moderately active and the undertone of the market very unsettled and feverish, while local sentiment seemed of rather a bearish average.

Spot cotton closed quiet; mid ups, 12.00; mid gulf, 12.25. Sales, 476 bales. Futures closed steady; June, 11.47; July, 11.26; Aug. 11.29; Sept. 10.67; Oct. 10.29; Nov. 10.23; Dec. 10.22; Jan. 10.24.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The tone of the general market was firmer today and in some special stocks there were good rallies. The volume of business was at a minimum all day. Copper Copper was dull and steady and most others were inactive. There is a general feeling here that coppers will soon do better.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES

Much Interest and Activity Among the Hearst Men.

Tomorrow night the Democratic primaries will be held throughout the county for election of delegates to the county convention next week. There is considerable interest in the primaries this time, and some hard work is being done in trying to set up delegates that will get the majority of the votes.

There seems to be more activity manifested on the part of the Hearst adherents than of the followers of other candidates, and judging by the display of zeal that has been exhibited thus far by those who want to see the New York millionaire get the nomination, they believe he is in the race to stay and to win. The opposition does not seem to be worrying and appears to believe that its followers will be out at the primaries whether prodded or not.

Excursion Postponed.

The moonlight excursion that was to have been given this evening on the steamer Newsboy, to raise funds for the entertainment of the music teachers of the state convention here this month, has been postponed until next Monday evening, on account of the inclement weather.

A fine musical program has been arranged for the boat ride. Among those who will take part are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Bradbury, Mrs. James McAuliffe, Mrs. Emily Ellis Woodward, Marx Oberndorffer, George Tyler and Gerard Tonning.

MARINE NEWS

Storm on Lake Keeps Boats In Duluth Harbor.

Saxona Goes Out With Cargo of Grain—Other News.

There have been no departures today from the local harbor, owing to the high northeast wind, which shows no signs of abating. Four steamers, with their tows, all heavily loaded with lumber for the lower lakes, are lying just within the entry waiting for the wind to go down before starting out.

Storm conditions appear to be general along the upper lakes, and Weather Forecaster Richardson holds forth little hope of there being a decided change for the better in weather conditions before tomorrow. The boats are as follows: Langell and tows, R. Holland and tows, DeLeuty and tows, Geo. King and tows.

The steamer Saxona, loaded with grain for Buffalo, and in command of Capt. D. P. Craine, cleared from the local harbor last night and started down the lakes. The Saxona was the first Lake Carriers' association boat to make a trip since the trouble with the Masters' and Pilots' association began, coming from Buffalo to Duluth. The members of the local branch of the latter association has asserted that Capt. Craine would not take the boat back down the lakes, but it appears they were mistaken.

CAPTAINS REVILED.

Choice Epithets Hurled at Them on Detroit River.

Capt. Smith, who brought up the Stephenson some nights ago, is said to have had a very interesting time coming up through the Detroit river. Strike sympathizers stood out on the banks of the river and called the man on the bridge all sorts of things. There was one woman whose venom was remarkably bitter. The captain would not look around at any of these people, but kept his eyes ahead. The woman last lamenting that she could not make him hear, when he was nearing all the time, but giving no attention.

Capt. Craine, of the Saxona, is reported to have said that he would not for $1000 go through such an experience like he had coming up through the rivers. He will probably be reminded of his action on his trip down this time.

The alleged fining of Capt. Craine the sum of $8000 and the reported privilege of the Duluth Harbor to settle his case have not been reconciled.

One point which has been discussed in the strike in relation that it places men in who are upwards of 50 years of age. Many of these have long been employes of the same companies and at their ages it is difficult, if not impossibly, to obtain employment with other concerns than those with whom they have been.

DONNACONA FLOATED.

Mackinaw City, June 3.—After jettisoning 450 tons of her iron ore cargo, the steamer Donnacona was released by the wrecker Favorite early yesterday morning. Although one compartment is full of water the steamer will proceed along to her destination, as it is not believed she is seriously damaged. The tug and steamer passed down at 12:30 in the afternoon.

THREE

SIX PEOPLE KILLED

In Collision on Electric Road Near Norwalk, Ohio.

Passenger and Freight Cars Crash With Terrific Force.

Norwalk, O., June 3.—In an accident on the Lake Shore Electric railway six persons were killed and a dozen or more others badly hurt, late yesterday afternoon, as the result of a collision between an eastbound fast electrical car and westbound package freight car, at Wells Corner, a few miles from this place. The dead:

CHARLES PECK, Lorain.
W. W. SHERWOOD, Garrettson, O.
NEIL SULLIVAN, an inspector of safety appliances for the interstate commerce commission, Binghampton, N. Y.
CLARENCE KETCHAM, Lorain, O.
RALPH WILLIAMS, colored, Indianapolis.

Unidentified man; in his pocket was a key ring with the name, George Judd Taylor, Alliance, O.

The injured: Steve Watergow, body crushed, cut about head; Frank Libling, Cleveland, head badly cut; Amelia Furnace, Cleveland, head cut; Rose Burns, Cleveland, head badly cut, teeth knocked out; Gertrude Miller, Cleveland, cheek cut, leg injured; Mrs. Louise O. Miller, Cleveland, head cut; Chief Electrician Moore of the Lake Shore electric, head cut; Mrs. George E. Jansen, Cleveland, head cut; M. McDonald, Cleveland, internal injuries, left side badly crushed; D. C. King, Fremont, head and back bruised; D. D. Hawkins, conductor passenger car, left shoulder injured; Mills Beebee, William Fletcher, East Norfolk, right arm injured; C. H. Oteo, Elyria, hand cut; Mrs. W. W. Signa, Toledo, leg broken; Mrs. R. G. Sayers, Toledo, head crushed; Myrtle Nagle, Cleveland, head and arm hurt; George Sturgeon, motorman on package car, badly crushed.

The accident occurred at a point quite distant from any immediate means of communication, and assistance was sent from Norwalk, where every physician and nurse in the city was called into service and hurried to the place of the accident on a special car.

When the injured had been attended to they were placed on a car and brought to this city, where they are now at the St. Charles hotel, the third floor of which has bene turned into a hospital.

All those who were killed were in the smoking compartment of the passenger car, and death came instantly, the bodies showing no signs of life when the rescuers went to work after they had recovered from the shock of the accident.

The injuries of several of those hurt are so serious that they may result fatally. Just why the accident occurred is not known.

It was necessary to jack up the freight car, which lay across the bodies of the men in the smoking compartments of the passenger car. Many of the women passegers had fainted, others were on their knees offering thanks for their safety, others still were runing away with their hands to their ears to shut out the cries of the injured.

Manager Stout of the Lake Shore electric said as to the cause of the wreck:

"Some one did not live up to the rules of the road; who it was I do not know."

Williams, one of the killed, was said to have also lived at 321 Missouri street, Toledo. His mother is in Muncie, Ind.

Watergo, one of the injured, is a Hungarian, and lives in Toledo.

Clarence Ketcham, who was killed, was a resident of New London, O. He was working at Lorain.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.
Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

NICKERSON TO END

Town Will Be No More After Sawmill Closes Down.

Has Until August to Live —Last Logs Delivered.

The last load of logs to be cut in the vicinity of Nickerson, Minn., for the Scanlon-Gipson Lumber company, was hauled to the DeLong & Chamberlain mill at that place the first of this week. The mill has enough timber on hand to keep it in operation until about the first of August, when it will close down permanently. It is likely that the plant will be torn down some time during the coming winter and shipped out to the Pacific coast, where the DeLong & Chamberlain interest own some timber.

Nickerson will very soon be an example of the class of small Northern Minnesota lumbering towns that become very quickly depopulated following the closing down of sawmills. Nearly all the men in the village, which has a population of about 200, are employed at the sawmill, the planing mill or the lumber yard and as soon as their occupation is gone at that place they will take their families and either follow the mill interests out West, or else move to some other sawmill point.

The cut-over lands round about Nickerson will in time develop into a good agricultural district, but settlement following the cutting of timber is generally very slow, and it will probably be several years before there will be another village at the Nickerson location of any size.

The mill at Nickerson has been sawing about 40,000,000 feet a season for the Scanlon-Gipson company of Minneapolis, for the past several years, and the lumber company has some large yards there with several million feet of lumber on hand. Shipments are made by rail from Nickerson regularly, the lumber going to Minneapolis for distribution. The Scanlon-Gipson company operates its own planing mill at Nickerson.

Among the interior mills those at Cloquet are said to be the most active sellers in the lumber market at the present.

Estimates of the season's cut at the Cloquet mills that will pass through Duluth for the East, either by lake or rail, place the figures from 60,000,000 to 75,000,000 feet, which will be an increase of from 30,000,000 to 20,000,000 feet over the amount of lumber shipped through Duluth last year.

Most of the stock now selling from the local mill yards is in small bills and the boats are moving the stocks which were sold during the winter and early spring.

There has been no change in the local sawing circles except at the Murray-McCann mill, where a night shift has been put on and the mill is being operated day and night. The Hines Lumber company has an immense stock of logs on hand along the shore of Superior bay in proximity of the mill and the mill will not be able to saw the supply working with one shift. Nothing new is said to have developed regarding the intentions of the Hines company to lease the Peyton, Kimball & Barber mill on Connor's Point and start it sawing on the Hines timber. It is supposed that since the mill has been inspected the management of the lumber company has the matter under consideration.

MAY CLEAR BY SUNDAY

Forecaster Richardson Imparts That Very Cheerful Information.

"Hello! Weather bureau?"

"Yes, this is the weather bureau."

"Forecaster Richardson?"

"Right here—guessed it the first time."

"Say, Mr. Richardson, how long is this beastly streak of weather going to continue?"

"Oh, it will probably rain through tonight and tomorrow."

"You seem pretty calm about it."

"Why shouldn't I be?"

"Don't you know that your life is in danger every minute until the sun shines again? Three thousand baseball fans and several thousand lesser mortals are clamoring for your blood."

"Well, I don't know. I am situated pretty far up on the hill, and the hill is mighty slippery—not easy to climb, you know. Besides, Winnipeg is doing handsomely by me for keeping the White Sox off them until their reinforcements arrive."

"But it has been raining off and on, and the wind has been coming from the Northeast since Sunday night. Don't believe the sun has peeped out once. Rather a long stretch, is it not?"

"Not for Duluth, no!"

"Oh!"

"Unusual, perhaps, but not rare. Ordinarily, I'll admit, three days is about the limit."

"Oh!"

"Sir?"

"I asked if there were any hopes for Sunday."

I think so, yes. League games cannot be played on Sunday, can they? I am of the opinion that it will clear up enough so that we may go to church."

It will be safer for you to stay up on the hills."

"I'll get a bodyguard of farmers, if necessary. They, at least, are grateful."

"All right, thank you. Good-bye."

"What's that? Oh, I beg your pardon! You see it is so long since I have heard those simple words that they took me by surprise. Good-bye."

I see. Good-bye."

TO ORGANIZE THE CLUBS

Meeting to Form Association of Those Employed By Grocers.

An attempt will be made, at a meeting next Monday evening, to organize the Duluth grocery clerks into a union. A. H. Garfield, of St. Paul, organizer for the Retail Clerks' International Protective association and vice president of the St. Paul union, is now in the city for that purpose.

Some time ago there was talk among the local grocery salesmen of taking concerted action to obtain the privilege of a half holiday at some time during the week. It was hardly hoped that the holiday would be granted for Saturday, for that is the busiest day in the week in the grocery stores. Nothing ever came of the matter, however, and the clerks are still working six full days a week, with the usual long hours on Saturday.

At the last meeting of the Federated Trades assembly it was suggested that the clerks should be organized. They have no union at present, and it was explained that they could not join the union of clothing and boot and shoe store clerks, on account of the longer hours they are compelled to observe. The constitution governing the other union allows its members to work only a certain number of hours each day.

The move to organize was not started by the grocery clerks themselves, but by a member of the Painters' union. The clerks have expressed no dissatisfaction at their present conditions, but believe that for the purposes of protection it would be better for them to be organized.

THEY LIVE BY THEIR WITS

Forty Thousand Parisians Never Know Where They Will Breakfast.

Paris, June 3.—Without counting the vagrants and professional beggars, there are no less than 40,000 people in Paris who have not the least idea where they are to get their brakfast when they get up in the morning. They go to make up a strange army, the like of which could hardly be found in any other city in the world. They are, in fact, living examples of people who live solely by their wits. Where else in the world would one look for a man to skim a river but in Paris? And yet, incredible as it may seem, there is one man among that 40,000 who makes it his business to skim the Seine daily. He sleeps under some friendly bridge arch in the summer months, and in the winter no one knows, or cares, for that matter, where he finds shelter. He is up at the first peep of dawn and out in a rickety old flatboat, armed with a skimming pan. With this he skims off the surface of the river the grease that gathers in the night. This he takes to a soap factory, where he receives a franc or two for his stock. On that sum he gets his breakfast, dinner and supper. For more than that, or the next day, he has no thought.

There are others who live by fishing the Seine for corks. Early in the morning they get out on the river banks, and, armed with a short pole on the end of which is a small improvised net, they gather up the floating corks.

When the river has been fished clean of the stoppers the anglers take their harvest to the cork imerchants in the neighborhood and sell them for whatever they will bring.

Of these cork fishermen there are about a score, and they guard their interests jealously. If they see a strange angler netting corks they pounce on him in a body and he has to seek safety in flight. They look on apprentices in the business with aversion. Only a few days ago the police barely rescued one of them in time to save his life.

Another singular member of this army is the rat tamer. But he is a proud man, for he has cards proclaiming his business. They read:

"Valin, rodent specialist."

The business of this "specialist" is to breed and raise rats for fairs, circuses and the medical colleges. If you want a family of rats to do tricks, all you have to do is to call on Valin, tell him what kind of stunts you prefer to have the rats do, and a few weeks later he will have what you desire. If the medical college stands in need of a consignment of rats for vivisection, Valin always can be relied on to furnish them.

Valin's house is a modern Noah's ark. In it is a collection of nearly every kind of small animal. The house is filled with cages. Every nook and cranny contains some sort of animal family, and Valin is there always, training his little pupils. For his untrained rats he gets a franc apiece, but the trained ones bring ten times that sum. A rat that can stand on its head or turn somersaults is a treasure not easily to be taken from Valin, for he knows what his pet is worth.

The home of Valin would be a creepy place for a man with nerves to sleep in, for he keeps lizards, adders and frogs by the score for sale. This year he has sold 2000 adders, 8000 salamanders and 30,000 frogs.

"Father Cockroach" is the one member in the army who has risen to the dignity of a place in the Paris directory. He undertakes for a price to rid your house of the little pests, and is one of the busiest men in the city. He has regular patrons, who pay him by the month or year to keep their house free from the insects.

The business of the "public writer" has only one person left to represent it, although a score of years ago you could find one every few blocks. This person is a woman, who makes it her business to write letters for the illiterate. For an ordinary letter she exacts a fee of 10 cents, for a love letter 30 cents, while a proposal of marriage calls for the payment of 40 cents, and she says it's cheap at that.

One of the happiest of this strange throng is the luckless sculptor, who, failing to make a living in his art as an art, turned his talent into another channel that would insure him against starvation. At all of the ham fairs he is the man who molds the merchants lard into fantastic forms.

RADIUM CLOCK

That Is to Run Thirty Thousand Years.

London, June 3.—Harrison Martindale has made a radium clock, on a principle proposed by Mr. Strutt, which will keep time indefinitely.

"Empires may come and empires may go, but my little clock will keep time in two-minute beats as long as the radium lasts, or, roughly speaking, for 30,000 years. This is always supposing it is carefully kept out of the way of cyclones, people with dusters, and other inconsiderate phenomena."

Scientifically stated, the function of the radium clock is to exhibit the dissipation of negatively charged Alpha and Beta rays by radium.

A small tube containing a minute portion of radium is supported in an exhausted glass vessel by a quartz rod. To the lower end of the tube (which is colored violet by action of the radium) an electroscope, formed by two long "leaves" or strips of silver, is attached.

A charge of electricity, in which there are not Beta rays, passes down by means of the activity of the radium into the lenses. Like repels like, so the leaves expand till they touch the sides of the vessel, connected to earth by wires, which instantly conduct the electric charge, and the leaves fall together.

Mr. Martindale's radium clock repeats this operation every two minutes. It is an innocent, insignificant-looking object, but the imagination boggles at an attempt to figure the effect upon the world of the principles and properties of radio-activity, only one or two of which it illustrates.

THE RICHEST MAN.

Croesus was king of Lydia, a country of Asia Minor, in the seventh century before Christ, and was renowned for his prodigious wealth. His country was conquered by Cyrus and annexed to Persia, 546 B. C. His wealth gave rise to the expression, "As rich as Croesus." But with all his money he could not buy food so wholesome, nourishing and palatable as pillsbury's vitos, the leading cereal food of the day.

PROMISED WIFE

Presides at the Organ During Marshal's Funeral.

Hartford, Wis., June 3.—The funeral of City Marshal Sherger, who was killed by three burglars, was held on Wednesday. The city hall was draped in black, all business was suspended, and the entire population paid the tribute of tears to the memory of the brave man.

But most pathetic of all the incidents in the tragedy was the requiem played by Miss Annie Probst. She is the only organist in Hartford, and when it was decided to hold a public funeral from the church in which Marshel Sherger had been a member the committee's preparations were checked by the reminder that the organist was to have been Scherger's wife. One of the members thought she would play, and the others sent him to ask her. She readily consented, and notwithstanding her deep grief performed the task.

As the casket was brought into the church the organist played the dead march from Saul with musicianly accuracy, her personal grief hidden, but in the interlude the woman overcame the musician and the auditors wept as it had not done during the sermon, which the organist's father, Rev. C. H. Probst, had preached on the life of the marshal.

She was unable to play the final march, and was almost carried to the carriage which had been reserved for her.

Marshal Scherger is supposed to have met three men with guns and dark lanterns who were seen by other persons on the railroad track near the water tank, and have tried to arrest them. His body was found at about the spot where the men were seen. There were no witnesses to the shooting, but the noise attracted many persons who saw three men running away down the railroad tracks.

You can't argue politics or religion with a man who has a cinder in his eye, because he is so deeply interested in getting out the cinder. Not but that politics and religion interest him more than cinders—but not while the cinder is in his eye. So it is with a woman who has just lost a servant—until a prompt Herald "want ad" brings her another you can't interest her in anything else.

"Hitch your wagon to a star," as Emerson advised; but if "your wagon" is full of troubles, hitch it to a Herald want ad, which is easier.

A good batsman will not strike at every ball a pitcher throws; but if he fails to strike at any of them his batting average will be small. In business life, "your turn at the bat" comes with the "business chances" advertised in these columns. They are not all "your kind," but some of them are—and in the game of life the old pitcher, "Opportunity," gives very few "bases on balls."

GREAT DIFFICULTY IN SERVING PAPERS ON OCTOROON ELIAS

Charge By Police Necessary to Drive Away Thousands.

Composed Largely of Negroes Anxious to Protect Octoroon.

Suit Is Civil Case Brought By John R. Platt.

New York, June 4.—A charge by police reserves has been necessary to drive away thousands of persons blocking Central Park west, in front of the home of Hannah Elias, the Octoroon, who is charged by John R. Platt, an aged manufacturer, with having secured from him by blackmail nearly $700,000 in cash and real estate. Mounted police headed the charge, and they were compelled to use extreme measures in order to drive off the crowd, which was composed largely of negroes, friendly to the woman.

Mrs. Elias has been besieged in her splendid residence by deputies seeking to serve a warrant since suit was begun by Platt. As it is a civil suit, the officers are not empowered to break in the doors, so they have waited about patiently, expecting the woman to attempt an escape. Meantime scores of private detectives, employed by numerous persons interested in the case, have stationed themselves nearby, shadowing all who enter or leave the house, and serve as an added attraction to the curious.

Finally the crowd became so dense that Central Park west was jammed—a block in both directions. From the sullen attitude of the negroes, it is surmised that they, or at least some of the leaders, had an idea of protecting Mrs. Elias should she endeavor to leave the house. When the police reserves were called the negroes became extremely sullen and were driven away with much difficulty, jeering and insulting the white men as they went. No one was injured.

SALUTARY EFFECT

Produced By Presence of American Fleet at Tangier.

Community Is In State of Great Religious Excitement.

Washington, June 4.—Admiral Chadwick today cabled the navy department that the presence of the American fleet at Tangier has had a salutary influence, but that the community is in a state of great regious excitement.

The cablegram also reported that the Marietta, which was sent to Gibraltar for stores, has rejoined the fleet at Tangier; that an Italian man-of-war had arrived and that an English warship was expected to arrive at the Morocco port. Admiral Chadwick's cablegram is understood to be in reply to certain criticisms, mainly from British sources, upon the wisdom of sending American warships to Morocco at this juncture. The British view is that the release of the kidnaped men, Perdicaris and Varley, can be more safely obtained by refraining from adding to the anti-foreign feeling of the Moors and that government therefore has so far sent to Morocca waters nothing more formidable in a naval way than a small dispatch boat, the Surprise, and is relying entirely upon the efforts of the British minister, resident.

U. S. MINISTER TO GIVE BALL.

Lisbon, June 4.—United States minister Bryan will give a ball at the legation Monday. The king, queen and queen-dowager will be among the guests, who will include the cabinet ministers, members of the diplomatic corps and a long list of other distinguished persons. The United States battleship Iowa arrived here today and joined the other vessels of the battleship squadron of the North Atlantic fleet.

DAMAGE IS GREAT

Flood Loss In South Will Reach Into Millions.

Worst Is Yet to Come on Many of the Streams.

Kansas City, June 4.—Further rains have fallen in Southern Kansas within the past twelve hours, and the flood conditions in the valley of the Neosho and Cottonwood rivers continue to grow worse. The streams are higher than at any previous time in twenty years, not excepting the rise a year ago, and they are still rising. The Kaw, which caused the real damage from Kansas City west to Manhattan in the flood of 1903, continues to come up slowly at Topeka, Lawrence and Kansas City, but as yet no alarm is felt over the result of the flood along this stream. Although the Missouri river at Kansas City is high and rising slowly, it is believed it will be able to carry off the great amount of water coming this way from the West through the Kaw. As the streams which are the highest are those off the Kaw watershed and drain into rivers south of Kansas City, whatever serious damage is done must affect Southern Kansas territory, and will not do material damage at Kansas City, Lawrence and North Topeka, which towns suffered the brunt of last year's flood.

Oklahoma and the Indian Territory streams are also high and in some instances have already overflowed their banks inundating valuable farm lands and doing more or less damage. In Southwestern Missouri the Marais Des Cygnes has done some damage to tracks at Rich Hill and other points. The railway service throughout the Southwest is still demoralized, and a dozen or more trains are stalled in Kansas. The damage already done by the flood is immense. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of bridges have been destroyed and growing crops have been greatly damaged.

As far as known but two lives, a woman and a child, names unknown, who were drowned at Florence, have been reported.

The greatest damage wrought is in the great oil fields of Southern Kansas around Chanute, and at Iola, Florence, Emporia, Fort Scott and further west along the Arkansas at Wichita and other points.

Scores of oil tanks filled with oil and many derricks and rigs have been swept away. Railroad traffic on all lines in that section has been abandoned. In some places the Neosho is six miles wide and people are moving about in boats.

At Iola, the Neosho is five miles wide and a foot higher than it was last year. The loss in cattle drowned and farm property damaged will be heavy. Rock and Elm creeks have backed their waters into town and 100 families along their banks driven from their homes were forced to take shelter in the courthouse. The river is still rising today and the worst is doubtless yet to come.

At Florence business is practically at a standstill and merchants are removing their goods. A passenger train is tied up at Clements and the passengers were compelled to remain in the cars all night. Food was brought to them in boats. A rescuing party headed by Sheriff Newlands has rescued many persons at Emporia.

WANT POWDERLY.

Boston, June 4.—A movement is underway in Knights of Labor circles to have T. V. Powderly, formerly general master workman of that organization, assume the leadership once more. Michael J. Kenney, secretary-treasurr of district assembly No. 30 of this city, is authority for the statement that Mr. Powderly has been asked to take charge of affairs and has intimated that if his election is unanimous he will accept. Arrangements are being made for a big mass-meeting in Boston and today the former leader was invited to come here and deliver an address.

LIBERTY BELL EN ROUTE.

Chicago, June 4.—The Liberty bell from Pennsylvania, accompanied by a delegation of fifty who are taking the bell to the Louisiana purchase exposition at St. Louis, will reach Chicago early tomorrow morning. It will be transferred to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and go North to St. Paul and Minneapolis without delay.

"PIKE" DAY AT FAIR.

St. Louis, June 4.—Today was "Pike" day at the World's Fair and despite the frequent showers there was a large crowd on the grounds. The weather prevented the attendance record being broken, but the mark was nearly reached. It was announced today that the Minnesota building would be formally opened Tuesday, June 7.

ESCAPED FROM BRIGAND DROWNED

New York, June 4.—By the finding of his drowned body it has developed that Elmer S. Lewis, of Cleveland, a sailor on the battleship Kentucky, lying at the New York navy yard, who escaped from the brig on that vessel May 26 and jumped overboard, had lost his life in the attempt to get away. The man had been imprisoned under orders from Washington, which said that he was wanted in Manila on a civil charge, but of what offense he was accused was not stated. The Kentucky recently arrived here from the Philippines. During the night of Lewis' escape a shore boat with three men was seen hanging about near the battleship. The men rowed around for an hour and were finally ordered away by the ship's officers. It is thought the men were friends of the prisoner and were expecting to pick him up.

A short time after they had rowed away, Lewis broke from the brig and running on deck, leaped overboard. He was not seen again.

PEOPLE OF GENSAN FEAR AN ATTACK BY THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Commissioner of Customs Wires That Attack Is Imminent---Activity of Troops Causes Uneasiness.

Gen. Stoessel Reports on Desperate Battle of Kin Chou and Nan Shan and Tells Why Retreat Was Made.

Seoul, June 4.—The commissioner of customs of Gensan, Korea, wires that a Russian attack on that place is deemed imminent. He is making preparations to send the women and children to a mountain monastery, twenty miles distant.

A junk has reported that the Russians have landed field pieces at Sha river, near Ham Heung, north of Gensan, on Broughton bay, or the gulf of Korea, at which place Cossacks reinforcements are expected.

SHARP FIGHT

Between Japs and Cossacks Near Feng Wang Cheng.

St. Petersburg, June 4.—The war office has received news of a sharp fight twenty miles north of Saimatsza, north of Feng Wang Cheng, June 1, in which six Cossacks were killed and twenty-two wounded. The Japanese losses are not known. Five companies of General Rennenkampff's Cossacks discovered Japanese detachments at Fen Chou Ling pass, half way between Saimatasza and Ajiudjan. The Cossacks dismounted and attacked on foot, but owing to the difficult nature of the ground and the strong defensive position held by the enemy and the latter's stubborn resistance the attack was not pressed and the Cossacks drew off.

SERIES OF FIGHTS

Have Recently Occurred North of Pi-Lan-Tien.

Tokio, June 4.—The commander of the Japanese forces south of the Yalu river telegraphed from Seoul today news of a series of fights north of Pu-Lan-Tien, about 40 miles north of Port Adams, Liao Tung peninsula, Monday, received from Japanese cavalry scouting in the vicinity of Chu-Chia-Tung. It was learned that Cossacks had been located at Telissu and the Japanese thereupon despatched infantry and cavalry which defeated and pursued them. The Russian force consisted of three squadrons. At Chang Chia Tun this force was joined by two additional squadrons and the Japanese again attacked and defeated the Russians. Five companies of infantry and a battery of horse artillery joined the Russians at Lung Wang Miao, where the Japanese attacked for the third time and the Russians fell back to Tellissu, where the Japanese and Russian cavalry continued in contact Monday night.

General Haraguchi, in command of the Japanese forces south of the Yalu river, telegraphs from Seoul that an infantry reconnissance dispatched from Gensan struck a patrol of Cossacks at Munch-Hyan yesterday and killed five of them.

CAPTURE OUTER FORTS.

Tokio Dispatch Says Japs Near Port Arthur.

London, June 4.—The Rome correspondent of the Central News telegraphs: "A Tokio dispatch to the Journal Italia says that the Japanese have occupied the first line of the outer fortifications of Port Arthur after a feeble resistance.

"The correspondent at Tokio of the News Agency Liberas says that four divisions of Japanese troops have occupied Kwang Tung heights on which they placed heavy artillery dominating Port Arthur.

"The same correspondent adds that the Russian squadron attempted a sortie, but was forced to return, being threatened by the Japanese fleet."

STOESSEL'S REPORT

Covering the Desperate Battle at Kin Chou.

St. Petersburg, June 4.—Lieut. Gen. Zelinski, chief of staff to Gen. Kuropatkin, transmits to the minister of war, under date of June 2, a report of Gen. Stoessel, dated Port Arthur, May 28, as folows: "After a fierce battle lasting two days, I ordered our positions at Kin Chou to be evacuated in the evening, for we had opposed to us at least three divisions with 120 guns.

"The enemy's fire, particularly from four gunboats and six torpedo boats, completely annihilated our batteries mounted at Kin Chou. The Fifth regiment, which was posted on this spot, stood its ground heroically. The fire of this regiment, as well as that of our batteries and the gunboat Bobr, off Khounoueza, inflicted enormous losses."

"Our losses amounted to thirty officers and 800 men kiled or wounded. We blew up or damaged all our guns, which the Japanese had not put out of action. It would not have been expedient certainly to bring up siege artillery during the fierce fighting.

"The battle May 26 began at 5 a. m. and lasted until 8 p. m., when I ordered the position evacuated gradually. The explosion of a number of our mines and Fougades was rendered impossible by the Japanese, who turned our position immediately. The Japanese advanced through water up to their waists under the protection of their ships. The spirit of our troops is excellent."

BRIGANDS BOLDER.

Newchwang People Regard Them With Anxiety.

Newchwang, June 4.—The brigands in this vicinity are becoming bolder, after receiving 1000 Manlicher rifles. Their renewed activity is causing a discussion among the foreign residents on the necessity for gunboats as a protection for their lives and property during the interval which must elapse between the departure of the Russians and the entrance of the Japanese troops into Newchwang. A British gunboat is still lying at Hing Wang Tam, but the decision of the Washington authorities that the United States gunboats, Wilmington and Helena, will summer at Canton, is taken to mean that United States Consul Miller's recommendation, made months ago, has been unfavorably considered by the government. Consul Miller's common sense diplomacy, and his firm, courageous attitude, has done much to alleviate the fears of all the foreign residents here, and the Chinese trust in him explicitly. Still, the American and British residents, while of the opinion that his influence would prove of immense value in the event the bandits began raiding the town, between the Russians going and the Japanese coming in, say he should have the support of a gunboat stationed at the mouth of the river.

The Russians here have been somewhat cheered by a report brought in by an officer, just arrived, who was in the battle at Kin Chou, to the effect that after the first day's fighting the Japan-

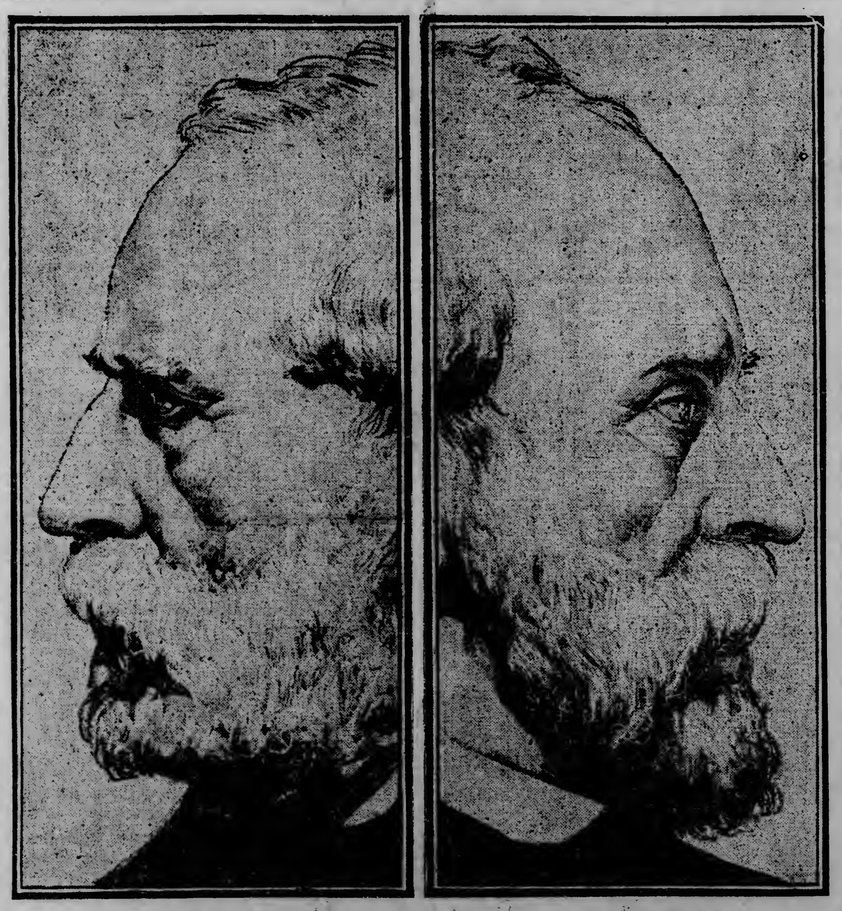
RESEMBLANCE THAT COST A LIFE—MAN WHO SUED NEGRESS FOR BLACKMAIL AND MAN WHO WAS KILLED BY JEALOUS NEGRO



ANDREW H. GREEN. JOHN R. PLATT.

The suit of John R. Platt, of New York, to recover $685,385, which he says has been extorted from him by Hannah Elias, a negress, has revealed the identity of the "wealthy, gray-bearded old man" whom the negro Williams was seeking when, mad with jealousy, he shot and killed Andrew H. Green, "the father of New York," in the street near the Green home in New York.

YOUNG MAN DIES IN CAB WITH HIS HEAD IN A WOMAN'S LAP

TWO TRAINS COLLIDE

One Person Killed, and Nineteen Injured in Kansas.

Two Trains Running at Rapid Pace Come Together.

Kansas City, June 4.—By a head-on collision of two Missouri Pacific passenger trains, near Mastin, twenty-two miles south of Kansas City, one person was killed and nineteen injured, most of the latter passengers. The trains were No. 1, the Colorado flyer, westbound, and No. 36, a Herington, Kas., accommodation train, eastbound. The dead:

Both trains were behind time and were trying to make up time. No. 36 had orders to take a siding at Mastin, but had not reached that station, and was met on a culvert a mile beyond Mastin by the flyer. Both engines were demolished. The day coach on the accommodation train was telescoped, as was the mail car on the flyer. All the cars of both trains were thrown from the track and the roadbed was completely wrecked.

TORNADO IN OKLAHOMA

One Man Killed, Twelve Injured In Town of Walters.

Lawton, O. T., June 4.—A tornado demolished part of the little town of Walters, near here. One man was killed and twelve injured.

The southwestern part of the county was visited by a hail storm that damaged crops to the extent of several thousand dollares.

Continued heavy rains in this part of the Kiowas and Comanche nations have turned all streams into torrents and the valleys are inundated.

La Crosse, Wis., June 4.—A wind and rain storm did great damage to farm property south of here today. Near Stoddard, several barns were destroyed and hundreds of trees in orchards uprooted. Creeks are swollen out of their banks by the rain, and a number of bridges have been washed out.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL.

No Effort to Extend Present Voting Trust.

New York, June 4.—No effort will be made to extend the voting trust of the Wisconsin Central railroad, which lapses on July 1. The trust was created in July, 1899, and was to run for approximately five years, unless it should be terminated at an earlier date by the action of the trustees themselves. An official circular has been sent to the stockholders notifying them to deposit their trust certificates on and after June 15, for conversion into stock. It is not known who will control the railroad after the dissolution of the trust.

NEW TRIAL DENIED.

Milwaukee, June 4.—Frank Niezorawski, former member of the Milwaukee board of public works, convicted of bribery, was today denied a new trial by Judge Vinje and sentenced to pay a fine of $1000 and costs. Niezorawski was accused of accepting a bribe of $800 in connection with the awarding of a contract for a public school building.

SHOT BY SALOONKEEPER.

St. Paul, June 4.—A special to the Dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: An unknown man was shot and instantly killed by Frank W. Ironside, a Butte saloonkeeper. Ironside claims the man was attempting to hold him up.

QUARTET NOT GUILTY.

Laramie, Wyo., June 3.—The trial of William L. Keyes, Harry Keyes, Wesley Johnson and Frank Carroll, charged with killing 300 sheep and burning the sheep wagons of Maxwell & Stevens at Tie Siding, on the night of April 25 last, has ended in a cerdict of not guilty.

Frank T. Young, Bookmaker, Meets Mysterious Death.

Was About to Sail For Europe With His Wife.

Woman Is Held By the Police as a Witness.

New York, June 4.—Frank T. Young, known on the turf as Caesar Young, bookmaker, horse owner and stockholder in Pacific coast race tracks, was shot and killed in a hansom cab today while on his way to the White Star Line pier to join his wife, with whom he was to have sailed for Europe.

Mrs. Young was waiting at the pier when the news of her husband's death reached her. At first the death was reported as a suicide, but various circumstances caused the police later to change their views. With Young in the cab when a policeman was called, was Mrs. Nan Patterson, formerly an actress whose stage name was "Nan Randolph," who is said to have been a member of the original "Floradora" sextette. She told the policeman that Young had shot himself after announcing to her that he was about to sail for Europe to be gone probably for several months. The policeman told the coroner, however, that the revolver was in the man's pocket and that he did not believe Young could have put it there after shooting himself. Young died about five minutes after the policeman first saw him. The woman was taken to a police station where she collapsed. There was a remarkable scene in the station when Young's partner, a man named Millin, called there. He said Young never carried a revolver and that he did not believe that death was due to a self-inflicted wound. Millin said that Young, who came here from England ten to fifteen years ago, a poor man, was worth more than half a million dollars.

Shortly after Millin made this statement, Mrs. Patterson was brought in to be taken to the coroner's office. Millin was leaning against the rail when he saw her. He started at her with a rush. She shrank back against a detective. Millin again reached at her, but two or three detectives grabbed him and held him until the woman was out of sight. Millin shouted at her as she left the station house. The woman was taken to Coroner Brown's private office and closeted with him. While there Millin appeared. He tried to break into the room and get at the woman again, but was prevented. He called the woman names and shouted that he would kill her if he had a weapon.

Mrs. Patterson made a statement to the coroner. She said she was a niece of the cashier of a leading New York bank. Continuing, Mrs. Patterson said she heard a muffled report directly after Young had told her he was going to leave her. She said she did not see any pistol. She said she believed he shot himself with the pistol in his coat pocket. The ball in which Mrs. Patterson was held was at first fixed at $1000, she being held as a witness, but this was later increased to $5000 by the coroner on the request of the police officials.

Mrs. Patterson met Young in California and it is understood she came East about the same time he did. At one time she was on the stage and, it is said, had a place in one of the "Florodora" companies. According to Young's friends, the trip to Europe had for its object the breaking off of his acquaintance with Mrs. Patterson.

The patrolman, who first knew of the shooting, made a statement to the coroner in which he did not say that Young had committed suicide. He said that when he looked in the cab he did not see Young at first. Then Young was seen lying in the woman's lap. The patrolman said he believed Young was then dead or nearly so. The pistol was not in his hand, but was found in his right hand sack coat pocket. The woman was in a state of collapse and hysteria. The policeman expressed the belief that Young, after the shooting, was unable to place the pistol in his pocket.

Millin, the partner of Young and a life-long friend, said that Young never carried a revolver under any circumstances. He said he did not believe that Young committed suicide. Mrs. Patterson was held in $1000 bail as a witness. The woman, in a statement to the coroner, said she met Young in California, again in Chicago and came here with him five weeks ago from the latter city. In her statement she said she heard a muffled report and did not see the revolver and believed Young shot himself while the revolver was in his pocket.

NOTED EVANGELIST WILL SPEAK SUNDAY

J. O. Buswell, of Mellin, Wis., Bible Institute, at Congregational Church In Afternoon and First Presbyterian In Evening—Dr. Long to Speak of Methodist General Conference.

J. O. Buswell, the originator and manager of one of the most successful of the Bible institutes of the West will make an address at the First Congregational church at 3:30 on Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor union and the Young Men's Christian association. The institution of which Mr. Buswell is the head is modelled after that of the Moody Bible institute of Chicago and Northfield, Mass., and other similar schools and is located at Mellin, Wis. The evangelistic work undertaken by this school has to do largely with the lumber camps of Northern Wisconsin and has been a most valuable enterprise in carrying the gospel to the men in these camps and in the small villages where no churches are located and a service of that character is a rarity.

In addition to the work of the Bible institute proper, a summer conference is held each year at Lake Galilee near Mellin and some of the leading Bible teachers of the country are heard by the campers and those living in the vicinity. During the coming summer Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, the noted evangelist and superintendent of the great Winona Lake Bible school, will be among the speakers on the program. SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Baltimore American: A colored bishop declares that all men were originally black, and that those now white have been bleached. Any effort to investigate the accusation with a view to ascertaining its truth or falsity would, perhaps, result in a whitewash.

New York Sun: How to get men to go to church! Let there be a revival of true and genuine religious faith, and the churches will not be large enough to hold them. But no such revival can be started until Christian ministers themselves turn from criticisms of Christianity to actual and fervent belief in it as the only means of salvation.

Indianapolis News: The great Presbyterian church has always given large support to higher education. Its colleges and seminaries have been among the very best of the country. It proposes now to enter upon the large project of raising a fund of $12,000,000 to assist colleges and academies in the newer and poorer parts of the country. All success to this most noble enterprise.

Kansas City Star: A self-conceited and egotistical young clergyman was "supplying" the pulpit of a country church. After the service he asked one of the deacons, a grizzled, plain spoken man, what he thought of "this morning's effort." "Waal," answered the old man slowly, "I'll tell ye: I'll tell ye a in a kind o' parable. It reminded me of Sim Peck's fust deer hunt, when he was green. He follered the deer's tracks all right, but he follered 'em all day in the wrong direction."

New York Tribune: A well known Protestant Episcopal bishop in a recent address made a plea for a more thoroughly educated ministry. But when he considers the fact that the general theological seminary in this city, which held its annual commencement a few days ago, in the course of its useful activities has graduated almost 1000 students, forty-five of whom became bishops, surely he has no sufficient reason for taking a melancholy view of the opportunities for thorough training and culture, at least in his own church.

Chicago Chronicle: Rather than be a sensational preacher Rev. Edward Everett Knapp has resigned the pastorate of the Central Baptist church of Brooklyn. Empty benches Sunday after Sunday convinced Mr. Knapp that he was not preaching the sort of sermons that could draw the people. He told his friends that he would leave the church before he would resort to sensational methods to attract an audience. His friends urged him to keep on just as he had been doing, but it is said that he has become disheartened at the growing listlessness in the church and is determined to resign.

Economy in medicine must be measured by two things—cost and effect. It cannot be measured by either alone. It is greatest in that medicine that does the most for the money—that radically and permanently cures at the least expense. That medicine is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It purifies and enriches the blood, cures pimples, eczema and all eruptions, tired, languid feelings, loss of appetite and general debility.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it reliable and giving perfect satisfaction. It takes away that tired feeling, gives energy and puts the blood in good condition." MISS EFFIE COLONNE, 1535 10th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The interstate commerce commission has decided to make a special investigation into the private car industry throughout the country, with a view to ascertaining whether the railways cannot be compelled to furnish all equipment demanded by shippers.

Thomas H. Wilson, vice president of the Cleveland First National bank, announced that a shortage of $7500 had been discovered in the accounts of an employe and the same had been covered up by fraudulent entries in the bank's books. "The man who kept the books," said Mr. Wilson, "is absent from the city and we do not know his present whereabouts."

The village of Hanging Rock, Ohio, is exceptionally quiet and no further trouble is anticipated. Negotiations between the furnace men and the representatives of the Hanging Rock iron company for a settlement of the strike continued, but it is believed no settlement will be reached until after the troops have departed.

Judge Caswell, in the district court refused to grant a temporary injunction in the case of Capt. C. H. Shaw, vs. the Marshalltown, Ia., city council, asking that that body be restrained from paying the salary of L. R. Silverby, city clerk; also that Derby be restrained from acting as clerk. This is the first test of the new Iowa law compelling the appointment of soldiers of the civil war to public offices.

A strike occurred at Bozeman, Mont., among the graduates of the state agricultural college when the exercises were about to begin. Of ten graduates nine refused to take their diplomas, Herbert Reese being the only one to graduate. The trouble arose over the refusal of the faculty to grant diplomas to one of the class, Jerome Locke.

HELPING THE COOK.

Bishop David H. Greer, of New York, recently took the American girl to task for frivolity.

A young woman, the other day, remonstrated with Bishop Greer about this matter.

"I, for instance, am not frivolous," she said. "On the contrary, I am very fond of cooking. I often go into the kitchen and help our cook."

"But perhaps your help," said Bishop Greer, with a smile, "is like that of a young girl I used to know in Wheeling.

"She went into her mother's kitchen one day and told the cook she had come to help her.

"But the cook frowned.

"'No, no,' she said. 'I have too much to do today.'"

ANYTHING BUT TURNER ART.

At a dinner to Colonel George Harvey, in London, Theodore Watts-Dunton said:

"It isn't generally known that Turner, the painter, and Dr. Augustus Pritchard once lived together for a year in Cheyne Row.

"The painter and the physician had a ne graden and they took a great deal of pride in their flowers. But the garden gate did not work well, and one day Turner, because it wouldn't open, pettishly gove orders that it be nailed up.

"It was thought that this odd act would enrage Augustus Pritchard, but, on being told of it, all he said was:

"'Oh, well, I don't care what Turner does to the gate, so long as he doesn't paint it.'"

Accurate Treatment Of Men's Diseases

I guess at nothing. My understanding of men's diseases is so sufficient that I have no need to resort to guess work. To men's diseases alone I have devoted my entire attention for many years. I have closely studied them in every possible phase and complication. I believe there is no case that I cannot accurately diagnose. My diagnosis is the foundation of my treatment. It determines the course to pursue. As the cure progresses I carefully note developments and vary the remedies accordingly. I employ original and distinctive methods of treatment, but they are not set methods. They are pliable to meet the conditions in individual cases, and their use calls for the most delicate prescribing. That they are correct, scientific and rational methods is conclusively proven by the cures they produce.

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

"WEAKNESS"

That disorder commonly known as "weakness," has for years and generations baffled the efforts of physicians, yet to this very day a majority of doctors are attempting to overcome it by methods that have been in constant use and that have constantly failed for half a century. They dose the system with powerful stimulants and tonics calculated to restore nervous forces or strength that is not and never has been lacking, with a result that the functions are temporarily excited to the positive detriment of the patient. Weakness, we will call it such for convenience just now, is only a symptom resulting from a chronically swollen and inflamed prostate gland, and is curable by local treatment only. Either early dissipation or some improperly treated contracted disease is responsible for the inflammation in most instances, though accidental injury, strain, etc., may produce the same result. I have permanently cured thousands of cases of prematureness, loss of power, which demonstrates the absolute accuracy of my understanding and treatment of the disorder. In years I have not met with a single failure, and I have entire confidence in my ability to cure all cases that come to me for treatment other than that which I have perfected can completely and permanently restore strength and vigor.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS

To but partially cure a contracted disease is almost as dangerous as to allow it to go untreated. Unless every particle of infection and inflammation is removed, the probability exists that the disease will gradually work its way into the general system. All greater is the danger of the prostate gland becoming chronically inflammed, which always brings partial or complete loss of power. Perhaps 25 per cent of the cases of so-called "weakness" are a direct result of some improperly treated disease. During the past five years I have treated over 6500 cases of contracted disorders and have effected an absolutely thorough and safe cure in each instance. There have been no relapses or undesirable developments whatever and my patients have been cured in less time than other and less thorough forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results.

VARICOCELE

Many men afflicted with varicocele are endangering their general health, their manly power and even life itself by allowing the disorder to remain uncured. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibres that have a part in controlling local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins being deprived of nervous communication and control, become inactive, weaken and relax. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within, the circulation in the parts become sluggish, and frequently stagnant pools form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues. The possibility exists that clots may form in these stagnant pools and then pass out into the general circulation. Should one find lodgment in the valve of the heart the result might be instant death, or should it be carried to the brain, general paralysis will follow.

I guarantee to cure varicocele in one week by a method that involves no cutting or ligature, or caustic. No other physician employs a like method, and so thorough is my work that there need not be the slightest fear of a relapse into the old condition. Those who have been long afflicted with varicocele will never realize the injury it has caused until they feel the vim, energy and buoyancy of spirts that a complete cure will bring.

STRICTURE

My treatment for stricture removes the necessity for surgical operations, even in severe cases of long standing. I do no cutting or dilating. No other physician employs my methous of overcoming this disorder, so the service I offer you is original and distinctive. Do not give up hope because others have failed. I will cure you and the cure will be a prompt and painless one. My treatment dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, subdues all inflammation, relieves all irritation or congestion that may exist in the kidneys or bladder, reduces enlargement of the prostate gland and restores to health and tone all organs affected by the disease.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

I permanently cure this most hideous of all blood diseases. I employ harmless, blood cleansing remedies that positively drive the very last taint of virus from the system, and every symptom vanishes to appear no more.

We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men?

Has Marvelous Powers in the Cure of Catarrhal Ailments of Women So Tens of Thousands Proclaim.

MRS. CHAS. STEINECKE
Stoughton, Wis.

A Pretty Society Matron Relates Her Experience with Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Chas. Steinecke, Stoughton, Wis., writes: "My experience with Peruna has been most pleasing. By carelessly leaving a heated ballroom I got thoroughly chilled and caught a heavy cold which settled on my lungs. I wore a protector, and took many remedies for cold without success. With my other troubles I had catarrh of the head. Peruna was recommended to me, and I bought a bottle and soon began to improve, and kept on taking it and it cured me from all my troubles. I am pleased to testify to its merits."—Mrs. Chas. Steinecke.

Miss Josie Schaetzel, R. R. No. 1, Appleton, Wis., writes: "I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs in very short order, and it was not long until it developed into a serious case of catarrh. Every morning I would raise a lot of phlegm, which was very disagreeable. My digestion was poor and my lungs sore. After a few doses of Peruna, I began to mend, and felt that if I kept on taking it, it would not be long until I would be well. I was right, for in four weeks I was well again. I think Peruna is a grand medicine, and wish to add my testimony to the many others you have."—Miss Josie Schaetzel.

Miss Ella M. Miller, one of Washington's society girls, writes from 140 "F" St., N. E., Washington, D. C. as follows: "With pleasure I recommend your medicine for catarrh of the head. Having taken several bottles, I find myself entirely cured. I cannot praise Peruna too highly." —Ella M. Miller.

Miss Katheryn Allan, 3748 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I am pleased to add my endorsement to the many you must have for your valuable remedy, for most every one whom I speak to has either taken Peruna or is satisfied that it is a splendid medicine. I took it for two months to help regain my strength after a serious illness and it certainly was a great aid. It was both food and medicine to me and in a short time I was out of bed and gained in strength and flesh daily. It certainly proved itself a friend and helper in my case, and I believe that it will do the same for all in need of a tonic."—Miss Katheryn Allan.

A Great Manufactory.

The plant of The Peruna Drug Manufacturing Company is the largest proprietary medicine manufactory in the world. Its buildings are of the most modern and expensive kind, including within them pharmaceutical apparatus equal to any establishment of the kind in the world. Much of the chemical paraphernalia has been made expressly for the manufacture of Peruna and represents many of the latest inventions.

The plant covers a large area in the thriving city of Columbus, and many of the buildings in the point of architecture and material are the finest structures in the state of Ohio. No expense or pains have been spared to make Peruna one of the most scientific and pharmaceutical products the world has ever known.

The rapid growth of The Peruna Drug Manufacturing Company is as phenomenal in the business world as the universal popularity of their famous remedy, Peruna.

A visit to its busy laboratories, bottling and shipping rooms constitutes one of the sights of the city. Hundreds of visitors are conducted through the establishment every month, where everything concerning the manufacture of Peruna that can be comprehended by the non-professional visitor is fully explained.

Although Peruna is a proprietary medicine, the details of its compounding are no secret, and nothing gives Dr. Hartman greater pleasure than to show the many friends of Peruna all of the essential processes by which Peruna is made.

A Doctor's Prescription.

Before Peruna was manufactured as a proprietary medicine, it had been prescribed by Dr. Hartman for many years. The Doctor used to practice medicine and was probably one of the largest practitioners in the state where he belonged. Every day he found himself writing his favorite prescription for catarrh and all catarrhal ailments. With very little change this prescription was used year after year. So frequently did he have occasion to write the formula for Peruna that he could do it in the dark with his eyes shut.

People would take the prescription to the drug store, where they would procure the medicine. Unfortunately, one druggist would put up the prescription a little differently than another druggist. The color would not be the same, or possibly the taste would be a little different. One druggist would fix Peruna so that there would be a little sediment in it, while another would compound it in a way to maintain it perfectly clear.

For years Dr. Hartman used Peruna in his private practice as a regular prescription, and had no thought of manufacturing and advertising it as a proprietary medicine.

Forty Thousand Patients.

Dr. Hartman estimates that he must have prescribed Peruna for over forty thousand patients before it was advertised as a proprietary medicine. In fact, circumstances forced Dr. Hartman to manufacture the remedy himself in order to insure a standard purity and a uniform appearance.

Peruna needed no advertising in the section where the Doctor practiced medicine. Already thousands of people knew of its good qualities. This is exactly what has happened in every other locality where Peruna has been used.

It is not like so many other remedies that pass away as soon as the first few bottles are used. The longer Peruna is used in any community, the more popular it becomes.

Pe-ru-na Actually Cures.

The reason why Peruna has become a standard catarrh remedy the world over is simply because it cures catarrh. There is no other possible explanation of it. It is simply idle talk for any one to pretend that advertising can create a popularity for a medicine equal to that of Peruna.

If Peruna did not cure catarrh, people would soon find it out. Perhaps a well-worded advertisement might sell a bottle of Peruna, even though Peruna were no good. But, after a person has bought one bottle of a useless medicine, no advertisement can induce him to buy the second bottle. If, on the other hand, he finds the medicine to be what it is recommended, then he requires no further argument or inducement.

This exactly explains why Peruna has become so popular. It cures catarrh. This is an amply sufficient reason why it should become popular. Catarrh is almost universal. Catarrh is difficult to cure. The doctors do not care to treat cases of catarrh at all. It therefore follows that when a remedy is devised that can be used by any one in the home at a moderate cost, such a remedy should inevitably become popular.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

There are a great many catarrh cures in the world. The most of them are local applications. Few of them are to be used internally. Unfortunately, a large number of these catarrh remedies, especially the ones prescribed by the doctors, contain narcotics of some sort. Cocaine, opium, whisky, and other narcotics are used. These remedies give temporary relief. The patient thinks he is better right away. In a few weeks, however, he discovers his mistake. Not only is his catarrh no better, but he has acquired the habit of using some narcotic. This happens in a multitude of cases. Such remedies cannot succeed. People find them out very quickly.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

Popular for Twenty-five Years.

Peruna has been before the public as a catarrh cure for about twenty-five years. Previous to that time it was the private prescription of Dr. Hartman. For twenty-five years Peruna has stood the test of every opposition.

Made in large quantities to supply the immense demand for it, it requires the utmost vigilance to maintain the purity and excellence of every single bottle. Sent as it is to the cold, wintry climate of the North, or the hot, torrid climate of the South, Peruna must be so prepared that neither cold nor heat can change its composition or alter its appearance. North, South, East and West, car loads of Peruna are being rapidly conveyed to their destination by hundreds of railroads.

Not a single bottle of this vast amount contains a speck of impurity or the slightest difference in composition. The contents of every bottle are exactly alike. All these difficulties have been overcome and Peruna is furnished to over two million homes, each bottle is spotless purity and pharmaceutical integrity.

No medicine that the world has ever produced has received the unqualified endorsement of so many prominent people as Peruna. All classes praise Peruna. People of national prominence, who are busy with professional and official affairs, do not usually take time to write letters of such commendation. But Peruna arouses such enthusiastic approval as to break down all precedents in this particular.

It is no wonder when one stops to think of it. Catarrh is an insidious disease. While it does not often make one actually sick abed, it is a very annoying ailment. It hangs on, year after year. It yields neither winter nor summer. It becomes a drag and a drain from the vitality, a disfigurement as well as an annoyance. To be rid of such a disease after repeated failures to cure it, is sure to awaken feelings of unrestrained gratitude. No ordinary inducement would have secured the consent of senators, governors, congressmen, consuls, bishops, prominent physicians and clergymen of all creeds. Nothing but cure could avail to procure such testimonials.

OUT IN THE STORM

Young People Cause Their Friends Much Serious Alarm.

Go Up St Louis River In Thickest of the Gale.

A party of young women left Duluth at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, during the worst part of the northeast storm then prevailing, for a trip up the St. Louis river, in George Spencer's launch. They were due to return in the evening. Nothing was heard of them, either then or during last night, and their friends were greatly alarmed fearing that they had met with some serious accident.

It was learned this morning that the party was compelled to spend the night on the river, somewhere in the vicinity of New Duluth. The boat, on the return trip, got caught in a heavy fog, and as darkness was fast approaching, the engineer of the little craft, Garfield Wood, felt that the safest way out of the scrape would be to anchor in the stream over night. This was accordingly done, and nothing was heard of the party in Duluth until late this morning, when a telephone message was received from New Duluth, setting forth the bare facts of the case. As soon as daylight and weather conditions permitted the launch ran to New Duluth, later starting on the return trip down the river.

The party was chaperoned by Mrs. H. R. Fellows, and with her were Misses Violet and Gertrude Robinson, of 427 West Third street; Miss Hazel Hopkins, a sister of Mrs. R. D. Haven; Miss Burbank, of 102 Fifty-eighth avenue east, and Miss Fellows. It was the original intention of the young people to picnic on Spirit Island, but it is supposed that the severity of the storm prevented this, and that they proceeded up the river more in the spirit of adventure than anything else.

When they failed to put in an appearance at their homes at the proper time, and when, during the night no word of their whereabouts was received, fears were entertained for their safety. It was feared that they had met with some accident, and this morning steps were being taken to institute a systematic search for them when the message from New Duluth was received. The life saving crew started out and got as far as West Duluth when the boat was heard from.

Yesterday's storm was the worst so far this season, and comment generally casts severe reflections on the common sense of people who would start out, and parents who allow their daughters to start out, on a pleasure trip up the bay under the weather conditions then prevailing and that at so late an hour in the afternoon. Mr. Spencer had no idea that the members of the party would persist in carrying out their plan of going up the river, or he would have forbidden them the use of his boat. He says:

"Considerable comment having been made because I allowed my launch to take out a party of ladies in such a storm as was raging yesterday afternoon, I wish to say that it was not my party neither did I know that the boat was going out, else I should have refused to let her go in such rough weather. I had been asked several days previous for the use of my launch for a picnic party, Friday afternoon, and I had given permission for the boat to go, but never dreamed that any sane people would think of venturing out with a small boat in such a storm and for pleasure. I cannot understand why parents allow their daughters to go out in such weather and take unnecessary risks. No harm came to the party, but that doesn't alter the fact that it was a foolhardy performance."

Mr. Spencer had no fear for the safety of the party as long as it remained in his yacht, which is a staunch and seaworthy little craft, easily capable of withstanding the effects of any waves which may be raised on the bay. No matter how good the boat, or capable the engineer having it in charge, there are conditions arising, as was the case last night, where any craft is better anchored than plowing through the fog and darkness.

A FIELD FOR AN INVENTION

To Remove the Pine Stumps From Cut-Over Lands.

To the Editor of The Herald:

An item in yesterday's Herald about a log loading machine, which has recently been patented, and is to be put on the market by the National Iron works, of this city, suggests to the writer the field that is open now for an invention along similar lines, and in which there is not only no competition whatever, but in which there is a much larger field than there is in the logging business for machinery.

I refer to the removal of pine stumps from cut-over lands.

I don't know what the statistics are or would be as to comparative acreage of cut-over and timbered lands in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, but, of course, there is no question that the former is greatly in excess of the latter.

There is in the three states named and in Minnesota particularly, a large proportion of cut-over lands, that so far as soil, water and climate are concerned are as well adapted for agriculture as any land in the United States, and the single drawback that exists to the rapid settlement and cultivation of these lands is the pine stumps.

The fact in the face of this one discouraging condition, a very large amount of these lands in the three states mentioned, hundreds of thousands of acres, have been bought up by practical farmers from Iowa, Illinois and other parts of the older settled country, and that most of these purchasers have already begun clearing and cultivating the land, is proof enough that other conditions must be first class for farming.

At the present time the methods of removing the pine stumps are so slow and costly that the general way of clearing land is to cut brush, pick up what loose stuff there is and leave the stumps.

Dynamite is the principal agent used now in getting these stumps out of the ground.

There are a number of horsepower stump pullers on the market, but these can be only used to advantage in connection with dynamite, as some of the stumps are too large for any stump puller yet built.

Even after the stumps are blown or pulled out, the piling of them up in shape to burn is almost if not quite as much a problem as getting them out of the ground.

Experience, however, has thoroughly demonstrated that this method is expensive, and too much so for the average farmer to use to any extent.

It would be, in my opinion, a perfectly feasible and practicable matter to pull and pile these pine stumps by machinery operated by steam power.

It could be a machine built something after the pattern of a steam hoist with two speeds, a slow one to get the stumps loosened and a faster speed to draw them away and pile them up to burn.

The power required would, of course, depend in a measure upon the speed at which the machine was operated, but I think 150 horsepower would be sufficient.

The machine would, of course, have to be portable so as to be moved readily, and could probably be mounted on skids and pulled along by its own power from one part of the field to another, though if this were not practical, horses could be easily used to shift it.

It ought to pull the stumps in about an acre at a stand, and depending upon the number of stumps to the acre, would probably clear up two to five acres per day.

Would could probably be used to the best advantage as fuel as it could be procured right on the ground at small cost.

Here, therefore, is an opportunity for mechanics, inventors and others to exercise their inventive faculties to good advantage in a field that is practically, so far as I know, untouched.

IS AMERICA BEHIND EUROPE?

Our Municipal Water Supply Said to be Impure.

Prominent scientists, physicians and business men are becoming frightened at the alleged contaminated state of the municipal water supply thoughout the United States. Many European cities filter their water, while in this country the water is almost universally delivered unfiltered. City dwellers are in daily peril from the impurities present in drinking water.

Pending the adoption of a practical system of municipal filtration, it would be advisable for all persons who daily drink contaminated water to take at frequent intervals a Beecham's Pill.

This harmless vegetable laxative will remove all impurities from the system as fast as taken in. It quickly relieves and permanently cures all Billous and Nervous Disorders, Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Chills, Flushes of Heat, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Blotches on the Skin, Frightful Dreams and all Nervous Sensations.

Beecham's Pills free delicate people from the evils of depressed vitality. They dispel the blues, give buoyant spirits and the capacity to enjoy life to the full.

This marvelous medicine is worthy of its enormous popularity. It is indeed the King of Pills.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Muster Completes Quota of South Dakota Troops.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—The squadron of cavalry for the state is now filled by the mustering in at Sisseton of Troop D. This not only completes the cavalry squadron, but also completes the quota of troops to which the state is entitled under the law.

The commencement exercises of the high school were completed last night by the presentation of diplomas, and a commencement address by Rev. Thomas Nicholson, president of the Dakota university of Mitchell. The class consists of Ina Sutley, Paulina Sutherland, May Buch, Louise Gleckler, Okie Morford, Christenia Madsen, Ruth Mead, Emma Lewis, Walter Rose and Robert Gleckler.

Rapid City—The State School of Mines has had an unusually prosperous year. The attendance has been large and represents students from nearly every state in the Union. In the mining engineering department there were four graduates: U. S. Arentz, A E. Hall, E. W. West and G. E. Wolcott. There were three in the preparatory department: Alice Crockett, Juliet Mosier and Lillian Nyswanger. An address was delivered by Dr. Thomas Green on the topic, "Left-Handed Men." Work will soon begin on the the annex to the center building.

Sioux Falls—Preparations are being made for a state golf tournament which will be held in Sioux Falls during July, the exact date not yet having been decided upon. The golf clubs at Brookings, Pierre, Aberdeen, Huron and Madison have thus far promised to send representatives to participate in the various contests. Invitations have also been extended to a number of prominent golf experts of Northwestern Iowa asking them to be present. The tournament will be held on the links of the Minnehaha Country club of this city.

Huron—The attendance at the state Sunday school convention has been greatly increased by the arrival of delegates and visitors from the northern part of the state. The afternoon and evening programs were of marked interest, special features being an address by Mrs. Leach, of Sioux Falls, followed by Mrs. Bryner, of Peoria, Ill., and Miss Hughes, of Ipswich, all bearing upon the work in the primary department of Sunday schools and the manner and methods of religious instruction. Discussion followed and some practical suggestions presented. Rev. A. S. Hock, of Gettysburg, talked of "My Partner, the Boy," and Mr. Leach gave an outline of the financial condition throughout the field, while Rev. P. L. Curtiss, of Faulkton, stated the needs for the coming year, after which pledges aggregating $500 were made.

Mr. Curtis, of Castlewood and Mrs. Bryner related interesting accounts of their trip to Jerusalem, where they attended the world's Sunday school convention. The last address of the evening, and one of the finest and best of the session, was that by Dr. James Chalmers, president of the South Dakota Agricultural college at Brookings. His subject was "The Pedagogical Value of the Bible."

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Henry Reider, a single man, formerly of Sauk Center, was found dead at his place, ten miles east of Kenmare. His body was terribly bruised, and from the fact that his horse came home Wednesday night riderless it is supposed he was thrown and dragged some distance.

Neche—Attorney C. W. Hookway, of Granville, and Miss Mayme Liddquist, of Minneapolis, were married here at high noon Thursday.

RED LAKE RAILROAD

May Be Extended to Tenstrike This Year.

Bemidji, Minn., June 4.—The announcement is made that final arrangements have been concluded for the extension of the Red Lake railroad from Whitefish to Tenstrike, that camps will be established soon and that the connection will be made before the first of the coming December.

The Red Lake railroad is a logging road constructed under unusual difficulties several years ago by the Red Lake Transportation company, in which the Messrs. Halvorson & Richards, extensive railroad contractors, were largely interested. Its construction was to meet the demands of the logging industry in the Red Lake country. The rails and all the equipment of the road were hauled in from Walker before the Minnesota & International road reached Bemidji. Sixteen miles of the road have been built and operated successfully for several years. One end of the road is at Red Lake landing and the other at Whitefish, only a short distance from Tenstrike, on the Minnesota & International. Several logging trains are in service and the road was operated steadily during the logging season until the failure of the Red Lake Transportation company last winter necessitated a suspension of operations. It ultimate connection with the Minnesota & International has always been conceded.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Dunn Men Pleased Over Action of County Committee, Believing It Will Hurt Collins' Campaign.

Where Does Senator Pugh Stand on the Governorship?—Vivian Reported To Have Quit Race For County Treasurer—Greatest Fight Ever Waged In Hennepin County.

Headquarters have been opened at 208 Manhattan building by the workers for Robert C. Dunn, for governor, and the rooms are ample, convenient and located where anyone who wishes to go to headquarters can easily do so. William C. Sargent has not returned and William Getty is holding the fort, as he modestly expresses it . "for the want of a better man." But the Dunn people are not worrying for the lack of able hands to keep their sails in the wind, and appear to be particularly pleased over the action of the Republican county committee a week ago. Ordinarily it is assumed, they say, that even political committees representing a party should consider the party before the faction, which was not done in the case of the county committee meeting. Absolute fairness to the party is necessary in committees, they say, and any action in contradiction of this the claim will merely redound to the injury of the people who perform it.

The Collins people do not care to have the point dwelt on as one of their plans and purposes, and insist that they carried the meeting by a fair majority. Some of them ask "Why were not all the members of the committee who were opposed to the action there?" This practically means the Dunn men.

The explanation seems to be that they were not all notified, but whether this was a sin of omission or commission fails to appear.

At least one member of the committee was not notified of the meeting of that body. He is a well known man on the range and a Dunn man in the bargain and says that it appears very much to him as if the failure to notify him was a set up job. He says that he heard that proxies of all the absent members were held in the meeting, which he says cannot be so, as his was not held, unless it was one which he sent eight months ago or so for a meeting which he had been summoned to at that time. He did not desire his name published in connection with the affair as he had not had a chance to see Secretary A. P. Cook to see whether that gentleman had a defense to make in the matter as Mr. Cook is the one delegated to send out notices of the meeting.

• • •

The Dunn people are particularly jubilant over their geographical combination, which they think is an item of strength which is practically insurmountable. The Collins followers have been insisting that with the nomination of Judge Lewis, taken as a foregone conclusion by them, apparently, St. Louis county cannot well afford to send a delegation pledged to Joseph G. Miller of Two Harbors for railroad and warehouse commissioner, whom they estimate as a local candidate, even though he is from a county adjoining St. Louis.

Dunn's friends assert, however, that they are standing pat and can get all these gentlemen nominated, especially with Dunn and Judge Lewis as planned to balance one another. Owing to the situation in the supreme judgeship field they are very certain that St. Louis county will be for Dunn, if only to assure the safety of Judge Lewis. They say it is a moral certainty that, from a geographical and political standpoint that the reasonable thing for the other counties in the Eighth congressional district to do in case St. Louis did not come out strong for Dunn, would be to swing the axe at Judge Lewis. But the prospect of that contingency is so remote, they claim that they are not worried in the least.

• • •

It would be easy for the rest of the district to get another nominee to pin their faith to for the judgeship if they wanted to, owing to the number of outside candidates in the field. These judges are for renomination: W. B. Douglas, C. L. Brown, John A. Lovely and C. L. Lewis. The others now on the bench are holdovers. But for each one of these four who is a candidate for renomination and re-election there is an outsider, a man not now on the bench, who would be very willing to listen to the cases which the people might present to the supreme court and decide such with verdicts in accordance with the law and the evidence.

All these four are new district judges. They are Judges C. B. Elliott and David Simpson, of Minneapolis, which is in the Fifth congressional district; Edwin A. Jaggard, of St. Paul, of the Fourth congressional district, and Judge D. B. Searle, of St. Cloud, the Sixth congressional district. These give a pretty good geographical distribution to the outside representatives.

The fact that some of the four outsiders have very good records in the district duties makes them excellent material for the bench, it is claimed, and while the loyal ones are full of confidence in Judge Lewis' prospects, the political kaleidoscope is often full of surprising changes, and lots of people are chary about giving it a turn sometimes.

• • •

Dunn people claim that the accession of the legal fraternity to their ranks recently, on account of this peculiar state of affairs, is getting stronger right along. When Judge Collins was in this district it always stood as a congressional unit for its friends, it is claimed, and Judge Collins was one of them. Since the redistricting, and the lines being placed to put Judge Collins out of the district, it puts a different aspect on the matter. The Dunn people are generous, at least to the extent that they say all the gubernatorial timber is good, and this after all the exposures on both sides recently about campaign money and a few other little items.

Judge Collins was expected here some time since, but has failed to appear, and "Bob" Dun was hoped for to lend his presence to the local campaign by a visit to Duluth. But Judge Collins has not been here, and his local workers do not give any definite information as to his coming, and admit that a visit is doubtful.

• • •

Since the lively turn affairs took some time since, the battle ground has been confined to Hennepin county, where each candidate is hoping to secure all the 100 delegates which will represent the party of that county in the state convention. As Hennepin is regarded as the pivotal county, each candidate is sticking conscientiously there, and endeavoring to line up everything in sight for his side. So it is extremely doubtful whether either candidate will visit Duluth in the campaign, much less make a speech here.

Nothing of interest developed in the legislative situation the past week, so far as could be learned. No new candidates have made themselves known, and this branch of local politics seems to remain in statue quo, as the legislators would term it.

In this connection it is said that Senator Pugh is still diffident about taking sides in the gubernatorial situation, as he believes it better to reserve his ammunition for the benefit of the party as a unit, rather than take sides with any faction.

"If a man is to be judged by the company he keeps, you can pretty nearly be safe in saying that Senator Pugh has not committed himself in the governorship fight," said one of his admirers yesterday.

"When Lieutenant Governor Ray Jones was here the senator paid him a friendly visit. Mr. Jones is without opposition, and is not committed to any of the prospective governors. I saw the senator the other day in company with A. P. Cook, who is a Collins man. He was in to see Senator George R. Laybourn during the past week, too, and the last named is a Dunn follower. So you see that any attempt to clinch the senator with any particular faction is a pretty hard matter, at least by appearances, which, in themselves, are deceitful."

It is supposed that the usual efforts will be made in the next legislature to amend the primary election law. A number of attempts in this direction were throttled at the last session "it having been previously agreed on by the legislators that nothing should be permitted in the way of alterations at that session.

• • •

William Henry Eustis, ex-mayor of Minneapolis, is said to have joined Frank M. Eddy as an outside candidate in the gubernatorial contest. Mr. Eustis was rather late in coming out and it is believed that Mr. Eddy had the third candidate strength pretty well enlisted, but the ex-mayor has a lot of friends, and if he really means business probably can make it interesting for Eddy in some sections, although the splitting of the surplus strength would leave the two leading candidates, Dunn and Collins, with much less to contend with in the line of placating any extra candidate whose strength they might wish to aid to their own. While it is purely a matter of speculation about the strength of the convention, it is generally taken that Dunn and Collins will pretty evenly divide the convention at the start, and it was believed that Eddy would comand a sufficient show of strength to reward him handsomely if either of the others should need it. But if Eustis hangs on there will be less for Eddy in such an emergency.

• • •

Socialism has been growing in favor the last two years in Two Harbors and the result is that Lake county will have a full county ticket of Socialist candidate in the field this fall, the first time in the poitical history of that neighborhood. Socialism, which used to be looked on by the old time partisans as a rabid profession of principles somewhat akin to those of anarchists, has demonstrated itself to be decidedly different, and has enlisted considerable strength in the West of late years.

• • •

With the country editors going to St. Louis to visit the Louisiana Purchase exposition for the coming week, the state political arena is left without many of the fighters that usually spread the ink for and against the various ambitious political ones. No doubt the editors' pleasure in the week's trip wil refresh their vigor in such a manner as to leave them with new inspiration to be exerted when they get back to their desks ten days hence.

• • •

Ira B. Mills, of Moorhead, is making a very lively canvass throughout the state for re-election to the state railroad and warehouse commission. Judge Mills has qualifications which give his friends a very canguine feeling about his prospects, as his experience on the commission is a point in his favor, he is an attorney by profession and as such is valuable to any public body, and his experience on the district bench has fitted him aditionally for public duties.

• • •

It is now said that George H. Vivian, the range candidate for county treasurer, who was expected to draw considerable strength, has decided to quit the race. This, coupled with the fact that Roland D. Haven is not in the race and is aparently indifferent to any county office, gives a chance for a closer and more interesting contest between the remaining candidates.

• • •

P. E. Dowling, the Eveleth editor, who was in the last legislature, was in the city a day or two ago on his way home from California. It is said that he is not paying a great deal of attention to the legislative situaton, as he has too much other business on hand to give time to a fight for the honor in case John Saari, of Sparta, should continue for the place. Mr. Saari has a peculiar double element of strength. The foreign contingent in his district is great and as he is foreign born, he would draw well on that account with his own countrymen, while he is Americanized to an extent that has made him many friends among the natives.

HENNEPIN COUNTY

Is the Scene of a Very Hot Fight.

St. Paul, June 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hennepin county is the scene of one of the hottest gubernatorial fights ever waged in the history of Minnesota, and present indications are that there will be no let up until June 30, when the Republican state convention is held in the Metropolitan opera house in St. Paul.

Not a day passes that both Dunn and Collins do not receive urgent calls to go out in the country and meet the farmers. The candidates are turning down all these invitations and are brooding over Hennepin as jealously as a hen broods over a nest. Each candidate has a complete organization in every precinct in the city; ward meetings are held with great regularity and clubs are formed at the university and in all sections of the city where club work can be put into effective operation.

The reasons for the severity of the fight in Hennepin are because there are good opportunities for both candidates, because the stake is large, 113 delegates in the convention at one sweep, and most of all, because the county, being one of the first that will be called at the convention, will be of incalculable value to either candidate by inspiring confidence and helping along the bandwagon movement.

The Dunn men, of course, say they have enough delegates to win out without Hennepin. This may be true, but the fact remains that Mr. Dunn is making a masterly effort to carry the county and his managers are neglecting other portions of the state in an attempt to carry Hennepin.

• • •

One of the highest executive officers in Minnesota, who favors the nomination of Judge Collins, said yesterday regarding Mr. Dunn's chances in the convention:

"I concede that there are powerful forces back of Mr. Dunn and that he is making a masterly fight for the nomination, but there are thirty days before the convention and he has a good many hard places to go through before he reaches the coveted prize. In my opinion Mr. Dunn's chances to receive the nomination depend on whether he has enough delegates to win on the first ballot. This is why he is making such a fight to get Hennepin. That county is one of the first in the list, and should it go to Judge Collins you can imagine how the Collins men will be encouraged.

"I confidently believe that unless Mr. Dunn is nominated on the first ballot or by acclamation, he will lose. There are going to be hundreds of uninstructed delegations; many of these people will not be thoroughly decided whom they are going to vote for on their arrival at the convention. They will watch the proceedings and if they see that Dunn has not enough delegates to win they will fall in line for Judge Collins or a third man."

Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, who has been talked of for the Republican nomination for congressman from the Ninth congressional district against Congressman Halvor Steenerson, called at the Dunn headquarters yesterday. Senator Stephens believes that Dunn sentiment prevails in Polk county, and that the Princeton candidate will win out. J. L. Putnam, editor of the Granite Falls Tribune, was also a caller at the Dunn headquarters. Mr. Putnam is an out-and-out supporter of Mr. Dunn and is working hard to carry Yellow Medicine county for the Princeton candidate.

R. C. Dunn and his former deputy, State Auditor S. G. Iverson, had a strenuous discussion in the office of the present state auditor at the capitol a few days ago. None of the employes in the office will disclose what took place but they do not hesitate to intimate that there was something doing.

Mr. Dunn and Mr. Iverson are not the best of friends. The Princeton candidate has not forgotten that his chief deputy, whom, he says, he helped to become state auditor, is silently working for Collins, and it is said that Dunn reminded Mr. Iverson of the latter's "ingratitude" during the conversation. Mr. Dunn's ire has been worked up still more by the fact that Mr. Iverson in the last few days has suspended two clerks appointed under Mr. Dunn's administration and who favor the nomination of the Princeton candidate.

Rogers Bros. are making their first visit to Duluth since their advent upon the stage as stars, and appeared at the Lyceum last evening before a large audience in "Rogers Bros. in London." The production is a very large one, and has been dressed and staged by Klaw & Erlanger with all of that prodigality for which they have become noted. There is with them no sparing of expense to produce desired effects, and this production is a fair example of the policy which they pursue.

Rogers Bros. are among the foremost German comedians of the stage. They may have a few equals, but no superiors, and their style is so peculiarly their own that thy are in a class by themselves. The man who does not find all the laughter in his nature bubbling to the surface as these inimitable comedians are before him is of a melancholy turn indeed. Their fun-making powers cover a wide range—dialogue, singing and dancing, in fact every movement is a laugh.

Supporting them is a company of good ability. Outside of possibly Joe Coyne, who does a very clever English part, of a somewhat exaggerated, there are no members of the cast who shine out with any escpial brilliancy, but all are capable and the performance as a whole goes with much life and energy. Lillian Coleman, Carrie Reynolds, Neva Aymar, and Lillian Hudson carries the leading female parts. Miss Coleman is a pleasing singer and Miss Aymar is a particularly graceful and clever dancer. George Austin Moore is the male singer and has a voice of muhc sweetness and strength. Melville Ellis is a cleer pianist, giving pleasing solos.

The costuming is of a very high order, the harmon of colorying and elegance of gowns being very striking. The "American Beauty" is one of the prettiest things offered in musical comedy.

A matinee was given this afternoon and tonight the performance will again be seen.

"RIP VAN WINKLE."

"Rip Van Winkle" was presented by the Kennedy Stock company at the Metropolitan last evening and the audience was well pleased with the production. John Kennedy appeared in the character of old Rip and played it well. The parts were all well taken. Tonight the play will be given again.

Counterfeits.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. The Thibetans have refused to forward to Lassa the letter from Col. Younghusband, the political agent with the expedition, fixing the latest date on which the British are prepared to meet and negotiate with the amban and Thibetan deelgates at Gyang-Tse before advancing on Lassa (L'hassa?).

A PRINCE TO VISIT DULUTH

Recent Attache to German Embassy at Washington Coming.

Washington, June 4.—The Twin Cities and Duluth will shortly have a visit from a real prince from Germany. His name is Prince Herman Hatzfeldt, who recently came to Washington as an attache of the German embassy. The prince intends to take a tour of the Northwest, and the above cities are included in his itinerary.

Prince Herman is the eldest son and heir of the Duke of Trachenberg. His father is grand cup-bearer to the crown of Prussia, while his mother, the Countess Beockendorff, was for many years the grand mistress of the household to the late Empress Frederick.

Should the prince marry an American girl she would at once become the princess of Hatzfeldt, and on his father's death, duchess of Trachenberg.

The prince has American affiliations, his cousins being children of the Count Paul Hatzfeldt, who died as German ambassador in London, and who married Miss Helen Moulton, of Albany, N. Y.

Her mother was Miss Metz, daughter of the most famous of New York's dancing masters in the early part of the nineteenth century.

The house of Hatzfeldt is very ancient. It belongs to what is known as the Hessian "Uradel." Prince Herman's ancestors were created counts of the Holy Roman Empire in the early part of the the seventeenth century, and were elevated to the dignity of prince about 125 years ago.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

All Now Believe That Mayor Hudson Is Dead.

Negaunee—The death by drowning has been the fate of J. H. Hudson, Negaunee's missing mayor, is the theory now so generally held that henceforth the efforts of searchers will be largely devoted to the sast branch and themain stream of the Escanaba.

More boats will be sent out, rafts will be built and the rivers will be thoroughly dragged. This will be a difficult task, as water is unusually high. The current at places is very swift and there are still many logs in the streams. Today a big gang of log drivers equipped with pike poles was sent to the scene. Nets were stretched near the outlets of the rivers. Dynamite will be used in the hope of bringing the body to the surface, but despite all these preparations the search in woods and swamps will not be relaxed.

It is estimated that 300 men, including many experienced land lookers, were out today and their numbers will be materially augumented tomorrow, when in response to a proclamation issued by the common council, business in general at Negaunee will be suspended.

The search continues in charge of the Steel corporations' mining department, President Thomas Cole is personally devoting his attention to it.

Gladstone—Preparations to send the first lot of Polish settlers to northern Michigan—the vanguard of one of the largest colonization movements in thichistory of the northwest—areb eing completed by the agricultural commission of the Polish National alliance. The settlers are coming from Pennsylvania, and will exceed 20,000 in unmber.

The newcomers will be located on "cut-over" lands in Delta county, which the alliance has secured at low prices from the Wells and Stephenson interests. Each family will have twenty to forty and even more acres, and will be permitted to pay for theland in easy annual instalments.

The officers of the alliance are anxious that the first consignment of settlers be located in time to have the benefit of the present season, and they are arranging for special train service direct to Delta county. The cars will be boarded at Harrisburg, at which point the colonists assigned to the first party are being assembled, and one trainload at least is due at Escanaba in the next fortnight.

Iron Mountain—For two years or more systematic burglaries have been carried on here, breaking into houses, cellars, stores, warehouses, etc., and the carrying away of money, grain and provisions resulting.

Much diligent and earnest work to apprehend the perpetrators was done by the authorities, but in vain, until a stable was recently entered and much booty obtained. Horses' tracks were followed to Gust Johnson's place at Homestead, Wis., ninemiles from here, and much plunder is said to have been found.

Johnson professed innocence and avowed having received the grain and other articles from Green Bay, Wis., for which he could show billings. On the pretense of going to the house for the same he escaped the officers and fled to the woods. Shots were fired with a view to halting him, but he is still in hiding. He was assisted in the depredations by his wife, who has confessed to the guilt of both, it is said.

The eminent source from which the prescription for Father John's Medicine originated is a sufficient guarantee of its value. In the fifty years since it was prescribed for the late Rev. Father John O'Brien, of Lowell, Mass., by whom it was recommended and from whom it derived its name, this old family remedy has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. It cures colds, grip and all throat and lung troubles; builds up the body, prevents pneumonia and consumption. It is not a patent medicine, and we again call your attention to its freedom from poisonous, nerve-deadening drugs or weakening stimulants, upon which the majority of patent medicines and so-called "cough cures" and "balsams" depend for their effect, and which are dangerous—we warn you against them. WEST DULUTH

ABANDON PLAN

Fourth of July Celebration Given Up Because of Circus.

Sessions at Finnish National College Concluded —Other News.

West Duluth will have no public Fourth of July celebration this year. This decision was reached last night at a meeting of the various committees which had been appointed to look after the arrangements for the event.

The meeting, held in the West Duluth Commercial club rooms, and called for the special purpose of considering the proposition, was well attended by committee members. The matter was discussed in all lights. Those present were almost a unit in the opinion that it would not be wise to carry out the plans for the big celebration, in view of the fact, only recently learned, that one of the leading circuses was to show in Duluth on July 4.

The motion to abandon the celebration altogether for this year was carried. It was voted to adjourn the meeting until next April, when plans for a monster celebration, to be held in West Duluth on July 4, 1905, will be laid, at a meeting of those who have taken an active interest in the enterprise this year.

There was also a lengthy discussion of the question of having the aldermen secure an amendment to the city ordinance governing the exhibition here of circuses, making it prohibitory for such an aggregation to show in Duluth on July 4, or Labor day. There was a diversity of opinion regarding the proposition, but the majority favored such an amendment. It was agreed that an attempt should be made to secure the amendment.

Last night was the regular meeting night of the Commercial club. Nothing of importance outside the Fourth of July matter was scheduled to come up for consideration, however, so the meeting was not held, as the other matter was decided without interference by the Commercial club.

Before it was learned that a circus was to be in Duluth on the national holiday extensive preparations had been made for the West Duluth celebration, and the fact that it will not be held is a disappointment to many. The program included an elaborate parade in the morning, with speech-making, and the usual athletic and other events in the afternoon, and a fine display of both day and night fireworks. No expense was to have been spared to make the celebration a success.

FINNISH COLLEGE.

Business Session Ends and Students Get Certificates.

The business meeting of the board of directors of the Finnish National College and Theological seminary at Smithville came to a close yesterday without definite action having been taken on the matter of erecting a new and more substantial structure for school purposes, near the site of the present school. The question will come up again at the next annual meeting of the directors, to be held June 6, 1905. Until then the old building will be used, although it may be found necessary to build an addition to it before next spring, to accommodate all the pupils.

Charles Kauppi, of West Duluth, one of the new directors of the institution, yesterday donated $100 towards the establishment of a building fund.

In addition to the business of the meeting yesterday students were examined and certificates of the work done during the year were presented by Rev. E. V. Saaranen.

Alexander Halonen delivered an interesting address. Mr. Halonen has been soliciting subscriptions among the Finnish population in various parts of the country for the support of school work. He told of the organization of forty-four societies in different parts of the country to raise money for the support of the institution.

The meeting of the ministers of the Finnish National Lutheran church is being held at the college today. Ten ministers, representing the Northwestern states, are in attendance at the meeting.

MUST GO OVER.

Street Railway Extension Impossible Because of City.

It now appears that the street railway company will be unable to extend its line out Grand avenue to Fairmount park this summer, in spite of all that has been done to bring about the desired improvement in the service.

In a report prepared by the board of public works yesterday it is declared that the improvement fund is not in a condition to stand the expense of strengthening the bridges on Grand at Sixty-first and Sixty-sixth avenues west. Until these structures are made strong enough to bear the weight of street cars, the extension of the car line from Sixty-first to Seventy-first avenues west cannot be laid. To put the bridges in a proper condition would cost the city $5560, according to the report of the city engineer.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

J. V. Alles of Grand Rapids, Mich., is a guest at the home of J. M. Lauermann, in West Duluth.

Clarence Govette of West Duluth, and Chester Nettle of Tower, left for Port Arthur this morning on the steamer C. W. Moore.

Word has been received of the death at St. Louis, Mo., of W. Dyser, who, up to a year ago, was a resident of West Duluth, employed by the D. M. & N. Railway company. Mr. Dyser was acting as brakesman in St. Louis at the time of his death. He was killed by being crushed between two freight cars.

Mrs. J. M. Murray of Decorah, Iowa, is a guest at the home of her cousin, Mrs. H. A. Whitney, on Grand avenue.

The musical festival given at the Swedish Baptist church last night was a success in every way. A musical program, consisting of instrumental and vocal selections, was rendered.

A vein of quicksand has been discovered on the line of the West Duluth sewer ditch on Grand avenue. The quicksand will mean a greater expense to the contractors and will probably delay the work to some extent.

The Twentieth Century Progress club will hold a regular weekly meeting at St. James hall next Monday evening. Business of importance will require all the men of the St. James parish being present.

The body of Charles Clark, who died very suddenly last Thursday is still held at Fiiiatrault's undertaking parlors, awaiting word from relatives in Canada.

Charles Murray expects to leave the first of next week for his old home in Massachusetts. He has not visited the Eastern state for about twelve years.

Several West Duluth men will leave Monday with Frank Tims, the Duluth contractor, for Harbor Beach, Mich., to work on a big pier work contract. With the party will be George Guyer, William Carrol, Bert Mars, Fred Ire, and I. Fraleigh. The latter will remove his family from West Duluth to the Michigan town.

Olaf Johnson, who under Foley Bros., has a sub-contract for railroad work near Toronto, Canada, will leave for the scene of operations early next week.

The fire department is having difficulty in keeping its ranks full. Two examinations have bene held for applicants for positions in the department since the first of the year, and the eligible list is again practically exhausted. SCOTSMEN GATHER Clan Stewart Entertains In Honor of High Officials.

Royal Chief Steen and Secretary Kerr Visit Here.

The bad weather of last evening acted as no damper on the big reception and social given in Folz hall by Clan Stewart, in honor of Royal Chief W. Steen, of Braidwood, Ill., and Royal Secretary Peter Kerr, of Boston, Mass. The reception was attended by 300 of the members of the Order of Scottish Clans and their friends and families.

Chief George F. MacKenzie, of Clan Stewart, acted as master of ceremonies and made the welcoming speech to the royal officers, who expressed great pleasure at the warmth of their greeting.

This is the first visit at the head of the lakes of Royal Chief Steen and he said he was enjoying the trip very much, even if the weather is not especially favorables for seeing the city at its best. Mr. Kerr has been a Duluth visitor on other occasions.

In an address to the clansmen, the royal chief gave an interesting talk on the benefits to be derived from a membership in the Order of Scottish Clans. The order, he said, has now been established in America for twenty-six years, and is in a flourishing condition, with a constantly increasing membership.

Mr. Steen, who is the postmaster at Braidwood, Ill., has held the office of royal chief for the past six or eight years, the term of office being two years.

Clan Stewart is one of the strong clans in the order and during the past two years has largely increased its membership.

Royal Secretary Kerr urged those present and not members of the order, to join, if they were eligible. He pointed out many instances in his experience during the past years where membership in the order, with the insurance fund, has provided the family of deceased members against poverty and hardship. To be eligible to the Order of Scottish Clans, a person must either have been born in Scotland of come from Scotch parentage.

A very entertaining musical program was carried out. Solos were rendered by Chief George F. MacKenzie, Philip Gordon Brown and Alex. Reid. The Clan Stewart bagpipe band, recently organized, gave a number of selections that were received with great enthusiasm.

The program was followed by a social session and dance, the music being furnished by Flaaten's orchestra and the bagpipe band.

Tomorrow evening, in honor of the visit of the royal officers of the order, Clan Stewart will attend the Pilgrim Congregational church, in a body, where Rev. Alexander Milne will preach a special sermon. Previous to going to the church the clansmen will gather at Folz hall at 7:30 p. m.

GREATEST EVER HELD

M. S. Lloyd's Opinion of the Big St. Louis Exposition.

"The St. Louis fair is the largest and most stupendous exhibition ever witnessed on this globe," said M. S. Lloyd, deputy clerk of the municipal court, who returned yesterday from a three weeks' trip to St. Louis, the greater part of which time he spent at the exhibition grounds.

"I believe it will be the largest that ever will be seen, for the tendency now seems to be to give smaller exhibitions, specializing along some particular line. The Portland exposition next year will be smaller and the St. Louis exposition, in my opinion, will be the last of the great general expositions. They are becoming too cumbersome, and too expensive to be money makers, and they are so large that it requires weeks to properly see them.

"The St. Louis fair is larger and better than the Chicago exposition in 1893. Every person has doubtless read about the immensity of the grounds and buildings until they are sick of hearing about them, but there is no doubt that the St. Louis fair is well worth seeing. It is the best and largest of any of the large expositions given in this country, and a few weeks spent on the grounds would be almost as good as a trip around the world.

"You can spend just as much money as you want to and you can also spend very little if you desire to see the fair cheaply. A fifty dollar bill would be sufficient for a trip from Duluth and return and a week at the fair if a person economized and lived in a modest way. You have to count on about $5 per day for expenses while there, however, for everything is very high. Of course $50 won't go far if you attempt to 'do the Pike,' but you can see a lot for that amount.

"Everything is practically complete there now, or about as complete as it ever will be. In an exposition as large as that there must always be some work going on.

"The weather in St. Louis was delightful during the time I was there, but it will doubtless be very warm there during the latter part of this month, and July and August. A Duluthian would feel it more than a native of that part of the country."

Dance at O-at-ka tonight. Labrosse's full orchestra.

FORESTERS TO MEET

High Court of United Order to Hold Session Here.

Supreme Ranger Southworth and Councilor Olmstead Coming.

The high court of the jurisdiction of Superior of the United Order of Foresters, will meet in biennial session in Hunter hall, at 9:30 a. m., next Tuesday. At the opening of the session Mayor Cullum will make an address of welcome, which will be responded to by some one of the head officers.

The jurisdiction covered by this high court is made up of eight counties in Minnesota, that portion of Wisconsin

S. C. OLMSTEAD,
St. Paul, Supreme Councillor.

north of the Soo road, and the upper peninsula of Michigan. About sixty delegates will be in attendance besides a large number of the members of the order coming from all parts of the jurisdiction.

Judge H. L. Southworth, of Chicago, the supreme ranger of the order will be present and also the supreme councilor, S. C. Olmstead, of St. Paul. The head officers of this high court are: John McMurchy, high ranger; Harry Mines, high vice-ranger; W. H. Thorn, high secretary; I. W. Gilleland, high treasurer, and H. J. Orchard, high physician.

H. L. SOUTHWORTH,
Supreme Ranger, United Order of Foresters.

The order was first started in this jurisdiction in April, 1895, by the institution of Court North, No. 49, with forty charter members. From this small start it has grown until at the present time there are thirty courts and about 2000 members in the jurisdiction.

In addition to looking after the interest of the insurance features of the order, this high court conducts a sick and accident fund, which entitles those who are sick to a weekly benefit of $10 while disabled on account of either sickness or accident. Since its institution this fund has paid out many thousands of dollars to its members on account of sickness and accident and now has a balance on hand in that fund of about $3000.

The United Order of Foresters is purely an American organization, doing business in the United States only, on the reserved fund plan, and since its incorporation in 1894 has accumulated a reserve fund that is equal to $14 per capita. It also pays a partial and a total permanent disability benefit and an old age benefit.

Part of the business to be transacted at this meeting will be to elect five delegates to attend the biennial session of the supreme courts, which meets in St. Louis, Mo., beginning July 18.

In the evening, after the meeting, Court Eastern Star No 86, will hold a session and exemplify the degree work with its team. This will be followed by a reception and entertainment.

DR. MITCHELL'S MARVELOUS CURES
Will Live in History—People Are Coming Hundreds of Miles to See Him.

A record of nearly seven years of the most remarkable cures; old cases of rheumatism and paralysis, helpless for years, are made to walk; old supposed incurable cases of deafness and blindness that had wrecked people's lives for a score of years; nervous prostration, women who from female weakness and disease have become infirmed invalids are cured in a short time. He has cured case after case of stomach troubles, constipation, kidney and bladder trouble; removed troublesome growths, cured cancer. Healer Mitchell, in talking to a reporter a few days ago, said: "I know that I have a treatment that will reach diseases which medicine will not. My treatment stands upon its merits and will bear the closet investigation."

Hundreds of patients have applied to Healer Mitchell who had no faith in his being able to do what he says he can in his advertisements, but after seeing and talking to cured patients they could not doubt. No man dares question his wonderful healing powers, for hundreds of cures are made right here in Duluth. Many cures are being made every day. Physicians discuss and wonder what kind of a man is this, but every day the cures multiply and the skeptical are made to believe. The sick from all parts of the wordld are sent to him, they are cured in a short time and return home and send their sick friends, and that is why Dr. Mitchell's offices are crowded from morning till night. The doctor can be seen at 17 East Superior street. Those coming from a distance should write and make arrangements.

Office hours daily 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Sundays, 10 to 12. Tuesdays, Thursday and Saturday evenings, 7 to 8:30. Zenith 'phone, 579.

A TIME FOR CONCILIATION.

More and more lake carriers are going into commission every day and the trouble between the owners and the masters will soon be a thing of the past. The struggle has been an unfortunate one, but really came at a time when the tying up of boats had very little effect upon business conditions. Now that there is freight to be moved it is hardly probable that the strike will last another week.

The tendency of the times is toward lower prices, and whenever this tendency sets in labor is always first to feel the effects for the reason that the condition is usually brought about by a glut of the markets with manufactured goods. The result is immediate reduction of forces in the factories, and this has the effect of reducing forces all along the line. The next move is a reduction of wages and as the law of supply and demand governs labor as everything else the reduction is an easy thing to make. Employers are often unconcerned whether the reductions are accepted or not, as was shown at Ely, where the mines were shut down when the men went out on strike, and more recently at Eveleth, where the Drake & Stratton stripping work was discontinued as soon as the men showed a desire to fight rather than accept a reduction of 15 cents per day in their wages.

It is difficult to see how a man of even small family can succeed under present conditions on the ranges to make both ends meet on $1.60 per day, and yet he can come nearer to making them meet on that amount than on nothing, and the disposition seems to be at present to shut down entirely if the reduced wages offered are not accepted.

While conditions appear a little dismal at present, there is reason to believe that it is but a temporary lull and that there will be no long period of stagnation. Before winter sets in it is reasonable to expect that every wheel will be turning and every stack will be in blast. Money is plentiful and can be had at low rates of interest as soon as busines interests can find use for it. In the meantime it behooves both employer and employe to approach the wage question in conciliatory spirit with a view of making the best of a trying situation. There is nothing gained by violence or unreasonable stubbornness on either side.

CAN HAVE NO SUCCESSOR.

The discussion of a probable successor of Senator Quay as boss of the Republican machine in Pennsylvania leads to the conclusion that the dead politician was in a class by himself and that it will be practically impossible to find a man to fill his shoes.

How he used his position for his own benefit, and how he once succeeded in killing two birds with one stone is related by the New York World. It was possible in Macedon to appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober. There was no appeal in Pennsylvania. Quay drunk knew more politics than any other man sober. Once when a state convention met he was unable to leave his room. His lieutenants as a matter of form read the platform to him before its adoption. When they asked his opinion he thickly mumbled that a plank should be added pledging the party to submit a constitutional amendment for prohibition. The idea seemed ludicrous, but Quay knew his own mind. He recovered sufficiently to go down to the convention hall and force the plank through. The amendment was submitted at a special election, the Quay machine got $200,000 from the brewers and liquor dealers to work against it, the proposition was defeated by 188,000 majority, and the Prohibition party, whose growth had been menacing Republican success, was withered.

It is rather unlikely that anybody in the state can be found who would have the hardihood to attempt to follow in Quay's footsteps, and if such can be found it is hardly probable that he would succeed.

A TOUCHING TRIBUTE.

Memorial day brings to light many instances of undying love and devotion, but none more beautiful than this little story related by Kate Kean in a Minneapolis newspaper:

A touching incident occurred in Layman's cemetery this morning, when Adolph Schafer, an old man of perhaps 60 years, after coming 400 miles to give evidence of his remembrance for his dead wife, placed a wreath of beautiful roses on her grave.

Schafer lives alone at Valley City, S. D., and all night Sunday he traveled that he might be at the cemetery today and leave his little floral tribute there.

The wife died fourteen years ago, and since then he always succeeds on Decoration day in leaving some little token where he buried her.

"This is not much of a floral offering that I have," he said, as he slowly stooped to place the roses in the grass, "but if every generous act of hers should blossom at her grave, she would sleep today beneath a wilderness of flowers."

It is such incidents as this that revive one's faith in human nature, for here is certainly true devotion to the memory of one who was loved. It would be interesting to know whether this woman received from her husband the honor and homage that was her due while she was yet living, or whether he, like many others, failed to appreciate the blessings of a loving helpmeet until she was cold in death, when it was too late to show her by little acts and deeds that her filial loyalty and generosity were appreciated and reciprocated in kind.

It is to be inferred that a man who does not forget his wife's grave while life remains, was also a kind and loving husband, yet how many there are, both men and women, who fail to express themselves in endearing terms to those about them while there is yet time.

The words of this sorrowing old man, while stooping over the grave of the partner of his joys and sorrows, plead eloquently to those who live that they may so order their lives that every day will be Memorial day for those whose generous acts, if they should blossom, would produce a wilderness of flowers.

TO TEACH ARITHMETIC.

W. H. Ellery, through the columns of a New York paper, makes a suggestion with regard to the teaching of mathematics that appears to have merit. He claims that we make an error when we insist that a teacher shall be a living encyclopedia. What is the result? Superficial knowledge, no specialists. This is the specialists' era.

To teach arithmetic you must have mathematicians; and they should have a special room in every school to which each class should go, say, twice a week. No text books should be used, he says. The professor dictates matter suitable to the capacity of his class. This matter is written in a rough manner, with a lead pencil. The lesson over, the matter is copied into a book, in ink, with examples worked out to the best of the pupil's ability. This fair copy is then handed to the overseer of the class, who corrects the spelling and punctuation and criticises the writing. He has nothing to do with the examples. The next time the pupil goes to the arithmetic room he takes his fair copy to the professor for his marking.

The professor soon knows the ability of each individual pupil, and he gradually transplants them. For instance, the pupil is in Class 4; a fair trial proves him poor in arithmetic, and he is sent back to Class 5 or 6. A very proficient fourth-class pupil is advanced to the third or second class. In this way each class is kept at its proper level. A pupil who gets his home talent to help him out will soon find his game up when professor calls for a demonstration on the spot. This system should cover all lines taught.

Result: No matter what you are studying you are constantly improving your writing, spelling, punctuation, and, above all, concentration.

Mr. Ellery claims this system is in use now, and has been in use for many years, in Germany, France and Switzerland.

We already possess the special writing teacher, the special music teacher; why not the special mathematician? The teaching of reading and spelling is largely a matter of persistent drill and can be taught by anyone who possesses the ability to enforce attention, application and obedience, but there are few teachers who know how to get arithmetic into the heads of dull pupils. Those who do know how should be given the opportunity.

HIS SIN FOUND HIM OUT.

Efforts to read humanity a lesson out of the book of the life of John R. Platt, of New York, will probably be of little avail. It may be expected that until the crack of doomsday engulfs the world, aged men of wealth will fall victims to the wiles of wicked adventuresses.

Platt is suing a woman of negro, Indian and white blood for over $500,000 that she had wheedled from him by blackmailing methods. "I have been disgraced," says the poor old man in anguish. "I feel it keenly and I can say now that the public has taken too much interest in the matter. It concerns me alone."

A sin is only a sin in the eyes of many people when it is found out. Therefore this aged millionaire, because of his prominence and wealth, must suffer a certain public obliquy that comes from his exposure. And yet he did only what thousands of men are doing every day and what is winked at and condoned in younger men by society generally.

Platt's punishment is just, but the public should not be too severe in its judgment. He may have been sinned against as well as sinning.

MEXICO'S RAILROAD PROBLEM.

The Mexican government appears to have reached the conclusion that government control of railroads is practically impossible unless the government is also an owner, at least to a limited extent, and as a result it has acquired the controlling stock in 10,000 miles of railroad in the republic in order that combinations to the detriment of public interests will be impossible.

The manner of electing the president of Mexico and the fact that President Diaz is virtually a dictator in that country, has been the topic of favorable comment by the aristocratic element in the United States, which favors an imperialistic policy. They point to the dictatorship of Diaz as the one thing that has kept Mexico in the path of industrial and political progress and have freely claimed that the republic would go to pieces but for the beneficent rule of its president. It is hoped that those who admire this system of one-man power in government will not find fault with his method of railway control, for it was President Diaz who inaugurated this policy through fear of the rapid extension of American railroad interests in Mexico. An American syndicate had acquired the controlling stock of the Mexican Central railroad, and, projecting important extensions, the government was apprehensive lest control of the entire railroad mileage of the country fall into American hands, with the monopolistic dangers of consolidation. To checkmate this the Mexican government bought control of the Mexican National railroad and its allied lines, under conditions which prevent the construction of competing roads within certain tracts of territory. This action is said to have upset important extension plans of the Mexican Central, and holders of that road's bonds have expressed uneasiness about the future of their interests in Mexico.

In asking the federal congress for authority to continue this policy and buy the controlling interest in the Vera Cruz & Pacific railroad, the Mexican minister of finance made the explanatory statement that the government did not propose to take an active and direct share in the management and exploitation of the lines nor to restrict in any manner the freedom which the shareholders ought to enjoy to administer their properties in consonance with the general interests. The ends at which the government aims, he said, are higher and more important, for, besides endeavoring to afford a solid guarantee for the supreme national interests that are bound up with the sovereignty of state, it seeks to satisfy more efficaciously the requirements of commerce and industry through a sound policy in transportation questions, and to harmonize as far as possible the interests of the various companies which, by their strife, for which there is often no solid reason, have at times impaired the financial credit of large enterprises established in the republic.

It is, however, the general opinion of American railroad men operating in Mexico that the government in the course of time intends that there shall be complete ownership of all the railroads in Mexico.

President Diaz has certainly made an enviable record in the industrial development of his nation, but it remains to be seen whether he made no error when he decided that the most effectual means of controlling railroads was by acquiring their ownership.

THE FIELD SURVEY

It turns out that President Roosevelt, in shaking hands with the engineer and fireman of the locomotive after a ride on a railway train, is but following a precedent established by President Lincoln. Nobody is injured by such an act, and some good is done. A stranger in Iowa, who recently wrote to The Herald to commend an editorial utterance of this paper, said he simply wrote because of a habit he had formed of saying, when a woman makes a good loaf of bread, "well done." Both the woman and the editor are the better for this thoughtfulness. No doubt both engineer and fireman are also thankful and grateful to the president or anybody else for a handshake and a few words of encouragement in acknowledgment for a duty well performed. It would be better for us all if we would take more interest in our fellow man and render the verdict "well done" in audible tones whenever it is deserved.

* * *

It is noticed that while the railroads are reducing forces they do not intimate that they intend to give up a particle of that $155,000,000 per annum increase in freight rates.

* * *

A. P. Dandridge, a New York civil engineer, makes the sugestion that the work of digging the Panama canal be done by night by the aid of electric light. He says: "First build sufficient electric plants to light the working sections and to furnish fan power, and have a good ice plant. In order that the men should secure necessary sleep during the day, the sleeping quarters could be cooled by the electric fans and ice plants. Under such conditions any labor could be used on the work, which in itself is enough to get the government to adopt the plan of sleeping in cool quarters by day and doing the work in the absence of the sun." There appears to be merit in this suggestion and it is at least worthy of investigation.

* * *

The New York World demands that Judge Parker speak out on the issues of the day, because "what the party needs—and its needs are the nation's—is a spokesman, a critic, a champion." It is inferred, of course, that the proper method for him to pursue is to use the columns of the World exclusively.

The city of Duluth has over $400,000 in cash in bank and not enough money to carry on needed improvements. It does seem as though some means might be invoked to establish a more equitable ratio.

* * *

Who is your choice for member of the school board? Now is the time to make your preference known or forever afterward hold your peace.

* * *

By the time the pavement on Central avenue at West Duluth is finally laid, a large part of it will have been torn up for the purpose of laying sewers and water pipes. Then in a few years somebody will wonder why it did not give better satisfaction. Under the present system of making public improvements it would be better to have a portable pavement that could be taken up in sections. This is a case where the whole city government appears to be doing its "inefficient best."

* * *

Six or eight young toughs in Minneapolis assaulted and outraged a young woman in that city the other evening after knocking her down and binding her male escort. It is safe to say that if these were colored men, all would have dangled at the end of a rope.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

The press of the state extends its sympathy to Charles Wise, editor of the Mankato Review, who recently lost his eyesight by being struck with a fragment of a clay pigeon while trap shooting. Editor Pease of the Anoka Union says:

> Until this dark dismal catastrophe overtook him, his was a life full of hope and promise, and if a brother editor's sympathies and love can help in this hour of trial, he certainly has mine to the fullest extent:
>

> Duluth is going to have a great cleaning up on the first and second of June. Has spring struck the head of the lakes?

Thus questions the Princeton Union. Well, the spring rains have, anyway, with the result that no cleaning was possible on either day. Every day ought to be cleaning day as long as there is any dirt remaining.

* * *

Well, good-bye, boys. Here's hoping all will survive the hiking along the Pike.

The Hibbing Tribune sees the bow of promise shining through the breaking clouds. It says:

> It looks as though the Tribune's prediction that the mines surrounding Hibbing would be operating in three weeks was coming true. Twenty cars on the extra list of the Mesaba road were ordered to report Sunday. This looks good.

HOTEL GOSSIP

W. E. Greene, who represents the Bingham company, of Cleveland, Ohio, hardware dealers, comes into this territory occasionally, and his name is particularly interesting to people who know that there is a W. E. Greene living in Duluth, the latter being a well-known draughtsman. The former Mr. Greene on his visits to this city frequently calls on F. H. White, purchasing agent of the Duluth & Iron Range road, and the two colors appear to harmonize first rate when seen together.

A former Pennsylvanian now in Duluth recalls some interesting facts about Joseph C. Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., who is being mentioned for senator from that state to succeed the late Matthew Stanley Quay, whose silent career of many years in the national law-making body was one of the most unique in the history of American politics in years, as no man ever had a stronger hold on his state, nor one which lasted longer.

Sibley is one of the greatest men at electioneering that I have ever known," said he, "and as smooth as ermine. He has been elected to congress in two different districts in Pennsylvania, one of which he moved purposely into to make the fight for the place, and he has been elected on both the Republican and Democratic tickets.

"His home is in Franklin, Pa., where he is in the oil business, and he is worth a great deal of money. He is not at all stingy with it, and he is as good a vote-maker as any of them. He was originally a Republican. The town of Meadville, a short distance from his home, is where Theodore L. Flood lives. Flood is well known as a former minister of the gospel and editor of the Chautauqua, devoted to the interests of the assembly grounds in Western New York.

"Dr. Flood was making the race for congress and the Democrats up there wanted somebody that could beat him. Sibley jumped into the breach. He moved up to Flood's town, acquired a residence there and began his campaign. Flood used to drive around in the country among the people and admire their fine stock and praise everything from the pigs to the horses. When Sibley would come along he would adopt the opposite course and lament with the farmers the condition of a country whose farmers had such poor live stock. He would say there was something wrong with the country and that some remedial measures should be taken for the benefit of the farmers. It was necessary that something be done to prevent the country going to the demnition bow-wows, he would say.

"This kind of talk usually appealed to the farmer, who would think that he saw necessity for a change of government at once. So the farmer growled and voted for Sibley, and the man was elected. Before Flood left the ministry he wrote a book on why ministers should not leave the pulpit for politics and Sibley used to quote this book frequently in his speeches.

"Later he ran on the Republican ticket back in his home district and defeated Congressman Stone, one of the most popular men ever known in the district.

"One of Sibley's most famous campaign speeches was one he made during the free silver agitation some years ago. Sibley was a Democrat on the free silver issue, but it was not long from that time that he changed back to Republican. In his talk in favor of free silver he would say that the undue excitement of the Republicans over the free silver issue reminded him of a story told about an old blind mule down in Illinois.

"It was during the World's fair in Chicago that the story found its origin. It appeared that there was an old farmer down in the state of Illinois who was having a hard time that year and needed some money. When he read in some paper of the tons and tons of popcorn that were likely to be consumed at the Columbian exposition he was very much interested and thought he saw a chance to make a pile. He would sow a large field with popcorn and market it at Chicago.

"He did so—that is, he sowed the field. The summer was a very hot one, a regular scorcher. The old blind mule that belonged to the farmer was kept in a field next to the popcorn, and grazed out there day after day, for he was not so blind that he could not make his way around and could distinguish some things. Well, the weather got so hot that the sun one day was too much for the corn and began to pop it. The mule saw the white spots jumping around and getting over his way. He thought they were snow and laid down and froze to death."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Union: There is a great probability that more uninstructed delegates will go to the coming republican state convention than ever in the history of the state. There is an opinion growing and growing fast among the people of the state, that now is the time to take up some new man, not mixed up in politics, and stampede the convention for him, leaving the present prominent candidates high in the air. Mighty sure that the big republican majority will be materially reduced in Minnesota this fall, on governor. The people are getting thoroughly disgusted at the way the things are being carried on in the interests of the several candidates.

Exchange: The St. Louis managers have resolved to keep holy the Sabbath day during the exposition. A distinguished toreador has been imported from Spain and an illustrious picador has been hired in Mexico and half a dozen fierce bulls have been found, but no bull fights will be permitted except on week days.

Preston Union: One of the features of the observance of Memorial Day at Duluth was the strewing of flowers in the ship canal by the Women's Relief Corps at the conclusion of the decoration of the soldiers' graves in the different cemeteries. Great quantities of flowers were sent seaward in memory of the departed naval heroes. A grand tribute indeed to the heroes of the deep.

St. Cloud Times: Some of these Duluth Democrats are a queer lot. At a meeting of the Hearst club, on the 31st ult., they held a sort of "Irish wake" and endorsed a dead issue and a "passed away" candidate—the Kansas City platform and W. R. Hearst.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DULUTH

PERT AND PERTINENT.

Washington Star: "Don't you feel kind of lonesome since the legislature adjourned?"

"Well," answered the business man, "it's a good deal with me as it was with a man who had a pet lion that got lost. I feel a little lonesome, but not near so scared."

Sioux Falls Press: "Oh, George!" exclaimed the young wife, "it was nearly midnight before you got home last night."

"Well, well!" exclaimed the husband; "you women are so inconsistent. Before we were married you didn't care how late I got home."

New York Weekly: Husband—Why do you scold the butcher? It isn't his fault that the meat comes to the table all dried up. Scold the cook.

Wife—I don't dare to; but I'm in hopes that if I keep on scolding the butcher, he'll get mad, and come around and scold the cook.

Chicago Tribune: "Here is another example of faulty English," said the teacher of the class of rhetoric; "in this essay you have written, 'her sight broke upon a landscape of entrancing loveliness.' How could any one's sight 'break upon' a landscape?"

"She might have dropped her eyes," timidly ventured the young woman who had written the essay.

Detroit Free Press: Mistress—"Do you love babies?"

Maid—Not at three dollars a week, mum.

Exchange: "Say, pop, what's an investment?"

"It's buying a man a drink and then borrowing a dollar from him."

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: Sidney—Miss Elsie is a lovely girl.

Rodney—Yes; say, she's a regular pink and white pearl.

Life: "Don't you think he's as ugly as sin?"

"No; as virtue."

Philadelphia Record: Crumbs of comfort never come from eating crackers in bed.

Grass widows may, of course, be blue,
But I have never seen
(No more has any one of you)
A single one that's green.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A trip to Europe is almost as good as a cure for a lovesick girl as calomel.

The fewer children a woman has the more she knows about raising other people's.

We resist temptation when there is none to resist, as we save money when there isn't any to save.

A nice thing about living in a flat is it teaches you how to turn over comfortably in your grave after you are dead.

Where He Made His Start.

Philadelphia Ledger: A squire in a certain town had just finished marrying a young couple, and proceeded in a paternal way to give them good, solid advice. Turning to the bridegroom, he said:

"Never spend your money extravagantly, and be saving in every way possible."

The bridegroom listened respectfully and then remarked:

"Well, judge, we might as well begin on you," and he proceeded to give the squire 50 cents for tying the knot.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

The Gospel of Joy in Work.

This is the new evangel, and President Eliot of Harvard is its prophet. Repeatedly in public addresses of late he has sought to show that the fundamental question with every workingman is not one of wages, or hours, or holidays, or environment—important though all those aspects of the case are—but one of personal happiness in work and of promoting through work the happiness of others.

This is not the easiest of all propositions to prove today. The derisive laughter which its first enunciation evoked among the laborers who heard it shows how unpalatable a truth it is. The movement of our age is in another direction. We are all concerned primarily with the effort to obtain more ease, leisure and creature comforts. We look upon work simply as a means to that end and we want to do just as little work as possible and to win as much reward as we can. To those who tend a machine all day long there seems to be a wide chasm between the work done by such professional men as President Eliot and their own. And we all have frankly to admit that if one must work he would rather choose his post of duty than have it assigned to him.

But, after all, President Eliot is right, both historically and philosophically. History shows and observation confirms the fact that the happiest people are the busiest ones, and that in the long run idleness conduces to moroseness. Moreover, man was made to work. Perhaps that is one reason why Adam and Eve went wrong in the beautiful garden of Eden, because they really did not have enough to do, and when by divine fiat they were driven out and compelled to begin a life of toil, this apparent curse was to prove ultimately a blessing to them and to their long line of descendants. Men differ in their capacity to sing and paint and orate, but the one tie that binds humanity together is its ability to work. And when one ceases to work he ceases to grow. He begins to degenerate and becomes like the lower animals.

This being the case, joy ought to go with work as naturally as song floats from the mouth of a bird. To think that day by day we are bringing something to pass, adding to the useful products of the world, realizing our best selves in things tangible, adding to the sum total of things actually done, is an immense inspiration. And to do things well, even if they be mechanical tasks, to give a fine finish to the product, to eliminate every mark of haste and carlessness—that is another source of happiness. Talking with the motorman on the front platform the other evening, I was glad to hear him say, "For nine years I have been in this business, and I have never had any accident. It is only careless fellows that have accidents." Certainly he had the artist's pride in his work, tedious and taxing as it is.

And another foundation of joy in work is the thought that our work adds to the content and happiness of others. What an exquisite satisfaction the husband and father may find even in hard manual toil because the labor of his hand is day by day transmuted into bread and meat for the ones whom he loves most of all in the world. One can endure long hours and unpleasant surroundings if happy little faces dance before one's vision in the midst of the smoke of the foundry and the whir of the factory.

Then, too, we may know that aside from the returns to our own kin we are making existence more tolerable for a wider circle. Our fidelity and skill and persistence constitute a contribution to the on-going of humanity. We may never know who will use the utensil which we make, or who will be benefited by the sale over the counter, or how all this humdrum typewriting aids the progress of the kingdom of God, but nothing is truer than that the faithful labor of every worker is needed in this modern world to drive the wheels of civilization and move forward the car of progress.

Whatever you are doing, then, compel it to pay a tribute of happiness to you day by day. Something more congenial may come by and by, but while you are manifestly put where you are, and while others may be depending on you, work not like a galley slave, but like a free man and a Christian. Laboring in this spirit you will find all the sweeter the more ample leisure, the more delightful surroundings and the greater good fortune which in the providence of God may be yours by and by.

ZENITH WILL BE FINE PUBLICATION

Class of 1904 of High School Expect to Have Finest Number Ever Issued—Effort Made to Introduce New and Original Features—Baseball Team Making Good Record.

The Zenith of the class of 1904 is now completed and will make its appearance some time between June 10 and 16.

The Zenith board has been working hard and faithfully for many months past and has undoubtedly turned out a better production than has ever been issued from the high school before.

It is characterized throughout by a great deal of originality, this being evident in the many new features that have been introduced. It is commonly said of all Zeniths possess too much sameness. This in a measure cannot be helped as it is essentially a record of school events, but as far as possible, it has been eliminated by expressing new thoughts and ideas and leaving out some of the old ones.

The book will contain 193 pages, of which twenty-nine will be given up to advertising, and will be printed on smooth enameled paper. The back of the binding will be square and of blue Fleischer leather, while the sides will be of white parchment. These colors were selected as they are those of the class. On the outside of the cover will appear a half-tone picture of the high school in natural sandstone colors with the words "Zenith, '04," engraved beneath it.

Three pages have been devoted to the photographs of the faculty, three to the Agassiz club, three to the Musical society, twenty to athletics, eight to each of the fraternities, twelve to each of the lower classes, besides many others to miscellaneous purposes, such as jokes on the students, the favorite expressions of the instructors, the commencement and class night programs, the chronicles, and many others too numerous to mention. Among other things in the athletic section is an article by our representative in congress, "Jadam" Bede.

In connection with the senior album an exceedingly novel feature has been introduced. There are seventy-four students in the graduating class and opposite each one's picture will be printed an original rhyme which will be typical of either the student's peculiarities or of something important that he has achieved during his high school career.

Another noticeable improvement in this year's Zenith is in the pictures and the drawings. They will be printed on enameled paper and will consequently show up more distinctly than has been the case heretofore.

Owing to the thoughtfulness and foresight of the management the publication will be issued a week or two before the close of school. Last year and the year before they were not available until within two or three days of the end of the semester and as a consequence, those who had purchased them in advance and were therefore entitled to the first copies, had to wait until as many as possible had been sold before they could get theirs. This will not be the case in the present instance, however. If any one is shown preference it will be those who bought their Zeniths early in order to help out the senior board.

SHOWING UP WELL.

Daseball Team Has Won Every Game Played.

The baseball team is making a very good record this season, much better than was expected earlier in the year.

The boys have played five or six games and have won all of them by good margins. They are fielding exceptionally well, hitting the ball regukarly, and doing some remarkable base running for high school students. Crammer and Scobie, in spite of the fact that neither of them has ever before tried his skill as a slab artist, are pitching fine ball. Crammer can also cover first base in good style, while Scobie is a good utility man for most any position.

Last Wednesday they played a game with the Blaine high school of Superior, defeating them by a score of 10 to 5. Scobie pitched a good game, allowing only four hits. The line-up was as follows:

Superior—		Duluth—
Smith	catcher	Olson
Robinson	pitcher	Scobie
Stock	first base	Crammer
Christopher	short stop	Hornbrook
McGraw	second base	Deetz
Penn	third base	St. Clair
Young	left field	Crassweller
Hendrickson	right field	Fenton
Hanson	center field	Zimmerman and McDevitt

* * *

This morning the boys left for Ashland, where they will play the high school team of that city. Those who left were: Crammer, Scobie, Olson, Furni, Deetz, Fenton, St. Clair, McDevitt, Zimmerman, Crassweller and Hornbrook. It was impossible to learn more than the names of the Ashland players, which are as follows: Wharton, C. Borecky, Kellog, Nordt, Boheim, Lindsay, F. Borecky, Driese, Echlin, Armstrong, Gelle and Tomkins.

ENTERTAIN TEACHERS.

Graduates Give Spread For the Instructors.

Last Saturday evening after the senior-faculty baseball game the class of '04 entertained the instructors at a very bountiful spread, which was followed by an informal dance.

Mr. Smith took advantage of the opportunity to say a few words to the seniors in appreciation of the manner and of the success with which they had carried on their work during their four year's course in the high school. He said that in his relations with them he had sometimes been compelled to use what might seem to them rather harsh measures in order to preserve discipline and for that reason some of them probably thought he did not take any real interest in their welfare.

"But that is not so," he said, "I have a deep and sincere feeling for the personal welfare of each and every one of you and wish that you may all become successful young men and young women."

He then presented Chester Shepard, who will enter West Point next fall, with his diploma, which will admit him to the academy without the necessity of passing the entrance examinations.

Mr. Foster, the captain of the faculty team, also spoke to them for a few minutes, congratulated them upon their skill in playing baseball and hoped that they would always win as they played the game of life.

School Notes.

The freshmen had their last class meeting for the year last Tuesday afternoon in the assembly hall. They decided upon their class pins and expect that they will arrive before school closes. They are of a very handsome design and make a very neat appearance. They are square, with a gold border and a maroon center, to represent the class colors, and upon them are engraved the class numerals, "'07."

* * *

The Agassiz club held its regular biweekly meeting in the biological laboratory yesterday afternoon. Miss Mildred Shaw read a very interesting and instructive paper on "Crows," which was the subject for discussion.

* * *

At the special class meeting which the senior class held Thursday afternoon it was decided to empower Professor Custance to arrange the program for class night, and also to have a senior picnic the latter part of next week, the weather allowing.

* * *

Strange and yet familiar faces are being seen about the halls. Some of the old graduates who have been away to college are visiting the building and renewing old acquaintances.

* * *

Mrs. Le Tourneau was absent Wednesday on account of illness.

WHY NOT CLEATS

On the Shoes of the Baseball Players?

There is at least a small fortune in store for the man who will invent a substitute for the steel spikes, which are now a part of the baseball player's shoe, says the Chicago Tribune. These have always been an element of considerable danger to players, because of the chance of getting cut by those worn by an opponent, either accidentally or through the intent of that opponent, but they have been considered a necessary evil, because thus far nothing has been invented to take their place and serve the same purpose. Spikes have long since been abolished from the football field because of their danger, but the baseball thinkers do not believe the cleats worn on football shoes would do at all for baseball players, on account of the important part played in the diamond game by the ability to start and stop quickly. The ability to start quickly is the chief aim of a football team, although it is the football player's desire not to stop quickly. It has not been shown that cleats are not as good as spikes, because they have never been tried by baseball players to any great extent. Even if they would not prove as effective for running in baseball, at least the abolition of spikes would be as fair for one team as for another. There is certainly need of some move to eliminate this source of accident and injury. While the class of players who would deliberately cripple an opponent is small and getting smaller every year, as the character of the men as a whole improves, the danger of accidental injuries increases as the game progresses in skill and science, making the plays closer and the speed of both plays and players faster. In no season have there been more accidents of this sort, for the time elapsed, than this year, and it is brought home particularly to Chicago fans by two serious results of spiking, in which local players were incapacitated. Catcher O'Neil nearly lost one of his toes in the last exhibition game in Omaha, and Miller, the player who spiked him, has since boasted openly that he did it intentionally to get even with Manager Selee for releasing him when he was a colt a couple of seasons ago. Slagle, the outfielder, is still nursing a spike cut in his arm, which was given him by Raymer, of the Boston club. Oddly enough, Raymer is also a Chicago discard, but it is not believed his act was intentional. Recently Catcher Messitt of the Colorado Springs team was spiked, and may lose an arm because of blood poisoning. There is great need of removing such hazards from the ball players' life, and it should be done even at the expense of some of the player's sureness of foot, if no other way can be found.

FOOD VALUE OF MILK.

In his address before the British Sanitary Inspectors' association, Sir James Crichton Browne, in addition to renewing the stock arguments for the use of milk by children, pointed out its advantages for adults, says the New York World. He showed that in certain sicknesses, such as typhoid, life may depend on milk, which may not only postpone the final issue in certain kinds of senile decay, but may contribute to the stability of vigor in maturity. He drew attention to the value of the goat as a milk-producer.

While the food value of milk is generally recognized, there is a popular ignorance of the exact nature of its nutritive properties. If a gallon of water is boiled sufficiently long it is lost in steam. Milk similarly boiled leaves a solid residue weighing from 20 to 22 ounces. This substance chiefly consists of sugar, fat, the fat of butter, casein—a material with feeding properties resembling those of the white of egg, of the lean meat and the gluten of wheat—and certain mineral substances which are essential in the manufacture of the bones and teeth. Unlike almost all other foods, these milk substances are all digestible, and, what is more, they exist in almost precisely correct proportion to each other.

The once famous analyst, Letheby, demonstrated that whereas 100 pounds of quite lean beef without bone contained seventy-two pounds of water and twenty-eight pounds of feeding matter—not all of which is digestive—100 pounds of good milk contained fourteen pounds of feeding matter—all digestible.

CORNISH FUNERALS.

Calumet has been the scene on several ocasions lately of a unique and most impressive ceremony in connection with Cornish funerals, says the Copper Country Evening News. This custom had a repitition today in the funeral of the lamented William Daniell. For the fourth time Calumet saw the funeral cortege, with the pallbearers leading the procession wending its way through the streets on foot, the entire concourse singing the favorite hymns of the man whom death had claimed.

This is an ancient and usual custom in Cornwall. The sight of the mourners and the pall bearers on foot in itself impresses one with an added degree of reverence. And when to this is added the chanting of the hymns as the cortege wends along the ceremony exemplifies a degree of sincerity which could not be so strongly manifested by any other means.

In the rural districts of Cornwall and elsewhere mourners not only walk from the home of the dead man to the house of worship, but also from the church to the graveside. This custom is obviously impracticable here in Calumet on account of the great distance of the cemetery from the church.

In the old country, where "God's acre" is almost universally a part of the churchyard or only a short distance removed, a carriage or a hearse at a funeral is an unusual sight.

The conference at the Spalding yesterday between Edward Hines, representing the lumber carriers' interests, and B. J. Keefe, president of the International Longshoremen's association, concerning the question of whether the lumber shovers shall receive 50 cents or 52½ cents per hour for their work, resulted in no decision being reached. It was decided that it would be useless to call in a third arbitrator, and the two men have left for their homes, Mr. Hines returning to Chicago last evening and Mr. Keefe leaving for the East today.

The two representatives came to the conclusion that it would be useless to call in a third arbitrator, when it was found that they could not agree on any one of the many names submitted. Mr. Hines wished a man chosen who was not in politics and who was not an extensive employer of labor, objecting to the name of Mayor Cullum, among others, because he is a man dependent, to some extent, on votes. Mayor Cullum was favored as an individual, but the fact that he is in politics barred him.

On leaving the city last evening Mr. Hines said that it would be necessary for him to again visit Duluth before a final adjustment of the matter could be reached. He said that the carriers' side of the case was prepared in writing, while the longshoremen insist on a verbal submission of the case. The date of the next meeting has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Keefe said the other side was not prepared, in that they did not have present the parties directly interested.

Until an agreement is reached the longshoremen will continue to load boats at the rate of 50 cents an hour. A close account of their time is kept, however, and if it is finally decided that they are to be paid at the rate of 52½ cents an hour, they will receive the extra 2½ cents for every hour they have worked since the first meeting between the longshoremen and carriers, several weeks ago in Duluth. If it is not so decided, the scale of 50 cents an hour will prevail throughout the season.

All the men in the union have all the work they can attend to, and get in full time every day. Some work overtime, in cases where there is a great hurry to get a particular boat out of port, and so add to their income. It is frequently necessary to call in non-union members to assist in loading the boats. It is estimated that very day during the past week there have been about 1000 men employed at this class of work, which means that about $5000 a day is being placed in the pockets of Duluth working men each day from the funds of the lumber carriers.

This is but an indication of the injury the present strike of the Masters' and Pilots' association is doing Duluth, for if it were not for the strike several thousand more men would be employed at the other docks, receiving good wages, as are the longshoremen.

A. H. Garfield, of St. Paul, organizer for the Retail Clerks' International Protective association and vice-president of the St. Paul union, who is now in the city for the purpose of organizing the grocery clerks of Duluth, has called a meeting of the local clerks for tomorrow morning. It will be held at 10:30 o'clock in the Kalamazoo hall. At first it was decided the meeting would be Monday evening, but important business matters will call the organizer back to the Twin Cities before that time, so the date was changed to Sunday.

"I believe there is an excellent opportunity here for organizing an influential union," said Mr. Garfield last night. "The clerks are taking considerable interest in the matter at the start, and that is a good indication. I do not hope to get them all in as charter members. Sixteen or eighteen members at the start is considered a good number. Of course we will be glad to have more, but once a good start is made the membership will rapidly increase as a matter of course. In this way the interest in the organization is kept at a higher pitch than would be the case if all the men came in at once, leaving nothing to work for. They would get what they wanted immediately, and would then lose interest in the union and let it go to pieces.

"One of the first things that will be asked for will be better hours. No unreasonable demands will be made, however. The clerks thoroughly understand the situation here, and will take no unreasonable action in any way. We find a sentiment among many of the merchants themselves favoring shorter hours. In an affair of the kind the International association never interferes with the workings of the local, knowing that the members of the local themselves know more about the conditions prevailing in their locality, and therefore the needs of that locality than do officers of the international."

SOME PEOPLE ARE CROSS AND UGLY,

From Stomach and Liver Troubles—Cured by Rea Bros.' Cascarin.

"Do you know that thousands of men become irritable, cross and mean on account of their liver?" Nothing irritates a man so much as the general rundown feeling produced by disorder of the bowels. He can enjoy none of those things which tend to make life pleasant. He becomes isolated from his friends because their good humor grates on his nerves. He looks upon life through blue glasses. He feels miserable all over. If he only took a good dose of Rea Bros.' Cascarin he would soon feel considerable better. This remedy is prescribed by physicians for all stomach troubles, and is a great family laxative, having stood the test for years. If your bowels are not in good order, get a bottle of Cascarin at once. Do not let your complaint drag on until some awful disease like Appendicitis sets in. Take Cascarin. It is the only laxative that deserves a place in every home, being made from roots, barks, herbs, plants and berries, nature's true remedies. The manufacturers guarantee it to be satisfactory or they will refund the money paid for it. A large bottle, fifty cents. At all leading druggists.

SUES FOR REWARD.

E. J. Cooper Claims Profit For Locating Coal Land.

Claiming that he discovered coal lands and has been unable to collect the $1000 reward promised for his discovery, Edwin J. Cooper has begun an action in district court to recover the amount from J. A. Ferguson, local agent for the Pioneer Fuel company.

Mr. Cooper alleges that he was the owner of some ore land in Montana, and that he made an agreement with Mr. Ferguson whereby the latter was to purchase an adjoining vacant tract in case that it proved to have on it a sufficient amount of coal. Mr. Cooper claims that one of the terms of the agreement was that Mr. Ferguson was to pay him $1000 as a reward for revealing the land, in case the purchase was made.

In the complaint it is alleged that Mr. Ferguson made a trip to Montana last summer and was satisfied with the land, indicating his intention to buy it. Mr. Cooper says he claimed his reward, but that Mr. Ferguson refused to pay it.

BOB DUNN STRIKES POLITICAL WRITER

Struck at Him With Umbrella and Smashed His Hat.

St. Paul, June 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert C. Dunn, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor and ex-state auditor, assaulted Charles B. Cheney, political writer on the Minneapolis Journal on the street today, at noon.

Mr. Dunn applied a questionable remark to the Journal man, which Mr. Cheney resented, and, before anyone could interfere, Mr. Dunn struck at Mr. Cheney with an umbrella. The blow smashed Mr. Cheney's derby.

Mr. Cheney came back with a blow on Mr. Dunn's neck, but at this juncture friends interfered, and Mr. Dunn, pale and much excited, was induced to desist. He walked rapidly to his headquarters in the New York Life building.

Mr. Dunn was standing at the corner of Wabasha and Sixth streets, talking to a friend, when Mr. Cheney and the others stoped to greet him.

County Attorney Spear, of Cass county, engaged him in conversation regarding political affairs in general, and during it some good-natured "joshing" was indulged in regarding the Minneapolis Journal's attitude towards Mr. Dunn, and other papers which had been and wer antagonistic to his choice for governor.

"Oh, the Journal," retorted Mr. Dunn, with some heat. "That dirty sheet does not bother me. I am lucky to have it against me."

"I can buy that old paper for 10 cents," he continued, turning to Mr. Cheney, the Journal's representative, laying much stress on his words.

"That's how cheap you are, Cheney," he added.

"What do you mean, Bob?" asked Mr. Cheney, coloring under the accusation.

"You know what I mean, you are going away from here," answered Mr. Dunn.

"You take that back," shouted Mr. Cheney, and with the words started at Mr. Dunn.

Mr. Dunn was ahead of him, and his umbrella descended on Mr. Cheney's head, knocking off his hat.

Mr. Cheney struck out with his fist, and the blow landed on Mr. Dunn's neck.

Here the two mixed and the umbrellas of each were making lively passes, when the Dispatch representative and others interfered and induced Mr. Dunn to leave.

In the scuffle Mr. Cheney's hand was scratched, either the sharp point of Mr. Dunn's collar or his umbrella catching the flesh between the thumb and finger and ripping the skin.

Mr. Dunn hurried down the street and immediately went to his office.

Mr. Dunn asserted after the trouble, that Mr. Cheney had struck at him first.

Mr. Cheney and Mr. Dunn have never been on the best of terms. The fact that Mr. Cheney was connected with the Journal made him very bitter toward him and his attack when the two met today was not unexpected.

SEVERELY SCORES EVELETH OFFICIALS

Sheriff Butchart Claims They Show No Effort to Aid Him.

Did Not Even Inform Him of the Trouble at the Jail.

Sheriff William Butchart, who with deputies Frank Magie, R. S. Lerch, Sig Levy, Newton Randall and Michael Horgan, were called to Eveleth to protect the property of the Drake & Stratton company at its stripping work, during the strike, returned to the city last evening

Sheriff Butchart said this morning that everything was quiet at the stripping work when the officers returned last night, in fact, the strikers had been quiet ever since the shooting of yesterday morning.

Sheriff Butchart is very much put out over the action of the municipal authorities at Eveleth in releasing, without notice, the man whom the deputies arrested when the trouble occurred yesterday. He says the fellow put in the Eveleth jail was the cause of the entire trouble and the shooting, and that the municipal authorities had no right to release him, at least without giving the sheriff due notice if they thought they could no longer hold him with safety to themselves.

It is claimed that when the man was released from jail by the Eveleth police yesterady noon, the sheriff and his deputies were eating lunch at a hotel less than a block away where they could have easily been reached to go after their prisoner had the mayor and police department at Eveleth summoned them.

As to his coming back to Duluth Sheriff Butchart said his force of deputies was no longer needed at the stripping work and he would stay no longer at Eveleth if the municipal authorities showed no more disposition to put down lawlessness than they have shown since the county officers went up there.

According to the report of the sheriff the trouble at the stripping work yesterday morning was exaggerated in some particulars in the stories that reached Duluth, while in other ways it is likely that more damage was inflicted on the strikers than is generally known.

The sheriff says that there are about 400 men on the strike and with a very few exceptions these are Finlanders. The Finlanders have been in a rather ugly mood, it is said, for some days because one of their foremen was discharged by the company for making trouble. On top of this dissatisfaction came the cut in wages and the Finlanders determined to take matters in their own hands.

While the Austrians and the Italians at the stripping work desired to get employment at the scale of wages offered by the stripping company, the Finlanders refused to let any of them go on the work.

Yesterday morning a Finlander attacked one of the Austrian workmen and was pounding him over the head with a piece of wire cable with some iron tied at the end.

Deputy Sheriff Magie, who was standing about 50 feet from the point of assault went into the crowd to the rescue of the Austrian and attempted to put the Finlander under arrest when his companions began to gather around in a threatening manner. One of them hitting Magie in the back with a club. Several of the other deputies rushed into the crowd and formed around Deputy Sheriff Magie while he was putting on the handcuffs and they succeeded in standing off the strikers until Mr. Magie had gone about 100 feet with his prisoner. Realizing that the man in charge was bound for jail, the crowd made a rush for the officers and began shooting at them, also flourishing clubs and pieces of gas pipe.

The deputies broke for the shanty where the rifles were stored and the Finlanders thinking that they had the officers on the run pursued them hotly. As soon as the officers reached the shanty they seized the rifles and began shooting toward the pursuing strikers. As soon as the shooting began the Finlanders, it is claimed, made desperate efforts to get out of range and out of sight, some of them fighting as they ran, firing revolvers and throwing rocks.

Only two men fell after the firing began by the deputies, one man shot in the breast and another receiving a glancing bullet wound on the head.

The officers are satisfied that several of the other strikers were hit with bullets, though none were seriously injured. One of the deputies distinctly remembers seeing one big Finlander stand on the edge of the bank throw a rock, then grab his shoulder, where he was hit with a bullet, and run. The strikers who were slightly injured by bullets are said to be lying low because they are afraid that they might afterwards be identified as taking part in the attack on the officers.

The two men who fell during the firing were picked up by the officers and sent to the hospital.

After the shooting the strikers kept at a distance from the sheriff's force.

Previous to the fight, several of the Duluth deputies were threatened by strikers, being told that if they knew what was best for them they would go back to Duluth and stay. One of the ringleaders who made the strongest threats when the officers first reached Eveleth was conspicuous thereafter by his absence from localities where the deputies were sent.

CLAIM THE CITY

Hearst Men Claim the Opposition Has No Show.

Plans Made for Entertainment of Democratic State Convention.

Primaries for the election of delegates to the St. Louis county Democratic convention, to be held in this city a week from today, will be held from 7 until 9 o'clock this evening, at the regular precinct polling places throughout the various wards of the city.

The Hearst workers, who have been very zealous for their candidate's welfare, have gotten in good shape for tonight's coucuses, and have, it is understood, a full set of delegates ready for each and every precinct in the city, and assert with every show of confidence that the opposition, which is generally referred to by them as the Parker crowd, have not a "ghost" of a show, and will be trying their heads against a stone wall, figuratively speaking, by opposing the Hearst organization at the voting this evening.

The Herald was enabled to obtain an almost complete list of the Hearst delegates who are runing for the thirty-six places which are to be filled by tonight's efforts, either for Hearst or his opponents. The other workers are not known to have out tickets yet, and such work as is being done by them seems to be kept under the hat. They claim to be working, just the same, but are not giving us many details as the Hearst hustlers.

Following is the list of sixty delegates, as far as had been slated by noon today, such precincts as were not filled being expected to have candidates agreed upon early this afternoon:

At the meeting of the general committee of the local Democracy to make arrangements for the state convention, which will be held in this city June 22, held last night in Kalamazoo hall, the following chairmen were selected for their respective committees:

Reception committee, T. T. Hudson; publicity, Bert Fesler; hotels and restaurants, Fred L. Ryan; halls and meetings, W. E. McEwen; decorations, John Hogan; entertainment, John D. Brady.

To succeed the late Joseph A. Mannheim, as chairman of the general committee, Mayor M. B. Cullum was chosen. Mr. Mannheim's death interfered with the committee work for a time, as he had been very active and efficient in getting the committees arranged for, and some of the members of the various committees had been appointed and notified by him. As soon as can be determined, the entire roster of committees can be given out. The reception committee will number 100 names, to be appointed from different wards of the city, while the other committees whose chairmen have been named above, save the general committee, will consist of five members each.

Mayor Cullum and the chairmen of the various sub-committees as described, will act as an executive committee and will next week hold a meeting with the Commercial club committee to outline and commence the regular work in connection with the coming state convention.

The Commercial club committee consists of T. W. Hugo, chairman; Simmon Clark, Ward Ames, Sr., George H. Crosby and A. H. Comstock, Mr. Hugo being chairman of the public affairs committee of the club and the other gentlemen being chairmen of the public affairs sub-committees.

All county conventions throughout the state for the selection of delegates to the state convention here will be held next Saturday, and the action of the local Democracy in holding the primaries tonight is the firing of the first gun in the state campaign, for tonight's primaries are being held ahead of any others in the state. The Hearst people are contending that of the thirty-six delegates to be elected not more than a dozen at the outside will represent the intersts of Parker or other candidates inimical to Hearst, and that if the county should go well for Hearst it would be a great signal to rural counties over the state to follow suit.

They consider it a decided victory that Ramsey county, which is practically conceded to Parker, should not hold its primaries until the last minute, thereby reserving its example until a date when it will, they believe, fail to be of any effect over the state. The primaries in Ramsey county will be held next Friday night, and by the time they are concluded, all the other primaries in the various counties of the state will have been concluded. It is believed by some that Ramsey county, if it goes for Parker, will show twice as many delegates for Parker as many other counties of the state, as it has 85 delegates.

With its 102 delegates, Hennepin county is the scene of active hostilities. The Hearst people are claiming Hennepin, also, and say they have been organized several weeks, the opposition having been comparatively inactive until the last two weeks or thereabouts.

The results of the various primaries throughout the state, to be held between now and next Saturday will be watched with a great deal of interest, and the effect of whatever is done in a big county like St. Louis will have plenty of time to get play and work its influence.

There are a good many people debating as to who is likely to be made sergeant-at-arms of the state convention here. This is a problem that the committee meeting next week will have to wrestle with. There are a number of men in the city who would like the honor, but in order to "keep peace in the family" it is necessary for the committee to be particular whom it chooses. It is an important post and one to which attaches considerable honor.

FUNK DISAPPEARS.

Police Cannot Get Him to Prosecute Henry.

A charge of drunkenness was preferred against Samuel Henry, the negro who was arrested yesterday for cutting a man named Funk with a razor.

Funk has disappeared and the police were unable to locate him in time to use him as a witness against Henry. The charge was therefore changed from assault to drunkenness. The negro was intoxicated at the time of his arrest, and he pleaded guilty to the charge against him. He was sentenced to twenty days in the county jail by Judge Windom.

Meanwhile the police are endeavoring to locate Funk, and if he can be secured before the negro's term expires the other charge will be pushed.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Minneapolis, June 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—William A. Vail, aged 45, assistant general manager of the Northwestern Telephone company, is dead at his home here from heart failure, brought on by an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Vail came to Minneapolis from Indianapolis about eighteen months ago to become assistant general manager of the telephone company.

New York, June 4.—Walter Stauben Carter, head of the law firm of Carter, Hughes, Rounds & Schurman, of this city, died yesterday of pneumonia, at his home in Brooklyn. He was born Feb. 24, 1833, at Barkham, Conn., and was eighth in descent from William Brewster, of the Mayflower.

Gmunden, Austria, June 4.—Princess Mary of Baden, eldest daughter of the duke of Cumberland, and wife of Prince Maxmillian of Baden, died here today. She was born in 1850. The princess was operated upon for appendicitis on Monday and was progressing satisfactorily until yesterday, when a sudden relapse culminated in her entirely unexpected death.

Dropped a $1000 Bill.

The party who recently dropped a $1000 bill in the cabin of a feryboat had considerable difficulty in recovering it because he could not remember its number or date. Persons with a weak stomach also have considerable difficulty in trying to regain health and strength. Their meals cause them so much distress, such as heartburn, gas of the stomach, nausea and sick headaches that they are completely discouraged. Then dieting is suggested. This is also a mistake, for nature intended you to eat heartily and the stomach to properly digest the food. If yours is weak and unable to do its work properly a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will soon restore it to its normal condition. It also cures insomnia, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and malaria, fever and ague. Be sure and try it.

Of the International Woman's Suffrage Conference.

Berlin, June 4.—The International Woman's Suffrage conference in session here devoted the day to debating the platform and electing officers. At the wish of the English delegates the declaration that woman does not owe obedience to the state or to her husband was omitted, and the word "tyranny" was changed to "misuse of power."

Miss Susan B. Anthony declining the presidency because of her advanced age, the league elected Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of Wyoming, president; Dr. Anita Augusporus, of Germany, first vice president; Mrs. Fawcett, of England, second vice president, and Mrs. Foster-Avery, of Philadelphia, secretary.

Miss Anthony was made the first member of the league, in recognition of the fact that she was a member of the original suffrage convention held in Washington fifty years ago.

Weather Prevents Boat Club From Getting Their Practice.

Good Attendance of Duluth People at Race Is Expected.

With the high wind that was howling around the point last night and the sea washing over the government pier the Duluth boat club eight was unable to get any practice with the new shell. The old oarsmen say that 40 men could not have held a boat in the wind that was prevailing much less get it settled in the water so any rowing might be done.

It had been intended to get the two shells out this afternoon with two eights, and to have the fours and some others in the water for a series of events, but it was believed the weather would not permit it.

The new sweeps are here, however, and are said to be a source of much pleasure to the eight. They are expected to add much to the prowess of the Zenith City octet when it "goes up against" Madison university's crew next Thursday. The eight will leave here tomorrow afternoon over the Great Northern. Tomorrow morning the boys will gather at the boat house about 9:30 o'clock and unless the weather is good they will not have a chance for a final float before starting on their trip. They will pack the boat in the morning and put it in the car which has been arranged for its transportation.

About 3 o'clock the men will meet again at the boathouse and from there proceed with their luggage to the depot. A good deal of interest has been awakened by the coming event and it is believed that a score or more of Duluth people will be present at the trials. The rate of fare has been put at one fare for the round trip going today, Monday and Tuesday, and good returning for a week. This makes the event available to the friends of the boat club at a very reasonable figure.

The eight's members say that the weather here is no criterion for those who contemplate going, and anticipate very good weather below during the contest. They feel sure that they will at least have the advantage of a much calmer surface to row on than they have had here during the recent practice.

It is understood that the nautical enthusiasts at St. Paul and Minneapolis are "rooting" as hard as they can for the Duluth boys and are anxious to see the Zenith City contingent walk away with the honors as the people at home. A representation of the Twin Cities is expected to attend the regatta.

The general character of the week at Madison is important being the fiftieth anniversary of the university, and as such drawing students and their friends from all over the country. This lends additional interest to the match, as so many people are expected from throughout the various states. The advantage derived from the low railroad rate is obvious, in view of this.

BAND CONCERT, 3 P. M.

IMPORTANT BATTLE

Is Impending Between Gen. Kuroratkin and Gen. Kuroki.

St. Petersburg, June 4.—The general public at the Russian capital is imbued with the belief that important military developments are impending at Liao Yang, and that a general engagement between Gen. Kuropatkin's and Gen. Kuroki's armies is imminent. Although the authorities are doing nothing to discourage the idea, the best informed circles at the war office do not anticipate a decisive battle immediately, unless brought on more or less unexpectedly by an accidental collision between strong columns, as often happens in warfare. The war office's information does not indicate that the Japanese have concentrated for an attack on Kuropatkin, and it is said that they are not ready to assume the offensive. Nevertheless it is known that differences of opnion exist at the Russian headquarters as to the advisability of taking the aggressive, and it is believed that this matter was the object of the conference between the commander-in-chief and Alixff Thursday. Kuropatkin's potion is becoming very formibadble, both in number and character of the troops at his disposal.

The condition of some of the Siberian reserves when called to the colors was not astisfactory and caused Kuropatkin misgivings, but it is now reported that they have been drilled into a state of efficiency. More important, however, are the large reinforcements of field artillery, in which the Russian army was especially weak. These have now arrived.

Nevertheless, Kuropatkin does not consider himself strong enough to risk the possibility of a defeat, which might be irretrievable and spell disaster or at least years of campaigning. His friends here say that if he gives battle of his own volition now, victory is certain, and they praise his steady conservatism, caution and refusal to listen to the counsel of the hotspurs.

Since the receipt of Gen. Stoessel's report the general staff is convinced that the Japanese losses in the fighting about Kin Chou were greater than officially admitted. It is known that only the very seriously wounded were included in that category. There are indications that both of the commanders are pursuing this plan, as the wounds made by the small calibre, high velocity bullets used in modern warfare, unless they reach a vital spot, heal quickly and in a few weeks most of the wounded men are again ready for active service.

EXCURSION SEASON

Will Be On In Earnest In Month of June.

Great Northern Road Gives Notice of Three to Come.

Some excursions are proposed to be run into this city by the Great Northern to further the influx of tourists to the city during the present month. Agent Brostedt, of the passenger department, notified Secretary Eva, of the Commercial club, today, of a proposal of that company to bring in crowds from Evansville, June 10; Litchfield, June 17, and Grand Forks, June 24. Each excursion will include the intermediate points between Duluth and the stations named.

The return of the visitors will be for Evansville, June 12; Litchfield, June 19, and Grand Forks, June 26. By this arrangement each excursion crowd will have two full days in the city, and Secretary Eva is especially anxious to compile a list of boarding places where the strangers can get entertainment at reasonable rates.

Headquarters for the accomodation of all these people and the giving to them of such information as they may want on their arrival in the city, have been established on the ground floor of the Manhattan building, the same place they were last year, which made it both convenient for everyone who has business in connection with the excursions, as well as convenient for the club, being practically next door to the home of the organization.

Excursions over the Northern Pacific will come in next Wednesday, as well as a week from that date, and the idea in getting the headquarters arranged for in the Manhattan building at this time has been that all the people intending to visit Duluth on the excursions might know through The Herald in ample time to know where, before leaving home, to go on their arrival.

In commenting on the necessity for places to accommodate the excursionists with board and rooms, Secretary Eva said he was at a loss to explain the failure of more people to respond to the advertisements which have been printed on the subject. Usually at this time of the year the returns have not been so large. It is desired that those who wish to get the benefit of having their accommodations put on this list send their names and addresses and other particulars to the Commercial club as soon as possible in order that no one be placed at a disadvantage by getting their names in the list too late for availability.

If sufficient rooms cannot be had by other means it might become necessary to start an effort to rent vacant houses and place cots and other conveniences in them while the visitors are here, and thus relieve the congestion of quarters.

UNEASINESS IN ENGLAND

London, June 4.—King Edward's activity in the field of international diplomacy has given rise to some uneasiness in foreign offices and other government circles, which finds special vent in the comment regarding the forthcoming meeting of the king with Emperor William at Kiel. The Spectator voices this feeling today, expressing grave alarm at the possibilities which may ensue from King Edward's German visit, saying:

"It is suggested that the emperor will take the opportunity of his royal uncle's visit to entangle us into some form of agreement, or that even if things do not go so far as that, Emperor William will somehow manage to compromise us in the region of foreign politics. When we remember what happened on the last visit of the emperor to England, how the British government against their will and interests, and apparently without their knowledge, were drawn into the Venezuelan mess and the Bagdad railroad imbroglio, we can hardly wonder at this feeling of anxiety."

The Associated Press understands that King Edward will be accompanied by a member of the cabinet, probably former Minister Lansdowne, so that the foreign office will be in a position to keep in touch with all developments and advise the king on the spot.

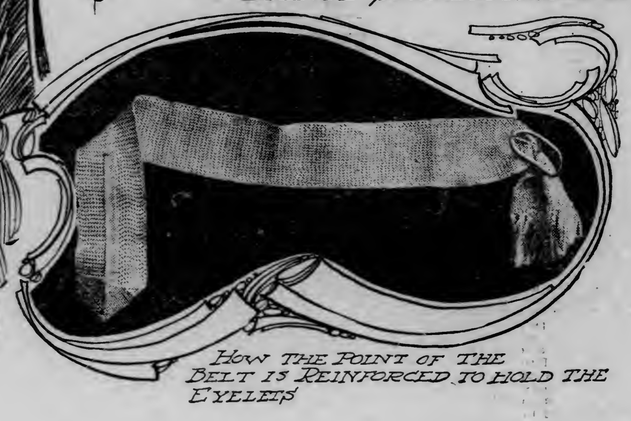
MATERIALS FOR MAKING THE NEW BELT

DAINTY SUMMER HOSIERY

THREE OF THE NEWEST SUMMER STOCKS

HOW IT LOOKS ON YOU



HOW THE POINT OF THE BELT IS REINFORCED TO HOLD THE EYELETS

BY MISS MANHATTAN.

Now that belts are worn with all styles of gowns it is important to have a large assortment on hand, including plain and fancy waist ornaments. Their popularity naturally makes them more or less of a common dress adjunct, and on this account it is considered something of an achievement to originate a style of belt that meets the requirements of the fashionable woman of the day. Leather belts have fallen to the level of the monotonous and silk girdles are not new, all of which makes the advent of a tailor belt constructed of wide braid with a trim buckle something of a pleasant occasion.

Think of being able to make your belt at home, too, which is quite possible with the one that is fully described here. Many women balk at the thought of wearing homemade dress accessories almost as strongly as they do at appearing in gowns of home manufacture. They conjure up visions of frightful atrocities that proclaim to all the world that they have been manufactured economically and amateurishly. But I defy anyone to detect the hand of the little home seamstress or even of milady herself in the accompanying illustrations, and yet the woman who made this belt doesn't know a tailor's goose from a brood of chickens.

The design of the belt is simplicity itself. There are no fancy ornaments to make it too dressy for shirtwaist suits. It looks exceptionally well with plain waists, and at the same time it adds a pretty touch to a costume that is made to reveal a little of the bodice between the top of the skirt and the lower part of the jacket. So many of the new coats are built to disclose the figure at the waist that we are inclined to believe either that the coat model is responsible for the increased fondness for extra fine belts or that because the belts themselves are so pretty women refuse to have their charms hidden altogether. To get round this difficulty coats are shortened very much all around, except just in front.

Not the least attractive feature of this belt lies in its adaptability to the figure. It is soft, yet possesses enough foundation to retain a becoming breadth as it wrinkles gracefully about the waist. The material used for making this belt is a very wide silk braid that is heavy, and is woven in a loose basket pattern, which gives the braid a bias appearance and permits it to stretch. A yard of the braid is more than what is actually required, but on account of its raveling propensities it is safer to provide yourself with a generous length of it. To line the belt enough soft silk or satin is needed to make a bias strip the same measurement as the belt, and for a buckle individual taste will have to decide upon whether it is to be one of gilt, pearl, gun metal or silver.

The first step in making the belt is to cut the piece of lining silk to correspond with the length of the braid and a trifle more than its width. Lay it over the inside of the belt and baste it firmly at both edges. In fact, it is a very good idea to put the silk on just a little full, for it is essential to have it stretch to the same extent as the braid. When the edges have all been neatly turned under one end of the belt is squared off, to be finished later with the buckle, and the other is fashioned in a point or wing. Here lies the most difficult feat of this particular bit of tailoring, for the braid is "pully," and at first it seems almost impossible to get it to lie flat and look trim and even. The best way to accomplish this task is to take this end of the braid and double the two sides together, making a crease through the middle, and then run a little seam across as though you were making a pocket. By taking in a deep enough seam so that the braid doesn't get a chance to ravel, then trimming it down very narrow and whipping the edges well so that there is no further chance for them to fray the trick is greatly simplified. When turned rightside out this will give you a perfectly shaped pointed tab on the end, and then the lining can be fitted under the edges without increasing the bulk and the whole basted down, ready to be stitched.

Machine stitching looks best on this belt, and, besides, it gives a very necessary firmness to the ends and the edges. One row is sufficient for the long sides, though two rows close together are very pretty, but the point must be done with not less than four or five rows to give it firmness and make it hold its shape. Without reinforcement of the stitching this part of the belt would get askew and look flimsy, while its whole beauty lies in its trimness, which yet lacks any stiffness.

At this point it is well to determine upon the desired or required length of the belt. The yard is, of course, much too long for the average waist, and, besides, the stretching of the braid adds to the original number of inches, but this is rather an advantage. Fold the belt around the waist, and after allowing an inch for turning under where the buckle goes on and about four more inches to pass through the shank of the buckle and leave loose after it has been securely fastened, cut off the extra inches or whatever is left over, it may be one or it may be eight inches.

The next step in the manufacture of this belt novelty depends upon the skill of some other workman, for even the cleverest novice cannot put brass or metal eyelets through a fabric. Take the belt in this state of incompleteness to a belt specialist or a custom shoemaker of high class and get him to insert four or five large brass eyelets, if the buckle is brass or gilt, and be sure to see that the eyelets fit the tongue of the buckle. It would be a dreadful catastrophe if they should be too small and if they were too large the beauty of the belt would be marred. The first eyelet should be inserted about three inches from the very tip of the pointed end and the others should follow at regular intervals at from three-quarters of an inch to an inch apart. It isn't necessary to have very large eyelets, such as those used on many of the new low shoes—in fact, a rather small one looks better.

With this neat accomplished, which is far from being a costly one, the belt is practically finished. All that is left for the maker to do is to attach the buckle, and this is too simple to require much description. The shank for that purpose is there and all the trick requires is to slip the buckle in place and finish the end of the braid as neatly and flat as possible. Of course, a small hole must be punched through the middle of the end to make a way for the tongue, but even that is not difficult.

As I said in the beginning, the style of buckle is all a matter of taste, but the choice of a plain gilt one with a narrow square rim and a slender tongue is recommended. Oval buckles seem to give a prettier appearance to the waist, and with this braid which crushes up very small it is advisable to select one that is longer than it is deep. The effect of a buckle that is so wide as to make the braid spread only where it is attached to the buckle is not very smart. Instead of giving a tapering line to the waist it suggests greater thickness, and at present it is the aim and struggle of every woman to secure a regular French figure with extremely small circumference.

Mother-of-pearl in all its irridescent glory makes a very charming buckle for white braid belts. Gun metal is suitable for black, and with the reds, blues, browns and tans almost any design and material looks well. The main thing is to select something plain, substantial and tailorlike. Silver-gilt rims set with brilliants are always attractive, hardly suitable for this kind of a belt. tive to the feminine eye, but they seem Soft ribbons and bands of silk are more appropriate with a finish of sparkling gems. There are many beautiful enameled effects that are none too fancy for this belt of wide, and the fashionable peacock blue tints are noteworthy examples of the art.

The cost of this belt novelty when made at home is so small an item that it comes within the reach of almost every woman, and on this account permits her to have an unusual variety of belts which might not otherwise be possible. The braid costs $1 a yard, the lining silk, if it has to be bought specially for the purpose, ought not to cost more than 35 cents, and a very handsome gilt buckle can be had for $1 or $1.50. Leaving a margin for the cost of putting in the eyelets, which should not be very much, such a belt could be made for $2.50, and nowhere could it be found ready made, with the same quality of materials used, for less than twice that amount. Belts are really an expensive item of dress just now. Suede ones, if they match suits, have to be dyed to order, and an ordinary style costs $5. If there is any ornamentation except the plain suede-covered buckle then the price goes up accordingly. Some of the new belts have two rows of large metal discs or fancy buttons at the back set rather far apart and arranged so that the two in the middle taper slightly inward. Others are studded elaborately with steel, jet, pearl, gilt or silver cabochons, and not a few of the white suede ones have geometric designs wrought in colored stones. The effect is strikingly beautiful.

Strips of Oriental embroidery, in bright colors or gold thread, are finished with clasps of Eastern workmanship and design, and are to be worn with linen and louisine silk shirtwaist suits this summer. It is not unusual for such a belt to be the only bit of color in a costume, its beauty being thus enhanced. With pongee suits, in the shade we have grown accustomed to, and also in the new lighter one which is being made up into whole tailor costumes, an Oriental belt is by far the smartest thing one can wear.

A variation of the braid belt described has two very narrow rows of gilt braid following along each edge and leaving a border of the foundation on the outer side. Again, a broad piece of gold trimming is stitched right through the middle of the belt. There is the charm of novelty about these belts, but they lack the smart air that characterizes the less ornate style.

I have only touched upon the change in women's waists, but later on I hope to go more into details regarding the altered fashion. It is true, however, that it takes fewer inches to go around the fashionable woman's figure than it did a year ago, and wide belts now flourish where they would have looked awkward and exaggerated then. The tendency is certainly toward the wasplike, with very bouffant skirts to make the difference all the more marked.

Snapshots at Woman's Follys.

Here is a question the Saunterer is ever asking, but which is never answered: "Why is it that a certain type of girls and young women have dropped into the same inelegant manner of lifting their trailing gowns?"

With their two hands they haut all the skirts' length and fullness round in front, where, grasped the length of their arms, the hands are brought close together—sometimes even clasped—and with every step the folds of the gown are flapped back and forth. On some women, those with expansively developed hips and the extremest straight-front elongation of the waist-line and corresponding protension of the posterior part of the body, the effect is so impressibly vulgar that you blush for them.

The retort, "Honi soit qui mal y pense" falls pointless here. No thinking is necessary or even possible; there is nothing left for the imagination to work upon! The offense is before your eyes. View the woman from any point, and she is a spectacle for gods and men. And how scornfully men's eyes follow her, how derisively they laugh at her folly!

The marvel is that so many women are purblind to these follies of their sex. Were they not, the first imitator would never arise to copy such idiosyncratic movements; and if not copied they would promptly disappear. Copying, you know, is the subtlest flattery; and in such cases is the stimulant to the invention of some more unspeakable caprice.

Shirtwaist Suit Possibilities.

The shirtwaist costume has now grown from a modest venture of two or three seasons back to one of the well-established necessities of summer wear. Gingham was used for the original shirtwaist suits, but each year the fabrics have grown richer, more embellished and more complicated in the making until this season no material is thought too rich, and a recent shirtwaist suit at the French Derby capped the climax by being made of orange velvet with embroidered trimmings. But it is safe to predict that the true place of the shirtwaist suit will not be lost. Undoubtedly the mercerized ginghams, liberty silks, chambries and silk foulards with the organdies will always be the best materials for the shirtwaist suit.

The front closing plait with or without a back yoke or body lining with a six-gored skirt, having an inverted box-plait or gathered at the back and tucked at each of the side seams makes an up-to-date shirtwaist suit effect. A faintly figured organdie to be cool and fluffy-looking should be made without lining and with a yoke ending at the sleeve holes. A simple collar and cuff set of the organdie embroidered in heavy silk should be worn with this costume. The shirtwaist should be front-closing and strapped across at the button holes with embroidery. The skirt to this suit is nine-gored, and has an inverted box-plait behind. It should just touch the instep and is without flouncing.

A Plea For Deep Breathing.

Have you ever surprised your lungs with a deep, prolonged inhalation of pure, fresh air? If you have not, try it, and be not discouraged nor alarmed should slight dizziness result at first. It is the confusion of the disorderly mob of waste atoms lurking in stagnant cells, just as spiders flee away when their webs are crushed down.

Strange it is that human folly does not end with shunning and fearing fresh air, but commonly, is also a niggard in the amount of the depleted stuff it permits its lungs to inhale. It has become a truism that no other voluntary function of the body is habitually performed in so careless and inadequate a manner as breathing. That the importance of a function affecting the body's weal and woe so profoundly should have been practically ignored by Western scientists for centuries is one of those problems which it were a waste of brain tissue to attempt solving. In the Orient people have never lost sight of the deep significance in the assertion that "Breath is Life." They have even gone farther and in its cult have formulated whole systems of body-building, and of mental, moral and spiritual development.

What the warped civilization of centuries has recognized as normal breathing is known to be insufficient to give the lungs the necessary exercise to develop and strengthen them or to maintain their integrity; nor does it, even in fresh air, supply the blood with sufficient oxygen to purify it. It should never be forgotten that the lungs are nature's first and principal agent in this purification, without which the blood cannot be maintained in a disease-repelling condition. Deep breathing is worth all the medicines in the pharmacopoeia, and it will be for the everlasting benefit of humanity, vastly raising the average of health, when its vital importance is more generally recognized.

As better habits can be engendered only by persistent practice, the remedy for the prevalent evil is in conscious breathing, in lung gymnastics that, while they exercise the respiratory muscles, will wont them to better ways. The exercises should be taken both night and morning, and at intervals during the day; and always in fresh, pure air. In moments of extreme fatigue it will do more for recuperation than anything else can. Have no fear of the air being cold; when breathing deeply there is hardly a possibility of taking cold, for the blood is too thoroughly oxygenated to permit any chill. It is stimulating all combustion processes instead, and thus deep-breathing may be a safeguard in crises of unavoidable exposure.

When exercising, the inhalations, always through the nostrils, should be prolonged till every respiratory muscle is called into action and every lung cell is distended. It was never intended that only a part of the lungs should be used, but men and women have each adopted their special method of defeating nature; the former, from their neglect of clavicular (upper chest) breathing furnishing the most victims of tuberculosis; and the latter, from their construction of the thorax, inhibiting all the lower muscles from activity; thus often causing atrophy in the lower lobes of the lungs. In habitual breathing the exhalations should be in rhythm, with the inhalations, counting from four, to six, or eight, during a movement, according to the lung power, which will increase amazingly as the chest walls and its floor, the diaphragm, gain elasticity through regular practice. The pulse—heart-beat—should be the unit of count, so that the breath will flow in unison with it, which equalizes the vibrations; thus, inhale during six pulse-throbs; hold breath during three; exhale during six counts; hold lungs empty during three counts. Repeat a dozen times or more. It will become habitual.

When taking lung gymnastics there should be now and again deeper, prolonged inhalations, packing the breath as it were; and the exhalations should occasionally be made more forcible, accompanied by an actively felt movement of the diaphragm, which greatly aids in emptying the stagnant cells in the lower parts of the lungs. This foul residuary air, always a menace to health, and the frequent cause of so-called malarial fevers, is not expelled and renewed in less than seven deep prolonged breaths.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Slight In Duluth, But Reaching One Cent at Chicago.

Flax Trading Was Dull and the Market Unchanged.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 4.—The wheat market had a setback today, the shorts evidently having been pretty well driven in yesterday. The Duluth market was the firmest, the July here showing a loss of only 1c as compared with 3c in Minneapolis, 1c in Chicago and 1c in New York. The bearishness was not due to any more favorable weather news for that was of the opposite character. Advices from Kansas and Oklahoma, which have been looked upon as the most promising sections of the winter wheat country, are that too much rain has fallen. Points in Kansas are reporting from four to five inches falling, which is a veritable flood. Oklahoma City reported four inches and Missouri also had heavy rains. The three spring wheat states had an average of one inch.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d higher and Paris ¼c lower. Broomhall estimates the world's shipments to be reported Monday at 3,600,000 bus. The English visible supply shows a decrease of 139,000 bus, as compared with an increase of 818,000 in the same week last year.

The stocks of grain at Duluth will show heavy decreases this week owing to the vessel movement. Wheat is estimated to decrease 1,000,000 bus and flax 500,000 bus, and other coarse grains will show large decreases.

Car receipts at Duluth were 26, against 34 a year ago and at Minneapolis, 111, against 183 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 137, against 217 last year. Chicago received 12, against 15 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 202,000 bus, last year 225,000 bus. Shipments 246,000 bus, last year 174,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 111,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed 1¼-⅝c lower. July oats closed ⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 809,000 bus, last year 470,000 bus. Shipments 623,000 bus, last year 508,000 bus. Clearances were 400 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was quiet. The July option opened 1c higher at 90¾c, fell to 85¾c at 10:45, advanced to 86c at 11:25 and closed at 85⅞c a decline of 1¾c. The September option fell 1¼c to 83¼c.

Cash offerings were fairly good, the strength here as compared with Minneapolis increasing the movement this way somewhat. From 1 to 2c over July was paid for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull and unchanged throughout the day.

Oats fell ½c and rye had a slump of 2c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Heavy Realizing Sales Caused Decline In Wheat.

Chicago, June 4.—Heavy realizing sales today caused a decline of an even cent in the price of July wheat. At the start the market acted top heavy. There was good buying on higher cables and on continued rains throughout the West and Southwest. Initial sales on July were made trading at an advance of ⅛c to ¼c at 89¾c to 89¾c. The opening strength was only momentary. On a rush of longs to secure profits the price suddenly declined, July selling off to 88¾c. Sentiment continued quite bearish. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 149 cars, against 64 cars last week and 245 cars a year ago.

The market continued weak throughout the day, bearish reports from the northwest increasing the desire to sell. After declining to 88¼c, the market closed weak with July at the low point, a net loss of 1c.

Weakness in wheat brought out liberal liquidation of corn, resulting in a considerable decline. While sentiment was quite bullish, due to heavy rains throughout the corn belt, there was a general disposition to even up over Sunday. July opened ¼c lower to ⅛c higher at 50¾c to 51¼c, and sold down to 50⅜c, rallying later to 50⅝@⅝c. Local receipts were 553 cars, with 56 of contract grade.

Weakness prevailed the remainder of the day, closing prices being near the low point. After selling at 49¾c, July closed at 48⅞@⅞c, a loss of 1⅛@⅜c.

Oats were influenced by the weakness of other grains, the market ruling easier at a moderate decline. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher, at 40⅜c to 40¾c, and sold off to 39⅝@40c. Local receipts were 137 cars.

Provisions were easier in sympathy with the decline in grains. September pork opened 2½c lower at $11.85, and declined to $11.77½. Lard was unchanged to 2½c lower at $6.62½ to $6.65, and ribs were 2½c lower to 2½c higher at $6.87½@$6.92½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—The weather map showed a continuation of the wet Southwestern conditions on which extreme prices were made yesterday, but holders in general realized and overwhelmed the less aggressive buying. The conservatism displayed was due in part to the quick advance this week and in part to the fact that Southwestern operators have not done much buying in this market so far, which created the idea that perhaps too much importance had been given the news from that quarter. The forecast for tomorrow is for unsettled conditions. Minneapolis cash business was reported dull. No. 1 northern brought 10c over July here for a small lot. The Washburn people, after a trip through the Northwest, reported superb conditions. With favorable weather the market is likely to rule lower next week. Estimated for Monday, 20 cars.

Corn—The corn market suffered from an avalanche of general commission house selling, which was mostly profit-taking. Country purchases are on a somewhat larger scale and receipts continue liberal. There is some doubt expressed regarding the effect of the continuous rains. No actual damage has probably been done, but the tendency is to curtail country movement. Unsettled showery conditions are predicted for the entire Southwest. The cash market was weak and from 1c to 3c a bus lower. Some further decline next week is probable, particularly if weather is favorable. Estimated receipts Monday, 320 cars.

Oats—The same general conditions affecting wheat and corn were responsible for the lower range of oat values. The July was weak relatively, the September reflecting a greater amount the slump in corn. Receipts are light and there is nothing bearish regarding the cash situation. Crop reports continue on the whole favorable. The sample market was steady for the good grades, but irregular and lower for the poor ones. Estimated receipts for Monday, 105 cars.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Cables did not respond to the advance here yesterday and although there were further heavy rains and the market opened rather sharply, the general tone was disappointing and the closing was rather heavy. Of course being Saturday and the shorts having covered freely yesterday, there was more or less scattered liquidation of long stuff. While further showers are predicted and unsettled conditions seem to prevail, holders are rather nervous of the possibility of better weather. The weather will likely be the important factor for the immediate future.

Corn—It opened up a little sharply on further rains and then dragged to the close on scattered liquidation and reinstatement of short lines by prominent local traders who covered several days. It seems a little early yet, with the big end of the corn crop seeded to be panicky over wet weather. We are inclined to think it is too soon, yet, to be utterly discouraged about the corn crop of 1904.

Oats—It shared in general weakness and from practically the same causes. The cash situation in oats is rather better than in either of the other grains except when one views the enhanced premiums on wheat. We mean the current demand for oats is larger and more steady.

Provisions—It was a rather quiet market outside buying and there was some selling by local traders who bought yesterday. Receipts are about the same as a year ago and shipments not much different. It was a dull market on the whole, and with no great improvement in its general tone or in the close of speculative buying.

Kansas City wires: This morning's papers devotes seven columns to the rains and damage by floods in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma Territory along the Cottonwood, several miles wide. Fifteen miles wide at the junction of the Neosho and Cottonwood rivers, Florence, Kas., reports heaviest rain ever known, five inches. Great damage to growing crops. Iola, Kansas, says water three feet deep in streets, raining hard, thousands of acres of crops ruined, dozen farmers compelled to leave their homes in boats.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Our southwestern advices are exceedingly bullish. The Kansas City reports coming in this morning are hard to believe, referring to floods and damage to grain. Florence, Kansas, reports 4 to 5 inches rain. These reports will certainly lead to higher markets. There is a very large short interest in July wheat and corn in this market.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Over four inches at Oklahoma City, and an average of an inch throughout the three spring wheat states, and raining this morning. Also heavy rains in Missouri and raining all over the state. Temperatures are about stationary. Northwest cloudy, West and Southwest cloudy.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co., Chicago: Wheat—Continued heavy rains in the Southwest caused a higher opening, but indifferent cables and a disposition to take profits caused some reaction. Fluctuations are natural and healthy, but we feel that the tendency is to a higher level, based upon the simple proposition of a smaller crop and reserves than last year.

STOCK GOSSIP.

W. H. Laidley & Co.: The stock market was strictly a holiday affair and trading almost entirely done away with. Prices were a little firmer, but there were not fluctuations enough in value to show any decided tendency. The bank statement was about as expected and favorable. We continue to feel that the market will be very narrow and slow, and still think stocks a sale for turns on bulges.

* * *

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: Absolutely no significance can be attached to the trading. There was the usual week-end evening up of contracts, and this seemed to cause rather more buying than selling. Before the close the market sagged off and net changes for the day were entirely trifling and insignificant.

* * *

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The market has been well hammered, but stocks refuse to go lower. At the same time conditions are not ripe for a bull campaign, the present outlook is a narrow trading market, but developments seem to be shaping around rather favorable than otherwise and if I were trading at all I would be inclined to favor the bull side. This does not mean that you are to jump in and buy stocks freely. There is no improvement in either the business situation or nothing to put the market up except manipulation for the purpose of unloading. If we get an active day with a declining tendency, you can sell them short. If if the market rallies five points or so, they can be sold on the rally. Meanwhile I would go slow or trade on a scale on either side. The market closed yesterday as though it might be jacked up a few points.

* * *

Coe Commission Co.: Another tame and interesting session marked today's trading in the stock exchange. Price changes were fractional and trading very limited. Everybody seems to be waiting for the action of the political conventions and for more definite crop information. We believe that good stocks should be bought on all recessions with a view to holding them.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was again very dull although prices were steady and some of the specialties higher. Traders did littel and there was no commission house business. It looks as if this inactivity was going to continue for some time. Money is easy and the market is in such shape that on any good developments it would have a sharp advance. The close was featureless.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 4.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $164,001,355; gold, $71,118,719; silver, $24,221,552; United States notes, $9,528,225; treasury notes of 1890, $108,809; national bank notes, $14,531,502; total receipts this day, $2,043,722; total receipts this month, $1,079,075; total receipts this year, $500,379,306; total expenditures this day, $1,400,000; total expenditures this month, $6,030,000; total expenditures this year, $561, 602,072; deposits in national banks, $119,843,740.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 4.—There was great activity in the cotton market today. The opening was weak at a decline of 7 to 22 points on heavy selling, following continued good weather, and lower cables, and when the government's condition and acreage report was published at the end of the first half hour, the declines were increased in a sensational manner with leading room operators offering large blocks of cotton all along the line. New Orleans appeared to be an active seller here on the decline. Closing last night at 11.62, July opened at 11.55 and broke at 11.37 before the report was published, after which it sold at 11.32, a net loss of about 30 points, and a decline from the closing price of last week of nearly 1½ cents a pound. October sold as low as 9.95, a net loss of 34 points and December at 9.90 against 10.22 at the close yesterday. The heavy covering of shorts checked the decline toward the end of the first hour, but the undertone of the market showed little improvement.

Cotton futures closed steady; June, 11.12; July, 11.36; August, 11.60; September, 10.28; October, 9.87; November, 9.78; December, 9.78; January, 9.83. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.75; middling gulf, 12.00; sales, 100 bales.

INACTIVE TRADING

In the Stock Market and the Closing Heavy.

Unaffected By the Appearance of the Bank Statement.

New York, June 4.—The short week of trading in stocks has left the market in its rut of dullness and immobility. The doubt felt over the general outlook continues to paralyze speculative activity. The week's events have not helped to resolve those doubts. Continuous congestion of money in reserve centers point to impaired trade activity. The grain crops have made unsatisfactory progress owing to lack of sufficient warmth. Railroad gross earnings have compared more favorably with last year, but net earnings reported were discouraging. Measures of retrenchment of railroad expenses were interpreted as admissions of poor prospects for business. Reports of plans for curtailments of iron production caused depression. Money was almost a drug in the market.

New York, June 4.—Stocks opened up today unchanged to a small fraction higher. There were some large takings of Reading, which advanced it a ¼ and Erie second preferred rose ⅜. United States Steel preferred yielded a shade. Otherwise the market was dull and featureless.

Only trifling changes resulted from the first hour's business. St. Paul moved ⅜ and Erie first preferred yielded a ⅛. In other quarters the range was only ⅛. Chicago Great Western preferred "B" advanced ⅞ and Reading first preferred 1. The market was unaffected by the appearance of the bank statement, although it failed to show all of the increase in cash expected. There were slight fractional recessions in the closing dealings. Pere Marquette fell a point and Lead rose to 20. The closing was heavy and almost inactive.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: A typical midsummer Saturday market today, with prices fractionally lower, as well as the price of the metal. The depression in business is causing consumers to keep out of the metal market and we think will cause lower prices for the metal, but as coppers have been liquidated for so long, we do not expect much decline, but think it will tend to give us a dull market.

STEALING WOOD IS EXPENSIVE

Costs Francis McGann Thirty Days on the Rock Pile.

The theft of 10 cents' worth of wood from a neighbor's woodpile will compel Francis McGann to spend thirty days on the county's rock pile.

Accused of "wrongfully, wilfully and feloniously stealing, taking and carrying away, with the intent to appropriate to his own use, one armful of firewood, against the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota," Francis was placed on trial before Judge Windom in the municipal court this morning.

While the theft of the one armful in question was the technical charge, McGann is claimed to have made a practice of this method of securing his fuel, and the neighbors have been complaining of the rapidity with which their woodpiles disappear. McGann pleaded not guilty in the municipal court, but sufficient evidence was advanced by Assistant City Attorney McKeon this morning to convict him of the theft, and Judge Windom sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 and costs or spend thirty days in the county jail at hard labor. He choose the latter, and he will break stone to pay for the wood alleged to have ben taken.

MARINE NEWS

WISCONSIN CLEARS

New Carrier of the Hawgood Line Leave for Buffalo.

Capt. George Robarge Resigns from Association Before Sailing.

The new steamer Wisconsin, of the Hawgood line, which belongs to the Lake Carriers' association, cleared the local harbor at noon today for Buffalo, with 240,000 bushels of grain. She was in command of Captain George Rosarge, who, just before sailing, sent in his resignation by wire as a member of the Masters' and Pilots' association.

The Wisconsin was built at the Superior shipyards last year. The present cargo is the first she has ever loaded, and this will be her first trip down the lakes.

The Oscar Grotland, a Swedish boat, arrived in the harbor last night. She has been chartered by the Great Lakes & St. Lawrence Transportation company, and will henceforth sail on the lakes. She will have no particular run, but will be sent wherever her cargo demands.

The Grotland comes to Duluth direct from across the Atlantic. She left Glasgow, Scotland, for Quebec and Montreal, loading at the latter place with coal for Ft. William. She comes to Duluth light from Fort William.

PROFESS NO ALARM.

Masters and Pilots Do Not Fear Reported Movement.

The Masters' and Pilots' association, the local members, at least, appear to be worrying little over the rumor that an important blow was to be made at their association today by the Lake Carriers. A few of the masters and pilots were to be found at marine headquarters today, but not many. They said there was nothing to give out for publication, further stating that no word as to the situation had been received from the lower lakes today.

According to telegraphic dispatches from the lower lakes the owners and managers are planning to start numerous boats from many ports, particularly from Duluth, at the same time. It is said that one of the large fleets intends to start twenty vessels within the next day or two, and that other lines contemplate sending out lesser numbers.

Yesterday afternoon Duluth Harbor No. 44, of the Masters and Pilots, tried Captain Thomas Ellis, of the steamer H. A. Hawgood, for deserting the association. He was fined $50 and reinstated, under promise, it is claimed, that he will not take the steamer back down the lakes.

The steamers F. T. Heffelfinger and the Yosemite, both association boats, have loaded with grain and are ready to start down the lakes. Captain W. A. McLeod brought the Heffelfinger to Duluth from Superior yesterday, but is only engaged in shifting the boats from the two ports. If possible, another master will be secured for her.

THE STORM ABATES.

The northeast storm which raged yesterday has now abated to such an extent that it is thought the lumber carriers, which have been waiting for the wind to go down before venturing out into the lake, will be able to clear the local harbor with their tows this afternoon.

REALTY MARKET UNUSUALLY QUIET

Little Activity Apparent and Business Is Confined to Closing Few Smaller Sales—No Scarcity of Houses to Rent and Independent Owners Having Trouble—Building Activity Continues Unabated.

A holiday the first of the week followed by several days of bad weather has resulted in another very quiet week in local realty circles. Several of the dealers announce the closing up of a number of small sales that have been pending for some time, but there are no reports of any new business of importance. Inquiry has been rather slack for the week and mostly for unimproved property.

The real estate market is pretty quiet for this season of the year.

The money market is reported as easier with many applications for small loans, mostly for building purposes.

* * *

Farm land sales in St. Louis and Carlton counties continue to be made right along every week, though the sales are not so large tracts as earlier in the season.

The Boston & Duluth Farm Land company report sales in the two counties that will average about 3000 acres per week.

* * *

The rush for houses and flats is now practically over and there is little inquiry among the rental agencies. The situation differs very much from what it was a year ago this time in that there are many desirable houses or flats on the market to be rented. Nearly all of the local agents have lists of houses and flats that they are trying to place with tenants for the ensuing year. Some places that have readily rented in the past are being turned down this year, it is claimed, because the owners refuse to make any repairs, and the people who have to rent are taking up with buildings that are in better condition.

* * *

Stryker, Manley & Buck report the closing up of several pending small sales, including a house and lot on East Eighth street from P. O'Malley to Eva B. Spink, for $1300; a vacant lot on Fourth street, in the West End, for improvement.

* * *

Little & Nolte report a rather quiet week with a number of small sales closed. These include a lot in Oneota to Guy A. Riddle, for improvement; a lot in the same locality to W. G. Hill, for improvement; lot 6, block 45, Oneota, to Conrad Wieklund, also another lot in Oneota to Charles Rogers for immediate improvement.

Several contracts in connection with building enterprises were awarded this week. Architect W. T. Bray reports the contract for the heating of the E. L. Bradley house on East First street, awarded to the American Heating company, the plumbing to David Black. The plumbing and heating for P. E. House's new residence at Superior street and Twenty-third avenue East, has been awarded to Mr. Black.

Young & Nystrom, architects, report the general contract for the Stenberg flats, at 803 East Fifth street, awarded to Bergquist Bros.

The contract for the erection of the state fish hatchery buildings at Glenwood, Minn., has been awarded to John Quigley, of this city. The plans were furnished by E. S. Radcliffe, architect.

* * *

J. R. DeWaard, architect reports the contract for the Christian Schaff flats at Third street and Seventh avenue East, awarded to W. Fawcett. The building will cost $7000. The contract for the John Hartley residence at Lakeside, costing $2500, has been awarded to A. Roberts.

Plans for Thomas Monahan's residence on Third street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues East, drawn by Mr. DeWaard, are now in the hands of the contractors for bids.

The plans for the new business block to be erected at the corner of Fourth avenue West and First street, by the Davis Real Estate company, will be in the hands of the contractors early next week. The building will be 100 by 100 feet and three stories high.

Emma L. Schmied has sold to John R. Miles the residence property at the northeast corner of London road and Fifty-sixth avenue East. The consideration as $4200. The property is described as lots 9 and 10, block 3, Lester Park division.

* * *

E. C. Hauser is building two frame dwellings on Cambridge street, near Forty-third avenue East, costing $2000 and $3000 respectively.

* * *

Robert Whitesides has sold a couple of lots in Ely to school district No. 12, for $2250.

* * *

Charles M. Polinsky has purchased from the Granite Savings Bank and Trust company, for $5150, the two lots between the alley and First street, on the east side of Tenth avenue east. The property includes three frame houses.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE STATE MUSIC TEACHERS' CONVENTION

To Be Held In Duluth June 16 to 18 and Large Attendance Is Expected.

Fine Musical Treat For the Head of the Lakes—Some of the Leading Features.

The third annual convention of the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association which will be held in this city June 16 to 18 inclusive, is an event that is being eagerly looked forward to by the local musicians.

The convention will be an important one for the reason that it will bring to Duluth not only music teachers from all over the state, but some of the foremost musicians in the country. It has been an honor and pleasure to the local music teachers and musicians to get the convention to come here and every arrangement is being made to entertain the visiting teachers both in and out of the convention.

The meetings of the association will be held in the Methodist church.

During the convention there will be twelve concerts and meetings, three organ and vocal recitals, five educational meetings, a lecture by the noted critic W. J. Henderson, three grand concerts including a state talent program, a Minnesota composers' program and a violin recital by M. Emile Sauret, assisted by Jessica DeWolf, soprano, and Arthur Speed, pianist.

It will be a fine musical treat for the people of Duluth and of the head of the lakes region generally, as well as for the music teachers and musicians.

* * *

Saturday afternoon, June 18, the visitors will be guests of the Duluth members of the association, and it has been decided to give the Boulevard drive if the weather is favorable.

During the association meeting the Spalding hotel will be the headquarters for the visitors.

Secretary Eva, of the Commercial club, has made arrangements for room accommodations for many of the visitors in the vicinity of the First Methodist church.

Special rates in event of the convention, one and a third fare for the round trip has been made to Duluth on all the roads, from all points in the state, the rates having been given on the certificate plan, contingent upon 100 certificates being presented at Duluth.

One of the social events of interest during the convention will be the reception given the visitors by the officers of the Duluth Commercial club, Thursday evening.

* * *

The two great features of the meeting will be the lecture Friday evening by William J. Henderson, of New York city, and the recital Saturday evening by Emile Sauret, the great violinist, assisted by Jessica De Wolf, soprano, and Arthur Speed, pianist.

Mr. Henderson is recognized as at the head of American musical critics. He is with the New York Sun and his criticisms and writings have attracted the attention of the entire musical world to such an extent that he is today recognized as one of America's chief authorities. His opinion carries immense weight and his position is unquestioned.

Mr. Henderson's lecture will be on "Modern Tendencies in Music," and it is said that this will be the first place at which it is heard, it being a new one that has just been completed for delivery.

The recital of Emilie Sauret is an event the importance of which appeals at once to all who are well informed musically. He is among the foremost of violinists, one of the most distinguished artists that France has produced, and she has produced some great ones. His success extends to two continents, for he conquered Europe long before coming over here, and his career on this side of the water has been one of constant success, with enthusiasm following him wherever he goes.

Jessica De Wolf, the soprano who will assist Sauret, is one of whom the critics say delightful things. The New York Press said of her:

"Jessica De Wolf's beautiful and highly cultivated soprano voice has not only received great praise from the critics in this and other cities, but by its sweetness and sympathetic quality awakens intense enthusiasm in the large audiences which proves that her singing reaches the universal heart. Special mention is due Mrs. De Wolf for her singing of the beautiful air, 'The Stars Shine Bright,' in which she evinced an interpretation so chaste and a tone of such delicate purity that criticism was disarmed."

Of Arthur Speed, the pianist, The Musical Courier of New York said of him upon the occasion of his first appearance in America:

"The first American appearance of Arthur Speed, the pianist, who has recently joined the faculty of the Chicago Musical college, took place on Tuesday, Dec. 1, in Music hall. Mr. Speed, of whom the Berlin press had led us to expect great things, did not disappoint us. He revealed himself as an artist of the objective, intellectual type, thoroughly healthy, and while not lacking in sentiment, without a trace of sentimentality. His command of his instrument is all that the demands of modern piano playing exact of those who aspire to pianistic honors, and he has a temperament that often carries him out of his reserve to fine climaxes."

THE STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Coming to Duluth This Month with Four Hundred Delegates.

Noted Speakers Engaged in Church Work Will Be Present.

The annual convention of the State Sunday School association will be held in Duluth, June 14, 15, 16 and 17. The meetings will be held in the First Methodist and Pilgrim Congregational churches, and some of the most noted speakers engaged in church work in the state will be present.

Among the speakers who will be in attendance and take part in the work of the convention are: Rev. Robert Forbes, D. D., Rev. James S. Montgomery, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, Jeff H. Irish, the president of the association; Rev. S. C. Davis, Rev. J. Percival Hughett, Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Rev. J. W. Powell, Rev. Alexander Milne, Mrs. Jean E. Hobart, Mrs. C. D. Risser, Miss Grace Longfellow, Rev. R. Amos Montgomery and E. W. Van Meter.

Rev. James S. Montgomery is one of the most popular pastors in the Twin Cities and has gained a wide reputation as a platform speaker. Dr. Forbes is well known to Duluth audienes, and the remaining speakers are either prominent members of the association or pastors in Duluth churches.

* * *

The association is in every sense an interdenominational body. It does not attempt to start new schools, but seeks to stimulate the energy of the different Sunday schools in the state by conferences and county conventions. John Orchard, the state field worker, and Mrs. Jean E. Hobart, the state superintendent of primary work, are engaged during the year in holding these conferences and county conventions throughout the state. The fact that the Sunday schools are working harmoniously together, that the county and local associations are so well organized, and that the Sunday schools as a whole are so well equipped and ably conducted, is due largely to the efforts of the representatives of the state association.

The Sunday school has come to be a very important branch of the modern church, and the state association aims to increase its efficiency by inculcating better methods, stimulating more enthusiasm, and awakening a deeper spiritual interest among the teachers and officers. Much of the credit for the good work done is due President Jeff Irish, of Detroit, and H. B. Avory, of Minneapolis, the treasurer, and the board of directors, of which A. R. Merritt is the local member.

The convention will bring to Duluth over 400 delegates, from all parts of the state, and the local association has undertaken the arrangements for their entertainment while in the city. During their visit the delegates will be given a trip around Minnesota Point on a steamer chartered for the occasion.

* * *

The program in full is given below. All of the meetings will be open to any of the citizens of Duluth who care to attend, and a perusal of the program will show that they are well worth attending. The day sessions are devoted largely to the business of the convention and the discussion of the methods and plans of work, while the evening sessions will be devoted to popular addresses on the more important lines of the Sunday school work.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Conservative Attitude Is Manifested In Many Lines of Business.

New York, June 4.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Interruption of industrial progress by the holiday, labor conflicts and inclement weather again produced a somewhat unsatisfactory trade situation. Yet the money market is easy and accommodation readily obtained in legitimate business channels. Liabilities of mercantile failures are comparatively small, indicating that most concerns have prepared for a quiet season and are able to wothstand a period of diminished sales and tardy payments. This conservative attitude is the fundamentally strong feature of the situation, and when business revives there will be no pressure to dispose of heavy stocks of undesirable goods. Already plants have reduced hours or wages, and several strikes have added to the army of unemployed.

No definite change is reported in iron and steel industry, quotations being barely maintained and new contracts placed with great discrimination. More machinery has stopped at some centers and running time is reduced at others. The impression is gaining ground that the decline quotations will not go much further, and there is less disposition to secure new contract by making concessions. Small orders for structural material are being placed, and there is fair movement in pipe and plates, but the demand for rails, rolling stock and other railway equipment is distinctly satisfactory. In several departments of the industry prices have declined sufficiently to attract business from abroad, and this increase in exports is the best feature of the situation.

Little change is noted in textile manufacture conditions, primary markets for cotton goods finding buyers proceeding with caution, and spinners show increased willingness to consider orders for future delivery. Improvement is maintained in woolen goods, the demand showing greater divesification. Wholesale clothiers exhibit more confidence by making better provision for their needs during the balance of the season.

New England manufacturers of footwear are receiving more supplementary orders, and traveling salesmen are doing a large sample business in next spring's tan and russett goods, while manufacturers are extending facilities in this branch of the trade.

Commercial failures this week in the United States are 220, against 226 last week, 236 the preceding week and 183 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 26 against 17 last week, 12 the preceding week and 24 last year.

JES' GRIN AND BO' IT.

A Michigan officer in the Spanish war had a negro attendant whose idea of military discipline were strict, says the Chicago Tribune. Owing especially to the thieving proclivities of some of the Cuban hangers-on he was under strict command not to let anything go from the officers' quarters without a personal order from him.

One evening as the officer and Gen. Wheeler met some distance from the camp the general said, with a smack of his lips:

"I hear, sir, that you received some very fine brandied peaches from home."

"Yes, general, they're prime, and I'm going to send you some. Meantime, you had better stop at my tent on the way in and have my man give you a can."

When the officer reached his quarters he was approached by his attendant with an elaborate salute, who said:

"Did you tell dat Gen. Wheelah, sah, dat he could call heah, sah, and procu' a can ob dem brandied peaches, sah?"

"Yes; of course, you gave them to him?"

"No, sah I knows my duties, sah. I done told Gen'l Wheelah dat all men look alike to me, sah, an' if he dihn't hab no ordah he couldn't hab no peaches, sah, 'less he obacome me by powah of supelah numbahs, sah."

"Why, you black rascal, what did he say?"

"He jes' grin an' bo' it, sah."

WHAT BECOMES OF THE LAWYERS.

Champe S. Andrews, a New York lawyer, found waiting in his office for him a client named Hulett, from Ogensburg, says the New York Times. According to Mr. Hulett's previous account of some tangles, which he wanted Andrews to straighten out, he had been victimized by shrewd and unscrupulous lawyers in the vicinity of his home town. Therefore he had small regard for members of the bar as a class.

"I'm sorry I kept you waiting, Mr. Hulett," said Mr. Andrews, "I've just returned from the funeral of a lawyer."

"What! Do you bury lawyers down here?" exclaimed Hulett.

"Why, certainly," said Mr. Andrews. What do you do with them in Ogensburg?"

"When one dies up there," was the solemn reply, "we lay him out and leave the body all alone in a room, with the door locked and the window wide open. And when we go in the next morning he is gone."

"What becomes of him? Who carries him away?"

"Don't know," answered Hulett, "but invariably there is a strong smell of brimstone left in the room."

WILL GO TO THE FAR WEST

Artist F. Von Luerzer Going to Pacific Coast and Alaska.

F. Von Luerzer, who for the past fifteen years has been closely identified with art interests in Duluth, with a studio in the Masonic Temple building, will leave about the first of July for an extended trip through the West and in Alaska.

Accompanied by Mrs. Von Luerzer, he will visit Robert Whiteside's "big trees," and will embody the Calaveras grove in a large oil painting for Mr. Whitesides. Afterward Mr. Von Luerzer will visit the Yosemite valley, spending several weeks sketching and painting from nature.

After the Yosemite valley trip, Mr. and Mrs. Von Luerzer expect to leave for Alaska, where they will spend several months sketching and painting in a land that has appeared on canvas but little as yet. Next winter they will spend at Los Angeles.

It is hardly likely that Mr. Von Luerzer will return to Duluth to reopen his studio.

Mr. Von Luerzer first came to this country with a number of German artists a number of years ago to paint large panoramic battle scenes of Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge and other conflicts of the civil war, and located at Milwaukee.

Coming up to the head of the lakes on a hunting trip, he was so much taken with Duluth that he determined to locate here.

During his fifteen years' residence here Mr. Von Luerzer has included in his art classes many of the best people of the city.

Leaves from Mrs. Willingham's diary.

May 20.—Some one has moved into the house next to ours. I have been dreading this, and naturally feel very anxious to see the people and learn all about them. A rich widow with a son of marriageable age must keep a sharp look out continually. It would be just like some designing people with daughters to move here knowing that Reginald is my only child and heir. The new tenants are at least not shabby: their furniture is quite as handsome as ours and the servants, who are directing the moving, are dressed in a livery of most excellent taste. Blanche, my maid, must get me some information.

May 22.—This afternoon a lady, evidently my new neighbor, drove up in a well appointed brougham. There was a coat of arms on the door, but it was not near enough for me to decipher. The lady appeared to be about my own age, made an elegant appearance, and seemed to exhale an air of refinement.

May 24.—Blanche has made friends with the coachman next door and learned all about the new family. Their name is Le Fontelle, the family consisting of a widow, and one daughter, who is still in a convent. The husband belonged to the French nobility—he was a duke—but dropped his title when he came to America and went into business. His commercial venture was so repugnant to his family that they never forgave him, but he made a success of his business and left an immense fortune. I shall certainly call as soon as permissible and show Mrs. Le Fontelle all the delicate attention possible.

May 27.—I was getting ready to call on my new neighbor this afternoon when I noticed the brougham stopping at the door and saw two people alight. One was a mother superior and the other was a young girl about 18. She is a most exquisite young creature I ever saw, with a spiritueile face, golden hair and a perfect figure. She is as graceful as a nymph and seemed entirely unconscious of her great beauty. I tremble for Reginald's peace of mind when he sees her.

June 20.—We are already on terms of intimacy with the Le Fontelles. As to the young people, I believe it was love at first sight. Mrs. Le Fontelle—she prefers not to be called madame—treats the affair lightly, and I'm unable to tell whether she is pleased with it or not. She looks upon Antoinnette as a mere child and does not intend to bring her out until next year. I have learned, from reliable sources, that their fortune is enormous. The girl is a flawless jewel and Reginald must not let her slip through his fingers.

June 21.—Today a gesture, a look, a word, I cannot say which, of Mrs. Le Fontelle's, gave me a distinct shock. It recalled to my memory Celestine, the French maid I had the year we moved to Chicago, directly after Mr. Willingham's great deal in pork.

How I grew to hate that woman! I wonder how, as clever a person as I, ever allowed a menial to gain any power over me, but at the time I was so nearly distraught with fear of discovery that I saw no other way out of it except to accept her aid. Yes, she had me in her power and she knew how to apply the screws and I dared not refuse her jewels, gowns, or money when she demanded them. If Willingham had been a less indulgent husband I could never have met her demands. Indulgent, but, heavens! how prosy and dull! I never loved him, but I never forgot my duty to him—but that once. And the other one—I dare not write of him, even after all these years. Yet God is my witness, that one offense was the only one.

I regret that the image of that wretched Celestine should have intruded between my new friend and myself, but how absurd to think of the two in the same connection; the one all refinement and elegance, born to a high position, and married into nobility; the other, low-born and intriguing.

June 30.—I am so restless and miserable. That resemblance grows stronger the more I see of Mrs. Le Fontelle. Perhaps it is because I am now constantly looking for them that I see so many points of resemblance in gestures, tones, looks. I could shut my eyes when she speaks and see Celestine before me.

This uncertainty is maddening. If it could be that this is indeed Celestine—and she was sharp and unscrupulous for anything—who is the father of the girl my son wishes to marry? Celestine fled from our roof with Holton, the banker, who deserted his family and carried away a million of other people's money. He died in South America some months later, but Celestine and the money disappeared as completely as if they had left the earth. That was about nineteen years ago and if Antoinette is 18—Oh, I shall go mad!

Celestine had a most peculiar birthmark, a small, dark colored scar, cross shaped, low on her neck. I must see Mrs. Le Fontelle's neck. I have not yet seen her in evening dress.

July 3.—Last night I gave an informal dinner and the Le Fontelles were among the guests. Mrs. Le Fontelle were an elegant gown of heliotrope, crepe, very decollette. My heart beat like a sledge hammer as she approached me and held out her hand. There was a square of court plaster, almost indistinguishable, on her neck on the exact spot where Celestine's scar was situated.

"I came very near having to send regrets at the last moment," she said, lightly touching the court plaster. "my maid carelessly dropped the curling tongs and burned my neck slightly. But I concealed the burn with plaster and I was able to keep my engagement."

I managed to reply, but scarcely knew what I said, for I believed that the court plaster concealed nothing more than a small, dark, cross shaped scar; I believed this was Celestine, polished, and refined by the company she had managed to mingle with in the years that the stolen million had been at her command, but still Celestine, my crafty, unscrupulous maid.

I lay awake until morning trying to evolve some scheme for separating Reginald from this woman's daughter. I fell asleep with the question unsolved and was awakened shortly after noon by Reginald, who thrust his head in at my door.

"Couldn't wait a minute longer, mother, dear," he said, "to tell you of my great joy. Antoinette loves me and her mother says she will consent to our marriage providing you are willing. So please hurry over and assure her of your willingness. With a gay laugh the boy closed the door and ran up to his own rooms, without the least fear that I would withhold my consent. After all, I was not certain that Mrs. Le Fontelle was not all she claimed to be; the court plaster might really have concealed the mark of a burn, and the many points of resemblance which had given me so much distress of mind may have been mere coincidences. I resolved to go to her at once and put my doubts forever at rest.

She greeted me with just the proper degree of warmth and at once approached the subject of the proposed marriage. "You know we French people take a practical view of marriage," she said, smiling. "Now if we agree to give our children their hearts' desire I propose that we each settle half a million on them, that is, I will settle that amount upon Antoinette and you an equal amount upon your son. Of course, if we do not agree"—She broke off abruptly and pressed her hand to her eyes. Upon one of her fingers was a ring with a pigeon blood ruby surrounded with small diamonds. It was a peculiar looking ring whose like I had never seen but once before. Mr. Willingham gave me such a ring on our fifth anniversary and I gave it to Celestine, who had taken a great fancy to it, the night—the night I have spent years trying in vain to forget.

"I am not admiring my ring," she remarked. "Odd, is it not, and a very good ruby. It was a gift of a friend, years ago. But we have not settled the question of the young people yet, or rather, you have not said whether you approve of the marriage."

She looked at me with a smile which I would have given worlds to have read aright. If this were Celestine she had doubtless taken the house next to mine with the purpose of marrying her daughter to my son, knowing that if I recognized her I would not dare to betray her, for by unmasking her I would bring vengeance upon myself and ruin the happiness of my son, the one being truly loved. Far better that this tottering doubt remain forever in my mind than that I should bring pain and sorrow to the dear boy.

I hesitated no longer. My smiling glance met that of my son's future mother-in-law.

"The marriage is very acceptable to me," I replied, warmly. "Your daughter"—I placed the least possible emphasis on the word and paused an imperceptible moment—"is good and innocent, and very lovely. No wonder my son adores her. Let us call them in dear Mrs. Le Fontelle, and give them our blessing."

July 4.—Everything is arranged and the young pair are blissfully happy. Nothing else is of consequence, but still I cannot settle the question which will not down—Is she Celestine, or is she not?

H. M. STANLEY.

Great Explorer Broken Down From Overwork.

Though Sir Henry M. Stanley was a man of iron frame and constitution, he died at the early age of 63. Nature destined him for a long life, but he was broken by twenty-two years of prodigious toil, hardship and anxiety that would have killed any ordinary man, says the New York Sun. His hair is now snow white ten years ago. The indomitable qualities of mind and spirit that made him the most distinguished explorer of his generation never flagged, but physically he had not been the Stanley of earlier years since his return from the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha in 1890.

We have seen Stanley in assemblages where the most eminent explorers and geographers of the time were gathered, and he was always easily the most notable man among them. He had won this high distinction, not through superior qualifications as a trained geographer or a scientific explorer, but because there was no such word as "fail" in his vocabulary. It was his fortune to devote his life to the solution of some of the most difficult and dangerous problems of African exploration; he conquered them all. He never failed in anything he undertook. A pioneer in a continent where it is the unexpected that always happens, where perils of fever and native hostility constantly surrounded him, where inadequate supplies and incompetent assistance often threatened him with ruin, he had an adequate resource for every emergency and triumphed over every obstacle. It was the unvarying success of his African career, from beginning to end, great in achievement and brilliant in methods and results, that made him the first explorer of his age.

Stanley had his severe critics. The Germans said his work was deficient in scientific qualities. It is true that when he went to Africa in the Abyssinian and Ashanti campaigns his training was only that of an excellent newspaper correspondent. His search for Dr. Livingstone was marked by no special efficiency as a scientific observer. It was not till his next journey that he began his career as an explorer, and from the time he prepared for this expedition till he left Africa for his latest journey he was constantly striving to enlarge his resources as a competent observer of man and of nature and as a maker of adequate route maps. All his later books from "Through the Dark Continent" to "In Darkest Africa" marked continuous advance in the scientific value of his explorations. His boat journey around Victoria Nyanza resulted in a map of the lake that has rarely been equalled among pioneer explorers and has been surpassed only by such remarkable cartographic achievements as those of Sven Hedin. His map of the Congo River lacks the wealth of detail to be found on Grenfell's great map, the work of some years, but in all its broader features the Congo of Stanley is the Congo which we see in our atlases. From first to last Stanley's books exhibit a constant accession of value as faithful and approximately accurate delineations of the broad belt through tropical Africa to which he devoted his life.

Like all strong men he had his enemies, and they are responsible for the stories of inhumanity which brought Stanley into disfavor among many. His detractors were almost invariably men who had been in his service and who had failed to reach the standard of efficiency he required. Stanley was a stern censor. He had no patience with incompetency. He gave an order with the tersesness of a general. It was for the man who received it to find the ways and means of achievement, and nothing less than success would be accepted. Only those men who were fit to do anything or go anywhere could live in Stanley's favor. The others went home with bitterness and hatred in their breasts to write books or articles denouncing their leader.

On the other hand there were no words of praise too high for Stanley to bestow upon the men who had in them the stuff of which the resourceful African pioneer is made. No leader in exploration ever paid more glowing tribute to his associates than Stanley conferred in his books upon such men as Glave, Hanssens, Valche, Vangele, Coquilhat, Allard, and others.

The truth is that Stanley permitted nothing to stand in the way of success. If the natives with their overwhelming numbers attacked his handful of men and threatened their annihilation, he used his guns to send them scurrying. But no one who has closely followed his career believes that he ever fired a shot except in the face of imminent peril. From first to last he was full of sympathy with the native tribes and tactful in his dealings with them. He told his associates never to strike an insubordinate black porter with the clenched fist, but only with the open hand. As soon as the tribes came to know him he had wonderful influence over them. Only the methods of peace and friendship governed in the treaties he signed with 238 chiefs scattered along 1200 miles of the Congo during the five years he was slaying the foundations of the Congo state. The very men who had followed him with hundreds of canoes, discharging clouds of spears and crying "meat, meat," became his firmest friends.

Stanley had little confidence in the material value of tropical Africa until after he met Livingstone. But it was not long before he became imbued with the sublime faith of this great man that there was good in Africa and in its peoples which every popular influence of civilization should help to develop. This faith strengthened in him to his last days. He never tired of African topics. He welcomed at his London or his country home all who knew the work that was being done and had confidence in its value. He lived to see predictions realized that had been counted as idle dreams. He was laughed at when he said that a few years more would see Central Africa joined to the ocean by a railroad; but today trains are running regularly between the Indian ocean and Victoria Nyanza.

Stanley shares with Livingstone a distinction that will always be the heritage of their life work. He took up the task that Livingstone laid down; and it was the achievements of them both that won the interest of the civilized nations in Africa and kindled the great African movement which resulted in such an outburst of zeal for geographical discoveries as the world had never seen before. The sources of information for the largest map yet made of Africa were nearly 1800 route and other maps, most of which were the result of the work of explorers within the past forty years; and Livingstone and Stanley, more than all other men together, gave the impulse that stimulated this era of exploration while in a half century has made inner Africa better known than was inner North America 300 years after Columbus had discovered the Western world.

RHINOCEROS HUNTING.

Narrow Escape of a Man Chased By Big Animal.

We had followed a great many tracks and twice we had heard rhino, but in cover so dense that it was impossible to see it, says a writer in Outing. Throughout all these days my men had been very patient; and Uda, who said this particular section was much like Java, where he professed to have hunted much, now expressed confidence in our finally getting rhino. One morning early we got on quite fresh tracks, which we followed for several hours through very dense undergrowth, the rhino meanwhile seeking all the mud holes in the direction of his route. We traveled these tracks until noon as swiftly as we could, and as silently and as they continued so fresh and little more than a breath of air appeared to be stirring, we went stealthily, expecting to come up with the quarry at any time. But it was nearing 5 o'clock, with the chill of approaching sunset beginning to settle upon the jungle, and still we followed the tracks hopefully—though unrewarded. Then the tracks led into and across one of those mound-containing spaces to which I have referred.

It occurred to me as a useful thought to get on top of the mound which happened to be a biggish one, and make the best survey the lookout permitted of the other side of the space where the jungle was thinnish. And, by the gods, there, hardly discernible, was the long sought for rhino moving round like a great hog. Having more confidence in these natives than I had felt in those elsewhere in Sumatra. I had given my .50 to Bilal, who was directly at my heels—Uda and Che had not yet come up to us—and I carried my 12-bore. The rhino was perhaps not over 20 yards away, yet I could see him very indistinctly, and I feared to maneuver for a better position lest he get my wind and move away into the denser jungle, where to view him at even 10 yards would be a most fortunate opportunity; so taking the best sight I could get as he squashed about, heading somewhat in my direction, I put the contents of both barrels, one after the other, as quickly as I could pull the triggers, just behind of his shoulder and ranging back. There was a tremendous commotion as he disappeared so quickly as to astonish me, with a crash into the jungle. Standing on the mound I could feel a little wind and note if he was blowing across my position from east to west, and, as the rhino made off to the southwest. I felt sure he would cross my wind and that if he did he would be likely to charge. It seemed at the moment to be my best chance of another shot, for of course, I could not begin to get through the thick jungle at the pace he was going, and would have been left far behind had I attempted to follow. So I held my position, awaiting developments—knowing I could track him later, if nothing interesting happened in the imediate futuure.

Meanwhile I could not determine his exact location, but while immediately after the report he seemed going away, in another few moments it appeared to me he was coming toward the open space. Meantime I was endeavoring to get the cartridges out of the 12-bore which had a defective ejector, and, as I was fingering with this, the rhino broke from the jungle, coming directly toward me, charging truly up-wind. It was not over 40 feet from where he broke out of the jungle to where I stood on the mound, the latter being perhaps 20 feet in diameter, and the rhino came on without hesitation and without noise except that made by his feet and huge bulk, his head held straight out, not lowered like a bull, and with his little eye squinting savagely. I had hastily handed the 12-bore over to Bilal, taking the 50 when the rhino broke from the jungle, and as he came up onto the mound, I fired twice for that wicked eye (the eye of a charging rhino is a pretty small mark, perhaps you may know), once making a slight superficial wound on the forehead, and again sending the ball into the fleshy part of the fore shoulder. Neither shot made any impression on the rhino, which kept coming.

But now he was not more than 10 feet from me, I should say, and I had just pumped another shell into the barrel, when suddenly I was thrown off my feet and over on the side of the mound. As I went into the air, I expected every second to feel the rhino's horn in my side; but I held on to my rifle (which, curiously, did not go off although at full cock) and, when I fell, scrambled to my feet as quickly as I could. To my great relief the rhino had crossed the mound and was running toward the jungle, with apparently no more thought of me than if I had not stood in his path a few second before. It did not take me long to put a ball in back of his ear, and he dropped like a stone—without a sound.

He had but a single horn on the lower part of the nose, four inches in height, and a kind of knob where had been, or was to be, another above it. The usual Indian rhino, including the smaller Malay, have one horn, but some of the Sumatra variety have two.

It was an experience rather conclusive on the question of the rhino charging by scent rather than by sight. He charged straight toward me upwind, and when I dropped off his scent. Either he lost sight of me, as could easily have happened, or he is not governed by sight—for he never swerved from his path. I found both 12-bore bullets in his hind quarters; the 50 ball had gone in behind the right ear, and into the left jaw.

How I came to be thrown off the mound, at what may have been a very timely moment, is explained by the rhino stepping, as he drew near, upon one end of a long, small log on the other end of which I was standing; and thus he teetered me out of his path.

It was a lucky teeter for me.

The Josephine Model

[By Our Special Correspondent.]

MIRIAM SPIER.

The quaintness of grown-up styles of the present, which have cast a reflection, if nothing more, on little girls' frocks, are responsible for much of the picturesqueness of children's attire which is characteristic of this season. Children's fashions vary little, but that little counts. While the same simple effects prevail with slight variation from year to year in the general make-up of little frocks, it is the recognition of those variations that distinguishes the well-dressed child. Dancing school dresses were never prettier than now, and one reason is the general becomingness of the drooping shoulders, berthas and deeply cut yokes which are now so much used. Then, too, the wee maiden of today is as minus crisp frills, petticoats and other starch box effects as are her older relatives. Soft, unfinished silks, wool and wash materials make up her wardrobe. The laundress, like the manufacturer, has fallen into line, and if any starch at all is used it is of the thin, cooked order. Not a trace of cold starching, for more brittle quality is now known to her realm.

Children's fashions do not vary so much as those of older people, and yet, in these days, when so much attention is paid to dress, it is necessary to keep watch and ward over the styles for children's frocks, or the little people soon look shabby and odd. Fortunately, materials are cheap, and good materials, too, and there is a wide range of choice. Then, while trimming of all kinds is more fashionable than a year ago, the smartest of frocks may be severely simple—in one piece—provided the cut and fit are looked after and the trimming of pretty collars and cuffs is all-sufficient. All white is expensive, but can be easily cleaned or laundered at home. Dark colors are, however, not unfashionable, be it understood, and with coat, hat and gloves to match, made of dark blue, red or brown material, a child looks well dressed for all occasions.

For party dresses simple muslin frocks are considered the smartest and the cost can be regulated according to the price of the lace or embroidery used for trimming. Openwork embroidery is the most in demand, and the little waist trimmed with ruffles of openwork around the shoulders is most becoming, while the skirt may be finished with a ruffle of the same embroidery, or with merely a deep hem and tucks. Nothing simpler could well be designed than the one-piece pique frocks, with three pleats back and front, and on the pleats a design in heavy embroidery stitched, if further elaboration is desired, although a plain collar and wristband of embroidery are thought quite sufficient trimming for this style of frock. A particularly dainty dress seen on a little damsel was of challie, self-bordered. Under it was worn a gulmp of cambric. The skirt has two wide tucks above the deep hem, the yoke pointing low in the front and the sleeve caps are outlined with the border. The belt is also of the border. Linen trimmed with either hand or machine embroidery, which comes at reasonable prices, or some figured cotton goods trimmed with embroidery, could be used in the same way.

At a dance given for little folks among the many beautiful frocks was one of white china silk made with the long waist, full skirt and low bertha, which style is conspicuous in the fancy getups. The sleeves are in a favorite style. Vertical rows of tucks and insertion from the shoulder to the elbow, where it is finished by a full kerchief tail. Tucks and lace insertion trim the waist. The skirt is edged with lace and has a band of the insertion encircling it. The points of the bertha, falling over the shoulders and at the front and back, are trimmed with medallions of lace For children under nine years there are many variations in Russian blouse suits. A dress up frock of this order is of the finest white linen and had a box plait each side of the front. An embroidered band of the linen traverses the length of the closing at the left side and furnishes the collar and cuffs. A white kid belt with brass buckle is worn with it.

Accordian pleated or gored skirts are worn by older girls, and materials such as veiling cashmere and china silks are fashionable. The waists are pleated to match the skirts, are without collars and finished with a round lace yoke at the neck and with deep lace cuffs to match. If the skirt is plain, not pleated, there are rows of narrow satin ribbon and the waist is trimmed to match.

But no longer is it fashionable to trim these frocks elaborately with bands of lace entredux or with lace edged flounces. There are exceptions to the rule, but there are more frocks of the plain description than of the fanciful. White serge, white veiling and white poplin are all in favor for girl's frocks, and the original model of a plain pleated frock can be elaborated upon by the trimmings of braidings, the rows of satin ribbon and the lace yoke, or collar and cuffs, with the further addition of a sash in place of the white leather belt.

No longer need mothers declare that it is difficult to dress children, for never were the requirements of the juvenile world more carefully considered. Even the dressing of the awkward age—the girl all legs and arms—has become a comparatively easy matter, while for the naturally graceful child effective models are almost confusingly plentiful.

All sorts of charming devices hide the meagerness of growing girls. Among these are a new bertha and a very full skirt with ungored widths. The bertha, which is cut circular and delicately trimmed, falls often to the belt, forming a complete cape. Sometimes the skirt is shirred at the hips; sometimes it is only gathered. In this case above the wide hem there may be several large tucks. For girls below this stage those who still show the roundness of babyhood new fashions have a doll-like charm.

Little gored skirts are of an incredible shortness, decked often with tiny ruchings of ribbon and quillings of lace, that form wreaths and garlands. The bodices on such toilets are equally pretentious high necked in most cases and sometimes adjusted with featherbone, for featherbone and even regulation corset bodies are worn by such ages in France. High lace and ribbon yokes, wide crush belts of silk or soft satin and elaborate undersleeves are other features of these charming gowns, which, of course, constitute the best bib and tucker.

Along with this delicious finery importers also show other elegancies not usually accorded maids of 8 and 10. An automobile coat of red leather, with a hood to match was seen on a girl of about six years. Another summer driving wrap for several ages is in embroidered pongee, while real lace veils are seen for curly heads from one to four years old. These, which are white of course, drape, curtain fashion, the fronts of elaborate poke bonnets, in whose bouffant face trimmings delicate flowers are put.

The wash materials now in the market clearly demonstrate the increasing demand for beauty.

Colors and designs with even the most inexpensive of the wash goods were never lovelier and the majority of them have, besides, the added virtue of being really washable. For the white and colored piques, which are so much used, narrow wash fringes to match are seen. Exquisite flower tints are shown by the new piques, ducks, linens and drills, and upon the handsomer frocks displayed in these materials superb effects in braiding or hand embroidery are encountered.

The tinted chambrays and Scotch ginghams, every year used, are still combined with white Hamburg embroideries, with beadings of the same often joining the seams of both bodices and skirts.

Challie is not usually accounted a wash texture, but the new challies are warranted washable, and many display charming border effects, as already mentioned. Narrow wash ribbons are combined with them, with sometimes a stout lace for the yoke, and cuff bands.

But the growing fondness for immaculate freshness results not only in fast tints, but in the placing of white above all color. Never, merchants declare, were white wash textures supplied in vaster quantities or more exquisite varieties. From the heaviest linen crash, as coarse in some instances as a basket weave, the new white goods run to textiles as fine as cobwebs. A party gown for a girl of 12 is made of three and a half yards of Paris lawn 50 inches wide. Only upon the bertha edge and round the neck and sleeve bands is the lace used, and then only a single insertion and ruffle. The plain skirt is gathered full and deeply hemmed. With such dresses and other airy white frocks colored sashes are much worn, the hair bow and a bodice knot matching.

A pretty fad is to have the ornaments worn also express the color of the ribbon, coral beads with a sash of the same shade, turquoise with blue and amber with yellow. For dress-up purposes, white stockings are considered a necessity, and so much is this understood that the black legs once admired seem now distinctly out of date. Girls below 6 continue to wear white socks, and for them short neck chains of white coral, the round beads faintly tinged with pink, are a new caprice. Something in a new departure are the white shirtings, which have become very popular. The made-up garments displayed for the little girls who are permitted to wear them, the strict tailor finish which is now approved. For girls under 12 the prim severity of shirtwaists is not advised, but above that age they may be worn and much of their stiffness taken away by a new skirt model. This is a full pleated affair held over the shoulders with ornamental suspender bands of the same material, which gives the shirtwaist underneath a more childish look.

This skirt, especially if it is made in dark material, such as blue serge, will be found a valuable addition to a child's wardrobe for seashore or country. Both colored or white waists may be worn with it, and a touch of smartness be gained by one of the wide leather belts which have succeeded the very narrow ones of a year ago.

These belts, originally designed in Paris, and costing still in the imported shape, anywhere from $7 to $12—these last embroidered are almost as much worn by children as grown-ups. The handsomest models in them are double or triple tongue, with gilt or silver harness buckles, and the kid of the softest quality, which, because of the width of the belt, is necessary for a good fit.

Others far cheaper than these styles, however, may have the tongue gathered fussily through a single square leather buckle, and the young girl who has only 75 cents to spend on her belt will find such sorts quite good enough. Belts for young children of both sexes are an absolute requirement, the longwaisted bodices and blouses calling for them. For these ages, however, the leather girdle is very narrow, entirely unshaped and supplied with the plainest metal buckle.

The double-breasted reefer coats, ranging in size from one year to 10, continue with the same degree of popularity. But it is the reefer with a difference. The shoulder seam is long, the coat itself very much fuller than in its former appearance, and the sleeves are usually a large puff with a deep cuff. Braids and buttons are used lavishly, and even the models in the wash goods are just as handsomely braided with the cotton weaves as are the woolen and silk garments.

In hats the styles known as "lingerie" are the accepted mode for the season. These are seen in lawn, tucked, shirred or corded, in Swiss muslins, piques; in fact, in all sorts of white and delicately colored materials which will withstand the assaults of the average laundress. The shape usually consists of a full puffy crown, somewhat on the Tam o'Shanter order, and a large brim, which is fashioned of several overlapping flounces, these slightly wired to hold the shape. Strings are used with this or not, just as the fancy dictates, though the presence of the strings adds a touch of picturesqueness.

Flowers are used in abundance on all children's hats for dressy as well as other occasions. The chic little walking hat has a rosette and quill artistically arranged on a round sailor shape.

The New Frocks and Headwear.

Fetching Sailor Suit.

White sateen duck fashions this fetching little sailor suit, the collar being in cadet-blue linen braided in white, with cuffs to match, and the chevrons on the moderate-sized sleeve being embroidered in the same tint. The skirt is shirred to a skeleton waist, in which the shield and collar are sewn, and the blouse is put on over the head, an elastic band in the waist hem adjusting the fulness.

Long-Waisted French Frock.

A fine printed French percale is used for this smart little model, in which the long French waist is seen to perfection. Rows of beading run with black ribbon velvet alternate with tucks, and a broad beading, ribbon threaded, passes around the waist. The skirt has three rather scant volants, each simply finished with a rolled hem.

The Josephine Model.

Cut with a square neck and a short spencer waist, this fascinating little model lends itself well to almost any material. The waist is pleated fully and blouses slightly over the belt, to which the full skirt is shirred with several rows of the oscillating stitch of the sewing-machine. Over the shoulders are little buckled bretelles of velvet ribbon, and the same appears at the puff sleeves and around the waist.

A Little French Sailor.

In a fine Milan straw this roll brim French sailor offers an attractive model. The brim is unbound; a band of brown velvet encircling the crown, and a huge rosette at the side, pierced with a smart white quill.

Dainty Shade Hat.

An all around flat of leghorn is wired to follow soft undulations around the face, and the edge bound with a fancy straw. A wreath of wild roses and foliage encircles the crown, and is tied in the back with loops and ends of black velvet ribbon. A bandeau lifts the shape off the face, and the under-trim is faced with lace and strapped with a fancy straw.

On the Russian Mode.

This very smart model is fashioned in one piece, broad box pleats running from shoulder to hem, and affording the requisite fullness in the skirt. A shield and collar in scarlet linen embroidered in white, lends a touch of color, and a white kid belt is loosely passed around the waist.

A la Grande Dame.

Brown straw composes this picture shape, which is sharply lifted at one side to show a huge chou of white chiffon. A long ostrich feather is draped on the other side, and a loose fold of white satin ribbon encircles the crown, and is tied in a coquettish bow which falls on the hair in the back.

Little Bo-Peep Bonnet.

A fine white crinoline straw is bent into shape for this little Boneep bonnet, the brim of which flares off the face in front and presses closely to the head in the back. A little wreath of blush pink roses edges the brim, and long stemmed cherries are cunningly used in the "scoop" front. Bows and rosettes of white taffeta ribbon are perched here and there, and the long streaming strings are of the same lustrous ribbon.

A Unique Boy's Costume.

For the mother who wishes to get away from the apparently inevitable Buster Brown costume for her little lad the following makes up into a boy's suit, which is just now popular in West London. The suit is one consisting of knickerbockers and a blouse with a diagonal closing on the right, but the matter as to which side the blouse shall close on can be optional with the maker. The blouse is fitted by the shoulder seams with an underseam of plain stitching. The neck may be finished off with a collar band of the suiting material or a Buster Brown collar can be attached over the suit collar.

The sleeve is slightly bishoped with as plain a seam as possible, and is finished off with a very narrow cuff, which may be lapped over and fastened with a fancy button, or if less trouble is the object of the mother the cuff may be merely a turned back and closed affair. A leather belt can be worn for more dressy occasions, but the provident mother will not fail to have one or more beltings of the suit material, all of which should pass through the regulation side straps attached to the jacket.

The knickerbocker is largely of the regulation pattern with simple inside and outside leg seams, while the necessary fulness at the knees should be adjusted by elastic or gathered and finished off with plain stitching and nickel buckle. This suit is now being worn in London by lads from three to eight years. The six-year size requires 3¾ yards of 27-inch material.

SECOND ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF THE STATE NORMAL SCHOOL OF DULUTH

(H. C. HUBERT.)

During the week the faculty and graduating class of the state normal school of Duluth issued invitations for the second annual commencement exercises, to be held the first four days of next week. The exercises will all be held at normal hall, and the program for the four days is an interesting one.

Last year, the first in the history of the school, a class of six was graduated, and this year twenty-seven young women will have finished their course, and in sending out this class the school is sure of one of which it may well be proud.

Many of the members of the class are graduates of the local high school, and their homes are in Duluth, and some of them will take positions here. The majority of the class finish from the advaned graduate course, and their past two years' work has been enjoyable and profitable. The school is becomng known throughout the state for the thoroughness of its work and the personnel of the faculty.

The graduates and the course from which they graduate is as follows:

ADVANCED GRADUATE COURSE.

Mary Sayles Bartlett, Blanche May Coulter, Ella Deetz, Catherine Farrell, Leora Pearl Fenton, Berthe E. Grube, Ora Margaret Hathaway, Mary Alphade Herrell, Alma Kruschke, Dorothy Katherine Kuhns, Clara Rubena Laughton, Fanny Beulah Lippitt, Florence McLean, Carrie May Neff, Ida Frances Maud Neff, Lucy Mary O'Keefe, Emma Laurentia Olson, Clara Mildred Somerville, Florence May Swendby and Hattie Yager, all of Duluth, and Katheryn Lou Joyce, of Virgqua, Wis.

most interesting one, which has been given. The class colors are green and

ELEMENTARY GRADUATE COURSE

Jane Elizabeth Murray, Grace Lavania Thompson, of Duluth; Jennie Marie Myers, of Virginia, and Irene Buswell, of Winona.

From the kindergarten course Miss Ella Vera Mason will graduate, and from the elementary course, Minda Julianne Knutson, of this city, and Anna C. Johnson, of Doran, Minn.

* * *

gold, and the officers this year have been: President, Leora Pearl Fenton; vice president, Carrie May Neff; secretary, Mary Sayles Bartlett, and treasurer, Florence May Swendby.

Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the first of the exercises will be given in the commencement sermon, which will be preached by Rt. Rev. J. D. Morrison.

Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, the class play will be given. The class will present Sophocles' "Antiogne," and admission to the play is by card. The hall of the building will seat only 150, and the attendance at the play will necessarily be limited. The play is a given at colleges in previous years. Palmer's translation of the Greek will be used and the play will be presented in the Greek manner, without stage settings.

The closing chapel exercises will be held Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Tuesday evening the faculty will entertain the graduates and the alumnae of the school at a banquet at 7 o'clock. President E. W. Bohannan will preside at tfoastmaster, and the following toasts will be given: "First Impressions," Miss Marjory Quilliard; "Afterwards," Miss Esther Levy," 1903; "Domestic Science," Miss Carrie May Neff; "Graduating Class," Miss Paine; "The Faculty," Miss Dorothy Kuhns, and "School Spirit," Miss Florence McLean.

Following the banquet a reception will be held at 9 o'clock in the library, to which the friends of the school are invited.

Wednesday morning the commencement exercises will close with an address by Professor Conway MacMillan of the State university. His subject will be "Conservative Forces in Education."

LOVES OF THE MUSKALLONGE

Fierce Fish Are Also Bold and Chivalrous Lovers—Risk Life Sometimes In Trying To Save Their Hooked Consorts.

Lachine, Canada, June 4.—Among the greatest of all river fish is the great pike of American waters, Esox nobilior, best known by his Indian name of maskinonge or muskallonge.

His prowess as a fighter has often been described. That he is capable of strong connubial affection, and may be ranked with the boldest and most chivalrous of lovers, is probably new to the majority of people.

About the flats near the mouth of the Chateaugay river, in Lake St. Louis, is a feeding ground for muskallonge noted for the past 200 years. An angler trolling about the islands there was puzzled as he managed a powerful strike by the great and irregular splashing upon the surface in spite of the heavy, steady strain upon his line.

It was not until he had pulled his captive into sight that he learned that the churning of the water was the result of the sympathetic leaping over and about the hooked fish of a second one, that maintained a close companionship with its mate, throughout its lusty but unavailing struggle.

When the beaten fish came up to the top of the water with distended jaws and heaving sides the other swam closely alongside until within a dozen feet of the boat, when the fisherman opened fire with a revolver. Piscine gallantry was not proof against a discharge of bullets, and when the third shot struck pretty near its mark there was a farewell flourish of a broad tail above the water and then the exhausted captive was left to die alone.

Within fifteen minutes of its landing the angler was fast to the other fish, and after a short fight drew it alongside, fired into its head and pulled it in. Its weight was forty-three pounds, which was just three-quarters of a pound less than that of its mate.

A French Canadian professional fisherman, who finds that a twelve-bore shotgun gives the quickest quietus to a half-strangled fish, has on two occasions secured the too confiding mate of the hooked muskallonge by quick shooting.

One day, when a twenty-pounder was, after long struggling, drawn into shallow water, in order that a fish spear might be brought into action, a big fish jumped right into the boat and was secured. The lucky anglers were quite astonished when they found it was not their captive which had leaped in so obligingly, since it was still on the hooks, but was its bold and devoted partner.

It must not be supposed, though, that the love which is strong enough to lead up to danger and to death is simply passive or purely sympathetic. Quarrels and duels are not at all uncommon in the watery world.

A good bishop, sitting at a lakeside farmhouse door one evening, remarked upon the incessant play kept up by some large fish in the center of the lake. He was afterward rowed out to the scene of the leaping and splashing and witnessed the lifting into the boat of a great pair of these fish which had locked teeth together in their fighting and killed each other in ther rage.

One sentimentally inclined angler noticed two fish darting at his bait as he began to let it out, one of which dealt it a violent blow with his nose, sending it spinning out of the water. The observer reported it as a proof of the careful affection of a more experienced muskallonge hurling the dangerous temptation out of the reach of a beloved companion.

As a simple matter of fact, the fish was proceeding in its regular way to seize a moving prey, which it commonly strikes on the broadside, partly to paralyze it, so that it may be absorbed at leisure. Many a fish is securely hooked on the upper part of the head from delivering its blow too near to the advancing barbed end of a spoon bait.

But it is the case that the female is often taken first, which may, perhaps, be regarded as helping to prove that her consort is accustomed to give the lady the first chance of a meal when he has prepared the material by knocking it into semi-insensibility.

The fisherman soon discovers that if, after battling with, killing and taking one of these monsters, he has nerve enough left to put out his bait again, he is fairly certain to find the fellow to his prize near by and ready for the fray. Most men are rather worn out with excitement and hard work by the time the muskallonge is safely on board, and have but the single desire to get home os speedily as possible to exhibit their mighty catch.

The muskallonge is a true, if somewhat stern, lover. He is a strict monogamist, so far as is known, and is not tolerant of other company than that of his beloved. Fierce marital conflicts sometimes occur, good authorities assert. But then there are troubles in every family sometimes.

LEGALLY COMPETENT.

Court Cannot Consider For Moral Qualifications.

Chicago, June 3.—On the grounds that Miss Caroline Patterson is "legally competent," and that her moral qualification cannot be considered in the courts, the appellate court has decided against the efforts of the heirs of the millionair contractor, Jonathan Clark to prevent her acting as executorix of Clark's will.

Miss Patterson had for a number of years been Clark's secretary, was a beneficiary under his will to the extent of several thousand dollars and was said to have won Clark's affections and alienated him from his family.

A COUPE COMPLICATION

By Belle Maniates.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

In the tender dusk of an evening in the early spring, Vivian Warne called informally upon her friend, Mrs. Allen. They chatted for a few moments and then Vivian resisted all urging to remain longer, pleading an order of menu cards to be delivered to Mrs. Van Altern, who lived on the other side of the city.

When she came out into the soft darkness she found the unstirred air full of a vapory mist so deadly to plumed millinery. She went back into the house, which was one in a block of stone fronts, to telephone for a carriage. Mrs. Allen regretted the absence of her coachman, but Vivian was accustomed to livery accommodations. Presently young Ned Allen came in and brought the information that the carriage was waiting at the door.

Vivian made a second exit, but when she went out to the curb the driver remained in his seat.

"Awful lot of agony for a cabby," she thought, as she opened the door of the coupe. "I wonder if he thinks I have a footman!"

"Drive to 1215 Forty-fourth street," she commanded.

He made no response, but held his gaze strictly "front" with the fixedness of a Tommy Atkins on parade.

"Stephens & Co. are getting too swell for me," she reflected, as she seated herself and slammed the door. "What lovely appointments for a livery! I hope they haven't increased their rates along with their style."

She leaned luxuriously back in the corner of the coupe and dreamed of the time when the golden days of fame should waft her from an artist in embryo to a painter of portraits. She was called to reality by the halting of the carriage. Supposing she had reached her destination, she opened the door and discovered that she was in an entirely different part of the city and that the coup had stopped in front of the Atheneum club.

"I didn't suppose Stephens & Co. ever made one coupe answer for two calls," she reflected as she closed the door, "but I don't mind having a longer ride."

In a moment a man came out of the club and stood where the light fell full upon his handsome face. Vivian uttered a little exclamation of dismay and sank farther into her corner. A year ago she had been engaged to Carton Leigh. They had first met at a house party and afterwards she had visited a friend who lived in his city. There had been some sort of a misunderstanding and he had declared that she alone was entirely to blame and must make the first advances toward reconciliation. Of course, no self-respecting woman would do that, and she had therefore returned the ring that had once gleamed upon her third finger and had devoted herself to her studio life and many a backward glance tinged with regret, but fortified by a steadfast resolve to never make any overture. She had heard recently from their mutual friend that he was to make this city his home, but she did not know that he had arrived.

She was seized with apprehension. Was he going to get in this coupe? She would not speak until he did. He opened the door and started to get in. She had turned her face away from him, but she felt his start of surprise.

Then she heard him say, in his well-bred, modulated tones:

"I beg your pardon!"

There! He had spoken first, and with a little air of triumph she faced him, the light in front of the club shining full upon her face as it had on his a moment before.

"You! Vivian!" he said in a voice that thrilled old memories and feelings. In an instant he was seated beside her, the door had slammed shut and they were away.

"This is too good to be true," he said, joyfully.

"I ordered a carriage from the livery," she said, stiffly, "and they evidently thought it would answer for your order too."

"Oh, that was the way of it," he said. "Well, I am glad of the mistake, but, are you in much of a hurry? If not, I am going to ask a favor of you. It is very important that I see a man on business who leaves the central depot at 7:30, and there is just time to make it."

"Oh, certainly," she answered, coldly. "It makes no difference."

"It makes no difference, you mean, whether you ride one block or a hundred. Are you as indifferent as that, Vivian?"

She made no response. Presently he broke the silence.

"Did you know that I was living here, in this city, now, Vivian?"

"No; why did you move here?"

"Well, you know my father has more to say about the business than I, and when he decided to move here I could not tell him that it would be very distasteful to Vivian Warne. I was afraid it would not be a business-like consideration to him."

She resented his sarcasm, and he interrupted another silence:

"I have been here a week, Vivian, and have walked the thoroughfares for a glimpse of you."

They had reached the depot now, and he stepped from the coupe, saying he would be back directly. She was conscious, even while she fought against it, of a little feeling of gladness that he was going to return in her carriage instead of ordering another. She leaned forward and watched him as he walked away, so straight and stalwart. His voice and presence had all their own characteristics, and, yes, she must admit it—she loved him! And he had spoken first and was very conciliatory. He came back in a few moments, said something she did not hear to the driver, and was once more by her side.

"I am afraid I did not accomplish much in a business way," he said, in tones boyishly buoyant. "I was so distracted lest you, the carriage and driver should vanish while I was studio it away."

He chatted on for a few moments. Suddenly looking out of the window, Vivian noticed that they were driving neither in the direction of his club nor her destination.

"This driver is so stupid!" she exclaimed. "He must have forgotten the address I gave him."

"Probably he didn't understand it," he suggested. "I find he doesn't understand a word of English. He speaks in German."

"Oh, then won't you tell him that I want to go to 1215 Fifty-fourth street?"

"To Mrs. Van Altern's?" he asked.

"How did you know?"

"I am invited here to dinner tomorrow night. She is a friend of our family."

"I am going to take the place cards to her now."

"And are you going to the dinner?" he asked, joyfully.

"Yes, but where is the driver going?"

"Well," he said, laughing, "don't blame him. The fact is I told him to drive anywhere, Vivian," in a change of tone, "I have not been happy this year Have you?"

"No!" she half whispered.

"See here, dearest, it was a stupid quarrel—quarrels generally are. Let's rub it off the slate and,—Vivian, do you love me?"

It was an hour later when Mrs. Van Altern received her cards and a call from her two friends. At dinner the next night Vivian found herself most excellently assigned at the table—Carton at her right hand and an extremely deaf man at her left. When the conversation generally became quite animated Vivian could not forbear the little arrow:

"After all," she said, looking roguishly at him, "I had my own way, and that is most precious to a woman."

"How did you have your own way?"

"Why, you said you would never make up unless I made the first advances. And I didn't. I never would!"

"Is that so?" he laughed tauntingly. "Well, Miss Vivian Warne, let me tell you that you are certainly mistaken. You certainly did make the first advance, and a most decided one."

"I don't know what you mean," she said, indignantly. "You spoke first!"

"Yes, I spoke first, but not until you had acted in such a way as to justify me in so doing."

"You are mistaken," she said, with rising anger.

"Don't get angry, Vivian—not until I tell you something that I am going to on the way home tonight."

When Vivian left Mrs. Van Altern's with Carton for an escort a coupe was in waiting at the door and she recognized the driver as the same they had had on the previous evening.

"Have you engaged this driver for the season?" she asked, laughingly, when they were seated within.

"Yes," he replied, slipping his arm about her. "I brought him with me from home. He is a faithful fellow and a careful driver."

"What!" she cried. "This is not—"

"My private carriage," he answered. "Yours if you want it."

"But I don't understand," she said, perplexedly. "I telephoned from Mrs. Allen's for a carriage and this was the one that came."

"No," he explained. "My father and I live next door to Mrs. Allen's, and I sent the man up home from the city to bring father to the club. I am not very proficient in speaking the German language, and I presume the man simply understood that he was to call at the house and then come for me. He was perfectly satisfied when you got in, and I don't blame him, but poor father had to take an electric car. So, you see, after appropriating my carriage and calling for me at the club, I thought—"

"Oh, Carton," she said, "don't! I'll throw up both hands, but I am glad it happened, and it was awfully sweet in you not to tell me last night."

"The Fall of Feudalism," By Michael Davitt.

The Latest Books And Magazines

"The Penobscot Man," By Mrs. Eckstorm.

"The Merry Anne," By Samuel Merwin.

"Captains of the World," By Miss Gwendolen Overton.

"The Gems of the East," By A. Henry Savage Landor.

The life of Michael Davitt, whose book, "The Fall of Feudalism in Ireland," has just been published by the Harpers, runs like a romance. He was born in Ireland in 1846. At the age of 7 he had his first experience of being evicted by a landlord. At 10 he was working in a Lancashire cotton mill, where he suffered the loss of his right arm in the machinery. Thus handicapped, he became successively a newsboy, a printer's devil and an assistant letter carrier. He joined the Fenian Brotherhood, and after five years was arrested and tried for treason felony and sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude. In '77 he was released as a "ticket-of-leave" man; but, so far from taking any warning from this experience, he joined Parnell and other agitators and founded with them the Irish Land league. Several times he landed again in prison for short terms. His parliamentary career has been a stormy one, owing to the opposition of enemies. He is the author of several other volumes, but "The Fall of Feudalism in Ireland" sums up the valuable results of the life-work of Parnell, Davitt and their fellow-agitators.

"The Merry Anne," by Samuel Merwin, is published by the Macmillan company. Lake breezes blow through this story, which is an outdoor tale from first to last. The Merry Anne is a tramp lumber schooner plying up and down the great lakes. Dick Smiley, her manly young captain, owns one-quarter of his boat, and is working like a Trojan to pay for the remaining three-quarters' interest and to win the girl he loves. Beveridge, a spy of the revenue service, Dick's rival in love, finds smuggled liquors aboard the Merry Anne, and arrests Dick, around whom circumstances have woven a close mesh. Dick's efforts, while a prisoner, to unearth the conspiracy which involves his good name and compromises his future, the chase after the fleet Mary Anne in the paddle-wheel revenue cutter, the running down of the culprits through the thick woods of the northern peninsula, and the events leading to the final identification of Whisky Jim, makes the liveliest sort of reading. Thomas Fogarty has devoted infinite pains, with constant help from the author, to making his thirty drawings for the book as closely representative as possible of the scenes and the people described. This is one of the season's best books for a man; as good as "Calumet K," which Mr. Merwin wrote in collaboration with Mr. Webster.

In "The Penobscot Man" Mrs. Eckstorm tells of many experiences and adventures of Penobscot river-men. It is the kind of book which will make a very strong appeal to readers who have enjoyed White's "The Blazed Trail," Andy Adams' "Log of a Cowboy," and Van Dyke's "Fisherman's Luck." It is a book for the vacation time outdoors. The volume is redolent with the smoke of the camp fire around which are gathered the river woodmen and guides who tell the strange stories of their achievements and adventures. Mrs. Eckstrom has lived among the people of her story. They are her people.

Certain of the chapter heading indicate the flavor of the volume, as for instance, "The Grim Tale of Larry Connors," "Hymns Before Battle," "Thoreau's Guide," "The Gray Rock of Abol," "The Naughty Pride of Black Sebat and Others," and "The Rescue."

The heroic career of Francis Parkman is told by Henry D. Sedgwick in a volume based upon the historian's diaries, notes and letters, and particularly full in its account of his youth.

Parkman's plan of writing history was formed early; his travels fixed in his mind the scenes and figures which he was to portray, and the rest of his life, as is well known, was spent in the retirement of an invalid scholar's chair. His working time was frequently reduced to less than half an hour a day, yet the greater part of his career was one of such tenacity of purpose and such magnificent endurance as has scarcely a parallel in the history of American letters.

Many personal letters are used to show his close friendship with the great men of his day.

Mr. Sedgwick has recently published a volume of notable essays which has met with high praise (Essays on Great Writers, Houghton, Mifflin & Co.), and his literary career promises to be an eminently successful one.

Miss Gwendon Overton's new novel will be published by the Macmillan company in September. "Captains of the World" is the first of what Miss Overton intends to make a series of studies of modern American life and conditions, numbering in all some six or eight. Miss Overton scored a hit with her first novel, "The Heritage of Unrest," and her second, "Anne Carmel," was one of the most widely read and discussed of last year's books. "Captains of the World" is said, however, to be of much more importance than anything else which Miss Overton has done.

A complete and compact one-volume edition, based on Professor Child's monumental collection of English and Scottish popular ballads, is now published.

Professor Child's labors in the field were unapproached by any American or foreign scholar, and to students and all lovers of literature this condensed edition wil be of high value and importance.

The volume contains an introduction by Professor George L. Kittredge, of Harvary, who with the late Helen Child Sargent has carefully prepared the edition, adding full textual notes, variant readings and a complete glossary.

Mlle. Helene Vacaresco's reminiscences of royalty, "Kings and Queens I Have Known," renews popular interest in her royal mistress, the queen of Roumania, the only really literary queen of our time. Carmen Sylva has written many poem os econsiderable beauty, and has an earnest interest in all authors. The news now reaches us that this intellectual and philanthropic queen intends to make her Castle Segheim, near Neuwied, into a substantially comfortable home for aged and invalid authors.

Harper & Brothers have published this week A. Henry Savage Landor's new book of travel and discovery in the Malay archipelago, which he has entitled "The Gems of the East." Mr. Landor journeyed under the most favorabde auspices, and had every opportunity of reaching those islands, which are seldom visited by the white man. Mr. Landor will say in his preface:

"I beg to express my sincere gratitude to the government of the United States and to the insular government for privileges and facilities of every kind bestowed upon me, both in the United States and the Philippine and Sulu archipelagoes. I also wish to convey particular and most heartfelt thanks to the following officers and officials for much assistance in traveling rapidly through the country, as well as for the unbounded hospitality received on all sides. Secretary of War Elihu Root, Col. C. R. Edwardes, Col. J. Hay, secretary of state; General Weston, the Hon. W. H. Taft, governor-general of the Philippine Islands," and a long list of other officials. He then adds: "By a curious coincidence the journey from England, described in this work, occupied exactly 365 days, I having sailed from Liverpool on Nov. 12, 1902, at 3:30 p. m., and arrived in that city again at 3:30 p. m. on Nov. 12, 1903."

The success of "When Wilderness Was King" is one of the most striking features of the spring publishing season. It is not often that the advance claims made by the publishers of a novel are so entirely substantiated by the actual facts. But Mr. Parish's tale of the early Illinois country seems to be pleasing not only the booksellers and the book buyers, but the critics as well—something that very few stories do in these days of prolific publishing. The reviewer in the Philadelphia Item calls it "the most powerful novel of today concerning the West," and many favorable comparisons have been made between "When Wilderness Was King" and Cooper's famous romances. It is now confidently believed that when the season is over this capital story will be found among the "six best sellers."

Caleb Powers, the former secretary of state of Kentucky, now lying in a Louisville jail condemned to death for the murder of Governor Goebel, is writing a book, to be published by McGuire, Phillips & Co., covering his personal experiences during the troublous days of Kentucky's fierce partisan war for the control of the state. The story of his trial and conviction, recently published in McClure's Magazine, by Samuel Hopkins Adams, aroused much public interest in his case.

Stewart Edward White, the author of "The Silent Places," "The Blazed Trail," and other forest stories, was married April 28. He will set up his household goods in California, near Santa Barbara. The home which he will occupy is his own in more senses than one. He was the architect for it; he let all the contracts for the building of it and supervised, in fact, the whole construction. Not content with making the outside, he is making the inside, too, and during his last winter was busy manufacturing his own furniture. He has whimsically named his home "The Jumping Off Place."

A. C. McClurg & Co. published in May a fourth volume in their deservedly popular "World's Best" series, edited by Sherwin Cody, under the title of "The World's Great Orations," and a beautiful little volume of "Sermonettes" by Lamennais, which makes a most welcome addition to the "Helpful Thoughts" series.

Few Americans can boast of so long and distinguished an ancestry as Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keays, author of "He That Eateth Bread With Me." The prominence that Mrs. Keays' name has attained through the success of her novel has brought her into connection with may new members of her family. She recently received a letter from a distant relative interested in genealogy which contains Mrs. Keays' family tree written out, showing its roots reaching back to Henry III of England.

Dodd, Mead and Company announce for early publication "The Poet's Corner," by Max Beerbohm.

This is another of Beerbohm's portfolios of eccentric and original caricatures. This time he has set off, with great cleverness, the characteristics and failings of certain modren poets. The portfolio is purposely made to appear like a child's nursery book. The sketches are admirable both as regards humor and execution. A few of the titles will give an idea of the scope of the portfolio: Robert Browning Taking Tea with the Browning Society; Matthew Arnold Interviewed by His Niece, Mrs. Ward; Walt Whitman Inciting the Bird of Freedom to Soar; Paul Verlaine as an Usher in a Private School; William Butler Yeats Presenting George Moore to the Queen of the aFiries; Dante Gabriel Rossetti in a Back Garden; etc., etc.

In the June issue of the International Studio Octave Uzanne continues the series of articles on Pastel in a discussion of the work of Gaston La Touche. A most interesting conversation with the artist is recorded in which it appears that the medium in which he has demonstrated such skill is by no means his favorite, nor does he consider it capable of any great range of effect. Illustrations in colour and in black-and-white give a comprehensive view of his mastery over the friable, powdery medium. A pastel by James McNeil Whistler, a study of "A Venetian Canal" is reproduced in colours for the frontispiece of this issue. Charles H. Caffin makes some interesting observations on the state of art in this country in an article on "Some Younger Painters and Others." Some one, Victor Hugo perhaps, has said that the destinies of a country depend upon the opinions of its citizens not yet arrived at the age of twenty-five. So in the country's art it is fitting to consider the new blood that is determining its approaching character. Sanity and sobriety, Mr. Caffin concludes, are the distinguishing features of American art, and for this very reason he finds it particularly prone to the vice of becoming humdrum. He examines the work of such painters as Vincent du Mond and Louis Loeb, who have recently turned toward work of imaginative value, and then weighs the promises found in the efforts of younger men, such as Albert L. Groll, P. Van Dearing Perrine, Frederick Ballard Williams, etc. Laurence Housman speaks appreciatively of the aims of a young artist in an article on The Work of Herbert Alexander, whose recent show of some fifty water colours makes his first bid for recognition after a number of years of work and quiet development. The illustrations in colour that accompany this article would seem to bear out Mr. Housman's judgment on the painter's sensitiveness of touch, keen eye for colour, and technical skill. Water colour as the medium toward which painters of the day revert for the expression of an increasingly varied range of effects is the theme of Dr. Talcott William's interesting estimate o fthe Philadelphia Water-colour Exhibition. An article of more than passing interest at a time when Thibet has for a while threatened to be as much the center of the world as the "Thibetan Art," with illustrations showing the Oriental richness of Thibetan design in metals, joined as it is with a sense of the value of blank spaces rarely understood in India near by. The newer attitude toward landscape as shown in the work of a German painter, Walter Leistikow, is set forth in an illustrated article by W. Fred. Eight characteristic studies of figures and heads by Sir Edward Burne-Jones are reproduced from among those on view at the recent Leicester gallery exhibition. The number closes with an article on the Week End Cottage Competition and the usual studio talk from art centers here and abroad.

Nothing has appeared in print for many, many moons possessed of the rare and tender charm which saturates the novelette in the May number of Lippincott's Magazine. Its title is "Kitty of the Roses" and its author Ralph Henry Barbour. Stifling heat and the dust of the city are eliminated so far as the reader is concerned, for he is transported into a heavenly rose-garden filled with summer bloom and the place of all places for a lover's meeting. Here he meets her: "a flower that dimmed the others as the moonlight dims the first faint radiance of the stars." Here he dubbed her "Kitty of the Roses." Here he made up his mind that she is the only girl for him—and then begins the chase.

Nine shorter stories of agreeable variety follow: "Urbs in Rure," by Mrs. I. Zangwill, is a very real instance of an effort to educate a city family up to the joys of country life. "Her Husband," by Anne Warner, is a good story with a surprise at the end. The author of "That Mainwaring Affair," A. Maynard Barbour, contributes a strong, dramatic tale called "A Still Hunt." "A Sinner in Israel," by Martha Wolfenstein, is alive with local color of the Gass. A summer love-story far better than the average is that by Alison M. Lederer entitled "The Difference." "Miss Eunice's Own Folks," by Edith Robinson, is of the highest quality in both treatment and novel plot. "The Man in the Overcoat" claims attention as a burglar story somewhat out of the ordinary track. The author is Edith Morgan Willett. Ella Middleton Tybout's tale, "A Very Wise Virgin," brings a ready laugh; and a bright little take-off on those who refuse to "talk happiness" is called "A Corner in Troubles," by Clinton Dangerfield.

The resistless commercial invasion of Europe by peaceful Americans really has in it more of practical significance for this country than have the more sansational military operations in the far East. In publishing the able and illuminating papers on this important subject, written by its special correspondent abroad, Gilson Willets, Leslie's Weekly is rendering good service to the community. Mr. Willet's latest article, appearing in the current number of the Weekly, bears the sub-title, "Americans Welcome in France," and it shows in a most interesting way how American capital and enterprise, feared and resisted in other European countries, are cordially invited to our sister republic. This issue contains a wealth of attractive illustrations, including three pages of war pictures, one of these being a tellign front cartoon by Arthur Henderson; a pictorial account of the spring-day festivities at Cornell university; a fine amateur-contest page; scenes at a school where millionaires learn to be yachtsmen; a drawing by Ch. Weber, showing young New Yorkers spellbound before the monkeys' cages at the "zoo;" a pleasing photographic story of a transatlantic voyage; glimpses of Cuba under her own flag, and photographs of the public halls in which the great opposing parties will nominate their presidential candidates. The letterpress, among other delightful things, comprises a fascinating story, "Vanished Millions," by the popular author, Ausburn Towner; timely political reminiscences, in "Twelve Great History-Making Conventions," by E. G. Dunnell, and an article of special interest to society people, by Harriet Quimby, entitled "Yachting Millionaires Going to School." "Jasper's" keen dissection of the financial situation is as readable as it is instructive.

Among the notable features of the Argonaut for May 30 are "Notes About Cairo," by Jerome Hart—an interesting account of the different phases of life in the Egyptian city and of queer characters encountered there; "When the Light Came," an unusually strong story, with the desert as a setting, by Mabel Crooks Brown; "New York's Babyless Flats," by Geraldine Bonner, who tells how Gotham houses are closed against children; extracts from Dr. Funk's sensational book, "The Widow's Mite," and a criticism of Richard Mansfield in "Ivan the Terrible," at the Columbia, by Josephine Hart Phelps.

The North American Review for June is a number of great and varied interest. The veteran scholar, Karl Blind, asks and answers in the negative the question, "Does Russia Represent Aryan Civilization?" Henry Clews, writing of "Russia and England during the Civil War," denies that the visit of the Russian ships to New York harbor, in 1863, had any practical significance, and on the strength of a letter which he received from Mr. Gladstone, he affirms that England had no intention to recognize the Confederacy. Sir William H. White, K. C. B., late director of naval construction in the British navy, gives an interesting description of "The New American Navy." Charles A. Prouty, of the interstate commerce commission, discusses "Railway Rates and the Merger Decision," and concludes that the former will not be in any way affected by the latter. Hugh Clifford says a high tribute to "The Genius of Joseph Conrad." Mary Church Terrell, honorary president of the National Association of Colored Women, treats of "Lynching From a Negro's Point of View." Sir Walter Lawrence explains the occasion and object of "The British Mission to Tibet." Maurice Low suggests how American capital and American labor may learn "A Lesson From English Labor." A. Henry Savage Landor presents a pleasing picture of "The American Soldier as Seen in the Philippines." George E. Parker recounts "Some Industrial Tendencies in Ireland," which came under his observation on a recent visit to that country. The Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, professor of theology in Union Theological seminary, in a rather startling paper, represents "Socialism as a Rival of Organized Christianity." Lawrence Gilman lauds highly "The Music of Edward MacDowell," and the number closes with the sixth part of William Dean Howell's novel, "The Son of Royal Langbrith."

No reader who really cares about the serious problems of the day can afford to miss the notable leading article in the June Atlantic upon "The Great Delusion of Our Time," by John H. Denison. Mr. Denison writes with both humor and eloquence of the time's blind worship of force, its calm conviction of magisterial authority in all matters of belief, and its easy disregard of the moral sense.

Among the special out-of-door features in the Outlook's fifteenth annual recreation number, in addition to the first installment of Stewart Edward White's "The Mountains," which is illustrated by original full-page drawings by Fernand Lungren, may be mentioned: a series of rather remarkable drawings by Alden Peirson accompanying Rudyard Kipling's beautiful out-of-door poem, "The Feet of the Young Men," republished by special arrangement with Mr. Kipling; "A Day's Fishing in Colorado," by Dean Hart, of Denver, with many fine photographs; "The Great Horned Owl," by J. M. Gleeson, the well known animal artist, with drawings by the author; "The Angler's Tournament," by C. F. Holder, describing with pictures the curious and interesting fishing contest for prizes at Santa Catalina Island; and a charming study of dog character, "My Dog Grouse," by Professor W. E. D. Scott, with a drawing by Bruce Horsfall. Among unillustrated features are: "In the Time of Opposition," by S. H. Howard, a singularly vivid and vigorous story of the rule of the Hudson Bay company in the fur country; three or four summer poems; "Upstream" by Mary Waldo Higginson, a charming bit of depiction of river and country. There are special portraits of Stanley, John F. Walace (the actual head of the force which will now build the Panama canal), Gen. Kuroki, now famous as the leader of the Japanese force which defeated the Russians on the Yalu, and Admiral Skrydloff, who succeeds Admiral Makaroff.

The strikingly handsome and artistic cover of the June Housekeeper is a harbinger of the good things to be found within. The execellent fiction includes the final installment of Elliot Walker's "A Rose in the Brambles," and short stories by Calara Parker, Fannie E. Ostrander, Louise J. Strong and Olive M. Pew. Among the leading features are "Conveniences For Summer Trunks" (illustrated), by Mildred Martin; "Profitable Pets For Boys," by Kate V. St. Maur; "Our Modern Portias," by Thorndike Colton; "The House Practical," by Mary Taylor-Ross; "For the Woman With One Maid," by Elizabeth W. Morrison; "The Housekeeper's Tools," by Mina Lawrence, and a double page of photographic illustrations portraying a trip up the great lakes. Two pages of pictures illustrate the latest ideas in summer fashions.

All the more important articles in the Review of Reviews for June are the contributions of experts. An admirable summary of "What Stanley Lived to See Accomplished in Africa" is furnished by Cyrus C. Adams, the geological writer on the staff of the New York Sun; President Charles F. Thwing writes suggestively on "Sending a Son to College;" Lieut. Joseph A. Baer, United States army, gives his observations, as a cavalry officer, of those unique troopers, the Cossacks; Arthur Warren describes "The Turbine: A New Era of Steam," and J. A. Kingman writes on "The Automobile in Business;" Librarian Elmendorf, of Buffalo, defines "The Work of a Modern Public Library;" Professor E. R. A. Seligman contributes a paper on the special franchise tax in New York, and Professor Carl C. Plehn writes on the taxation of bank franchises in California. Each of these articles is the work of a man who has expert knowledge of the topic on which he writes.

Timely and authentic war pictures and news are an important feature of the current Harper's Weekly. There are snapshots showing scenes of action in Korea and interesting phases of the war situation in Japan, and William Dinwiddie, the Weekly's special correspondent in the far East, writes from Ping-Yang about the experiences and trials of a war correspondent at the front. Joseph Keating has an entertaining character sketch of "T. P." (T. P. O'Connor), the popular English parliamentarian. Sydney Brooks writes from London on "The New Ireland and Its Maker." Charles Augustus Young, professor of astrnomy at Princeton, describes the latest theories of the constitution of the sun, and there are pictures of polo, fox huning, scenes at Coney Island, and other matters of timely interest. Gilbert K. Chesterton's brilliant two-part short story, "The Awful Reason of the Vicar's Visit," is concluded in this issue, which contains, also, an important installment of "The Truants," the new serial by A. E. Mason.

"BEING DONE GOOD."

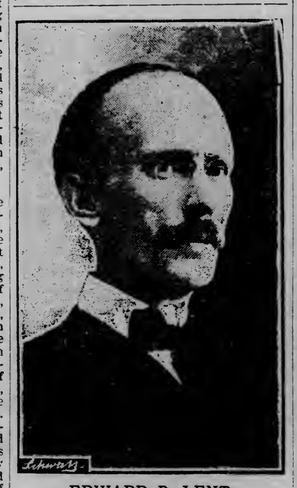
Fun and Philosophy In a Book By a Rheumatic Invalid.

E. B. Lent Writes of Quaint Experiences With Twenty Doctors—The Sunny Side of Suffering.

If there is one thing in this world in which a man is accustomed to take a pride it is his rheumatism. He may not have any important relatives; he may not know his ancestors; he may be a mere editor as to income; he may have tastes that subject him to daily scorn and remonstrance; but if he has rheumatism he has one of the oldest and most revered of occupations; one that he shares with philosophers and kings. There are personal advantages in rheumatism, too, when you have it good; for instance, you are not expected to flourish over the premises, putting out fires in other people's houses; you are excused from general training; the judge is easy on you when you dodge the jury duty; you escape no end of pink teas and melodrama; you are not led astray by dreams of becoming an acrobat; the parson does not note your absence from the congregation; he expects it; you are not asked to take a ticket for the charity ball; you won't be, until they have rigged up machinery to dandle you through a quadrille; and, especially, you are insured against death until you are aged beyond belief. There is nothing like a quart or so of uric acid in the blood to preserve your tissues. We have no record anywhere of a rheumatic subject dying young, unless he was unable to skip fast enough to get away from an automobile and even when the thickening of his bones and turgidity of his muscles would probably cause the coal-oil buggy to dance over his prostrate form without leaving any dents on it.

But in spite of its history and its advantages, the man who has acquired rheumatism is apt to take it seriously. He broods upon it and takes revengeful views of life. He toddles around to his club, not to enjoy his club, but merely to find some member into whose ears he can pour his tale of woe. People of this sort are so used to rebuffs that one man in a smoking car, who began to tell his seat mate about his ugly liver, was startled into silence for the rest of the trip when the recipient of these confidences turned with a joyous smile and exclaimed: "Liver! That's mightily interesting! Tell me all about it."

We know rheumatics who spend hours and days in groaning and complaining. We know that the people who live with them have to undergo some hard thoughts and hard language. What an astonishment, therefore, to come upon a man who has rheumatism in its poisonous form, but who finds in it nothing more than a subject for mirth! He stands apart from himself, a laughing philosopher, and pokes fun at the doctors who are trying to cure him. This subject is a retired newspaperman, and if anything ought to give resolution and endurance and optimism and the Rabelaisian viewpoint it is a few years experience in wrenching news out of unwilling possessors of it. Rheumatism's wrenches come easy after that. This new humorist is Edward B. Lent of Brooklyn, recently a member of the staff of the Brooklyn Engle, secretary of the civil service commission and a functionary in one or two important boards of trade and commericial enterprises. Four years ago he began to indulge in rheumatism, secretly and timidly, as one acquires a taste for opium and tomatoes, but as the years went on he became more and more open in the practice, until now he takes his rheumatism as hardened sinners takes their cocktails, at all scrts of hours and without reference to spectators. Yet he is conscious of the fact that the habit may grow upon him to such a degree as to interfere with many employments that he has in mind, and from time to time he asks a physician, or electrician, or a healer, or a thought twister, or a rubber to see if his kinks can be taken out of him.



EDWARD B. LENT,
Author of "Being Done Good."

The results of his experiences with these people he has just put into a book, which is probably the only one of its kind that ever was printed or ever will be, unless some fellow with a gamesome intellect pretends to be a rheumatic and contrives a lot of experiences that never happened. The recital by Mr. Lent is playfully sarcastic, but it is never gloomy. He punches holes through some inflated and rather majestic theories, but his implement is oftener the scalpel of satire than the battering ram of argument. It is a story of what happened to him when he was undergoing treatment, first by regular physicians—whom he still employs—then, experimentally, and with consent of his family and his medical adviser—by homeopathic doctors, Christian Scientists, orthopedic surgeons, hydrotherapists, men with electric batteries and mental batteries and goodness knows how many more, down to the friend or relative who insists upon his trying the latest advertised quackery. It argues a noble constitution that Mr. Lent continues to live and laugh after his experience, although, poor chap! the laughing is not so easy as it seems, for he is houseridden, moves about with difficulty and a cane, can hardly turn his head or bend his body, and when he takes his broiled lobster, Welsh rabbit, cucumber, hard boiled egg and pot of porter, just before retiring, he has to ply his knife and fork slowly. Until you see him move, however, you do not realize that he has been an invalid for four years. His smile is genuine and quizzical, his eyes dance and glimmer with fun and he salts his speech with quips and oddities such as he ought to preserve for print. Probably he will strike the happy combination some day that will release him from his pains restore him to us, blithesome, ready for foot tours and bicycle runs. Meantime he may be serving a higher use by officiating as a model of deportment and a compendium of most of the virtues, especially of courage and cheer.

BEING DONE GOOD.

His first experience was with the regular faculty called allopaths by the homeopathists and his book, "Being Done Good" (published by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle), contains various experiences that he endured at their hands with plasters of mustard and Spanish fly, the actual cautary and drugs. Learning from hard experience that it costs $5 to be branded by a specialist, the invalid bought a pyrograph outfit for his wife, and observed with alarm how fond she become of her task. After the fourth lesson she was able to put burnt wood designs upon him that made him long to call the neighbors in to admire the results. Home pyrography, practiced on the human subject, made it easy to do the work on wood and pigskin afterward. The cautery stimulates any given neighborhood of the subject and is an antiseptic. "Anything red hot, except a Coney Island sausage, is germ proof." Beside it always cools off a nervous man to drop hot iron on him. The monks found that out several centuries ago. Tyndall proved heat to be a mode of motion, and a man with a hot iron on him goes through all the modes of motion there are.

Mr. Lent says of mustard plasters that until his introduction to those vegetables his only experience with them had been vicarious. He had placed one on "the exiguous stomach of a literary friend. That plaster saved his friend's vermiform appendix and also his valuable young life. The great efficacy of this application was due to the fact that it was nearly all mustard, with only a little self-rising pancake flour added, and, what was more important, it was smeared good and thick all over the seat of misery. This, with copious doses of morphine, lulled the patient into forgetfulness and caused him to see fish at his bedside. Thus we left him fishing and happy. In two months he was about again."

MINERAL WATERS AND CUPPING.

There were experiences with kidney washes, the most efficacious being plain water which you buy from owners of springs at champagne prices, and as there is trouble in New York over the removal of bottles, since all house refuse is classed as either garbage or paper, and bottles aren't either, the obsolete glass piled up until there was danger that the residents could not make their way to the top floors. There were many regulations of diet. There always are. But if you don't like what one doctor orders you can hire another because probability is that he will undo what the last one ordered. Mr. Lent tried twenty doctors, in all, and each of them told him to eat something different from the food his predecessor had prescribed. Says he, "Any animal except a human being knows when and what to eat. Nature protects the health of the dumb creatures by standing guard through their instincts. Man was turned loose, and the first thing he did was to eat the forbidden fruit his wife had brought home for dinner. Don't blame Adam. We all do the same thing. The tree of human knowledge grows as various members of the human race graft this and that upon it. Exeprimenters widen our mental horizon and enable the pathologist and toxicologist to jot down interesting conclusions at the autopsy and in the laboratory."

Before quitting the external applications, however, supping deserves mention. This process has nothing to do with tankards; more the pity, the thirsting patient thinks. "The decorations made by this method are large and purple, and you notice them for several days, even when you can't see them. Cupping works nicely whenever the cup gets a hold sufficient to withstand a 56-pound pull. If the defendant is bony this is not always possible. In the early days of his treatment the author was fairly muscular and cuppable. Having dropped forty pounds since then, and being at jockey weight, there seems to be no meaty area on his back sufficiently large to include the circumference of a drinking glass. At some point in the tangent, the glass rests on a bone which humps up and destroys the vacuum and the suction before the cup can dig in for a good hold. The doctor takes an ordinary drinking glass, pours a little alcohol into it, and throws in a lighted match. As the alcohol ignites, he jabs the rim of the glass into the victim's back, just where the trouble is. If the tackle is a good one, you get some lovely color effects. The heat creates a partial vacuum in the glass and the atmospheric pressure forces an inch and a half of prime rib roast right into the vessel, and all the time it seems as if the rest of him were backing in after it. This sensation presently changes and the victim, who cannot see what is going on, begins to feel that some powerful sucker is drawing on him for all it, or he, is worth. Although not a sight draft, for the reason above explained, it is quite as compulsory as a bill. When they take off the glass, after fifteen minutes, the space it covered is trampled and dishevled like the old meadow when the circus tent has been moved away, or the spot where the hen coop was until yesterday. Having successfully withstod the effects of one cup, half a dozen are now stuck on simultaneously. Then you cling, yearningly, to the bed post to keep from being drawn backward out of the window. Such suction you never backed up against before or otherwise. Blood deserts the brain so fast, hurrying to fill the cups, that you become faint and cannot meet the situation with words. The same also from the other end—you have cold feet."

Our patient sincerely believes that he has tried everything that ever killed or cured a human being, or was avoided by a dog. He became so expert that he "could tell in a few minutes, by sniffing around in a drug store, whether the proprietor was out of any particular drug or just how much he had left. This applied to goods in stoppered bottles, and included the full line, except soap, eclegne, candy, hair brushes and hot water bags, though when in these departments the scent sometimes wandered and chased the quarry in among the red flannel chest protectors and the liver pads."

TURKISH BATH EXPERIENCES.

The awful responsibility that is laid upon him by the fact of authorship does not prevent our rheumatic friend from lapsing into puns, once in a while, but as he is frugal of these offendings he is apt to be forgiven. He allows that a lean man fond of lean bacon can get leaner bakin' in a Turkish bath than anywhere else. And apropos of bathing he mentions an Adirondack guids of his acquaintance, "who, when he puts on a new shirt, puts it on to stay until it is removed by wear, tear and natural disintegration. If the shirt goes on in the early spring it moults in the late fall, when it is time for something heavier, anyway. No more companionable fellow than this guide could be found. It must be remembered, however, that he lives outdoors and mingles freely with the wind. Put him amid highly socialized surroundings—for instance, in a ballroom, in a state of action—and we can imagine a falling off in his popularity."

Turkish baths are now familiar appliances of civilization, but not all their patrons resort to them for the cure of disease. Mr. Lent, arrayed in a towel and grasping a quarter of a dollar, entered with some apprehension, but not those which are shared by prudent customers, who overlook the fees. For "nothing is easier than to do you a whole dollar's worth of damage when you are down." In the hot room he finds a number of fellow citizens, somé well done, a few still rare. The lean ones are invited to drink copiously in order to raise a dew. The other sort remain pigeon toed and expectant. After the usual period of suffering has been passed you touch a button and the rubber seizes you and does the rest. He is a Swede with fingers of sausage-like massiveness, who takes the offender into his little marble morgue, lays him out on a marble slab and tries to dismantle the plant that has been intrusted to him. Instead of succeeding in this endeavor he unfies it so that when the patient goes home he is all one piece from head to foot. At least, so this rhematic expert finds it. While a six months' course of Turkish baths fitted him to move in good society, it also unfitted the author from moving in society or any other way.

Specialists connected with the bathing establishments administer electricity to those who are suffering for it, and in this case the current proved to be a path finder. It sought out every sore spot, and the victim's fins raised responsive waves in the water wherein he soaked. There is one other kind of bath

The Play and the Players The Coming Week.

New York, June 4.—The parting of Weber and Fields and the disbandment of their company drew to the New Amsterdam theater the largest audience since its opening. Every first nighter was there, for this was an occasion to furnish talk for them in years to come.

The programs were all gobbled up early in the evening and carried away as souvenirs.

The pieces given were those used on the road tour. The first part was "Whoop-dee-doo" and the last part a burlesque of "Catharine."

When the curtain dropped the orchestra began to play "Auld Lang Syne." Then the audience began to yell "Speech." "Speech." That sent the curtain up, and then, possibly because no one else had nerve enough to do it, Pete Dailey stepped forward. He looked so ridiculous in his woman's makeup that the audience had to laugh at him.

"Some one has to do it," said Dailey, "and I'll appoint myself master of ceremonies. I'll first introduce to you the child artist, John T. Kelly."

Kelly said he had been with the company eight years and that he wished both Weber and Fields all kinds of luck in their separate ways.

Louis Mann has been accused of being one cause of the friction between Weber and Fields. Only a few nights ago he had a game of fisticuffs with Fields, but he didn't show any evidence of ill will in his farewell speech. He wished both comedians every future success, and then made the audience sit up with this.

"The mutability of all things mundane was never better exemplified than to-night."

It was not until Mabel Fenton spoke that any one tried to be serious. She was serious when she said: "I opened with the boys and I am closing with them. I am sorry to see it."

"This is Miss Russell," said the master of ceremonies, bringing the $1200 a week star forward.

Lillian could only say that she echoed the sentiments of the other players who had spoken. She started to say something, but she couldn't, as she was too near the weeping point. When she stepped back to her place Charles Ross came forward:

"I call this parting business suicide," said he boldly. "Good, Good," came from all over the house.

Then it was up to Weber and Fields. The long comedian was pathetic looking when Dailey pulled him forward. Fields was mighty near to tears. Dailey brought Weber forward and the two partners of twenty-six years clasped hands. The audience stood up and cheered.

"We are both sorry," blurted out Weber. "I echo Mr. Weber's sentiment," said Fields, when the cheering stopped. Then the curtain dropped for the last time on Weber and Fields as a "team."

THE ACTOR-MANAGER.

Evils of System as Worked in London.

Some of the New Yorkers who profess to believe that they do things theatrical better in England than here have looked upon the London actor-manager as an institution that could be advantageously brought to this country, says the New York Sun. He is supposed to be free from the commercial aims of the ordinary manager, anxious to produce artistic plays rather than merely to make money, and in every way superior to the men who have the keeping of our drama in their hands.

The greatest strength of this theory lies in the instances that its upholders are able to cite. They point in the first place to Sir Henry Irving.

It would, of course, benefit any stage to have on it such men as he; but the average actor-manager has few points in common with the most distinguished member of the group. He is held up by the advocates of the English actor-manager plan, who say: "He is the best type of the man who is more influenced by art than business. He mounts in the most beautiful and appropriate way he can the dramas worthiest of his trouble. He engages the best actors, and his motives are much more artistic than commercial. He is the man needed on the American stage."

Nobody will dispute the truth of this statement; but it is a far cry from Sir Henry to most of his successors in London. The most conspicuous actor-managers there are Beerbohm Tree, George Alexander, Charles Wyndham, Arthur Bourchier, John Hare and any other actors who happen to possess money enough to hire a theater and produce a play with themselves as the stars. All these actors, including Mr. Bourchier, have been seen here.

Even in London the faults of the plan have always been recognized, and only a few years ago Sir Henry Irving, when he thought of producing "Julius Caesar," had to give up the idea because all the actors he thought of engaging had theaters of their own.

Not all of them take the trouble to engage the best actors, especially when they are gifted enough to obscure their employers. The members of their company who may have family or other claims on them are often able to retain places of importance, to the injury of the production.

In one of the London theaters conducted by an actor-manager, the leading woman is the mother of an adult son and looks it. Yet she plays young girls, if she chooses to, and always has her pick of the feminine roles—a fact which might do her less harm if she had ever been gifted to any unusual degree.

But her first success was due to her youthful beauty. Americans who go to London are astonished to find her playing the leading roles in one of the first theaters there.

She was a prudent person, saved her money, invested it well, and is nowadays a woman of means, and therefore a useful member of any actor-manager's company, particularly when, after so many years of artistic association and friendship, she is willing to give financial assistance when it is needed. Her reward is to hold her old place in the company and spoil, except for those who have become accustomed to her during the last quarter of a century, every performance in which she takes part.

In some way the company of every actor-manager is provided with incompetent or superannuated cousins, wives or relatives of one kind or another. It is usually the wife who is the greatest source of artistic injury when she decides to play whatever role she may want in her husband's company; but all the actors have a power in damaging the performances that would never be tolerated in one of the so-called commercial theaters.

The London actor-manager, having no controlling power over him but the public, is able to have his own way until he forces the loyal British public to accept him and his friends and relatives, or goes broke. This happened to a young actor of promise two years ago.

He had shown great promise and made a sensational success in one play. He might have kept on having more and more success, but for his determination to give his wife the leading roles in all his performances.

She was grotesquely homely and her physical peculiarities made it impossible for even the London public, which is less exacting in the matter of looks than we are here, to accept her. In one play she was actually compelled to look at herself in a mirror and talk about her surpassing loveliness.

One play after another was produced and failed. The actor's backers finally put an ultimatum before him. He was asked to provide some more suitable person for the leading feminine parts in his plays or to get along in the future without their assistance.

He replied that he preferred to select his own leading lady, and his wife continues to occupy that post, although misfortunes of this uxorious young actor have greatly exceeded his successes during recten years. In this country his failure was complete. But in spite of warnings he insisted that his wife should play the leading roles in all his productions. There was even a rumor that his mother-in-law was a member of his company.

One actor-manager came here with his wife, who enjoyed a considerable vogue in London. At least, there had never been any criticism of her talents.

A few New York audiences started at her in astonishment, and she stayed at home the next time her husband came over.

An actor who was a comedian for some years, and is now a prominent London actor-manager, brought his wife here as his leading lady, to the astonishment of the audiences that witnessed her physical appearance. The most inflamed specimen of poster art ever exhibited here was no more grotesque in line and color than this extremely tall and bony lady.

Whatever her talents may have been, there was no chance of her success so long as her physical appearance was so unusual. The tour came to an end after a few weeks, and the most effective factor in its failure was the appearance of this actress, to whom all the leading roles were intrusted.

No mere commercial manager, however, benighted he might be, would ever have attempted to make the public accept an actress it did not want to see. In the case of several English actor-managers who have come to this country it has been suggested to them as delicately as possible that their performances might be benefited if a change were made in the leading actress. Few of them, however, have taken that advice.

"How can the London actor-managers compel their public to accept unsuitable persons in leading parts?" is a question often asked, always difficult to answer.

It is due in a degree to the fact that the social side of theatrical life is so much more important in London than here. It is the wife's business to keep up the social hoopla! when she is not acting, and some of these women are of great assistance to their husbands.

Mrs. George Alexander retired from the stage soon after her marriage. But it is her proud boast that she can truthfully say at the close of every season that she has been in every smart drawing room in London.

It was the crowning social triumph of Mrs. Berbohm Tree's career when she was invited to sit in the royal enclosure at Ascot. Violet Van Brugh, wife of Arthur Bourchier, is a niece of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who is said to have been the angel for the husband's theatrical personality that enabled them to hold leading places on the stage, and this, combined with their husbands' positions, keeps them in view.

Presumably an actor has some public career before he presumes to become an actor-manager, even though he does happen to have money or rich friends. Social influence plays a part in the theatrical affairs of London that is incredible here, where success is possible only from the support of the public.

Great financial success is possible in London only in the same way. The friendship of the entire house of peers cannot make the public come to see poor plays. But it helps to bring the theater to those persons who want to be associated with the actors who know many swells, as advertises an actor and it helps above all to raise money from Australia or South African millionaires when the time has come to make a new production, and the fashionable West End doctor would rather risk someone else's money than his own.

Beerbohm Tree has been known to close his theater at the height of the season in order to spend Saturday and Sunday with the house party of a duke who had invited him.

"Then these actor-managers who have acquired a certain vogue in society and have met with some little degree of artistic success, are incomprehensibly indifferent on the stage according to our views," said a man who had recently returned from abroad, "and make even less pretence at acting than the average London actor. There is nobody over them, no manager, nothing but possibly the backer, who does not always care.

"The supporting actors usually are ambitious, since they know they're not allowed to do anything to interfere with the glory of the acting-manager. It is one man rule with the most damaging results. It is a lucky thing for New York that the acting-manager is still a rare figure."

The acting-manager does exist in this country, although theatrical conditions here prevent him from doing as much harm as he has done in London. Richard Mansfield, E. H. Sothern, J. K. Hackett, Otis Skinner, Nat Goodwin and half a dozen older American actors are managers also. They select their own plays, engage their own companies and look after their own affairs with as much independence as if they were real actor-managers in their own theaters.

They differ from the London actor-manager in not having their own permanent theater in New York. If they were settled for eight months of the year in New York, the situation would be the same existing today in London.

Our actor-managers, however, must travel about, so they have not gained the foothold here that they have in London.

Julia Marlowe is an actor-manager in that she has always had the absolute say as to what she wanted to do, whoever might be named as her manager. Mrs. Fiske had always this same freedom and so did Ada Rehan.

But the majority of stars, whether or not they are under the management of Charles Frohman of Klaw & Erlanger, are compelled to do what their managers tell them to do. For John Drew, William Faversham, Annie Russell, Maude Adams, Willie Collier and the others in his employ, Charles Frohman has the absolute decision as to the play they shall act in, and they are expected to act in those dramas, whether they like them or not.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Jane Corcoran, who has been doing excellent work during the past few seasons, will be starred next season by Arthur C. Alston and J. Emmett Baxter, who have secured the entire production of "Pretty Peggy," Grace George's success.

Boston has gone daft over a revival of "East Lynne!" Shades of Emerson.

Nat Goodwin, having lost much money this season, is preparing to lose more. He has bought ground in New York on which he will erect a theater—he says.

Marion Longfellow, a descendant of the poet, is in a Denver stock company.

Viola Allen has decided upon her new production for next season. It will be "A Winter's Tale."

A scarcity of elephants for the procession at the opening of the World's fair resulted in "Tom," the star attraction at Ingersoll park, Des Moines, being taken to St. Louis to do an elephant stunt at the big show. He will resume his regular summer engagement at the Iowa park on June 15.

With the closing of the season for the Tim Murphy company comes the announcement that Mrs. Murphy (Dorothy Sherrod) will be featured as a star in a new piece next season.

The W. C. T. U. at Springfield, Ohio, has decided that "Othello" deserves to be classed with "blood and thunder" plays, and at a meeting held recently condemned the piece and asked the mayor to prevent the presentation of this masterpiece by a traveling company.

Blanche Ring will assume the leading part in "Vivian's Papas" when the farce is put on in Chicago for a summer run next month. Leo Ditrichstein, who put the play into English, will be a member of the cast. Miss Ring is now in vaudeville, where she is giving English hall ballads.

James K. Hackett will produce next season a dramatization of the new Winston Churchill romance, the scene of which is laid in the Louisiana purchase period. He is being urged to make a revival of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Pittsburg has not yet ceased to roast "The Queen of Laughter," the opera the Bostonians tried out there, had rewritten by J. Cheever Goodwin and sprung on the Iron City. They call it "The Empress of Melancholia" there, and say it is neither comic opera nor musical.

The champagne dance, from "The Silver Slipper," will be in vaudeville next season.

David Belasco and Henry De Mille collaborated once on a play in which they used the line from the Psalms of David, "Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?" The actor to whom this line fell expressed his dissatisfaction over it, and confided his feelings to De Mille. "Are you stuck on it?" the actor asked him. "Yes," said De Mille, "but just continue, and you see the line isn't mine. It's David's." "I thought so," said the actor; "anyone could tell that was some of David Belasco's bad English."

"Kid" McCoy says he wants to buy the rights to "Gus" Thomas' successful farce, "The Other Girl," in order to star in it in the part of the pugilist, now played by Lionel Barrymore, in close imitation of "Kid" McCoy's manner of speech and gesture. He confesses, however, that Mr. Frohman has shown no great desire to sell out.

Arrangements are under way for an Australian production of "The Wizard of Oz." The extravaganza will be done there by an English cast.

Luther Mitchell Reader has signed a contract which binds him to write the music for the light opera which Fritzi Scheff will use next season. It will be the twenty-fifth opera he has written in twenty-one years.

David Belasco has sent a representative to Europe with a carte blanche order to purchase furniture, statuary and other material to be made use of in the production next fall of the play he has written for Mrs. Leslie Carter. Of the theme and character of this work Mr. Belasco has said nothing for publication, and he will doubtless maintain his reticence until the last moment, in accordance with his fixed policy. It may, however, be inferred from the dispatching of his Mr. Buckley to the other side of the water that Mrs. Carter's next personification will be that of a woman of Europe, probably a character of historical moment.

Michael Shea, of Buffalo, is reported to have parted with the mere bagatelle of $30,000 upon this season's starring venture of George Evans, the "Honey Boy" singer of vaudeville fame. Mr. Shea is now out of the enterprise, and Mr. Evans announces that he will carry it on next season at his own expense.

It is reported that Henry W. Savage has decided to give Elliott Schenck's grand opera, "Tess of the d'Ubervilles," next season.

Maxine Elliott will play nothing but "Her Own Way" next season and will start in Harlem on October 3 and play through to the coast and back to Philadelphia.

A Boston paper is authority for the announcement that Nance O'Neil is letter perfect not only in the lines of the part of Lady Macbeth in the Shakespearean tragedy, but also those of Macbeth as well, and that she intends at some future date to play the latter's role. As there absolutely no limit to Nance's ambition? She'll be doing Lear next, or perhaps "doubling" as Puck and Bottom.

Miss Julu Glaser will appear when the fall begins in a new musical comedy by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander, called "The Madcap Princess," which will in reality be another stage version of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Just what Mr. Smith will do to the story remains to be seen.

"Grandmother" is the title of the play written by Clyde Fitch for the use next season of Mrs. Gilbert, who will be starred in it under the direction of Charles Frohman.

Klaw & Erlanger have secured McIntyre and Heath for three years and propose to star them in a new musical comedy by John J. McNally, which will be called "The Ham Tree." The music will be written by Cole and Johnson.

There is a merry war on in New York between the theater managers and the orchestra players. The latter ask $3.50 to $5 a night, and the managers figure that about half those rates would be about right. The union refuses, and the managers threaten nonunion orchestras. The stage hands say no, they won't work with non-union fiddlers. The managers say non-union stage hands, then. That's as far as it has gone now; the finale will be written when companies strike the road.

W. W. Denslow, the clever illustrator of children's books, whose "Father Goose" and "Wizard of Oz" have been delighting the little folks for the last three or four years, has put the finishing touches to an extravaganza upon which he has been working industriously for many months. The new piece is to be called "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," and will be in three acts—the first two laid in this country and the last in Bermuda, and it is expected that the first performance will take place in New York next November.

Sarah Truax who played in "The Eternal City" last season, of which attraction E. J. Morgan was the star, made a speech in Pittsburg recently in response to persistent calls from the audience, and as a result Miss Janet Woldorf will take her place in the company next season. Mr. Morgan claims he was the only one in the company who had the right to do the speech-making.

Before sailing for Europe Nat C. Goodwin signed a contract to produce a new four-act comedy by I. N. Morris, author of "Uhu Blusse."

An endless chain, ostensibly to assist needy members of the "Bluebeard" chorus burned out in the Iroquois fire, is denounced by the Chicago police chief. He says no chorus girls are in need of aid there.

Florence Reed, daughter of the late Roland Reed, is going into vaudeville. So is Hermann, the magician.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will produce in this country, next October, Sardou's "The Sorcerers," which he wrote for Bernhardt. Before leaving for this country Mrs. Campbell is to play in French with Bernhardt in Paris and London, in "Peleas and Melisande."

The 950th performance of "The Wizard of Oz" will be celebrated in Chicago this summer.

Cheridah Simpson, now singing in "Woodland" in Boston, is due for a vaudeville stunt in Chicago at the same time. Savage won't let her take it, but W. S. Cleveland springs her contract and says "You must." Things are interesting for "Cherry" just now.

Mrs. Jack Haverly now sells "makeup" from stage door to stage door in New York city. She is the widow of Col. Jack Haverly, the minstrel king, once manager of fourteen theaters and twenty-two road companies, the man who employed Charles Frohman, Daniel Frohman, Al Hayman, Frank McKee and Ariel Barney, and who made and lost $3,000,000.

LYCEUM ATTRACTIONS.

The Lyceum will have three attractions during the coming week, Monday evening "McFadden Flats" will be the play. Friday evening "The Four Cohans" will produce "Running for Office."

Saturday, Richard Mansfield will present his latest play "Ivan the Terrible."

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Drainage Tunnel Means Millions to Minning Industry.

Colorado Springs, Col., June 4.—The completion of the drainage tunnel means millions to the mining industry. It means that some of the most famous of the old producers will be enabled to resume the payment of dividends. It also means that work can now be continued, which will doubtless result in the opening of valuable ore bodies, which have heretofore been inaccessible. It has long been an old saying in the camp that the richest ore can be expected in the vicinity of the water courses. It certainly has been proven true in many cases that ore of the highest grade has been found in the places where water has caused the most trouble. Now that the water problem has been solved, the theory will be put to a test. Work is being actively rushed throughout the territory affected by the tunnel, and the result is amply demonstrated by the steadily increasing production. Those most familiar with the physical condition of the district are enthusiastic over the outlook. Their confidence has never been shaken, but the period of waiting has been a sore tax upon their patience.

Improved methods of treating ores are also producing a stimulating effect upon the development of Cripple Creek. One of the best known chemists and assayers recently made the statement that no branch of chemistry is changing more from month to month than the development of the cyanide process. Some of the largest and best equipped reduction mills, which have been using every device known to science for the extraction of the greatest cyanide departments, and preparing to treat at a profit the very tailings of refuse which they have discarded within the past three or four years, after having extracted every particle of value which could be saved by the processes then known. A number of mining companies are installing cyanide plants of their own right at the mines, thus saving the expense of hauling, handling and freight.

The strike in the Dillon mine on Battle mountain by Moore & Co., is proving to be even larger than was at first reported. The discovery was made at the 700-foot level, where the vein, all of which is pay, is fully twelve feet wide and carries on both the hanging and foot wall fine occurrances of sylvanite. Shipments are being prepared regularly. The lessees are supposed to explore their ore shoot thoroughly.

HARROWING EXPERIENCE

Of Indiana Girl With Her Insane Father.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 4.—After a harrowing all-night experience with her insane father, John Harr, a well-to-do farmer, of Coal City, Elsie Harr, a handsome 16-year-old girl, landed with him at the police station here. Her ardent love for him and fear lest he should be injured during his demented condition caused her to cling to his side during a trying ordeal.

Harr looks to be nearly 70 years old. His mind has been failing for three or four years, and several times he has threatened to kill the members of his family. Tuesday afternoon he declared suddenly that he was going away to see a man, and in spite of the entreaties of his family he hitched up a horse and prepared for a journey.

Unable to persuade him to stay at home the girl, without getting a hat or cloak, got in the buggy with him. With nothing but a light dress to protect her they drove at a reckless speed twenty-five miles to Brazil, where at midnight the demented man boarded a train for Indianapolis.

The girl stuck to him. They arrived here at 3 next morning. Almost exhausted Harr continued his search, followed by the girl. Together they tramped the streets until daylight, when a patrolman, seeing the demented condition of the man and the pitiful plight of the girl, took them to the police station, where the old man was locked up. Harr said he was pursued by witches. At noon the police placed him aboard a train with the girl and started him home.

"L" VOICE

Is the Successor to the "Auto Squint."

Chicago, June 4.—First the "bicycle face," then the "automobile squint," now the "L Road voice."

The last named alleged to be contracted from proximity to the Union loop, was described by Charles F. Thompson in the $250,000 damage suit of the Walker estate against the Union Elevated Railway company. Mr. Thompson, who is in business at Van Buren street and Wabash avenue, property alleged to have been damaged by the construction of the loop, declared on the stand that the noise produced by the elevated trains was so great that he and his assistants had become accustomed to talking loudly at all times.

"It has become a habit," Mr. Thompson said. "I even talk loud at home, and shout when I talk with my wife."

THE GOSSIP OF GOTHAM

Blossom Said Engagement Was Off and Went South —Mommer Took Too Kindly to Dear Alfred, Who Caught on Back Stairs With Shoes.

New York, June 4.—Blossom's engagement is off. In consequence her relatives are worrying, or so many of them are as are comprised by a sizeable circle of uncles, aunts and cousins of various degrees. Mommer seems and professes not to care much, but keeps on excellent terms with the young fellow Blossom was to marry and hints that all may not be over. Blossom herself has gone to a Southern resort of some pretentiousness in company with an aunt and a bevy of cousins, so just how she's taking it isn't disclosed here. The wedding was to have been in June, and such had been the program since the current year began. All the relatives of second and lesser degrees rejoiced much at the announcement, for Blossom had combined willfulness and occasional disregard of the conventions in such degree that the family was relieved at the prospect of seeing her settled in life.

BOTH IN SOCIAL CRUST.

Her intended was a match for her in social standing. Both the families were well to do and in a social crust of well-up order, if not the very tip-top. The young man was a quiet chap, moreover, a fact that especially pleased the gossiping relatives, for, they reasoned, his steadiness would offset Blossom's tendency to flightiness nicely, and by such contrast of temperaments a successful match would be assured. Hardly had this been settled on among the commenters when it began to be remarked that if the young man was so much slower than Blossom, he knew his little book well enough to make up to mommer. Then it was noted that he seemed to be particularly solid in that direction. The families were in adjoining blocks of West Fifty-fifth street and naturally his calls were many. No matter how often he appeared at the home of his intended mommer had affectionate greeting for him. She meant to treat him as her own son, she explained to an observer of her treatment of him, for she seemed at no pains to conceal her fondness for the youngster.

Now, if she had been an elderly woman, or even one to be classed among those now styled middle-aged, it would not have so quickly have led to remark. But when your widow is well preserved, comely and in appearance much more like a sister to her daughter than a mother, such marked favor for a stalwart young fellow excites remark.

MOMMER TOOK LEADING PART.

The cousins and aunts attended to the making of remarks all right, and some hints of remonstrance reached the mother, but to be met with her former gag about treating Alfred as her own son. Perhaps mommer had some of the willful in her own make-up. Certain it is she seemed after receipt of the remonstrances to make a point of being the first to greet the young man when he called upon the daughter, who then saw him only after mommer had done the motherly entirely to her taste. So, too, mommer somehow managed pretty often to overlook something she very especially wanted to say to Alfred, and at the last minute to be reminded of it. Thus there was another stunt of motherliness, rather a fervid sort, it seemed, before the young man broke away.

Early in the engagement mommer chaperoned the young folks to the theater and such entertainments. She wasn't at all a model chaperon, the sort that turns her back and remains blissfully deaf to an astonishing degree that is very satisfactory to most young couples. On the contrary, she was up and doing, as jolly as the youngest of 'em, and mixed it merrily in all that was going. Blossom gave a somewhat close imitation of being a wall flower during two outings as a result of mommer's ardent attractions for Alfred, but then announced that she was tired of going out. Alfred dutifully gave away to her wish, but mommer had it all the easier. She and the young chap seemed inseparable when Blossom was about, and the latter soon discovered that Alfred was a caller when she herself could not be expected to be at home. Then she laid for those two.

DECIDED TO SET A TRAP.

That there was at leaest a touch of bitterness in her feelings is hinted by the fact that she took her brother into her train. He is her elder by some years, and is raising a family over in Jersey, being one of the few born and bred New Yorkers who can believe that there is a better place than New York city in which to live. Without being actually estranged from the Fifty-fifth street home, he has little in common with them. He and his mother for some reason rarely met, but his sister visits his home now and then, so it was nothing extraordinary for her to go over there for a day when she had decided to set a trap for her intended. Nor was it anything to cause especial wonder that she telephoned later in the day of her going that she had decided remaining over night in order to attend some May festivity of that evening. Mommer took this news without regret; indeed, seemed rather to welcome it. Alfred would help her to ward off loneliness.

He tried to; was still at it when at midnight Blossom and her brother presented themselves at the door of the house. There was turmoil at this unexpected happening. Mommer, self-contained campaigner as she was, showed it when she came down hurriedly and greeted her progeny. She had plotted right, however. Albert was there, she told the newcomers unabashed. He had called to keep her company during the long evening. But he had been taken ill, even now was suffering upstairs. Oh, she was so glad they had come, for they could tell, perhaps, what could be done for him.

WENT UP TO SEE HIM.

The son seemed to think that possibly he could, for he started upstairs despite some show of objection on the part of the widow. He might be asleep, mommer hinted. If he was, the son wouldn't waken him, but the Jerseyman announced this with a glare that wasn't reassuring to the other. His pain had been such that he had wandered at times, the mother called upstairs after her son's retreating figure, and then she began a voluble account of Alfred's attack, the while leading her daughter away from the stairway.

Alfred had wandered, in one sense, and he would have loped altogether but for a chronic weakness of one of the servants of the household. This damsel, 40, if a day, had the idea that at some time in her earthly career a man was to invade her sleeping quarters. Consequently she made a practice nightly of locking the door of the servants' stairway and of sleeping with the key beneath her pillow. There it lay when Alfred, suddenly became convinced that mommer wouldn't be able to carry off her astounding deceit, reached the back stairs door in a progress that he intended should get him out of the house altogether. There he was, shoes in hand, when the searcher came upon him.

NOTHING MELODRAMATIC.

There was no deadly struggle between the two men; nary wrestle. Nor were there tense looks, hissed words or other marks of strenuous melodrama. Such developments would have been hopelessly one-sided, so unstrung was the culprit. But the other wasn't in the avenging line. The sister was his consideration, and he bade the visitor complete his attire and accept his assistance up the stairs. It was too bad, he even explained, that in his weak condition Alfred must go up those stairs, but he must make his exit by the front way, and should have every assistance. So out the front way he went, the brother ready to pretend assistance and support had the women appeared, which they did not. And the brother even walked the other of the block, reporting that he had put him in his own vestibule before leaving him. Then Blossom went South. Mommer protested that she would be so lonesome! But there's at least one cousin, more knowing to these circumstances than the rest of the circle, who has her doubts that mommer will suffer.

PARLOR MAID WAS TOO PRETTY.

In a circle perhaps a thickness of the social crust higher than that of these folk it is being told that the S—s have lost their parlor maid. Not an item of news to arouse much comment, you'd think, but for that set it's one of the happenings of the week. The sevrant is generally remembered for her fine complexion and eyes, and masculine gossips voice among themselves approval of her figure. All this is in addition to conventional comment upon the manner in which she is believed to have attended to her small duties in the household. The men note, too, that her successor is plain and scrawny.

With the men a shake of the head expresses the verdict. With the matrons the consensus of opinion is that it must be accepted as a fact that girls in that station in life simply can't resist a man of our set. What has become of the unfortunate young woman I do not know. There's no clew to be had to her whereabouts nor hint of her future, except as to the latter that sympathizers with her wrongs may rest assured that no money has been spared in her case to the end that her betrayer's family shall be saved from scandal. The betrayer has been deported temporarily. His sire is in the cotton broking way, and report has it that sonny is learning the New Orleans end of that business.

ANOTHER CHAPTER.

Thus closes one chapter in those lives. Here's another from others' lives. It, too, has just closed, but to its beginning and its characters. The latter are a mother, a widow of immense means; her son, an only child, at the chapter's beginning but 20 years old, and the other woman. A more worshipful mother never! My son can do no wrong was pretty near her creed. Her boy was to be a gentleman—that is, never was to concern himself with business. His pocket money was practically unlimited. She was prepared to wink at vices not overwhelmingly impolitic, and it must be said that, for his years, he'd done pretty well at keeping his old lady winking. Five years ago the chapter opened with the boy telling the mother of his marriage to the other woman. She was his senior by seven or eight years, of a station that polite society doesn't recognize, a chance acquaintance made a-purpose, as the saying is.

In the resulting dreadful shake-up for the mother there was no lack of advisers, men of experience so profound that she placed the management of her large affairs in their hands without question. But she didn't heed them in this matter. The son was smitten, and knew that his wife had assumed and would keep the straight and narrow.

ANOTHER DAUGHTER.

Whatever the worshipful mother thought, she took the other woman to her home, with the promise to her son that she would do all in her power to assist in the elevation of the newcomer. Never a society dame, she narrowed her circle and set to it to keep her promise. At the end of two years she abandoned the daughter-in-law to exert all her care for her grandson. For a few months more the cther woman remained in the family home, and then with the mother's consent the son set up separately, the infant remaining with the grandmother.

The establishment of the couple was not in the gaudy way, but was ample for every need the other woman had shown. The husband gave every attention, seemed to spare no pains to satisfy the other woman's wish. Accustomed himself to having almost his every wish gratified, he humored her to the limit. It was not so difficult. She had abandoned the old associations, apparently without much effort, though she was left entirely without friends. What she didn't let go of was John Barleycorn. Her thirst was the real thing, and long after she had reached the point of dangerous indulgence her husband was unaware of her practices. When finally his eyes were opened his resort was not to the family practitioner, for knowledge of this failing must not get to mother, but to some quack, who in three months shifted the woman to morphia. Soon afterward she was a wholesale indulger in both dope and whisky.

A NOISY CREW.

Meanwhile, to, she had come up with some of her old crowd, or folk of like grade, and had taken to meeting them at the resorts she formerly visited. There was nothing in it worse than drinking in bad company, but it decided the husband on a change. He, if not as completely smitten as before, was held stoutly by his feeling of duty to his wife. But when he found that nolsome crew were actually invading his home he broke up there and made a try at country life at a place his family had owned for years in Connecticut and rarely had tenanted. For a time there seemed to be improvement, but then he came home one evening from a day in New York to find the place in scandalous possession of some of the other woman's former associates in the city.

During a summer spent in travel over this continent, for he surrendered the country home act promptly after this break, there seemed distinct improvement, but the moderate use of liquor that he saw was more than overbalanced by increasing secret indulgence in morphia. When seemingly about town and out, he put his wife in a sanitarium, choosing one in a Southern city, for, in addition to shattered nerves, the other woman's lungs showed alarming weakness. From here the faithful husband took her out for a week or so now and then. Each outing was terminated by her misbehavior, and she was returned to the same shelter. There she has just passed away, and the young man is about rejoining his mother, who is said to be deeply worried over her grandson, lest he develops his dear mother's lung weakness.

Thus ends the other chapter. In local practice there doesn't seem to be a happy medium between the two.

FINNISH COLLEGE AT SPIRIT LAKE

National College for Finnish People of the United States.

Attendance Growing Rapidly, and a New Building Deemed Necessary.

English Is the Only Language the Pupils Are Taught.

In the Finnish National college and Theological seminary, at Spirit Lake, Duluth has an educational institution which draws its patronage from all points in the United States. It is just what its name implies, a national college for the Finnish people who have made the United States their home. There is but one other school like it in the United States. This one other is located in a Michigan town and is conducted along lines similar to the one up the St. Louis river.

The local institution is incorporated, with a capitaliaztion of $50,000, with a limit of indebtedness of $150,000. The incorporators are named as Peter Wuori, of Ely, and E. V. Saaranen and Alex. Halonen, of Duluth. Connected with the school, however, are some of the most prominent Finns in the United States, and its board of directors, which held its annual meeting at the school this week, is made up of nine members, the majority of them well-known Finns from outside points.

* * *

The college was formally opened early last January in the old Spirit Lake hotel, which was purchased and remodeled for the purpose. It started out with a membership of twenty-five, which later grew to thirty-two, some of the pupils coming from as far as Massachusetts and New Jersey. There are prospects of a good many more students at the opening of the fall term next September, and plans for additional school room will be laid accordingly. It now appears that a new building will be erected for college purposes, for the old one is entirely inadequate to meet the demands made upon it.

The school was formerly located at Minneapolis, but those connected with the institution decided to come to Duluth, in view of the fact that the organization did not own any property in the Flour City, and the old Spirit Lake hotel could be secured at a comparatively low figure.

The pupils range from 12 to 30 years of age. The majority of them cannot speak the English language when they enter the school. The study of English is one of their most important daily tasks. This is the only language they are taught. With the academic course some commercial subjects are taught, and the plan of study is not unlike that in American institutions of a similar nature. Music study is made a specialty, and the college has a choral club.

Rev. E. C. Wuari is president of the college, and Rev. E. V. Saarenen is its principal and chief instructor. His assistants are Mrs. Telma Saaranen and Miss Aino Williamson. No pupils were ready for graduating this year, but elaborate exercises, marking the closing of the school year, were held yesterday.

* * *

The college is located in a wonderland of scenic beauty. The directors would have had to search long and diligently before striking upon a more attractive spot for establishing the school. It is situated at the top of a slight hill, overlooking the pretty St. Louis river, and is in full sight of Spirit lake, with its clear, cold water and prettily wooded shores.

To the north are the forest-covered hills, with a strip of productive land, perhaps half a mile in width, intervening between the building and the rise of ground. The lake offers splendid oportunities for boating and fishing, and the roads in this vicinity are among the best to be found in Duluth or Superior, making very fine drives. A good walk leads from the lake to West Duluth, where the street cars, connecting with all points of both Superior and Duluth, may be boarded. The drainage is excellent.

The college is just far enough from the city to have all the advantages of health-giving country air, with breezes fresh from the pines and balsams of the near forests. From the standpoint of health the location is ideal. All other natural conditions are looked upon as being as nearly ideal as it would be possible to make them.

The school's board of directors was Thursday reorganized as follows: Rev. E. C. Wuori, president; Rev. R. E. Kirrki, vice president; Charles Kauppi, treasurer; B. Maggals, secretary; E. Kobila, J. Kebikogass, S. Risteinen, K. Erickson and W. A. Mandelos.

DRAW POKER LEFT HIM A BANKRUPT

NOT A SQUARE GAME AND HE HAD NO SHOW

"Soon after the civil war," remarked a downtown lawyer to the New York Sun, who before he had settled down to practice in New York city, had knocked around for several years in the Northwest, "I was counsel to the mayor of a newly organized town in Minnesota. The mayor, the chief of police, one of the aldermen and myself used to play poker three or four times a week, all winter, and there would always be one, and usually two, more to join in the game.

"It was a pretty stiff game, too. We played table stakes, and always began with a hundred dollars' worth of chips in front of each man.

"There was one man who used to sit in with us ocasionally that must have cleared up several thousand dollars at that particular table in the couse of the winter. That was big Sam Garvey, who ran the house where we played. It was a gambling house, pure and simple.

"Garvey did not play at the poker table often, but when he did he was almost invariably a winner. It piqued me considerably at the time, for I would not admit to myself that he was any better player than the rest of us, and he had the reputation some professional gamblers enjoy, of being absolutely square.

"As a matter of course, what he won had to be lost by somebody else. There was one man who lost so persistently, and so heavily, that I found myself wondering whether he was not likely to be crippled if he kept on.

"This was a young man named Tibbetts, who had opened up a general store in the village when it was only a small place, and who was, at the time I went there, the leading merchant in town. He was extremely popular, and had come within a few votes of being elected mayor. There were those, indeed, who believed he had been cheated in the count, and it was known that he intended running again at the next election, in which case he would be a strong candidate. In consequence my client, the mayor, hated and feared Tibbetts, though outwardly they were friends.

"I knew that Tibbets had embarrassed himself financially in the campaign, and was living up to, if not above, his income. His losses, therefore, looked larger to me than they might have seemed otherwise.

"There was no indication of all this in his manner, however, and he was always well supplied with money when he played; so that when the disaster befell him, which finally did come, it came in a maner unexpected.

"We were playing five handed one night, having sent out for Garvey to take the fifth seat, as we objected to four handed and there was no outsider in the house who cared to play. The game proved to be a hot one, as the cards ran remarkably well almost from the start, and a little heavy betting early in the evening set the pace. Garvey himself got caught two or three times with good hands that were overtopped, so that he had bought twice, and as the rest of us had all done the same there was nearly $2000 on the table when Tibbets came in.

"He seemed to be in no hurry about joining in the game, but stood for quite a long time looking on, and, indeed there was enough going on to interest an outsider, even if he hadn't been much of a player himself. We were playing the old-fashioned game, before jackpots had attained the vogue they now have, and we only made a jackpot in default of a play on the regular ante, but the ante was $2, call $5, and there was seldom a pot that didn't have at least $15 in it before the draw.

"Another thing should be mentioned. We didn't play straights.

"A game in which there was from $15 up to $100 or more in the pot before the draw is sufficient to interest anybody, so Tibbetts stood looking on, till the mayor said, chaffingly:

"'Too stiff a game for you, tonight, hey?'

"His tone was perfectly good natured, and as between friends, the words might have passed for a bit of harmless joshing; but every man at the table knew the relations between the two, and realized that there was a sting in the taunt, though no opening was presented for any bitter retort. I, for one, however, would have been pleased to see Tibbets ignore the slur and remain out of the game.

"'Oh, I reckon I'm strong enough to sit for a little while. What are you buying for a starter?' And he pulled a roll of money out of an inside pocket.

"The mayor smiled, a little maliciously as I thought, and said carlessly, 'Oh, a hundred apiece,' and went on dealing.

"Tibbets smiled, and I thought I could read a lot of meaning in his expression also when he said, 'A hundred wouldn't go far in this game, it seems to me. Suppose you give me five,' and he peeled off the requisite money from his roll, and took a seat at the table.

"You know how a game freshens up, sometimes, when a newcomer sits in. Well, that's what happened that night.

"The play had been hard enough before to satisfy anybody, but from that time on it was furious. The cards ran remarkably high, it seemed to me.

"I know I never had a succession of hands equal to those that fell to me, and yet I was barely able to hold my own, being beaten much more frequently that I would win a pot, though, of course, when I took in a good one it would make up for a number of losses.

"And the luck fluctuated. We all betted our hands with enthusiasm, but I don't remember that anybody seemed to be overplaying his cards. The trouble was that ordinarily good hands were being overtopped all the time, and everybody was making unexpected losses.

"At least I thought for a time that we were all getting soaked in turn, and that nobody was having any remarkable run of luck, good or bad, but presently I noticed that Garvey, while he was not making any very noteworthy winnings on single hands, was getting steadily ahead. He did not seem to be losing as often as the rest of us were, and he laid down his cards oftener.

"My first thought was that this was probably an explanation of his steady winning. He understood the run of the cards better than we did, and was demonstarting that he was really a better player. Afterward I changed my mind but several things happened before that did.

"For one thing the mayor struck a streak of luck, and Tibbets began to lose steadily. Three or four times the two stacked up against each other and each time the mayor won.

"This was not, of itself, remarkable, but Tibbets was beaten on good cards and the betting was high. He had pulled ahead two or three hundred when he caught three aces on the chief's deal, and came in without raising, as he sat next to the alderman who had the edge.

"I held two small pairs, sitting next, and ordinarily I would have never raised, then and there, to keep the others out; but I had been thinking of Garvey's play, and I said to myself that overplay was what I had most to bewere of, so I trailed.

"Garvey came next and he trailed. Then the mayor made it $25 more to play, there being only $17 in the pot at that time.

"It looked like the sort of play I would have made on my two pairs if I had sat where he did; so I was not particularly impressed, and I don't think the others were. The chief laid down, having nothing, and the alderman declined to make his ante good, having only a small pair, as he said afterward, so that brought it to Tibbets again.

"He evidently sized the mayor for a bluff, as I had done, and he made it $25 more to play. That, of course, drove m eout, and Garvey threw down his cards, and ws all looked to see what the mayor would do.

"He studied a bit and then made good. On the draw Tibbets took one card and the mayor stood pat. He pretended to hesitate, but he did not overdo it, so that it really looked as if he might be playing two pairs, as I had suspected at first.

"Tibbets knew well enough that if he bet a white chip he would be raised for the size of his pile, and he'd have to call, so he did the wise thing, and shoved his money all in. He hadn't bettered, though, and the mayor showed down a flush, scooping the pot of course.

"Then, to my amazement, he had a sudden attack of cold feet. It was early, and he was usually the last one to want to stop playing. Moreover, although he was a winner, he hadn't won any such sum to satisfy him, and he didn't advance any excuse whatever.

"He only said: I reckon I've had enough,' and pushed his chair back while he handed his chips over for redemption to the boy who was attending to the house business.

"The alderman yawned and said he guesed he'd quit, too, giving another surprise; and Garvey remarked indifferently that as four-handed poker was not a game that he cared about, he'd quit, too.

"I looked at the chief and saw, or thought I saw, that he was as much surprised as I. He was a square man, if I am any judge, and I'm sure he had no more suspicion than I had at that moment. I doubt if he had any afterward, but I nver discussed it with him.

"Then we both looked at Tibbets and saw that he was not only puzzled but angry as well, and it came to me suddenly that the five hundred he had lost might be important money to him after his previous losses. I reckon that was true, too, though he didn't say so. What he did say was:

"'I wouldn't have sat in your damned game if I'd supposed you were going to quit early. I always thought a man would be sure of a run for his money, at least, in this game.

"Garvey said nothing. He had all the self-restraint that is characteristic of most professional gamblers, but the mayor spoke up readily enough.

"'I don't know of any law that compels a man to play poker any longer than he sees fit,' he said, 'but if you are sore about five hundred, I'll play you for half an hour longer. Only if we play we'll take the roof off. No more table stakes unless you declare your whole pile in at the start.'

"Tibbets was furious. I could see that. But he kept control of himself.

"'I didn't make the rules of the game,' he said, 'and I am not looking for a limit. I'll play you out under the sky if you like, only I don't care for two-handed poker.'

"'Neither do I,' said the mayor. 'Are any of you gentlemen in?' And he turned to the rest of us.

"Frankly, I didn't like it. I had a rooted objection to a no limit game in the first place, and, the sudden turn of affairs did not look right to me, so I promptly declared myself out of it. So did the chief and the alderman, and it was up to Garvey, and as a matter of course there was only one answer to expect from him. He was not likely to see that sort of a game go out of his house, so he took the third hand and the game was resumed on the new basis without delay.

"I watched it to its close, which was inside of the half hour agreed upon, for Tibbets, after losing four thousand in money, put up his business at a valuation of eight thousand (it was badly encumbered) and lost that, too, quitting the game a bankrupt.

"There wouldn't have been anything strange about that, even if it had been a square game, but it was not. I tried hard to detect Garvey in some trick with the cards, but he was a slick one.

"If he was crooked I could not catch him, though I had made up my mind to rough in if I had caught him. It would have meant a fight, of course, but I reckoned on that, too.

"But what I did see, and what could not be proved, though I was surprised that Tibbets didn't see it, was that Garvey and the mayor were playing together.

"Of course, Tibbets had no show. He quit the game quietly enough and the next day he quit the town. So far as I know he never went back.

"I had an interview with the mayor next day myself in which I told him, when he asked me why I was going to leave, that I didn't care to remain as counsel to any man who played as good a game of poker as he did.

"There was a dark red flush on his face as he answered me, but his voice was perfectly even as he advised me to go back East and take a further course of study before going into practical politics. I told him I thought the advice was good, and I followed it."

also beside the Turkish, Russian, American and mud bath. It is German in its origin. They call it the sour bath. The guilty one is put to soak in a vat of tanning fluid. Most animals are not treated in this way while alive. Nothing, however, is too good for the invalid while he remains with us. The sour bath was recommended to the author, but the advice came too late. When it arrived he had already been skinned by the allopath and had given up all idea of ever bathing again."

UNPROFESSIONAL CURES.

Naturally, the friendly adviser who is not a medical practitioner had his go at the case, and recommended patent medicines lately fallen under the ban of the government—as well as home made remedies, known to the regular faculty as "granny medicines," and among subtle and difficult foes of science, since ignorant patients who consult the physicians in the free clinics show an astonishing willingness to undo the doctor's work by dosing with any sort of substance advised by the woman in the flat overhead, or the country cousin, who is invited to express a view of the case. Mr. Lent did not take these commendations very seriously. He found in most of them matter for amusement. For example, there was a mysterious black powder that was to be sprinkled in the socks, and that had no effect on the pain, but made the candidate's feet so black that he did not dare to appear in the Turkish bath establishment for quite a while. The powder sifted out through the shoes in walgink, and was surmised to be stove blacking.

The next false friend insisted on a trial of a red onion. It was not to be boiled, fried or made into dumplings, but was to be choped fine, mixed with water and taken raw. It needs a strong dose. Then, over in Jersey, they bury folks in the sand. One returns to nature—almost too near, for this climate. "Clothes are dispensed with. Each patient is allotted to his grave as soon as admitted. This directness is cheerful—a man doesn't stand around there with his hands in his pockets, backed up to a stove and moaning about his luck. Not at all. He gets into his grave, is buried in loose dirt, all but his face, and thus comfortably disposed of, falls tranquilly, and, perhaps permanently, asleep, while gazing at the stars. Should the grave give up its occupant in the morning, he enjoys a breakfast of nuts without extra charge, and joins the physical culture class for the limbering-up exercises of the day. A man thus situated gets to know his neighbors as they really are. There is no hustle and no bustle—the latter is unnecessary An even calm settles upon existence. Maybe a cemetery calm settles on most of the outmates. Statistics are not at hand, but the author wagers a peanut that when a rheumatic gets into one of those gaves, no ordinary tin horn gets him up for breakfast."

Next, a railroad man insisted upon his trying raw silk underwear, and while a suit of it was in process of manufacture lent to the author a shirt of his own. "It was ample," says the historian, "having encircled the aldermanic front of a magnate, who, notwithstanding his claimed loss of fifty pounds, when rescued by this fabric, must have had a few more fifties to drop before reaching zero. Garbed upon the writer, its terminal facilities were larger than those of the Wabash road. By annexing this shirt, the Wabash would not want to get into Chicago. The shirt would furnish all the yard room desired. Its outer precincts, looking south, fell gracefully around he ankles, but the arms, folded back three times, were unyielding. A substantial pair of drawers could have been made by removing the arms and erecting upon them the necessary crossworks to give permanence and continuity. Without some such engineering there was no way in which the wearer could go around with them on, without feeling out of doors. Wristlets are all right, but leglets stop too quick to conform to the customs of a country where cushions are all for show on the sofa, and are seldom used to insulate cold chairs. During the three weeks that this borrowed shirt did service, it seemed too loose and fitted snugly. Being raw the material chapped the skin some, and thus produced a counter irritant. The uncomfortable feeling wore off as callouses wore on, but no pain went with it. The writer has worn the raw silk every day for nearly two years, and testifies that this underwear is as good as any which may be bought for one-third the price."

There was a metal belt with insulators, "an electrical evolution of the liver pad," that was tested and there were electrical insoles and a magnetic ring, and electric batteries, and a contrivance for distilling water and liver pills that put green spots on the bones, removed twelve pounds from the rheumatic in a week—pounds that he needed, too. "Minus twelve pounds he felt like anybody else he didn't know, and was so classed by others who formerly knew him." Mineral springs, too, had to be tried—those railroad properties that are boomed by the passenger agent. Government has a group of hot springs down South that are just hot springs and nothing more; not a spoonful of mineral in them, and the good you derive from soaking there can be obtained in your own bath tub. Such, at least, is the conclusion of this pilgrim, who decided "to keep Lent home in the spring," after the gayeties of the Hot Springs. One is as cool there as anywhere, "or, if need be, the water can be warmed for less money." "Nature's way may be more inspiring, but the old home way is more perspiring."

OSTEOPATHY AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Osteopathy is one of the newer pathies, and this was sampled by Mr. Lent, without chloroform. Loosen up the vertebrae and remove the pressure on nerves and things, and the subject should become gracefully oelly. "Osteopathic literature carries the conviction that the skeleton of the mastadon could be covered with flesh by a few months' treatment, and enabled to roam again. Given a backbone to rattle and the osteopath can restore anything, except money. One takes three weeks of osteopathy and spends two weeks in bed to recover from it. The osteopath has failed to soothe. He has increased the inflammations at every point and started up some new ones." Nor did the stomach specialist bring the expected relief, nor the animal magneitzer, nor the orthopedic surgeon, nor the man with a penetrative unguent.

Mr. Lent is less humorous and more argumentative when treating upon Christian Science and homeopathy. He does not scornfully ridicule these systems, but he asks many pertinent qucations about them that Mrs. Eddy and the disciples of Hahnemann will have trouble to answer, at least to his satisfaction. Epecially is he unable to discover the medical value of those dilutions, made after the Hahnemann formulas, which attenuate each medicine until it represents a single drop of drug in a body of water larger than any of the planets. There is something selfish about this rheumatic, but his attitude toward those who are doing him good will find admirers.

LOOKING THROUGH THE 'PHONE.

In a wholesale store on Filbert street there is a salesman who firmly believes that it is possible to see through the telephone, and under the circumstances he is hardly to be blamed, says the Philadelphia Press. The telephone in the store in question is located on the first floor near a big plate glass window which looks out on Filbert street. The salesman heard the bell ting-a-ling the other day, and taking the receiver off the hook, found that a friend had casually called him to inquire about an appointment. When the conversation lagged the friend said:

"By the way, Tom, have you a seeograph on your 'phone?"

"No," replied Tom. "What the dickens is the seeograph?"

"Well," responded his friend, "it's a late discovery and we just had it put in the other day. I'm not talking over the office 'phone now, but I see it's on this 'phone."

"What is it?" inquired Tom.

"Just a little appliance by which you see the fellow you're talking to, that's all. Suppose you try it. Hold something up in front of the 'phone and see if I can tell what it is."

Tom held up a letter which he took from his pocket and the voice at the other end of the 'phone immediately told him what it was. A wallet and a handkerchief were next in order, and in each case Tom was told correctly what they were. Finally Tom went to the back of the store, and getting a broom, held it up before the 'phone.

"Maybe you can tell me what this is?" he shouted.

"Certainly I can," replied the voice, "It's a broom. Great invention, isn't it? Goodbye."

And Tom has never discovered that his friend was talking over a 'phone in the second-story front room of a building directly across Filbert street, and that he was in plain sight of the man at the other end of the 'phone the entire time.

THE LATEST HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

NORTHERN LEAGUE

Rain Stops All Games—Duluth vs. Winnipeg Sunday.

Fans Well Pleased With First Glimpse of the Team.

Not a game was played in the Northern league yesterday afternoon. At Superior and Duluth it was blowing a hurricane and the rain was falling in torrents, while much the same conditions existed at Crookston.

This afternoon's games at both Superior and Duluth have been called off, but games will be played in both cities tomorrow afternoon. Duluth and Winnipeg will bump up against each other at Baseball park at 3:30. Shaw will be in the box for the home team and Bemis for the visitors. Bemis is looked upon as the best twirler the visitors have and he and the "Demon" should make a good fight of it.

The game should draw an enormous crowd, if the weather is fine. The Superior and Grand Forks game will be of scarcely less interest to the local fans than the game played at Baseball park. The Superior and Grand Forks teams are tied for second place, and they promise to be Duluth's most dangerous rivals for championship honors.

* * *

The first home game of the season gave the fans but a poor opportunity of sizing up the team, but what they saw of it looked good. Past baseball was next to impossible in such weather conditions as existed Thursday, yet in spite of the rain the White Sox played an almost errorless game and pulled off three double plays.

The general verdict was that in fine weather the home team would have played the visitors off their feet. They certainly are a promising looking bunch and Duluth's chances of landing that coveted piece of bunting look very rosy at the present time.

The most dangerous rivals are Superior and Grand Forks. Even during the practice games here Superior showed up in good form, and the team has been greatly strengthened since that time. The addition of Noldin, Wilkes and Leach to the line-up will make them formidable opponents.

Two coats of whitewash administered by Grand Forks to the White Sox makes the Tigers opponents to be feared and the series played with them during the first three days of next week will be watched with interest. Duluth has demonstrated its ability to defeat Fargo, Winnipeg and Crookston and until these teams are strengthened they should not be feared by the local nine.

President Lamb is making desperate efforts to put new life in the Maroons. If the new men signed this week do not prove satisfactory others will be tried out until the team stops its toboggan slide down the percentage table. Pitcher Bartos should be a great help to the team, but it is claimed that the St. Paul man is loath to return to his old team and would much prefer to be playing in the American association.

* * *

Manager Van Praagh stated today that no further changes in the Duluth team are likely for the present. The thirteen men now on the list will be carried for some weeks to come and as long as it keeps up its winning gait no changes will be made. Owens is fulfilling all the expectations in regard to him, and he and Shaw and Gehring make a strong trio of slab artists. Koukalik is an excellent substitute pitcher ,and can play almost any position in the field.

3rd—Two fine through trains direct to Gates of the Fair.

4th—A saving of about three hours in time.

5th—You avoid the crowds at the Union depot and on the street cars.

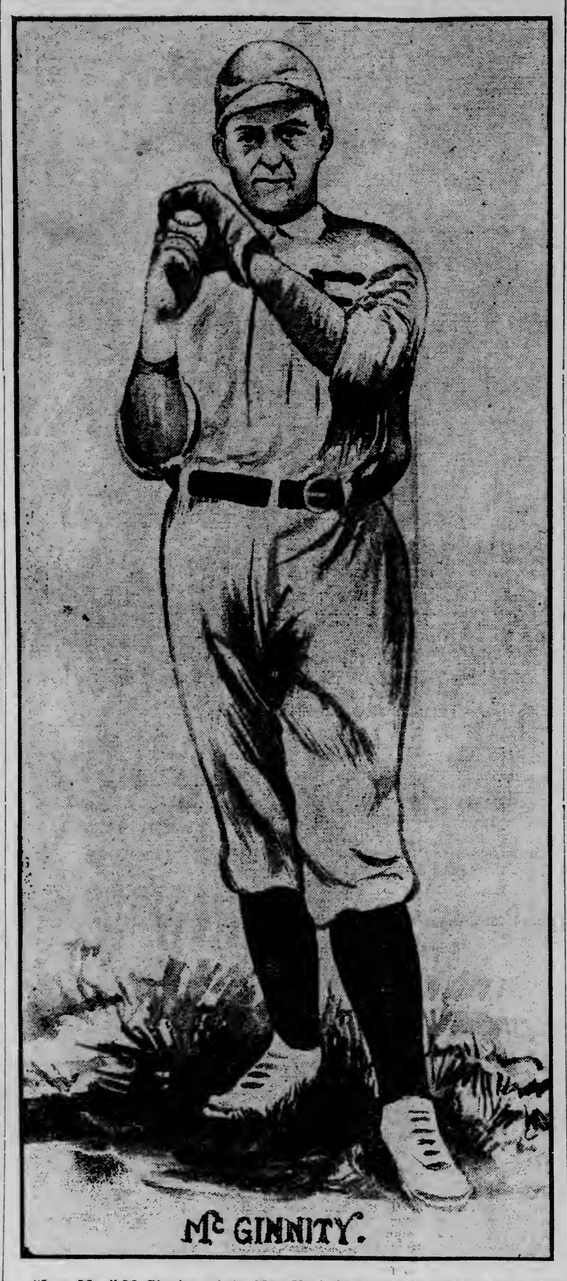
NEW YORK'S GREAT PITCHER



"Iron Man" McGinnity, of the New York Nationals, is making a wonderful record this season. He landed three consecutive shutouts — wonderful work, when it is considered it was done on the road—and he has landed eleven games in succession. In five games he landed four shutouts, and one run was made in forty-five innings off his delivery.

AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Athletes From All Over World at Stadium.

St. Louis, June 4.—Athletes from all parts of the country, many of them holders of world's records were seen at the Stadium today, where the championship events of the amateur athletic union were held. The first part of the program was devoted to the junior contests, postponed from yesterday owing to the rain, and the closing numbers decided the senior championships.

The heavy rains of the last few days prevented exceptionally fast time being made in the sprints and distance runs, but as the entries included the country's best men in their respective classes, great interest was taken in the several events.

A feature of the day was the presentation of medals to the winners of the senior championships by Miss Alice Roosevelt, the daughter of the president. President Roosevelt is the honorary president of the Olympic games, and Miss Roosevelt was requested to represent her father.

Th contests included all the regulation events recognized by the A. A. U. In several there were so many entries that it was found necessary to divide them into heats.

GARDNER BEATS RYAN.

Chicago, June 4.—Buddy Ryan, the Chicago lightweight, was beaten so badly in his fight here last night with Jimmy Gardner, of Lowell, Mass., that the referee stopped the fight in the sixth round to save Ryan from further purishment. It was Gardner's fight all the way . He wore his opponent down until, in the fourth round, he had Ryan staggering all over the ring. Gardner went in to finish Ryan in the sixth round, and in less than a minute had Ryan on the verge of collapse. The referee separated the men and sent Ryan to his corner to save him from serious injury.

TOO MUCH RAIN

Little Prospect For Playing Any Amateur Games Scheduled.

Reorganized Commercial League Prepares Schedule For Season.

Rain will doubtless interfere with all the amateur baseball games scheduled for this afternoon and tomorrow, as there seems to be but little prospect of the weather clearing before night, and it will take at least five or six hours of warm sunshine to dry the grounds.

The F. A. Patrick and Keley-How-Thomson teams were to have come together this afternoon at the fair grounds in one of the games in the Commercial league schedule. but it will have to be postponed until next week. It was the game scheduled for June 11, but it was decided to pull it off today instead, as today was an open date.

The reorganized league has now fully completed its scehedule and all other arrangements for the season. The teams have secured a good start, and the attendance at the games has been all the management hoped for. The race for the pennant promises to be a close one, the honors up to the present time resting with the Patrick team, which has defeated two of the other nines in the league without losing a game as yet.

The revised schedule of the league is as follows:

May 14.—F. A. Patrick & Co. vs. Northern Pacific, at fair grounds.

May 21.—F. A. Patrick & Co. vs First National bank, at league grounds.

May 25.—*Northern Pacific vs. Kelley-How-Thomson, at league grounds.

GANS BEATS GRIFFO.

Baltimore, June 4.—Joe Gans, the lightweight champion, was given the decision last night over Harry Coken (Kid Griffo), of Brooklyn, in the seventh round of their fifteen-round bout to a decision before the Eureka A. C. The battle was clean throughout, and the colored man clearly demonstrated that he was the more clever boxer.

NOT HEARD FROM

Site For Tennis Grounds Is Not Yet Obtained.

Owner of Land Has Not Yet Made Decision Known.

The negotiations being conducted by the Endion Tennis club for new grounds at Twelfth avenue east are still hanging fire. The club has made an offer for a lease of the grounds for several years, but has as yet received no answer. The expense of putting in new courts will be considerable, and the club is anxious to secure as long a lease as possible.

The wet weather of the past week has prevented any play on the old courts at Eleventh avenue. Arrangements for the first club tournament are already being made, however, and play in it will be commenced within a week or ten days.

The membership fee of the club has been raised to $10 per year on account of the large number of applications for membership. Unless the new grounds are secured the club will be unable to increase its membership this year, as was desired, on account of the small number of courts available. There are only three courts on the old grounds, and the fifty members of the club keep them full on every pleasant afternoon.

If new grounds are secured the club will double its membership and lay out six courts, in place of the three it now owns. A small club house is also being planned for if the lease is secured.

Should the negotiations fall through, however, the club will content itself for this year with enlarging the little shanty used for a club house on the present grounds, and with placing the old courts in the best playing condition.

Another open tournament, similar to the one held last year, will be arranged for during July, and entries invited from Superior, the range towns and any part of the country about the head of the lakes.

ON MARSHALL FIELD.

Unusual Interest In the Intercollegiate Meet.

Chicago, June 4.—Unusual interest was shown today in the annual track and field meet of the Intercollegiate conference athletic association on Marshall field. The advent of a crack team from Leland Stanford university gave added zest to the contests. The entry list contained the names of two hundred athletes, many of whom have a national reputation in their particular line of sport. Seventeen colleges and universities had representatives on the field. In the number of entries the university of Michigan led the list, closely followed by the universities of Wisconsin and Chicago. The university of Minnesota and Beloit college were also represeuted.

As a point winner, the university of Michigan had been generally conceded first place. The excellent quality of athletes entered in the various events, however, made the final result a matter of considerable conjecture. Possibly the greatest interest centered in the work of "Giant" Rose, of Michigan, who recently established a new world's record for the shot put.

REST OF TICKET

Nominated By the Republicans of Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., June 4.—After the election of Charles S. Deneen on the seventy-ninth ballot yesterday afternoon, the convention adjourned to 6 o'clock last evening.

At the evening session the making up of the ticket was rapidly proceeded with. L. Y. Sherman, of McDonnough, was nominated for lieutenant governor; James A. Rose, of Golconda (present incumbent), for secretary of state; Len Small, of Kankakee, for state treasurer; James S. McCullough, of Champaign (present incumbent), for state auditor; W. H. Stead, of Ottawa, for attorney general.

BASEBALL LEADER

Of Ability Is Captain Collins of the Boston Americans.

Rallies By His Team Generally Initiated By Himself.

Tim Murnane says in a Boston letter: The picture of Henry J. Killilea is still printed on the score cards at the Boston American league grounds beside that of President Ban Johnson, notwithstanding that the Milwaukee lawyer is out of baseball in Boston for good. Few men have picked up as much as Mr. Killilea out of baseball in such a short time. In fact, most men who take long chances are sure losers. But Henry picked out a good town and finished a big winner, just when the members of his great team were "on the outs" with him and sore on others connected with the American league.

The club played great ball under Killilea simply because it had a great leader in "Jimmie" Collins. No other man in the profession has played the consistently good ball that Collins has for three straight years for the Boston club. The rallies made by his team are, three times out of five, initiated by his own bat—for Collins is not only a phenomenal fielder but a superior batsman as well, having no fear of any pitcher that he may face, either right or left-handed.

Captain Collins has the absolute control of his players, more so than any other man playing ball; as much, in fact, as Ned Hanlon, a bench manager. Successful managers must "stand in" with the players and hear the owners receive a good roasting occasionally. I was told by one of the leading managers not long ago that the president of the club understood that he must stand for an occasional roast from all hands. This makes it easy for the manager. The only feature the manager does not like is the signing of players, especially when salaries are to be cut.

Collins has the good will of the good members of his team, and yet he never apparently caters to their wishes. He has a smile but few words for all, and simply expects the players to follow his example, keep in condition and play the best ball they know how. And no man can tell any better than "Jimmie" the kind of ball his boys are playing. Errors he never minds, but "dumb" playing he calls down hard in a quiet way and the offender is on edge to keep from repeating.

It is one thing to be a successful leader from the bench and altogether a different proposition while working with the men. Anson, Tebeau, Ewing, Ward, Comiskey, Nash, Duffy, Kelley—not "Joe," but the late uncrowned king of the diamond—were great leaders on the field when in close touch with their men. As bench managers they never reached the top notch. Therefore "Jimmie" Collins has no hold on his position after his playing days are over, which would be a long way off.

The great playing leaders were all first-class men. Anson was the prince of batsmen; Tebeau was a superb all-round infielder, who never missed a chance to turn a trick; Ewing was one of the most finished all-round players the game ever produced and worked with a smile. Ward was a great pitcher, and later a clever infielder and a great base runner, with every point of the game at his fingers' ends.

Comiskey was the pioneer of up-to-date first basemen, with a fine knowledge of inside playing. Nash was one of the grandest third basemen the game ever turned out—a fine hitter and game as a pebble. Duffy was a natural ball player without an imperfection, a fighting leader who never let up on his opponent and quick to notice the weakness of his opposition.

"King" Kelley carried all before him by his brilliant dashes. His players loved him. Deep down in his heart Kelley was a winner and was ever on the alert to take advantage of the least opening. He could "call" a player by way of a joke and was the happiest when the games were most important. A good playing leader must not brood over defeat, but go after every game as if he had never lost a contest.

After giving up active work on the field Anson was soon down and out. Tebeau was never heard of after pulling off the spangles. Ewing managed his players, but lost ground with the public and press, got disgusted and retired to enjoy the money he saved from a fancy baseball salary. Ward saw the folly of trying to please club owners who had much to learn about the sport, and retired to practice a profession for which he had studied throughout his baseball career.

Comiskey was courageous enough to put his time and money into a baseball venture where he could live without giving an account of his stewardship, and could express his original but practical ideas as he saw fit. He is today one of the very strongest men in the baseball business.

Nash went to the Quaker City after a brilliant career in Boston to pick up the great Lajoie and be quietly let down by Reach and Rogers, who, in turn, a few years later dropped off the baseball cliff after a weak finish. Hugh Duffy was not there with the goods in Milwaukee until he turned his hand to the minor league end of it, when he had the same chance as others to get players. With Philadelphia he has found the managerial end anything but pleasant, because he started out without the players.

"King" Kelley tried to manage a team after going to pieces in the big leagues, but failed, as the whole thing seemed like a joke, and his mind was on the humorous side of life. Kelley was the greatest genius the game ever produced and the biggest attraction known to the game.

I know of just two men who could lead from the field or the bench. The first was Harry Wright and the other was Edward Hanlon. With these men in charge you were ever at a loss to know who was the captain of the team. The teams were generally so well posted on every move that all were captains and privates at the same time. Hanlon led the great Detroit champions after making a fine success of the Albany team. His keen knowledge of the players' feelings has been his strong suit, for Hanlon, like Frank Selee, was never known to be knocked by men who had served under him.

* * *

Early in the season it looked as if there might be a runaway race in either of the two big leagues. That condition has changed in the National league since the eastern clubs paid the West a visit. The American league is more than likely to find the same condition by the time the eastern clubs have returned the visit of the western clubs.

There are six clubs in the American league all playing fine ball. This does not include Detroit or Washington, who are already out of the hunt. Cleveland is holding its position well since playing a very lucky engagement in this city.

Chicago has a much stronger team than last season. All this makes the West rather a hard road for visiting teams from the East. The Athletics and Bostons have fallen down together, while New York Highlanders are too much in-and-outers to be dangerous.

In the National league New York will now have all the best of it and should soon be well in the lead once more. Cincinnati has surprised all by her good work, but she must give a road performance to allow of proper "dope." Many new men are now in the make-up of the Kelley outfit.

Selee has done remarkable work with his team, considering the injuries his men have sustained. A good trip will put the colts on edge, while a let-down will throw them out of the running for fair. Should the Clark bunch come up now, the other teams will worry, knowing that the Dreyfuss men can play ball when their hearts are in the right place.

THE "LAMPLESS" WONDER.

Trick That Ruined His Career In Baseball.

"They're playing like a lot of blind men," grunted a disgusted rooter in course of a preliminary practice at the ball game one day last week, says the New York Sun.

"Can't say I fully agree with you," said the fat man sitting next to him. "However, I never saw but one blind ball player, so perhaps I'm hardly competent to judge.

"You've probably heard of him if you pretend to follow the game at all —Lampless Lewis, the old right fielder of the Jones County Eye, Ear and Tongue Infirmary team?

"How could he see the ball if he was blind? He couldn't. I'm coming to that.

"He was one of these intellectual looking little roosters, with a bulging brow, and shoulders so narrow that you had to look twice before you could tell which was his right arm and which was his left. Like many men who have been deprived of some of their senses, he seemed to have his remaining senses more highly developed in consequence.

"Lampless Lewis, though gone blind and somewhat hard of hearing had the keenest sense of touch that I ever trained my lookers on. In fact, his skin was so sensitive to the slightest atmospheric disturbances that he could detect the flight of birds hundreds of yards off.

"So, you see, by moistening his face slightly between innings in a ball game, on the same principle that you wet your finger to tell which way the wind's blowing, it was a comparatively easy matter for him to judge the most difficult flies in the outfield.

"At the bat he wasn't so good. Against a slow pitcher he could feel out the good ones all right, but whenever he stacked up against one of these real speedy twirlers he was in constant dread of catching a cold or a stiff neck, or something from the draughts made by the swift ones.

"If ever he hit that ball, however, he was quicker'n an infinitesimal recess in whisking 'round the diamond. He gauged the directions and distances of the different bases by the air currents generated with palm leaf fans which the coaches manipulated off first and third.

"And so practiced were the coaches in this, and so unerring was the judgment of Lewis that I don't remember his ever having been fanned out on bases.

"Yes, sir. Lampless Lewis was a wonder, he was. He'd probably be feeling his team on to victory today if it hadn't been for the scurvy trick the Ringtail Roarers played on him back in that '92 contest.

"I'll never forget that game as long as I live. The stands were overflowing; it seemed as if every man, woman and child in Jones county were on hand for the big event.

"'Twas the first half of the ninth. The score was 8 to 6 in favor of the Eye, Ear and Tongue Infirmary. The Roarers had three men on bases, two were out and Cy Priest, their hard-hitting captain, was at the bat.

"The first ball pitched came sailing squarely over the plate; Priest swung his bat, and—crack!

"As the ball soared high over first base, deep into right field, all eyes were focused on Lewis. Would his feelings prove equal to the occasion?

"At first the lines on Lampless' brow were tangled into bewilderment as he groped blindly about the field. Then as the first appreciable air waves from the soaring sphere rippled down and broke upon his sensitive countenance, his expression became one of confidence.

"The Roarers groaned. The Infirmaries could scarce suppress a cheer.

"But just as the ball was descending into Lewis' outstretched hands, a red-faced Roarer rooter drew in a deep breath, and, leaning far over the bleacher fence, suddenly went—pouff!

"Lewis darted madly back and misjudged the ball by over ten feet.

"When the police had to some extent quelled the riot that naturally followed it was found that all the Roarer runners had tallied during the confusion. Lewis never got over it. He hasn't touched a baseball since.

"But the baseball instinct is still strong within him. If you should ever happen to see a little blind man in a cafe throw his hands madly up in the air as though to stop a liner when they start the electric fans a-going, why that's Lewis."

"Have you seen him to talk to lately?" inquired the fat man's neighbor. "I was wondering if hot air ever affected him the same way."

The fat man considered this question unworthy of reply, and a moment later the New Yorkers took their positions in the field.

JOCKEY REIFF

Is to Ride Again on the English Courses.

Kansas City, Mo., June 4.—Jockey Lester Reiff, after spending a few days watching the races at Elm Ridge and renewing old acquaintances, has departed for New York, where he will sail shortly for England to resume riding. Reiff was recently granted a license by the English Jockey club, and while he has signed no contract for the season, he expects to get plenty of mounts.

Reiff is too heavy to be a successful rider in this country, as he weighs 118 pounds, but across the pond that weight is about right.

"I have received a number of good offers to ride in England," said Rieff, "but I have about decided to ride as a free lance. I do not care to be tied up with a contract. A year ago I never thought I would ride again, but since the English Jockey club has seen fit to restore me to good standing, I have the riding fever. I can still ride at 118 pounds, a good weight in England, and I will have no trouble in securing all the mounts I want.

"When I was refused a license by the English Jockey club I had a comfortable lead over the other riders there in point of winning mounts, and my previous good record will help me when I return."

GIVE HARD RACE

Duluth Boat Club Crew Ready For Madison Trip.

In Good Condition, Though Rowing Was Interfered With.

"It is impossible to make any prediction of how the Madison race will come out," said Dr. F. N. Lyman, the coach of the Duluth Boat club crew, yesterday afternoon, "because I have not seen the Wisconsin crew working out, and do not know anything of their strength. Our boys should make a good showing, however, I see no reason why they should not give the Wisconsin men the race of their lives. The boys are working well together. They have the stroke down well, and are in good condition."

The wind and rain of the past week hase interfered very materially with the practices of the eight and robbed the crew of valuable time. It is impossible to attempt any outdoor work in such weather. The shell would be swamped by the waves before it had gone twenty feet from the boat house, and the men have had to content themselves with gymnasium exercise.

It is very unfortunate that such weather has been experienced. The crew had a very short time to practice even under the best of conditions, owing to the late opening of the harbor and the Wisconsin men had a start of at least two weeks in the spring training. The unfavorable weather of the past week has come just at the critical stage in the training, when the men were putting the finishing touches on their work and it will prove a big handicap to the crew.

The regatta will be held next Thursday afternoon at Madison and the shell will be packed and prepared for shipment tomorrow. The last work in the local harbor has therefore been done, and the crew will not have another opportunity to practice together before the race, with the exception of one or two light trial spins over the Madison course.

The race at Madison will be a hard one on the crew. It is over a two-mile course, which means practically a spurt from start to finish. A two-mile race is generally looked upon as a more exhausting struggle than a four-mile race. The latter generally dpevelops into a slow procession with a sharp spurt for the last half mile, while the crews put forward their best efforts from the start, in a two-mile race.

There will be three crews in the Madison regatta, the Duluth, Wisconsin 'varsity and the Wisconsin freshmen.

The following members of the Duluth club will leave Sunday over the Great Northern road for Madison: Gibson, stroke; H. M. Peyton, seven; B. M. Peyton, six; L'Estrange, five; Puck, four; Calhoun, three; Whyte, two; MacPhail, one; Robert Marshall, coxswain; Dr. Lyman, coach.

HOW COOK GOT RICH QUICK

Lexington, Ky., June 4.—English Lad, the Chicago Derby winner and American Derby favorite, and the most sensational 3-year-old developed in the West this year, is the second foal of his dam, the Latonia Oaks winner, English Lady, so far to race. Milton Young, the noted breeder, who now owns the latter noted mare, was a long time making up his mind to buy her. She was sent to McGrathiana stud by the late turf editor, E. C. Buck, who was afterward killed in a railroad wreck on Long Island, who last raced her. Buck sent her to McGrathiana to be bred to Hanover, but shortly afterward concluded to sell her. The noted mare had raced somewhat extensively and the newspaper man wanted a big price for her. Young hesitated in tying up so much money in one mare, as thoroughbred stud matrons were low in price at that time, but he finally became her owner. Then his hard luck began; season after season she proved unproductive, and for several seasons indications seemed to point to English Lady's turf career rounding out her full history. Finally in 1899 the spell was broken when she dropped a brown filly by imp. Pirate of Penzance, since known to the turf as the winner Mamie English. Then the next year she was again barren, and as Young sold Mamie English for a song, he was still in the hole thousands of dollars on the noted race mare. She, however, came back in 1901 and threw English Lad, and now she is worth more than at any time in her career and her future product will surely bring thousands of dollars into her owner's pocket. English Lad's brilliant racing turning what at one time looked like a bad investment, into a bonanza.

When English Lad was a yearling the first get of his sire Requital had been racing and proved very unsuccessful, and the famous Futurity and Realization winner was marked a failure in the stud. So disgusted was the horse's owner, E. C. Cowden, that he ordered the once sensational performer sent back to the track, and Requital ran in several races in the fall of 1902. Being by a horse marked a failure in the stud, when Fred Cook's agent came along looking for yearlings Young let him take the colt for $500, and the bookmaker thus blindly secured the best horse he ever owned. Seeing English Lad train at Louisville in the spring of his 2-year-old form, John E. Madden, so the story goes, immediately on reaching the East hunted up Cowden. Cowden said he was ready to sell and named a price not much on the rise of $1000, and Madden took the horse. At the time it was the general opinion that Madden would try to win a race with him, but he did nothing of the sort; shipped him on the first train west to Hamburg place, and today it is not likely $50,000 would lead Requital off of that famous farm. English Lad is the combination of the union of a great race horse and a brilliant race mare. His sire won $87,223 on the turf and his dam earned $27,140, the two together winning a total of $114,363.

AMERICAN DERBY

At Chicago Is Next Big Race In the West.

English Lad's Winning of Chicago Derby Makes Him Favorite.

Chicago, June 4.—Granted, and it is generally so, that the Chicago Derby, at one and a quarter miles was the first real try-out of the Western candidates for the greatest race in the West, the American Derby, to be run at Washington Park, on June 18, the opinion of Francis Trevelyan, who sat in judgment on the West Side classic, is worthy of careful perusal by persons who are now absorbed in this most absorbing of racing problems. It is here set down:

"If any confirmation of the fact that we can expect very high-class racing in the West this year were needed, it could be found without question in the Chicago Derby. A man may go far in quest of high-class sport and not see such a slashing, clean-cut, truly run race as that which was won by Fred Cook's gallant son of Requital, English Lad. It was a good race all around, especially satisfactory as confirming previous form, particularly that of the Kansas City Derby.

"It was no small task that Moharib undertook when he shouldered 1277 pounds, 5 pounds above his weight, and gave away 5 pounds to English Lad, 10 pounds to Prince Silverwings, and so on. And the way he raced at every stage of an exceptionally severe contest showed that no mistake occurred when he won the first running of the big three-year-old stake at the latest addition to the fashionable tracks on the Western circuit.

"That Moharib will ever turn the tables on English Lad is scarcely probable. Gamely as he ran, there was nothing to indicate that he will fancy a longer trip—say one mile and a half, which is the distance in the American Derby. English Lad's ability to go that distance must be accepted.

"I never saw this colt of Cook's until last Saturday, and never have had a chance to look him over carefully, but he seems to be a thoroughly sound, well set-up horse, full of courage, but kind. While it is possible and even probable that with a stronger jockey up he would have won the Chicago Derby more decisively, it seems quite possible that a shade too much has been made of Nicoll's inability to do him justice.

"The colt appears to be one that never wants to overdo the thing and is always willing to loaf as long as he feels sure that the issue is safe. All turfmen agree that this is one of the most commendable attributes of a really good race horse. It looked as if English Lad knew he had the race won at the head of the stretch, stoutly as Prince Silverwings was still going at that point.

"The performance of Prince Silverwings must not be taken lightly, even though he had weight off. The time and everything else indicated how good a race the Chicago Derby was, and to have made every inch of the pace and then not to be collared until the last sixteenth, and to fight it out to a neck, was something to be proud of.

"There probably was some capital material behind the first three. How good Flower King is we may never know, but he is a grandly developed specimen of the thoroughbred. It is a thousand pities if, as seems probable, his feet are liable to cause him permanent trouble."

On short acquaintance Mr. Trevelyan who is a sound horseman, subscribes by inference, at least, to the opinion that English Lad is the most logical favorite that has ever turned up at this stage of the annual American Derby prospect. He towers above Mirthful, The Parader and other favorites that have gone before because he is on the ground and thoroughly acclimated. He holds it over Garry Herrmann because he is perfectly sound, and there is abundant excuse for regarding him with greater confidence than McChesney was regarded in his year as he is over the most trying period of his preparation, and it is extremely unlikely that Cook will take the same liberties with him that Hildreth took with the big son of Macduff.

If English Lad is a better horse than The Picket, and The Picket beat Highball and all other great Eastern horses, then what is to keep English Lad from defeating Highball and the other Eastern horses that have not shown even as good as the Scheftel colt? There is but little doubt as to this in the minds of Westerners who have watched the Cook colt in recent performances and declare him the best horse in training.

Still, too little attention must not be given Highball. This colt is a great performer, and he will be racing right with English Lad when the finish comes. His race in the Brooklyn gives assurance of this, for in the big Eastern event he finished sixth, far in front of McChesney, Africander, Runnels and many others of highest class.

In this race he was the only three-year-old to start, and he carried 103 pounds. He failed to get off the best, but he raced along near the leaders the full way and finished just six lengths behind the winner. Of all the colts yet to be seen in their three-year-old form, probably the most talked-of eligible is Jason, from the stable of Carl Jungbluth, owner of The Picket. Like the winner of last year's race, this colt is yet a maiden. Everybody knows Carroll Reid, trainer of the stable, and the followers of this trainer and his stable are waiting for a chance to see what his charge will do.

Around Louisville this winter much talk was heard on every side about Jason and the promise he held out with respect to the American Derby. To his friends Carroll Reid freely confided his intentions of giving the colt a preparation solely for the big race and of sending him to the post in it yet a maiden. He has declared the colt was quite as promising as The Picket, and admitted an intention of betting on him in the future books.

BOTH HARD AT WORK

Jack Munroe and Jim Jeffries Preparing For Their Fight.

William Rodenach Now the Amateur Heavy-Weight Champion.

San Francisco, June 4.—Jack Monroe is the center of attraction at the beach rounding nicely into shape under the watchful eye of Tim McGrath. Jack was handicapped by a smashed finger, acquired while playing ball at Hot Springs, and had to confine himself to road work: He took to the highway twice a day and at the close of the afternoon outing indulged in a tumble in the surf. He is said to be a strong swimmer, and, if his handlers are not overselling it, he makes some of the amphibious gentlemen attached to the life saving station feel that they have a lot to learn when it comes to negotiating the combers without the aid of a boat.

Monroe's finger is all right now and he spars daily with a motley crew of heavy weights, who have come to be known as McGrath's awkward squad. It appears that Tim issued an invitation to all and sundry to attend the afternoon exercises at the gymnasium and put on the gloves with "the world's next champion."

Quite a bunch of unemployed heavy weights responded, and Jack has amused himself with trying out some of the most likely looking of the ring-struck band. Jack, however, gets his best work out of Joe Millett and "Big" Casey, and has also an occasional spar with Rodenbach. He is in hopes that the latter will prolong his stay in California, as he believes he derives benefit from donning the gloves with the far-famed amateur.

Munroe has been introduced to the crowd at several of the boxing shows which have been held since his arrival, and has been greeted cordially. He made a little speech one night in which he said that he would not run away from Jefferies when they got together in the ring.

Reports from Harbin make it appear that Jefferies is training with the greatest strictness. His friend, Dick Adams, who is up there at present, says that 20 miles a day on the road is a regular thing with the champion, and that Jefferies is looking fine-drawn already.

When clever Martin Canole boxed Britt at Colma last winter the old-timers pronounced him a second Dempsey. There was something at once stylish and dashing about his correct pose and his clean-cut way of sending in his punches. The fact that Britt wore him down and turned the table completely after a punishing encounter was not regarded as a permanent set-back for the Fall River light weight.

Excuses were found for him on the score that he lacked experience and was unused to twenty-five round journeys, and it was freely predicted that Canole would be heard from again. He was spoken of as a reminder of the old days, and sports who are old enough to become reminiscent hold that in pugilism, as in other things, the old way is the best.

It almost looks now, though, as if Canole had been born a generation too late. He met "Battling" Nelson in this city a week or so ago and, although he started out in the same free-milling way he did in his go with Britt, he had to succumb to Nelson's slow but sure methods in the eighteenth round.

It all seems to suggest that cleverness alone does not carry a man as far in modern boxing as it did a decade ago even. The safe man to string your bets on now is the bruiser in whom the law of compensations has operated in such a way as to produce a well-balanced fighting machine.

Plenty of endurance is the first qualification, seemingly, and then a big fund of bulldog grit, together with sufficient patience to prevent uphill work from becoming irksome. For the rest a natural love of fistcuffs and any old specialty in the line of a swing or a jolt that can be relied upon to reach the mark occasionally will complete the recipe for a latter-day pugilistic breadwinner.

"Battling" Nelson is of this kind. His work is as devoid of scintillant efforts as the monotonous rumble of a treadmill, but he is there with the reserve force and the finishing punch when weakness or a damaging blow weakens the other fellow's defense.

He is a crouching fighter, one of the new brand of walloping whalebacks of which order, I suppose, Terry McGovern is the original high priest. Now we have Eddie Hanlon, Jimmy Britt, "Battling" Nelson and a few more, and it looks as if the new type of fighter the United States has developed is to rule the roost for some time to come.

Wm. Rodenbach, "amateur heavy weight champion of the United States and Canada," is our guest for a brief spell, and when he returns to his own New York he will bear with him a silver trophy as roomy as a wine cooler. He became the possessor of the coveted mug by defeating our Sam Berger, hitherto known variously as "the pride of California," the amateur champion of the Pacific Coast," and the coming champion of the world."

Although five inches shorter and 25 pounds lighter than Berger, "Rody" made our tall sycamore look like a pot plant. It would be hard to define the visitor's style of boxing. He bears about the same relation to the commonly accepted ideal of an up-to-date glove expert as a trick bicyclist does to a performer like Major Taylor. He is a creature of surprises. Instead of ducking he squatted like a frog and rammed in a left body punch while in that flattened condition. Then he'd spring in the air and jab Berger in the nose. He was harder to corner than a Santa Barbara flea and he simply muddled Berger's gray matter and left the burly Californian flogging nothingness.

HARNESS HORSES

Owner of Silver Rod Refutes a Sensational Yarn.

Chicago, June 4.—At one of the stockyards sales of horses last winter Vance Nuchols of Cleveland, who drove the pacer Tom Nolan two or three seasons when that horse was at his best and marked him in 2:08¾, claimed he had discovered the horse in an animal that passed through the sale as Silver Rod, being consigned by the Dryden brothers of this city, who are known as prominent patrons of the speedway races and as willing to buy a good trotter or pacer when one is on the market.

Nuchols was positive in his statement that Silver Rod was Tom Nolan, although the latter had been disposed of at auction in New York City a year previous and was said to have gone abroad. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Drydehs they at once took steps to show that the Cleveland reinsman was on the wrong track, and Mr. George Dryden visited the office of Secretary Knight of the American Trotting association and offered to defray the expense of a formal investigation with a view to ascertaining the present whereabouts of Tom Nolan. This was a sportsmanlike view to take of the matter, but the American Trotting association was not sufficiently interested to take action and since then Mr. Dryden has been acting on his own hook.

As soon as the affair was brought to Mr. Dryden's attention he volunteered information as to the present whereabouts of Silver Rod and a horse called Golden Rod, also in his stable, but found there was nothing tangible in all the sale ring talk that had been made. His statement of the matter is as follows:

"Silver Rod was bought from Mr. M. E. Stone, in the employ of the James S. Kirk Soap company, at which time he was called Frank Fallnot, being by the Michigan sire Fallnot, 2:16¼. Mr. Stone having bought him in Michigan from a gentleman who in turn bought him from his breeder. The horse had never started in a race, and for no other reason than that I owned an interest in another horse that I thought highly of, Golden Rod, it was decided to change the new horse's name to Silver Rod. When the time came for the horse to be sold I asked that Vance Nuckols be allowed to show him, as he seemed to be a better hand at the business in the sale ring than any other of Mr. Splan's lieutenants. This was done, and, I thought no more about the matter until a friend called me up by telephone and advised me that a story was being circulated at the yards that the horse we had sold, Silver Rod, was a 'ringer,' and that he had been identified by Vance Nuckols, who had raced him and knew him the minute he got up behind him, claiming that he was none other than Tom Nolan, 2:08¾. Al. Pennock, who also comes from Cleveland and is the father-in-law of Nuckols, claimed he knew Silver Rod to be Tom Nolan. There were others that knew all about it, too, and these wise people were said to be offering to bet their money that it was as they claimed, $100 to $20 being the odds offered by sports from Cleveland.

"Next morning I hastened to the yards to stop this talk, and offered, in the presence of Joe Hartford and Dick McMahon, to accommodate the game betters with all the wagers they saw fit to take. In fact, I offered to wager them $1000 to $500 that they were wrong, and the horse Silver Rod at this time was still in the hands of the sale company. They backed up and refused to put up a cent. I then went to Mr. Splan and told him I wanted the thing straightened out before the horse Silver Rod was taken away. Mr. Splan remarked: 'Now, don't give the matter any further thought, for I know that the horse is not Tom Nolan. He is now in England. You leave it to me. I'll be your attorney and look after your case.'"

Talking of the matter the other day, Mr. George Dryden expressed his determination to find the missing pacer, Tom Nolan, if energy and the use of money would accomplish the task. "I am going to offer a reward of $100," he said, "for information that will lead to the discovery of the horse, and perhaps, if I can locate him, there will be some interesting developments. I have been racing horses right here in Chicago on the speedway and at the matinees for six or eight years, and, of course, those who know me are well aware that I am in the game for pleasure only, and at considerable expense, and that I would not commit or countenance the commission of such an act as putting a horse through a sale under a false name is absurd. I am doing business with horsemen as well as the general public all the time, and am willing to leave the question of my integrity to those who know me best. But this talk of the Cleveland people has gone so far that it is only fair that a complete refutation of the gossip should be made. It never reached the dignity of formal charges, and that has made it all the harder for me to scotch irresponsible rumors."

WHITNEY'S STABLE

Running In H. B. Duryea's Name, They Won Nearly $33,000.

New York, June 4.—The Brooklyn handicap for 1904 has passed into turf history. A glorious race it was, and the 60,000 people who journeyed down to Gravesend to see it were well repaid. Rarely have so many first-class horses faced the starter, and rarely has a handicapper's work been better done.

Every big stake race run emphasizes the prophecy made in this column that the racing season of 1904 would be the greatest, both as to sport and crowds, in the history of the American turf.

As this was a record-breaking Brooklyn, so the meeting at Morris park, which came to an end last week, was a record-breaking meeting. That good sportsman, H. B. Duryea, who is racing the Whitney horses this season, leads the list of winning owners. He has only $85 less than $33,000 to his credit.

Irish Lad, by his Metropolitan handicap victory, and Tanya's National stallion success were the chief contributors.

When Delhi galloped away with the Belmont he placed James R. Keene second on the list, with total winnings of only $2500 less than is credited to Mr. Duryea. Delhi won the two big events for horses of his age—the Withers and Belmont—and was by all odds the principal winner for the stable.

Newton Bennington, whose horses won the Juvenile, Laureate and Ladies' stakes, is third, with $16,600, while Glorifier's Eclipse victory places L. V. Bell fourth.

The leadnig race winners for the meeting are H. B. Duryea and J. A. Drake, who are credited with eight winning races each.

"Mr. Cotton" heads the cross-country owners, with J. E. Widener second. The former had only two wins, but St. Jude's Grand National success gives the place of honor by a good margin.

Other winners at the meet are: R. T. Wilson, Jr., $7025; M. Corbett, $6855; J. E. Widener, $4940; E. R. Thomas, $4470; W. B. Leeds, 4155; J. E. Madden, $3990; S. S. Brown, $3735; Sydney Paget, $3045; J. G. Follansbee, $1390; J. J. Ryan, $1255.

Rumor has it that John W. Rogers soon is to give up the Whitney stable. He and Harry Payne Whitney, the present head of the Whitney family, never did ride the same horse. The tension reached the breaking point this week, when Rogers would not permit Mr. Whitney to see the final workout for the Brooklyn handicap of Irish Lad, the hope of the stable, although he had invited some friends to accompany him to the track.

Rogers refused to exercise or even parade the horses for the benefit of Mr. Whitney.

It is currently reported that Walter Gleason, who has been second trainer for the stable, will be put in charge when Rogers goes.

Contrary to the generally accepted idea, Mr. Rogers has no long contract with the Whitney stables. A contract was drawn up shortly after William C. Whitney's death, but never signed, and he is now training the Whitney horses, so to speak, from day to day.

Mr. Rogers is a man of independent means and need not train horses if he does not desire to do so. This probably accounts for the independent attitude he has assumed in his dealings with the Whitney stable.

It is well known that many differences arose between William C. Whitney and Mr. Rogers during last season. One of these was the desire of Mr. Rogers to have exclusive negro help around the stable. Being from the extreme South, he was imbued with the idea that it was much easier to control negroes than white men. Mr. Whitney positively forbade this, and his son has seen fit to carry out his ideas.

Already the students of dope have begun to figure on the part of the 3-year-olds. James R. Keene's Delhi is a strong favorite just now for the Eastern honors. The manner in which he captured the Belmont stakes, beating as fine a field of colts as is often seen on any track, puts him away in the lead. He is a son of Ben Brush, out of Vera, and is straight American bred.

Westerners here are comparing him with English Lad, winner of the Chicago derby.

Jockey Fuller, who came from Chicago yesterday, where on Saturday he rode John W. Schorr's Moharib in the derby at Hawthorne, is high in his praise of English Lad. The Requital colt, Fuller thinks, is a better 3-year-old for a route than any colt shown in the East so far.

Eastern horsemen were sorry to hear of the death of Ormonde in San Francisco.

Ormonde was one of the most famous of the progeny of the famous sire Bend Or. His dam was Lily Agnes. He was foaled in 1883 in the stables of the Duke of Westminster, by whom he was bred. He won the derby in 1886 and the two thousand guineas and the St. Leger in the same year. He was sold to his late owner for breeding purposes, the price being $150,000. He was the sire of Orme, Flying Fox, one of Orme's get, won the derby in 1899.

W. O'B. McDonough, his owner, said yesterday: "The news that Ormonde had been killed came as a great surprise to me. I saw him only a month ago, and he was in fine health. He had not any constitutional ailment that we know of. It was, of course, tough luck to lose Ormonde, but we think we have in California two pretty good stallions by him. They are Ossary and Orsini. They are both handsome horses, very much of their father's type, and each has shown that he can get race horses.

"Just now we like Orsini, but Ossary has done well for a young horse. He has already one pretty good Eastern two-year-old in Mr. Follansbee's filly Bellatrix."

The illness of W. P. Burch at his home in Washington has caused a division of the stable of Francis R. Hitchcock. Mr. Burch's son, Preston Burch, has taken part of the horses and the others have been divided between the stables of John Madden, Tom Welsh, Tom Healey and Fred Berlew.

It has not been definitely settled as yet as to whether or not the city hall will be built complete at this time, or just proper accommodations constructed on the rear of the lots, but most likely the city council will decide to put up a good $10,000 structure this year. The contract for the superstructure of the building has not as yet been awarded. This will be done at the next regular meeting of the council.

The Two Harbors high school baseball team came up the line Saturday morning and crossed bats with our sturdy highs, and were defeated by a score of 15 to 7. The boys from the dock city went out into the field feeling in high spirits over the fact they supposed was "easy money," but from the first inning it was very evident that they didn't know the game, and victory was Virginia's from the start. Only six innings were played, and Two Harbors sent three of their men into the box, while Dan Mahoney did excellent work in the pitcher's position during the game. Very costly errors in the way of wild throws and poor battery work was the downfall of the visitors. The boys left on the Iron Range road for home at 2:40 in the afternoon. Mayor Fay's attitude toward Sunday closing of saloons according to state law is being rigidly enforced, and not an attempt is being made to sell liquor that day. Most of the saloon men and bartenders go fishing Sunday, and so do many others. There were two arrests for alleged violation of the laws the first Sunday the edict went forth, August Walberg and Cohen & Mendelson being the victims. Walberg's case came up Saturday morning, but he was dismissed with the admonishion from the judge not to sell liquor on Sunday again, while the Cohen & Mendelson case went to a jury. The jury found the defendants not guilty and the case was dismissed. The partners were both in their place of business cleaning up and putting ice on their stock. They had the doors closed and no one was in the saloon with them, nor had they any intentions of going against the law. But the eagle eye of police saw them in the saloon and had them arrested. An ordinance has been introduced in the city council to take off the limits of thirty-five saloons and have no limit, and if it passes the last vote, the mayor's action toward Sunday closing may be withdrawn, while the chances of the present state of affairs existing during the rest of his term are just as much to be expected.

Blankets, tents and fishng tackle were all lost, but the party is well satisfied to escape with their lives.

A Pigeon Island Adventure.

BY ALICE LATIMER.

Two boys stood on the beach of Pigeon Island gazing blankly down the river. Only an hour before they had tied their boat to a fallen tree and gone up the beach to look out a camping place for the night. They had found a satisfactory place under a group of big buttonwoods, and had come back for their tent and supplies. Only a broken chain dangled from the tree stump. Their boat was entirely out of sight. Away off on the Jersey shore a few sailboats and canoes skimmed along in what was evidently a picnic party. Out in the middle of the river a passenger steamer made its way up stream. That was the only water craft in sight.

"She must have broken away when those big steamers sent up waves," said Buck. "I thought she was getting a little too much swell."

"Yes, agreed Jay. "Now I 'spose we'll have to borrow one of the farmer's boats, and go up for her. We might look 'round here a little, though.

The two boys began a tramp through the swamp that bordered a part of the island, and into which they thought their boat might have drifted. No sign of the missing craft could be found, however, and as it was beginning to grow quite dark, they decided the search must be abandoned until the moon rose.

"Then we'll get one of the farmer's boats, and go after her," said Buck.

The farmer, whose family were the sole occupants of the island, lived at the upper end, where the ground was less swampy. His small house and outbuildings had been the refuge in time of storm of campers for many years. The boys remembered Mr. H. Whalen very well from previous camping trips. They made their way to this retreat now with a comfortable consciousness that the farmer would welcome them and his wife would provide a substantial meal for a sum not beyond the means of stranded campers. "I wonder," mused Buck, hungrily, "whether she'll have fried tomatoes; hope so, anyhow."

The lights from the farmer's house did not stream out with the old-time welcome. It suddenly occurred to him. "I say," he suggested, "they can't have gone to bed, can they? It looks pretty dark."

"Oh, no," said Jay, stoutly; "why, it's too early for anyone but the chickens. They're sitting in the dark, probably, talking about next county fair."

Suddenly something else that was odd occurred to them. "Why," cried Jay, "we haven't heard the dog."

They had reached the barnyard by this time. There was no sound of the habitation of people or of animals. The house, dark and closed, loomed up directly before them. Buck opened the little gate and stalked up the path shouting cheerily, "Hi, Mr. Whalen!" There was no response from the house. The windows were closed, but that might be to avoid the island dampness. The front door and shutters were also tightly closed, but in a farmhouse this did not strike them as unusual. They went to the kitchen door which had always received them so hospitably. That, too, was closed and locked.

"Hi, Mr. Whalen!" called Buck, again. Again, there was no response.

Buck climbed upon a sill and looked in at the window. There was no one in the sittingroom, no one in the kitchen, and there was no furniture there. Then the two boys tramped solemnly out to the barnyard. Not a living creature could be found in that once populous precinct.

"Well," said Buck, dismally, "Man Friday."

"Crusoe," admitted Jay, none the less dismally, "its all very romantic, but where are the fried tomatoes?"

This reminded them that they were not only castaways, but very hungry ones at that. They had dined at high noon off all the cooked provisions they had in the boat. Further refreshment they had put off all the afternoon, as they could not cook their ham and eggs and potatoes in the boat, and had planned to have a heavy feast before putting up their shelter tent for the night. They were terribly hungry. Buck chewed bits of bark spiritively, but Jay felt the situation to be too bitter for mockery. "Come, let's stop fooling and go on a hunt," he commanded.

Around the barn and house they went again. There was no doubting it any longer; the Whalens had gone for good, evidently, and the closest scrutiny of cellar and dairy from the vantage point of the windows revealed no hope of food. The night, too, had turned somewhat cold and they had neither shelter tent nor blankets. Finally, after a cheerless "cup of cold water," they heaped up some moss and leaves on the Whalen's veranda and lay down uncomfortably to sleep.

Buck was the first to wake and get about in the morning. "Breakfast, Man Friday," he called in Jay's ear, and flourished half a dozen forlorn apples, the find of his early morning's search.

"Oh," said Jay, "you know I was dreaming of coffee."

Buck fell down, making signs of anguish.

"Not if you're my Man Friday," he implored.

They ate their apples in melancholy silence. "There's more where these came from, I suppose," said Jay.

"Well," confessed Buck, "there may be, but I couldn't find them."

Jay paused on his third apple. "Well, then," he said, "we ought to go on half rations." He pointed to the lowering clouds which were beginning to send down their messages in huge, heavy drops.

"No one will be coming up to the island a day like this," he added.

"Well," said Buck, cheerfully, "the best thing we can do is to put up signals on the shore, and then break into the house. I know the Whalens wouldn't care and we may find something to eat or some matches for a signal fire."

The rifling of the Whalen house revealed little that brought comfort to the castaways. Buck came upon a forgotten jar of pickles in the cellar and Jay found some rice in a closet. But as they had no fire to cook the rice they put it aside until they were hungry enough to eat it raw.

In the meantime they had kept a sharp lookout on their signals. Jay suggested they should post these at intervals. The rain was pouring heavily all this time and the boys came back from their trip around the island, soaking wet and shivering, having parted with all their available underwear to make the signals.

Noon came and no one had noticed the signals, apparently, for the boys, who had now divided the shore into beats over which they traveled without a pause, saw no signs of an approaching boat.

Each had issued peremptory orders to the other that all food possibilities were to be explored on the instant of discovery. It was in carrying out these commands that Jay explored an old turnip patch which lay on his side of the shore. No turnips were to be found, but suddenly he remembered that Mother Whalen used to have another place to keep her turnips.

Buck, half way 'round the other side of the farmhouse, heard a shout and came running back to find Jay down on his knees tearing up a little mound of earth in the Whalen yard.

"You haven't gone mad, have you, Friday?" he asked, with a touch of real solicitude back of the banter. Jay said nothing, but he reached down into a big hole in the ground and brought up some turnips.

"There aren't many," he cried, "but I tell you I'm glad we found them."

It was an hour or two later that Buck made his great discovery. He was plodding through a marshy bit of ground, when he saw a wild duck get up on the little inlet.

"There ought to be," he said to himself, bending over and looking carefully among the marshes. "There are," he added triumphantly, and he rose with two wild-duck eggs clasped as carefully as if they had been diamonds. The boys ate them raw a few moments after, and enjoyed them as the most savory dish of their recollection.

The afternoon passed slowly. Weak from hunger, for turnips and apples and two wild-duck eggs are not sufficient nourishment for healthy boys, the two lads gave up their picket duty and sat down to think it over.

"There's only one thing to do," said Jay, determinedly; "build a raft."

"I've thought of that," said Buck, "but the water's awfully rough and we haven't anything watertight."

"We can take the two barndoors and lash 'em together," said Jay. "It looks to me as if this rain was good for a week, and if it is no one will see our signal but the steamboats, and they'll think it's only boys fooling."

Buck led the way to the barn. The doors were only partly off the hinges, but the boys, fired by desperation, soon had them off entirely and lashed fast together with their coats.

It was a more difficult task to drag the improvised craft to the waterside and launch it safely. By the time they reached the shore with the heavy load it was almost dark. The rain still poured down violently.

"Don't you think we better put it off until morning?" suggested Buck.

"Well," said Jay, "it's just as you say, but I'd rather try it. If it isn't clear in the morning we'll have just that much less strength to use."

"All right," agreed Buck. "We may make a tugboat or a barge, and at any rate we'll be able to get along with the raft to cling to."

They crept carefully to the middle of the unwieldy structure and then pushed off. To their great delight the raft showed every intention of floating well. Their hopes rose as wave after wave was safely breasted. Their greatest difficulty was the want of direction. They could not steer the raft with the pole which they had brought for the purpose. Darkness settled down upon them fast while they still floundered in the middle of the river.

"I say, Jay, this looks bad," Buck was beginning, when suddenly they saw a long, heavy boat, such as fishermen use for getting in shad nets, looming through the darkness.

"Who's there?" called a man's voice.

"A raft," shouted the boys, joyfully. "We're adrift; we've been wrecked."

A great shout of laughter greeted this reply. Then a lantern gleamed and the kind face of Mr. Whalen looked out from behind it.

"Here, you, get in," he commanded, cheerfully. "Some of them campin' boys, I'll bet. I seen your signals from across river. First I thought you were only foolin'. Then I thought I'd come across and see, anyhow. Thought some of you boys might be in trouble."

Jay grasped his hand gratefully as he tumbled into the boat.

"I say," said Buck, "Mrs. Whalen hasn't got any fried tomatoes, has she?"

"Well, you come along, now, over to the mainland, where we're living," said Farmer Whalen, "and if she doesn't get you up the biggest batch! Why, she's been just homesick for all you campin' boys ever since we left the island."

The Power of the Duchess.

(BY L. G. MORISON).

Rex was a very large dog and Duchess was a very small cat. Size does not always count, however, in favor of the larger beast. Rex was still young and had many things to learn, and Duchess taught him a good deal. She really was hardly more than a baby when she arrived. She had come from a cat and dog hospital in the city, and her new mistress carried her home in a basket with a cover on it. Duchess made several attempts to get out, but finding them useless settled down to see what would happen.

"Now here we are," said her mistress at last, and put the basket down on the floor. A cold nose was against the side of the basket, sniffed, and Duchess knew it was the nose of an enemy, and her soft hair rose on her back.

"Go away, Rex," she heard her mistress say, and the nose was withdrawn. Then she was lifted out and a saucer of milk was brought to her, but she never had taken milk from a saucer, and she missed her mother.

"Meow," she said in a little thin voice, and the sniffing nose came up to her again. She saw that it belonged to a large animal with curls all over his body and eyes that peered through a mop of hair. He was an overgrown, harmless puppy, but Duchess did not know that. To her he was a terrible beast. Again her mistress drove him away, and the Duchess loved her for that.

"Poor little Duchess," said the lady, and cuddled her tenderly. She was so good that at last Duchess consented to lick a little milk from her fingers, and then take some from a saucer. That night she slept in a nice little warm basket with flannel in it. In the morning she was awakened by the horrible sniffing of the cold nose once more, and if her mistress had not rescued her at that moment Duchess did not know what she should have done.

Rex was extremely curious about this intruder. He had been sole monarch of the house and yard, and he hated anyone who entered his domain as a possible rival. He, therefore, kept his eye on the Duchess. Once or twice he drank her milk, and got his ears boxed soundly for it.

After a few days in her new quarters the Duchess began to feel at home, and when Rex took liberties with her she put up her little paw and scratched him right on his cold nose. Rex gave a little yelp and started back with a yelp of surprise. Then he decided that it might be a good game to play with Duchess, and he counted that he would always be the winner in the game. Day by day, however, the Duchess grew rounder and stronger and more spirited. She could play her part in the game, as Rex soon discovered.

Seeing her sitting apparently asleep and unconscious of his existence, Rex would approach her with great stealth. When he was just about to pounce upon her Duchess would rouse herself and her fur would seem to be all claws. With more haste than dignity Rex would have to retreat.

Once he did catch her, and carried her down the yard to the garden fence. The Duchess was terribly indignant, but she bided her time, and it was not two days before Rex appeared with a badly scratched nose and a dejected air.

At the beginning of summer Rex had his woolly coat shaved off. How queer he did feel. The merest touch tickled him almost beyond endurance.

How ever Duchess found out how sensitive he was it would be hard to tell, but find out she did, and worried that big dog almost into spasms. When he lay down on the porch she would suddenly light upon him and dig her sharp claws into his shaven sides. He would yelp with pain. He could not climb a tree to get out of the way as she could, and she would chase him around and around the yard, while the family looked on at the sport and howled with merriment.

"Shame, shame, Rex, to let a kitten put you to rout like that!" they would cry, but Rex's only idea was to get out of the way of the impish Duchess.

Rex was a glutton, and for a long time after Duchess' arrival he would gobble up his own food and then go for hers. But as soon as she began to feel her power she ate slowly and dared him to come near. He tried it, but got so severely punished that he became a wiser and a more prudent dog.

Finding that he could not rule her, Rex offered to live on friendly terms, but Duchess never fully trusted him. Whenever they lay down together or went out to walk she kept a cautious eye upon him, and was ready to put up a fight at any time that he attempted to impose upon her.

"Duchess, your name really should be Queen," said her mistress one day, for you rule the place, and especially poor old Rex."

Polly Fails as a Portrait Painter.

BY ELEANOR M'CARTHY.

In the Leas' drawing room hung a portrait of Mrs. Lea, painted when she was seven years old. Her name was Elsie Bedell then and she did not know that there was such a person as Howard Williamson Lea, the father of the three little Leas. That seemed a strange thing to Betty and Rosemary, but Polly said: "Pooh, our husbands are somewhere in the world and we don't know them."

The little Leas greatly admired this picture of their mother when she was a little girl. "Don't you wish we could have been a little girl when she was and played with her?" Betty asked one day with a sigh.

"I do," replied Rosemary promptly, and Polly said: "Grandma would have been our mother then."

One day, when they had been looking at the picture for a long time, Polly remarked: "I don't like the way mother's hair looks in that picture."

"The bang is funny," admitted Betty. "Wouldn't her mother buy her a nice ribbon bow like mine?" asked Rosemary, putting her hand complacently to the bow that tied her front curls on one side of her head.

"It wasn't the style then," Polly answered, "but it is now. Her dress isn't a bit stylish, either."

Never before had the little Leas picked flaws in the portrait of Elsie Bedell. There was something in the air. Betty and Rosemary felt it, although they did not know what it was. They waited for Polly to declare herself.

"I can paint lovely now," began Polly. "I could fix that picture so it'd be beautiful."

"Oh, could you?" asked Betty and Rosemary.

"Yes, and I'm going to, but you mustn't tell. We'll make it a s'prise for father and mother."

The next time Mr. and Mrs. Lea went to the city for the day the three little Leas set to work. They put a chair on top of the tete-a-tete and then Polly climbed on to it to reach the picture, but over it went, and she fell to the floor and hurt her elbow. Undaunted, however, she climbed up again and Rosemary handed her the little paint brush and Betty held up the paint box.

"I'll cut her bangs first," announced Polly.

"You aren't going to cut mother's portrait, are you, Polly Lea?" demanded Betty.

"No, of course not. What I mean is that I'm going to paint that part white, like her face."

"Oh."

Polly began her work.

"It ain't the same kind of white as her face," observed Rosemary.

"No, her face is kind of yellow. I guess I'll put some of that on."

"It isn't that sort of yellow, either," remarked Betty.

"And the bang shows through," added Rosemary.

Polly frowned. It really was more difficult being an artist than she had imagined. She dabbed her brush in her mouth until it was very wet, and then got as much paint on it as she could and laid the colors on the canvas very hard. Still the result was not very satisfactory.

"I guess I'll put the ribbon bow on her head next," she said.

"What color is it going to be?" asked Betty.

"Light blue. No, I haven't any light blue paint. I'll have to make it red."

Polly got more red paint on her face and in her mouth than she did on the canvas, and what there was on the canvas was in queer streaks over the top of the head and the forehead. A dab got on the chin too and another on the white frock that little Elsie Bedell wore in the portrait.

"Your face looks awful, Polly," commented Betty frankly.

"Yes, it's the paint," said Polly smearing it broadly by rubbing the back of her hand across her mouth. "Paint tastes awful queer," she continued. "Betty if you'd get me some water in a cup I think I could paint better."

Betty brought a cup of water from the nursery. "That doesn't look like a bow," she said pointing to Polly's latest effort in red.

"I know, but I haven't any more red paint. I'm going to paint a blue sky up top and a green tree at one side. I can paint trees better than anything.

"I can't paint much sky," she announced after several futile efforts to reach the top of the portrait, "it's too high, so I'll just paint the tree." The green had just begun to stand out vividly when there was a cry of horror and astonishment from the doorway, and looking around the three little Leas saw their father, mother and grandmother Bedell standing in the doorway. Polly lost her balance, and slipped down, the chair falling on top of her. Mr. Lea took up the chair and then picked up Polly—such a sorry looking Polly all daubed up with red, blue, green and white paint.

Polly began to feel very queer. It seemed to her that her father and mother and grandmother and Betty and Rosemary were swimming around, and then she began to go around too.

"Why, the child's sick," said Mrs. Lea coming forward and taking her in her arms. "No wonder," said Mr. Lea. "Heaven knows how much paint she swallowed." And Polly was a very sick little girl, and after she got through the worst of being sick she had to take some horrid medicine and go to bed.

She did not get up any more that day, and she had such bad dreams in the night that she woke up crying, and her mother had to come in and talk to her before she could get to sleep again.

The next day she learned that her father and mother had been surprised at what she had done to the portrait and so had grandmother Bedell, but it was not a pleasant surprise.

"I thought I could make it lovely and stylish, but I couldn't," moaned Polly in humiliation.

"No you could not," said Mr. Lea more sternly than Polly ever had heard him speak, "and you came near ruining something I think more of than anything else in this house. I don't know yet whether I can repair your mischief."

"If your mother had done a trick like that when she was your age, I should have whipped her soundly," said grandma Bedell with great energy.

Mrs. Lea said nothing, but she looked so sorry that Polly couldn't help crying and Betty and Rosemary joined in.

"I like her just—as—she was, even if she wasn't—stylish," sobbed Betty.

"She is—dreadful—messy now," Polly admitted chokingly.

The familiar picture of Elsie Bedell, seven years of age, disappeared from the wall, and the little Leas mourned for her as for an old and dear friend.

"Won't she ever come back?" Rosemary asked one day, but met with the rebuke, "you did not treat her well when she was here."

One day when they had about given up hope of ever seeing her again, she reappeared in her old place on the drawing-room wall just as old fashioned and sweet as ever, and each of the three little Leas stood upon the tete-a-tete and kissed her and said how glad they were that she had come home, and that they loved her just as she was and would not have her any other way for a thousand worlds.

"Good-by, you sweet little Elsie Bedell," they said throwing kisses to her as they left the room in answer to Norah's summons to the nursery.

BURIED CITIES. NO. 4.

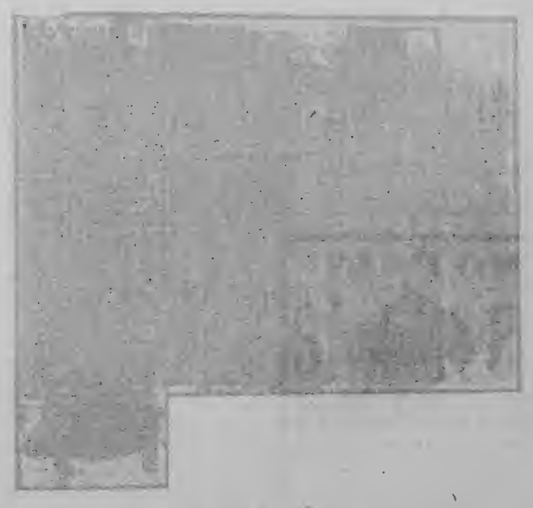
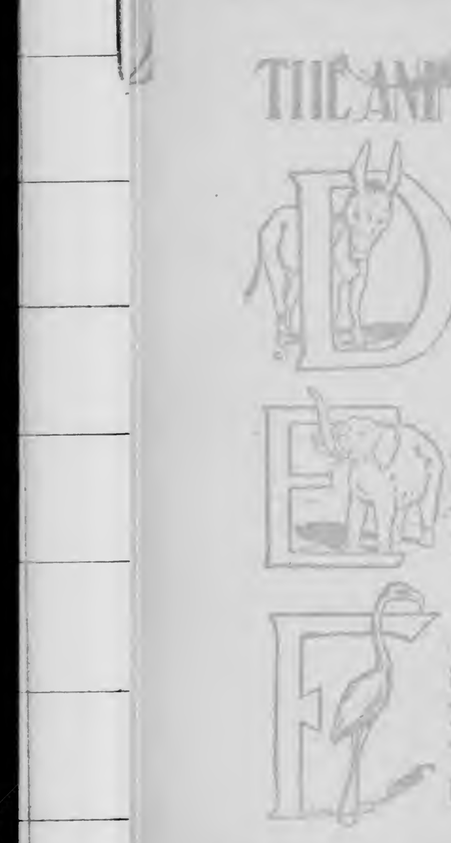
Great city of a glorious past,
Bourne of great art and pilgrim sad,
Whose every altar-candle's droop
Was seized for omen, good or bad.

The answer to last week's buried city puzzle is "London" hidden in "call on do not."





Last week, you know, we were inclined to sermonize. The answer to the flower puzzle was, "CONSIDER THE LILIES," said "JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT." If you will supply the names of the flowers and the other object represented in the picture you will discover what we are gossipping about at present.

THE HUMMING BIRD.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING PIG.

Cut out the pig, cutting on the solid lines A B C D and E and on the lines corresponding to A B C and E on the other side of the pig. Fold down and paste the other side of the ears, tusks and tail so that they shall be double, and slit with a penknife the dotted line F and the corresponding line on the other side of the pig. Fold on all the straight ruled lines and paste the pig together. Insert the tail through the slit F and roll it around a thin lead pencil to make it curl.
